on inauguration day uh the male fist of the state is coming out in order to assert authority now that doesn't mean these people are going to listen they have every reason to believe that this thing is going to work out for them because at the end of it fundamentally they believe in america they believe to a religious extent in the united states and this political project that's why they believe that's why they have to believe such a convoluted insanity and have to have such paranoid politics because it's the only way to square the circle of living in this country living in this country experiencing it the way that we do the nightmare of misery and admiseration and

humiliation that it is but that it is also everything that we are psychically supposed to believe it is and these people are the people who believe that ***** because they have never been there's never been a reason for them not to they have never been confronted with the state as such telling them no in fact the entirety of the political uh reality of the last 40 years has been managing the ego basically of this 0:4:12 segment of the population by which i mean broadly the middle tier of white americans income wise uh uh and and like in relationship to capitalism not just the small petty bourgeois plenty of workers like the whole ***** argument about oh everybody at the capitol was a small business tyrant and actually no they were sons of the soil obviously it was both obviously there's no way they were all boat ownership dealers a good deal of the mortar but there's also there's no way they were all like horny-handed sons of ***** toil either they were a mixture because that is the we're talking about people who identify not by their ***** class because nobody does that in this ***** country of course they're not ***** self-consciously working class or ***** uh little uh petite bourgeois the whole point of america is to make those categories not something that people live with they live with other categories racial nationalist uh geographic and that's and in the 1970s the united states was we all got one way or 0:5:14 another the howard beale speech the one that not the one he yells at everybody but the one he gets from ned beatty i've read it on this on the stream before you have meddled with the cosmic forces of nature mr there are no nations there is no west there is only union carbide and int and at t that's everybody got that message in the 70s behind in front of closed doors now in the political realm what that ended up meaning is you had the democratic and the republican parties both dealing with this new reality okay the whole point of american politics which had been since the new deal about distributing the gains of america's industrial economy will now be changed the game doesn't change there's going to be no more spoils to give out uh if we're going to maintain profit it's going to be at the expense of work and at the expense honestly not just of workers but of these small business people because yes a lot of these people in washington are small business people does that mean that 0:6:15 their small businesses are doing well do you think it's likely that they're incredibly successful some of them are but i guarantee you a lot of them including the the pool uh cleaning business pool supply company lady who voted for obama by the way who got murked by the secret service she asked she had a pool owner's pool supply company how much was she in debt though how much are everyone how much is everybody who is not at the very commanding heights of capital or has some sort of culturally uh um attractive job that allows them to be independent from like the sheer exploitative machinery uh how ***** comfortable are any of them even these small business tyrants who are precarious and you can say that they don't deserve

to feel that angry they don't deserve to be that outraged because hey everybody else is doing worse nobody else i'm not living anybody else's life nobody lives anybody that's alive but their own and relative ***** every belief every feeling is relative so the precarity that goes up and down through american society and has since the 70s 0:7:16 i'm sorry even bad naughty small business owners are going to feel it maybe they don't deserve to feel it maybe they shouldn't be so babyish about it but that's not that doesn't do anything to them that doesn't convince them they didn't go through the ideological car wash to like unpack their ***** knapsack of privilege and say uh you know and say thanks for all the luck they have and then not try to make the world better they believe in america because when we all got that message in the 70s oh yeah no this is over america as you thought of it this land of opportunity that's over with it's going to be an enserfening everyone is going to become a thrall and we have to because because your day having a say in this is over as working people as non-capital holders so what are we going to do about it **Music playing** well the people who make up now almost the entirety of the democrats college-educated uh professional whites uh and and uh african-americans basically you know there's other 0:8:19 groups in there but those are the two big groups that make up the significant portion of the democrat and young people of course the younger generation but largely uh sorted by college either the older wealthier ones the ones who made sure biden was the nominee or the younger poorer ones they all went to college and then you've got african-americans and then you've got these racial groups that we treat like they're black but aren't because the experience of race in america is warped because we have black people in this country and that relationship is different than the relationship between any other uh ethnic minority and the united states it just is and trying to tack them together that's one of the reasons so many liberals are baffled by all these working-class uh minorities voting for trump so those two groups of people african-americans and college-educated whites they're the deal that the reason that they have essentially uh acceded to this condition of steady admiseration is twofold 0:9:20 because it wasn't just telling people yeah no that's over being able to just have a decent middle class life uh with a with any job you can find no that's over with that's gone that was okay for college educated whites because the new world we were going to get was going to be a knowledge economy where the fact that you went to college and the fact that you learned all this stuff and the fact that you learned the vocabulary is going to give you a chance to survive and in fact thrive you can still get a house all those atari democrats who represented the 70s uh suburban explosion the uh they represented people who could still realistically get the american dream because they had they were part of the knowledge economy and ever since then those people those democrats those people who line up with the democrats have done so

on the assumption that well yeah things are bad in this country but honestly more than anything it's because of these backward-ass other white people the ones who 0:10:21 couldn't get with the program their racism and revanchism are why we can't have nice things even though the reason is because the the drive train of like working-class pressure on the political um economy was disengaged and so now it's just an intercapital battle there's no working people involved in any way it's pure that seat at the table that existed and that set the table for post-war social democracy in the united states and to a greater degree in europe that's gone so now we just have this cultural culture battle but that's okay if you're college educated because you could still get a job now the younger ones of that they're they're moving into a world disabused of that notion that's why a lot of them are bernie supporters that's why a lot of them call themselves socialists because they have a more sophisticated critique of why things are the way they are than the lumpin reactionary but when it comes to shove they're going to pick the democrats because that's the only game in town so whether they are coerced by a belief that adhering to these rules and adhering 0:11:23 to democratic norms and the democratic party's social agenda social gospel will be good for them materially or that it's just good on its own like they've been convinced they have been ideologically car washed even beyond the point of personal uh self-interest either way they have accommodated themselves to this order uh african americans they were the the the the leadership and political strata were just bought into the democratic party mechanisms and then everybody else had the unfucking gloved fist of the state smash onto them that's where you get the drug war that's where you get a a zero tolerance policy to get to say hey no ***** uh yeah yeah no you know how there was that brief period where it looked like we might open the doors to post more prosperity to you yeah no that's over but don't you ***** get any ideas about it we killed all the ***** panthers we killed martin luther king we will kill you and if you try to ***** make a dollar outside of uh this new order 0:12:25 like drugs or something it's gonna be an excuse for us to throw all of you in prison and then put our ***** dumb ass uh grad student kids into your ***** houses and that left the broad swath of me white americans who did not go to college either because or went to college and explicitly rejected the whole uh deal for idiosyncratic ideological reasons or whatever those people the the the successful ones were the ones who created the post-war conservatism like they saw the deal and they spit the bit they said no we're too psychotically devoted to these uh these jacksonian notions of freedom because we're programmed that way and now though like it's increasing it's more and more people who aren't successful even though the republican party has only benefited the wealthy because the the republican party is the only counter articulation to the neoliberal status quo and the actual point of conflict is the one 0:13:26

that's been the same since the dawn of the republic which is the conflict between finance capital which is the overall and and and at the end of the day governing form of capital in this country and in the world and uh and um locally regionally bound resource capital uh extraction industries and then all accompanying like local uh economic activity where you have local stakeholders who emerge and that's been the war since since the ***** dawn of the the of the federalists and the uh the and at every point that that power source the american local baronery basically has been bought off and that a local and one way that the working class in general has been bought off is that they essentially for the white ones after world war ii gave an entry 0:14:27 po to that broad bearing that brought american like regional capital barony uh you could get even if you worked in a factory you could get a little lot with a ***** yard you could be a little lord you could be a lord of your own land even if you weren't uh the landlord of any other kind and even if and so when that 70s uh reality check hit carter shows up and says i'm going to explain to all these people in a nice quiet voice why we can't have nice things anymore and they're going to understand yes it's good for us to want the soul of america to be nourished and not our bodies and that we need to be uh you know a virtuous blah blah reagan was there to say hey ***** idiots you just tell them that everything's going to be fine because you're going to cut taxes you say yes things are going to get worse but it's because the government is standing in the way of you and total economic self uh actualization 0:15:28 and that's what they've been selling that story for 40 years and it has bought them a ***** treasure trove of of neo-liberal reforms all of them on their terms now it's not like the democrats are really trying to stop any of that but the drive train of politics is this activated like small holding white uh petty bourgeois that is being uh cossated that it's not getting the reality check that isn't he isn't getting the bill speech it's just getting a pat on the back it's like no no it's just those it's just the nasty tax man that's the reason that you're not more successful how about oh how about here's some more more mortgage uh uh deductions here's some more pr like the degree to which we do uh safety net ***** anymore you're going to be the beneficiary of all of it because we're going to subsidize home ownership and give you your little fiefdoms and give you free cheap credit that you can borrow against so you can open 500 different ***** like uh nightclub themed vape shops and uh and 0:16:29 uh rock and roll uh uh rock and roll karaoke bars with a lot of shooting ranges and ***** ski-doo dealerships and what we're seeing since the collapse 2008 collapses is that we can't buy them off anymore they can't be bought off anymore the ***** is coming to them the poorer whites the poorer whites the ones who didn't have access to the barony they've been killing themselves literally they have been literally killing themselves with fentanyl uh trying to get disabilities checks and and and living the lives of despair that are the usual outcome of being totally unconnected from any ability to assert political control over your life and any control over your economic condition the ones who are in the middle those middle ones those are the ones who are most agitated most anxious the most feet most afraid of falling and those are the ones who make up the republican base now and because they believe in america they even though their uh politics are totally in co-hate and they have no actual formal meaning and they don't have any it's it's an articulation of resistance to neoliberalism but it's baffled by the fact that everybody's just watched tv for the last 60 ***** years and nobody actually has a lived experience to compare with anybody else's we only share fantasies we only swap and swap and share fantasies with one another and so all of this alienation whether it's from uh precarious uh petite bourgeois or precarious uh non-college educated uh labor workers no matter what their income is uh it's expressed by this spectacular fixation this emotional connection to trump as a delivery figure because what he delivers them from is this political stalemate that they are realizing will doom them but because they believe in america they have to find an answer within its structures within the democratic part within the republican party and within within the republican party the figure of trump who mirrors them in their selfishness and shortsightedness and as such is acting not for any concern about institutions which is demystifying the institutions and teaching these people that the institutions aren't real and they can just open the door and that that ***** like oh that velvet rope you can just and of course that's because they've been allowed to do this because white work white uh middle strata a political alienation has only been beneficial it has only flown to the benefit of the republican party and it is flown to the benefit of the corporate democratic party by always driving the corrupt the uh the republicans to the right meaning we are forced because we're locked arm in arm like in ***** uh cindy poitier and tony curtis in the defiant ones we're locked to the republicans for life so if they go right we have to go right too it's good for everybody but now you have a genuine conflict between this this uh assumed this faith in the political subjectivity uh that these people have uh and the cold heart fact that at the end of the day we're just humoring you people national international finance capital runs this ***** and we will put up with this stuff but at the end of the day if you really get in trouble with maintaining these flows of capital we are going to have to give you the sit-down talk and i think what we're seeing here is going to be the beginning of the sit-down talk and i think it's gonna see big time prosecutions for everybody who went in that place and you're gonna see surveillance biden is already talking about first order business a domestic terrorism bill we're gonna have a white war on terror or a war on white terror i guess and it's going to be the same sort of color coordinated terror alerts it's going to be the same collection of fbi and uh

encouraged and in fact uh conceived terror attacks thwarted real ones happening and the core of this group these unassimilated true believers in america who have only been able to believe in america for so long because they have been humored and their political uh their economic destinies have been have been protected from the ravages of the market the the the disruption of the global economic structure as it fastens its ***** tendrils over every passive all life but now the bill has come due there's nothing in the cupboard left to ***** humor you people we can't do anything about coronavirus we can't do anything about offshoring we can't do anything about anything because both of our both these parties are committed to this and the thing is is that the republicans now are going to have to confront their base in a way they never wanted to do and they're going to have to come to some sort of court uh some sort of accommodation and my guess is what it's going to be is that the more well-off the more successful the more charismatic the the ones with more to lose are going to be are going to be brought in by a claim that look yeah they ripped us off they stole the election but if you retake take over the republican party from inside you can stop it and if you're on the outside of it you can work for this the same way that the left is sheep dipped into the democratic party and they will accept it at least because there's options there you could run for office i mean my god all these congressmen are up for reelection next year every single one of them every one of these person could be ***** replaced by a local beautiful boater or even a not so beautiful boater if they were charismatic enough and if you can't do that hey you can stream you can become an influencer you can you can uh you can make that grind work the less competent i guess the less the less stable emotionally and financially are going to have to find out that the government exists not as their friend that the government is not their friend and that the cops are not there to help them and how they respond to that is i'm very interested in finding out but this is all white people getting the reality check that they that we've spent 40 years the people in power spent 40 years allowing to go unchecked because it was a it was possible there were those bubbles there was a nice real estate bubble and and tech and whatever else but once you've reached the point where all growth comes from uh disrupting sectors meaning reducing income reducing uh job um security in the name of flexibility that's the only place to find any money under the ***** couches and and where uh the ability to even be a small business owner is gonna go away and every and you're gonna have to be proletarianized which is to lose your freedom like we've talked about how american freedom is tied up in ownership first it was land but now it this is the end of the myth this is the closing of the frontier and these white people are gonna have to learn their lesson now it will be much softer of course than the lesson that was administered to uh black people in this country but i think it's you're going to see it

and it's going to get coded as racial justice it's going to get coded as progressivism it's going to be what we get instead of any kind of meaningful push towards dealing with climate change or the ***** the the the fact that uh that it is basically impossible to have a life that is compatible with what american existence is in the current context that's why all the ***** argument about like oh are they working class are they uh boat owners what what the difference does it make this is the only political current in america that gets people out there that will get people to do this and you can say 0:24:38 that black lives matter protests but the black lives matter protests because uh uh black liberation has always been the most easy type of uh domestic uh disturbance to be repressed by the state the one that they're willing to expend the least effort doing because it costs them the least politically what's going to happen if you piss off black people if you're a republican what they don't vote for you anyway and if you're democrat what are they going to they have the fire and yes it's because they live in a fantasy america but that means they're powered by something that the left such as it exists doesn't have which is belief and i don't even mean belief in god i mean you mean belief in success belief in victory and of course that all stems for 0:25:39 them from a delusion they believe that they can win because they think this is a different country than it is because they have just absorbed america's propaganda from a position of relative privilege in america and most people unless they go to college to learn how to have anxiety are going to respond to that the same way by accepting it and only now are we seeing their lived experience colliding with their idea of america and because they're america because they believe in america they think well this is all ***** up even if why they think it's ***** up is wrong even if it's all bundled up with racism and and stupid nationalism and it is and xenophobia it's still generated by a very real connection of their unhappiness to the political order which many people including many real working-class people do not have and that's because they don't believe in and we see these people willing to do this ***** 0:26:43 ***** what uh naruto run into the ***** capitol building and i i don't think there's any reason to believe that it's going to stop now uh and then you look at what the left it's not good and i think big part of it is nobody who is going to organize on the left because of the repression of the left over the history and because they're trying to create a self-consciously working-class movement they're not able to like just just go have faith in trump they can't just have faith in trump as like a symbol because they're aware that this has to be a class project and it has to have class goals but because of that they're also aware of all the obstacles they're aware that the state has a rate against them which these people don't think some of them are coming around to it and when they fully realize it they're going to get more radicalized but that's all to the benefit of the system because those are more uh enemies of the state

CUSHVLOG 135. COUP LET THE DOGS OUT

that we can profitably prosecute or and so until the left finds faith in itself even in 0:27:51 the face of uh the transparent absurdity of that they'll never be able to be anything effective because the argument about whether you should be happy or bad sad that the cops killed that lady or you should be happy you should be rooting for Biden to suppress them or not is all meaningless because we have no power over it the democratic party is going to go is going to govern from a position of austerity and misery it's going to try to frame it as as racial and gender liberation they're going to do that the right is going to attempt to coddle this movement suborn it and avoid a full confrontation with the state which they don't want to do and there's nothing we can do about any of it because there's no working-class movement to assert a position 0:28:54 to desert demands uh opposed to if anyone has been listening to uh age uh he just started talking about the Asian revolution and he i i was listening to it recently and it's very good as is all of Everett's podcasting is uh and his description of the political moment uh during before the Haitian slave revolt when there was a big crisis caused by the French revolution back at home about what to do about the national assembly and like how to uh orient the the colony or towards France uh the main battle was between a coalition of uh white slave owners and small white laborers and like middle 0:29:55 class people the the big whites as they were called and the small whites who both wanted to uh rebel against the the king for different reasons the the whites the big whites because they thought it would give them more control over the island and more authority over its economy specifically its trade so that they could trade to other places more profitably and then the small whites because they thought that they could get if they had more of an a say in like the politics of the island as opposed to having no influence over politics in France that they could assert their uh rights uh but they were in uh they the one thing they agreed on was that they wanted to make the government of Haiti specifically uh white supremacists like to enforce a racial code and to maintain like a white political uh might uh a white political monopoly 0:30:57 on power in the in the colony and the other group was the mixed race community the the children of uh of relationships between relationships between uh white mostly white slave owners and African slave women but many of them had been because the French did colonialization a little differently than the Americans did i think maybe because of the Catholicism in many cases uh white slave owners who had uh black mistresses would marry them and and confer property to their children instead of enslave them and so you had a class of uh of mixed race slave owners and and small holders who and and uh bourgeois shopkeepers and stuff who wanted to uh diversify the uh the racial character of the political ruling class of the of the colony both of them agreed that slavery was staying where it was and enslaved Haitians were not going anywhere and the whole battle which was incredibly pitched and saw saw uh 0:31:58 botched insurgencies on both sides and and uh the republican uh the local like admit um the local representative of the french revolutionary government kind of having to like play both sides against the other and it was in the in the context of that that the slaves and when i see the republicans and democrats it's very hard not to see it as a battle between you know that big white small white colonial coalition and and the the more progressive more racially uh uh expansive mixed race uh political movement as ours the problem is that they're where are the slaves the slaves are not marked by race they're not marked by conditions of life they are marked only by their i did the quotation marks for a reason shut the ***** up god you ***** people 0:33:5 god i love being ***** scolded by nitwits because i didn't use the right words when i even so that's the challenge and it's the same challenge no matter what it's the same challenge if everybody there was a was a ***** uh pipe fitter uh or if everybody there owned six subaru dealerships either way the challenge is the same build actual self uh like coherent and a lot of the people who want to do that through the media and want to do that through memes and want to do that through posting they see what happened with trump's people and they want that for me as that franklin graham uh meme goes but you can't have that that is what it is because it is reactionary 0:34:6 because it is not responding to material conditions and material exploitation it's responding to a emotional engagement in a spectacle of politics there is no left-wing version of that there can't be a left-wing version of that now you can have left-wing voices like uh brazing ideas and concepts but the organizing is going to be done boringly and tediously at the ***** level of life at the level of work or residence whatever it takes but it's not going to come through engagement with this spectacle because everything gets diffused and as we said on the show and as i said on the stream the other day the reason that this is the reason that these people feel so confident in themselves and the reason they're willing to do this is because they've never been checked they've always been encouraged and that's because not even that 0:35:7 capitalism wants them to win in any real sense like have them defeated defeat global capitalism in a battle but that they're useful that kind of political mobilization can always be uh metabolized because it's not a real threat it has no character of of organization or coherence or policy behind it it cannot meaningfully confront capital it cannot make demands the only demands these people have is keep trump president all right fine what if they did that we got more neoliberalism more misery more uh austerity they wouldn't care they'd be happy because the people they hate would **Music playing** and in fact they would blame everyone else for still being around still existing and and preventing trump from doing i'm not on the edge of doom or 0:36:8 anything in anything this should be liberatory because if this can't be found here then the fact that everything looks like it's unwinnable and unsolvable isn't such a big deal like it only feels like this saying that this is a this is a a space where where uh product productive action cannot occur that feels like it's dumarism to people else the good news though is that if it doesn't matter well then you can find something there's something out there now probably there are ***** prairie fires burning that nobody's aware of because they have not been ***** turned into a quantum they've not been turned into memes they've not been turned into uh something that could be quantified and and chopped up into some sort of uh like left um i don't think i'm 0:37:20 going to build a gundam i'm not blackpilled i'm blackpilled about this ***** model of engagement but everyone should be it's not the only thing in the world if it is if it is the only thing in the world that's the true black bill because i'm sorry not a single person who has doubled down on posts as praxis has given me any reason to believe that that would not be sticking your finger somebody's asking about the socialist rifle club and stuff if you're memeing it how serious can you be about it i get that you want to get people on board but when you're talking about like arming 0:38:22 yourself against the state how seriously can i take somebody who like that's a very good example like you might very well find that in your life you're gonna have to ***** uh get a gun and do something i'm not saying anyone should do that for the love of god i'm just saying that local conditions might obtain where like okay say say like trump losing causes these people to go berserk and the cops are basically just let them tire themselves out but that essentially ends up turning into a number of like local pogroms i'm not saying that's going to happen but let's say it did and you found yourself in a position like where you lived that it was your responsibility to ***** defend like your neighbors and and vulnerable people from them anything you have to do at that point is not anything you should be ***** posting about and trying to like memify and turn into if anyone's posting about anything they're not serious 0:39:39 about it everybody posting about a coup and how this is a coup and you need to take it seriously if they're ***** posting about it all day they don't really think that like none of us really think any of the stuff that we think are powering our our political beliefs what we mostly just feel is a lassitude we feel helpless that's what we really feel and then we just turn that helplessness into a bunch of different fantasies that we can but like if you think that this is a threat to democracy i'm sorry we don't have one of those we do not have a democracy you could argue that during that new will deal period that that there was something approaching a a working class articulation 0:40:40 of power at the highest levels of government it was it was coerced or i mean it was suborned and it was uh essentially house broken and when it was no longer a luxury that the system could afford it was immediately removed but it was there but since then we don't have a ***** democracy are you ***** like thinking how much how much emotional force are we supposed to take from the other day's events from the

the the idea that it was some sort of attack against a sacred institution in sacred uh places this is the most profane and disgusting place on earth the u.s ***** capitol building it's like it's like a giant mini saint a little st james mansion it's just that ***** uh the the weird white and blue greek themed dome that he had there and 0:41:46 the fact that a incoherent jabbering old man because of our fully spectacularized lives where everything that is uh worth caring about is worth caring about to an apocalyptic degree in which more and more that includes politics was able to get people to care this much to die to ***** like have to uh give themselves heart attacks while being tased and to i gotta say if you if you don't think this is funny then you are as much of a buzzkill as an sjw if you don't think somebody going to washington dc with a gadsden flag that says don't tread on me and then getting killed in a stampede is funny then i'm sorry you you are literally just a woke scald but just with different uh naughty words and different bad uh uh unthoughts that can't be but yeah i can 0:42:51 ***** give a ***** about the ***** us capitol building the thing that should be we should be embarrassed about is that that's what did it the thing that everyone should be embarrassed about is that donald ***** trump is what got people to do that and yes the fact that it's donald trump is why they were allowed to do it but uh like there's gonna have to be some serious deconditioning of people people are to have to be willing to to change their matrix of acceptable risk and this is maybe even more important uh change their uh required degree of like rational self-convincing of things because one of the things that got those people out there and is going to keep them out there is the fact that they have convinced themselves that a deep level their politics even though they're incoherent gibberish they believe them yes part of it is because they're dumb and their brains have been turned into scrambled eggs by social media and television but a lot of it is that they aren't neurotic it's a lot of it is that they did not learn that politics have to be perfect in order to be actionable 0:43:52 that you have to be able to explain everything about everything you believe in order to act on it which is a paralysis i think that infects the left and i know infects me tell me if i'm wrong like i can't act unless i know that every action i'm doing is correct and the fact that trump is just spectacle and and uh and emotion allows that makes crossing that bridge much easier getting to the leap of faith the left is harder because so much of it is intellectual because so little of it is actually connected to but that's going to have to happen people are going to have to convince themselves at a deeper level and even allow themselves to think i might not even be right about this this might not be the right case there might be somebody online who might call this cringe who might say that i'm doing liberalism or that i'm doing uh anarchism or that i'm doing tanki-ism or that i'm doing whatever the ***** i might i might be wrong i might eat ***** at this i might get laughed at and that has to be okay 0:44:54

because otherwise people give up people give up look what happened in last summer people thought they had the revolution in their hands for a minute some of them did anyway and it ended up being a giant chess match just taking down statues because that was the only because the symbolic realm is the only area where you could see a plausible uh and one of the things that makes it easier to do that like if it's a question of like trump should stay in office that's a great binary that's wonderful and the left doesn't have anything like that i mean there i mean i keep saying the left there is no left but there is no left articulation of that that can be summed up in such a binary and time dependent and space dependent question as will you be inaugurating a new president but my hope is that the democratic party which is looking like it's on the road towards total uh like the fact i mean i don't honestly care if they ***** try to uh to impeach trump i think i think making that the thing everyone should care about is dumb honestly like hey how about try to ring the dinner bell a little bit especially that you got joe ***** mansion saying no to the two thousand dollar checks maybe like circle the wagons around an actual helpful thing that people could you know think feel good about as opposed to just advertising your powerlessness because they're not going to vote to impeach him and you will be reminded again oh yes all of these norms are just agreed upon manners and real force can decide these contests and if it does you don't have any you don't have any because well over a half the guys whose job it is to come in the room and clear it half the time got half the guys job it is to carry a gun into a room and decide who should be there and are of no commitment to the democratic project as you represent it no matter how many times you talk about how de-sacralizing and and shameful everything is that is a that's that is a balance of power where the democrats essentially exist at the suffrance of the republicans because their existence keeps everything moving keeping the democrats around allows them allows rule to be carried out because we need that illusion of democratic give and take in order to allow all the ill humors of capitalism to be vented properly but if you make it an existential question and like these people saying we're going to throw them all we're going to throw them all in jail we're going to throw all the seditious uh members of housing in jail and we're going to throw trump in jail yeah right you know what would happen if that happened or at least you know what you're afraid what happened which is all that matters all you need is the fear and the reason they have the fear is that they know that they could not marshal the same forces and coordinate them the same way because of the hostility to the of the police state to those people to their disorganization to the lack of the democratic party representing anything beyond just a a rejection of the but what we're going to see from the an attempt to do essentially like bushism like these guys are trying to talk about this as 9 11 as bad as 9 11. they want it to be their 911.

CUSHVLOG 135. COUP LET THE DOGS OUT

that's the point of this this is going to be the democrats 911 that they get to wave 0:49:1 the bloody shirt at the republicans which honestly could help them because looking at the polls this is not a popular thing that happened and even though there's all these like um well-manicured gerrymandering structures that allow the republicans to hold power i do not think that the uh wealthy whiter wealthy older white people who voted in the democrats are liking any of this and a lot of them who voted in split tickets for democrat for republicans might start punishing republicans now just in the same way all these but the thing is all these ***** guys in the house who live in gerrymandered republican districts they can't go against trump because they will be gone and so they're going to get the wave the bloody shirt and use it as an 0:50:4 excuse for uh a democratic application of police state uh technology and surveillance and incarceration because neoliberalism has finally come for the whites the i mean it came for the poor whites a long time ago but it finally came for the boaters it came for the people who have had a little chunk of that post-war magic and now it's shrinking away and it's this is not negotiable ***** and their uh political movement is too inarticulate to challenge capitalism realistically it will be suborned it will be uh reduced it will be recuperated and that which cannot be will be and the republicans oh boy i mean they're at this point it's clear they will never they will never accept the results of a close election that go against them again and that means every election will essentially be a tip ball and that helps the democrats too though because if it's 0:51:6 close enough and they lose it it's just bush versus gore again everything's kept going everybody kept getting paid it didn't break anything the system maintained itself if you just like slowly and then the democrats are a regional party maybe like run new york and california i mean somebody asked why it's bad to call it terrorism i think i'm articulating it right now like we already tried this with one form of terrorism which was a response to american bipartisan policy which the proper response to would have been to minimize the threat and not treat it like the end of the world but instead we maximized the threat treated it like the end of the world specifically treated it as an excuse to ***** all over civil liberties domestically and carry out a war overseas now the war is coming home in every sense the war is coming home and that means that we're going to have to intensify our state apparatus of technological control which we're having instead of fascism and that will now start have to fall 0:52:8 having to because everybody's going into the wood shipper and some of you will get lucky and get ***** out into the capitalist side but the the mass majority of you are going to come out your kids are going to come out peasants and that's you do not have where with all the ability to challenge that they will ***** all over you we're but at least there's some sort of efficiency there my god because they don't have to pretend that they're ***** the democracy because they don't have to offer

their stupid uh like special dispensations for their uh their their colicky white middle class and here's the important part too people say yes okay but shouldn't we treat this seriously when has the us government shown itself able to uh defeat terrorism with its uh with its control of beyond throwing people to jail beyond creating greater degrees of alienation from the people you're supposed to be de-radicalizing so saying no this time we're going to do it right because it's going to be against the right people even if it did obviously it won't it will be used liberally against all kinds of left-wing movements no question indigenous we all know that but even if it was laser focused on these these white denotification worked they just turned west germany over to the nazis that's how they denatified german that's that's how they denotified west germany they just let them stay in charge and gave everybody some a ***** uh but if you're gonna talk about like we need to confront these people we need like a real confrontation with uh with like the forces of fascism in this country i ask simply okay who and who and if you're if you think that's necessary and we're and and you consider how far we are from it if you think posting there is effective then you are really just they banned uh they banned linwood from from parlor damn that's how you know i don't know about what third party will emerge but i do know that the democrats are they will be the death of us because they are in a position where they are the only force standing against just full reactionary ganglion rule but they represent no popular uh mobilizable uh or or organ or anything they represent no one they're just fully a brand trump has transcended branhood trump is now essentially in his ability to get people to ***** act on his behalf religious and the democrats have nothing they have transactions they have virtue signaling that's it that means that they cannot and that that's why they cannot really force the confrontation here even though everyone's like wow they really need to get trump out of there before he just calls for another you know invasion of washington uh they know that they don't have the ***** horses for it they don't have the horses so something's gonna have to fill that gap but i don't know what it is the movement for people's party all the stuff i've seen from that makes it look incredibly online to me which as you know i'm highly allergic to so we'll see but it's certainly whatever it is that's gonna have to emerge from actual experiences of struggle of experiences of conflict on behalf of of people themselves as workers as residents as as people who live in a place and want some ***** dignity that's what's gonna do it later

*Music playing** again i can see that now sometimes i think it's the same when i think that i'm winning and i'm losing again sometimes i'm gonna take care if i find you've been creeping down hey folks so who's president i'm not sure i don't know probably trump i'm assuming although we haven't heard from him since he got kicked off of twitter and there's been no hurt since not ominous at all of course and uh we've got a good indication that there's going to be further attempts to uh to act as some sort of web-based shock troop to uh push over the tottering coke machine of american political i don't think that's likely i think we'll see in the next month and the inauguration day will definitely be the real uh the real proving ground of this a basically a whiff of grape shot anybody knows what that is uh it was one of the things that helped cement napoleon's legend is when he was still just general uh i believe not had not even gone to uh egypt yet uh he put down a right-wing royalist revolt that was threatening to lay siege to the national assembly but with a well-positioned artillery crossfire that drove the mob away from the building and saved the directory as though and uh as a result napoleon continued his and i gotta say the parallels don't just end there and this also uh very similar is the fact that the directory was a completely transactional uh hollow cynical shell that had no popular legitimacy so that's uh certainly history rhyming again but whoever it looks i think that uh we're gonna see these these ornery whites uh disciplined because one of the reasons that they're like this one of the reasons that they could just walk into the capitol and not think anything's gonna be bad and think that they can just go home and no one's gonna get arrested is because nothing bad has ever really happened to these people before in their lives now that doesn't mean they don't feel precarity and that doesn't mean they don't feel real anxiety about their station and worries about them their future and their children's future but in terms of like getting to do what they want outside of course for the market if they're employees i mean a lot of them as we have said are our uh you know small small business owners which means they feel autonomous all the time but even the ones who uh work have ideologically you know screamed that alienation uh and maintained their sense of self-assertion

through their purchases and through their political activities which have never been curtailed and so now it's happening if anyone saw the video of the person who was denied entry to a flight because they were on this new like i guess flight attendant insisted upon no-fly list for people who are identified haven't gone to it and the guy wasn't yelling the guy wasn't threatening to get his gun he was crying he was whining at the top of his ***** lungs no what they're doing **Music playing** is completely different what are you talking about caesar tulum was was like well years earlier are you talking about this is the whiff of grapeshot after venomir jesus ***** christ he's just crying because he doesn't it's like wait consequences and the majority of these people once they see oh you can go to jail for this oh there's actual consequences are going to back down now they're not going to reconcile themselves to democracy into the biden administration and they're not going to be chastened and like vote for mitt romney for the ***** nomination next time but they're probably not going to be marching around so much with guns uh and but there won't that's not going to be all of them of course some of them are going to keep fighting and they will be at every level manipulated monitored and encouraged by uh the ***** secret police so that we can keep this low running insurgency going and justify uh further civil liberties destruction and create more spectacle for people to engage with uh while everything burns but i wanted to uh i was wrong about this at every stage i mean i'll admit i never thought they were gonna ***** breach the capital it's pretty amazing but i mean i'm sorry if biden becomes president i was right everything else boils down to anxiety like oh i worried more than him before we got to this point and there and by the way if i'm wrong and there is a ***** civil war or or a coup wouldn't that be good news because at least it breaks this ***** endless stalemate frankly that's why i don't think it's gonna happen more than anything because it would actually break open this political uh structure here that has got us completely ***** costed and you know what if i'm at the ***** getting firing squatted by some maggot ***** or uh uh or biden is nominated or biden is sworn in and there's no problem either way if you spent more time worrying about it because you were more concerned than me and we're both in the same place we're both in front of the same firing squad we're both watching the same stupid ***** state of the union where biden has a stroke halfway through and all the democrats are clapping and they can't stop clapping and they all they're like ***** at a stalin speech at the pollock bureau because nobody wants the first to stop clapping even though he's up there and drool is coming out of his mouth and he's been ***** stuck on the same syllable for 45 seconds wherever we are if we're there together and you spent more time worrying than me guess what i was right regardless of because none of these people who want to ***** tell you how right they were about the fascist threat are doing anything other than settling scores

online so anyway there's going to be some sort of whiff of graveshop and if not then let's stop ***** podcasting if not thank god we don't have to have takes anymore nobody act like that's a bad oh no what if they overthrow the government then you gotta fight for something in once in your ***** life and you can't ***** be on the internet all day and i'm including myself in this oh my god you don't have a ***** excuse to stand your ***** ass for your entire ***** life oh my god that'd be the worst thing i'm operating under the assumption that this machinery of coercion is that is so that is literally surrounded the earth is going to be more resilient than some ***** yokels can put together and if i'm wrong then that is sweet ***** liberty from 0:8:16 this goddamn the steel cage of ***** so i'm sorry if biden gets biden gets nominated if i can get sworn in and there's no coup then guess what i won because i wasn't spending this whole time ***** my ***** intestines out and scrolling on twitter non-stop i really haven't been i swear i have not been doomed scrolling and i feel better for it i win then you owe i spent all this time ***** in a bucket over fear about this thing you won what did you win you get to feel smug congratulations that's the entire currency we have here so i don't like i said forget forget forget what's going to happen i just think broadly there's going to be a snap on the nose of these people and kind of for now get them back into the column although we'll talk about what 0:9:18 that's going to mean long term and none of it is good because none of any of this is good which is why i never ***** understand the argument about why you need to be more worried about stuff because well it's not going to be a fascist coup but it's still bad who in god's name is saying it isn't but i wanted to start today talking about some about like reinforcing sort of the the uh narrative of how we got to this place and how we created this class that revolted at uh at the at these people who now are fully rejecting democratic governance because they have a fully in uh fully separate media consumptive window where they didn't lose the election where all 0:10:19 of your entreaties to democracy and rule of law bounce off because they think that there are those things are on their side like that is incommensurability at a level that cannot be resolved politically which is why people talk about civil war but like my get is this is america most people are just gonna go home especially if they can ***** go to a goddamn outback in a couple of months they're gonna go home not all of them but enough to avoid a con so how do we get here with these this republican base here and i don't want to talk about whether they're that ***** left uh one of the most annoying conversations you can have about is trying to understand the class character of these people oh they're working class no they got they drove there and they took planes they're rich it's not one or the other it's it's a whole strata it's 0:11:20 the middle strata and also they're not working class no ***** they aren't nobody in america is we don't have class consciousness so we don't have working-class people

we have people who work for wages but they do not especially these people if they are technically working class they sure ***** don't think of themselves as workers they think of themselves if anything americans or consumers which mean but what's more important than the class character which that's meaningless in this context is their uh demographic character specifically um the places that they live and the the jobs they do there not necessarily workers like i said a lot of small the reason that we have 0:12:21 this now this this class of people who are in revolt even though they are as people like to point out relatively comfortable compared to people in this country who are suffering much worse but are hyper anxious and aware of their deprivation which is relative but that's the only thing anybody feels is their relative deprivation and then they feel a a bone deep confidence in their ability to exercise political influence and change that they want to speak to the manager because their entire life the manager has shown up and given them what they wanted but they're pissed how do you deal with this and then you've got the democrats as the opposition and their party made up of some of the people who are struggling the most in this country and some and most most now of the uh most educated and wellest off americans uh um ronald reagan won 80 of the 100 counties with the highest degree of bachelor degree or higher 0:13:24 attainment trump won 12 of them that's a real thing that's happening and and this democratic alternative which is just the same thing republicans are pushing for but more culturally inclusive uh is the only alternative to it how how so let's start by just pointing out that there's two that uh two types of capital formations emerge in america while it was being settled you had finance capital concentrated on the coastal cities and then you had physical capital uh before the civil war primarily in the form of plantation slave agriculture and some uh uh manufacturing in the north uh and 0:14:25 then over the course of the post-war era the end of slavery and then the expansion westward we get the proliferation across the country of regional economies that all are fed and then feed back into the national economy which is still cities and this sends the uh the fortunate sons and daughters of uh of the bounty of america's conquest um into spatial and cultural directions so if you are in one of those eastern cities with finance capital as its raison debt you are growing up in a condition around people who are not necessarily only uh financiers not necessarily only capitalists but also the handmaidens of capital lawyers university professors politicians people who 0:15:27 will become the dreaded pmc that's where it's found how to coordinate a national uh economy that requires expertise and that requires schooling and it requires manners it requires civilized civilization in the european sense and that over the course of the 20th century meant that the uh both middle and working class striving uh people who were able to access our huge expansion of um access to higher education after world war ii uh had a choice of how do they want to pursue the bounty of america

they could go east and i say east i really just mean to a city because the cities they those centers of finance and and you know uh capital they pop up across the country uh you go to the cities you go to college you get a degree and you go to cities to either make your fortune in in with the money itself or but that while that's happening while there's this flow of people to the cities like this there are regional physic uh physical capital production facilities and and uh networks of of commerce that are fixed that don't go anywhere and that don't and that only interact with finance capital and then global capital as debtors essentially as as people who the the ones who are there to give you uh liquidity so that you can expand and who you owe essentially the old banks that the jacksonians were terrified of those regional um uh capital finance capital uh economies around first and foremost extraction mining drilling fracking things like that also retail to serve all the people who work in those uh industries uh and then all the attendant you know it creates its own parallel economy filled with small business people uh and hustlers like lawyers in both places but lawyers doing different things finance like financial planners in both places doing different things and after uh the working class was brought into uh the political arena with the new deal after working class got a seat at the table as it were uh the first explosion of reactionary sentiment which is basically just a restating of the old jacksonian and jeffersonian concept of the totally unfettered uh citizen the the idea that american liberty is only real if it is if it is uh without any um any sovereign beyond the individual and that it is just the accumulated actions of these sovereign individuals that makes up the country when it exploded to as the antithesis to the sea this this the thesis that it emerged from world war ii of you know the the fortist keynesian new deal state which was a a creation forged in the laboratories of those big cities by finance capital because oh we have this industrial economy but these workers are organized and if they don't work we can't ***** get this stuff out we have a war to win we have a global war over like the resources of the planet to win what are we going to do we have the money let's give it to them for the love of god let's recognize them let's get them on the board here let's get them in the center pissing out because we can afford to and they were making all these deals and the and the i'm not i swear to god i'm not uncoke i swear to christ i understand you won't believe me but so those deals are being made there within the upper ranks of both the democratic and republican parties but then at the grassroots in these places where there's like a local uh candy manufacturer robert welch the founder of the john birch society was a candy manufacturer in western massachusetts uh in orange county amongst the uh like the knott's berry farm fortune or all the aerospace engineers who came to work for uh boeing um in the sun belts you know wherever it is it emerged and and then of course in the south in response to uh uh integration in every place the revolt to the new deal consensus uh came from at the top regional uh ruling 0:20:39 class people local national bourgeois types uh the koch brothers were really just a super super successful version of that they were like the alphas of them because their money is in ***** oil it's in the ground and trump supporters among the billionaires the lump and billionaires who support tend to be who support trump tend to be not on the finance side but on the physical capital side and um so you know oh um fast food franchise owners uh car dealership owners like the buddy garrity types we know the beautiful boaters local gentry they are the ones who rebel because they're not in on these meetings they don't get they're not sold they've not been consulted on the bretton woods system and ***** marshall plan they've not been consulted on integration either which is another thing that had to happen so that we could keep the money flowing and we could be beat the soviets but you can't talk sense to them because they're not in the room they're they're out in the hinterlands and they have their own cultures and they don't interact really with those easter ones except as 0:21:41 something to define oneself against so there's no persuading them even though it's in their best interest because another part is it's not in all their best interests the more successful ones over time will be like brought into and by and be bought out maybe at the right time but the tendency towards monopoly is real and these small gentry are going to be crushed over time and they are being crushed over time and like if they don't if they're not smart and a lot of them are not ***** smart and lucky and very few of us are lucky like half of us are not lucky at any given moment they're going to get crushed too and they're going to get proletarianized and they don't want it they never wanted it so in addition to the fact that they're culturally separated enough just to never buy any argument for why we should be doing this globalizing economy they also are very well they very well might not just like all those factory owners workers who are told that nafta would be worth it because hey you're going to have much cheaper socks at walmart and if you lose your job we'll give you and 0:22:43 that new right was in advance for the 50s and early 60s because things were good times were good it was working for most people when it broke up it broke out out of the cultural ferment of the the essentially overheating of the cultural economy the cause that came from having too many young people with too much time on their hands because literally the economy was too good and that is where you get you know uh you get social ferment and activism and attempts to change things because you have people who are increasingly articulate and able to make demands on on uh the political system and are able to organize themselves and while the 60s counter culturals were doing that so was this local business roundtable uh lumpin bourgeois rebellion and it eventually took power in the form of reagan now the thing is these 0:23:44 people were resisting global capital but they're still capitalists and also they're *****

morons most of them and at the level and at the political level when you're not even trying to talk to people who like have looked at the sheets the the the economy or anything are just schmoes reading the newspaper and don't have any more you know understanding of the world than anybody else when you're getting it through capitalist ***** media when reagan was elected it was with a promise that even though it looked like the american economy had stalled out permanently in the 70s we could get it going again not by seizing the means of production and redistributing profit which is the only thing that was going to do it that was off the table because the working class had lost its influence by that point and couldn't regain it there was an attempt the 70s saw the biggest wave of wildcat strikes since the po since the late 40s it was like the the birth and death pangs of like business liberalism 0:24:46

uh uh and our business um unionism in america were uh with the post-war strike wave and then with the 70s strike weight but it failed and what it meant was you had neo-liberal uh democrats like uh jimmy carter who wanted to tell all the people white black whatever look uh yeah we can't rely on indulgence we can't rely on stuff we buy to make us happy anymore now that's all true what he said but he wasn't doing anything to change the structure of the economy that made people have to find pleasure in goods because their lives were totally alienated otherwise he was essentially just telling him to pull up their ***** bootstraps it's classic the poison chalice of liberal piety right there but who was listening who was listening every uh every white middle class and up person who had at some point either them or their parents had made the trek from the hinterland to the colleges and to the cities or the suburbs of the cities to work around the money either in the state or in its uh 0:25:47 cultural departments and they had they were going to do good because part of this deal was we got here not because of the physical productivity of the land we got here because we can use our brains to inter interface with this new data economy this post this consumer data economy now of course they weren't smarter than anybody what they were was well positioned some way to exceed to the manners and social mores of college well probably because their parents went uh or because they were like uniquely uh suited for them for reasons that had nothing to do with their virtue could never do but one way or another they were in a position to thrive regardless and so of course they said yes there's a lot here hmm very interesting uh but reagan's answer was what's restraining america's economy is all of the stuff that makes the 0:26:50 economy possible it's all the structures of uh regulation and taxation that literally allow the thing to function the stuff it took us 200 years to build because the thing kept breaking down there were like six giant depressions and a civil war in the 19th century and then we had a depression that led to massive social misery and tumult and then only ended when we decided to become the world and then we'd had this

this thing that looked beautiful this keynesian synthesis but it was predicated on profits that over time fell as we had to build up our former enemies we had the soviets there we couldn't let japan and germany languish which meant eventually they were going to start making stuff and once they did automobile industry which had made itself uncompetitive which it essentially castrated itself to avoid being overtaken by its workforce like one of the big reasons that the big three were unable to adapt to the smaller more energy efficient vehicles coming out of japan in the 70s is that the facilities that they'd had to like um to to make a work workflows and and part you know movement like getting a thing from a uh get getting you know windshield wipers from a plant to the finishing area or whatever had been intentionally dispersed right after they've made the deals with the uaw uh in the 30s and 40s in order to make it harder for um the unions to secure crucial choke points of production one of the reasons one of the things that that led to is that when it came time to figure out what to do with the new economic order they they were unable to the chickens were coming home to roost and america was either going to have to socialize production or if it was going to maintain a profit-based economy he was going to have to dismember the very structure of new deal governance that has allowed it to thrive and if you're one of these small holders or people in their thrall people who live in the same cultural area maybe work for them but have imbued the idea of america america's good therefore my boss is good therefore if anything's wrong it's something else reagan was able to say all that that's something else that is alienation and anxiety and precarity however it's felt across the class rectum is caused by the government holding us back like fry when he's trying to drink the slurm and he's trying to get his head through the grate and he goes i could get there easily if it wasn't for these damn arms and then and that no ***** was more electorally appealing than carter saying put on a sweater now of course you might say hey maybe revolution would have been more appealing but there was nobody there by that point because labor had been demobilized bought off and a so for a while though the reagan scam worked it was a classic ponzi scheme in the american sense oh yeah we're going to cut taxes oh ***** our cities have destroyed themselves our cities are turned into complete bomb cells and we oh that's okay that's because of the black people they like drugs too much we'll throw them all in jail but your your places are still great because you've got mortgage uh uh mortgage deductions and we've essentially silently reconfigured the welfare state to give you silent subsidies that you don't even know are there and that make you think that you're a ***** world destroying business genius and not a costed little baby being kept in a swaddled blanket because the white middle class is the center of american politics and always has been it is not driving the caboose of course capital is doing

that but it has a crucial like load-bearing structure and it its movement can shift positions like it was the working class were able to get a good chunk of smallholders 0:30:55 to go along with the new deal they will follow a strong hand and that can be the left but in america it's been and so well the uh the end of prosperity 70s like i said last stream what that meant for uh african americans was just base repression like you'd never actually gotten to the point of political equality and now we can keep you as essentially contained like we give you enough power and influence to maintain patronage maintain a middle class a middle class but anybody who's like falls out of that uh structure and there's gonna be a lot because we never built up any actual you know uh capacity social capacity there uh we're gonna just story in general and what are you gonna do we're gonna complain what are you gonna do you just had a big complaint you just got a bunch of laws passed all the white people are sick of hearing in it and what are you gonna do one the republican party is designed to be against 0:31:57 you you can't go there so what are you gonna do you're captured by the democrats and it's tough ***** the repub the white people is a much different problem now the democrats their new base of white people that was set they're signed up yeah yeah sure knowledge economy great go i'll go to college learn to code we'll do it and they went to college and they got the jobs now some of them now are finding out oh no yeah that's all ***** now and that's the thing now the check is coming due even those costed uh regional lords and their vassals are not feeling the pinch like trump did very well very very well in counties with high uh fentanyl overdoses now of course he didn't do well against the people who suffered those fentanyl overdoses or their families they don't vote but they did very well among the wealthiest people who live there because they're seeing it it's their community and they're unhappy about it and so they have because but because this is like a petty national reactionary uh 0:32:58 capitalist movement this is essentially a barons revolt from a bunch of of pig-headed like feudal lords who have not got it in their head that there's one team here but because they're embedded in their social structures and they're in their fake class affect of i drive a truck and i listen to country music so i'm basically the same guy as the one who is the dude who mows my lawn and he thinks that so that too because i'm dressed like him and we're all living this lie together and who's going to tell us what we're wrong the ***** the the the gay jews on the television they're not going to tell me anything there's nothing they can do to break my bubble we're in here together and we're suffering together and so what is to be done and they are taking the reaganite conclusion to jeffersonian jacksonian logic which is end the state and if you like ask these people like okay what should trump do what is trump going to do to fix things now you might say some people like in the base they make free 0:33:59 male health care whatever that's that's not that's never going to be the the um the place where policy is formed because remember at the top rank of these people we're talking about these beautiful boater classes this petty bourgeois these barons these these are also people who end up going to congress and be and like running for senate and becoming ***** senators as their kids are so they are also the political class of the republican party like these are this the party and this class is almost fused and that means that they're going to dictate what the response to this horror is this is neoliberal capitalism rolling over everybody how do we stop it and their answer will be allow us all the unrestrained power of barons because the buried assumption within all of the few the fantasy of the jeffersonian model is well if everybody can do it and of course no it will concentrate where it always does the money and power will stay where they are but the people under it in the thrall of it within the cultural bubble of it will accept it because they could one day break out themselves if they work hard enough i mean it is a theology and they fully embrace it and it is connected and grafted onto so what is the trumpian and post-trumpian uh uh political project if there is one and of course there really isn't it is just spectacle but say they can't they actually are able to assert uh and at the state level they very well might be like regardless of whether biden gets in i don't think you see him ruling for four years without some sort of nullification crisis somebody like desantis or greg abbott rallying sabers about uh refusing to uh uh accept federal laws so you could see there like just being in the near future some sort of attempt to assert like a trumpian social vision it's not going to be heron volks democracy it will be get rid of all taxes get rid of all restrictions on pollution uh on drilling anything uh and get rid of all restraint on uh any sort of inner uh like consumer-based protection uh for any financial or uh or physical product like let lead-filled baby food whatever let the market decide um and because the pitch there is with all restrictions lifted if we assume capitalism and everything is assumed of capitalism so the alternative to this that doesn't i mean and you can't blame them too much for not believing that this could exist because no one is talking about it especially the ***** democrats if capitalism is it do we submit to being turned into soy creatures do we submit to this regime and says look we're going to strip mine the earth but we're going to do it politely in an orderly fashion and we all keep voting and we all pretend to respect each other's religious and uh ethnic diversity and by the way you now don't own your business anymore you work for amazon you don't have any health insurance that's just the way it is you could code if you you want to learn how to code grandpa you want to sit in class all day junior to learn how to ***** code even though like that isn't for everybody people there are people who are not uh for college and not for the kind of jobs that you're supposed to want to get and of course even if everyone was there aren't enough of them there aren't enough of them so that's what we're that's what the democratic party and

now after the trump ban the entirety of culture the amano culture from tech industry and the tech monopolies to the democratic party to everything you see on television that is one party and it is for turning us all into uh into uh little uber eats minions there is no socialist alternative to this in the discourse what there is is this this uh 0:38:4 incoherent jabbering that uh nationalist white like uh racial nationalist version of it not purely like white nationalists because it will it will it will by definition and for its own survival except others outside of whiteness but it will just do that by enhancing the side what whiteness means but it's still part of it like that's grafted in there right there with the nationalism and the christianity they're all wedged together and they all reinforce each other what is the policy what is the proposal instead of doing that let's not let the cucks of the u.n tell us how much oil we can drill everybody gets a ***** oil derrick that they can try to find oil with and everybody can ***** pump every surface of this earth because hey it could be you that finds the next uh the next mother lode multi-level marketing schemes no res uh no um regulations of those anybody with enough hustle can get friends to get friends to get friends to uh to understand this incredible marketing opportunity it's okay though yes you're still a minion most of you the ones who aren't in the iron uh i aren't in compounds most 0:39:7 of you are still a rabbit-like peasant but at least you could be a lord as opposed to the the gerbil in the soy plantation who has accepted his lot in life and what despairs makes me feel with despair about more than anything is is that now that we have this like now that after they banned donald it's all out there there is one agenda there is one party there is an establishment there is an elite everything that you ever said about that is true it's just it's everybody except what is the undigestable thing what's the thing the system cannot absorb what has to be rejected what has to be denounced everything else seems to be acceptable including black lives matter including all manners of of socialism what cannot be absorbed trump and so what 0:40:9 does that say to the people absorbing the spectacle that the only alternative to the misery of the moment is trump no matter how incoherent it is and stupid and cruel it is i mean look at what is what is trump's real legacy in these last months he hasn't really been planning a coup he's just been like hoping somebody else would do it what he has been doing is making sure that they ***** execute everybody on the federal death row that's the heart of this it's just ***** it's feudalism like the choice is really is it's it's two brands of barbaric barbarism it is old-fashioned feudalism in the american sense like you know the plantation master and his thralls and then the pathetic overseer in the middle trying to negotiate the two and then we have techno feudalism where there is no ostentatious displays of uh public violence and sadism and domination they're all done behind the scenes they're all covered by ***** ones 0:41:10 and zeroes they're all hidden we are all too polite to mention them but it's feudalism

in both cases it's barbarism in both cases and then the alternative to that is this just yeah the alternative is just this savagery and i am not becoming post-leftified because i am saying that sucks and it is the goal the only meaningful ***** point of the left at this juncture is to actually and the only thing i will say about that is it will not be by posting and it will not be by monitoring people's anxiety levels and it will about be curating ideologies in the hot house of online and building your ***** uh ship in a bottle it will have to come from actual dare i hate to say it organizing and you say what does that mean **Music playing** it's sure ***** nothing i'm seeing on the internet which thank god it shouldn't be it should be people working 0:42:12 together it's going to and it's going to have to happen and i hope it will or else all of the coming misery that's going to break our fantasy of endless indulgence the the myth that greg grandin talks about will be finally dispelled any hope that that alienation and uh and pain goes to the mid goes to fill the ranks of opposition to capitalism uh that goes away if the only alternative to the system is trump they'll find a way to absorb almost all of it all of it that doesn't go into self-destructive despair or just pure apolitical violence **Music playing** and the one thing that like can shine through this is that this is all spectacular politics and it's spectacular it's spectacular nature is what allows it such purchase in people's minds because because it's so easily manipulatable like half those people at the ***** uh at the 0:43:13 capitol were streaming it for their ***** followers or had a t-shirt on that that you could buy at their etsy store everyone was selling each other stuff it was some it's a giant tupperware party the only thing that can defeat that is a self-interest that is fused to the self-interest of others at the point of work and suffering not at the point of arguing and meta-suffering and discussing suffering and finding a cultural costume so those are the vulgar boatmen that's the class that we created we created 0:44:14 a regional bourgeois that was never forced into full political uh uh acceptance of the the system because there was never any need they were there making their money themselves it didn't matter if they sponsored the john birch society or whatever hey when they took office it helped apply pressure from the right to break up a lot of the new deal stuff that capital needed to get rid of they were very helpful they were very very helpful and they still are but only within the bounds they have to be corralled that's why i'm saying i think there's gonna be some sort of crackdown a whiff of grapeshot because they're only useful as long as everything is together but man seeing like the national ***** manufacturers association and like dow and ***** coming out and saying trump got to go that's not good like if you are rooting for this because you think it's going to lead to some sort of working-class trumpist 0:45:15 alternative to the status quo i'm sorry if that's how it worked if you could get the like base of a party to dictate to its to capital that at its top without like fully organizing

around a conflict with capital uh you're not going to in you're not going to beat them you will be subord this party will be directed towards a incoherent gibberish sort of national sort of almost like uh right wing pole pot ***** like destroy the city shoot everybody with glasses and then instead of having everybody farm collectively for rice like have everybody open their own like ugh but like what the button that's gonna what biden i think is gonna do i'm not gonna predict you much but if he's able to hold power and like the gop doesn't just assert a veto at like every point which they might do like this whole uh impeachment thing is very interesting because like as i said this trump energy is useful as long as it is you know maintaining stability uh because these high-level republicans have interests that are that transcend trump but if they think that there's a chance that the democrats could actually change the rules because remember the only reason that the republicans are able to be the party they are and have the appeal that they do is because they have a gerrymandered and structurally uh and structurally mandated uh handicap essentially that allows them to do that if the and that's all not and that a lot of that is based on rules that could be rescinded by a party in power uh and that could actually threaten them and especially if people are talking about like sending folks to jail and that changes the ***** calculus or it could but i the democrats i don't think are gonna press it that far because who really wants them to do that besides a bunch of ***** op-ed writers whose job it is to make the democrats look like a responsive ***** uh meaningful resistance to uh authoritarian hell the republican party is psy tolliver and the democratic party i do wonder if somebody would ever will just slap trump like what if one of the joint ships of staff just hit him in the face what would he do because you gotta assume he's never been struck but they wouldn't do that either because they're a bunch of ***** dorks and they have no real interest in seeing this like ended this should all be drawn out as long as possible draw it out right to the end then trump leaves office biden gets in there's some shots fired uh there's some bombs that go off there's some shenanigans there's a few big raids and then everybody is just too ***** spent and anxious at the same time to do anything other than just be baby birds as as it's dictated to us and as i was saying i was distracted but i think we might honestly see some sort of trial ubi here to stand in for everything else that needs to change because it is the easy quick fix that's why yang proposed it and there is a basis now with the ***** uh with the stimulus concept in just making a cyclical ***** payment the substitute for effective vaccine distribution uh or any kind of uh health care counter measures and that would be the path of least resistance because it doesn't really chafe anybody all it does is is undermine your argument for uh deficit austerity which you need to have in order to beat back progressive demands but it's at this point that's got to be like the one inessential item in your loadout

that you can jettison but we'll see i don't think we're getting anything else that's for sure and we're sure ***** not gonna get uh any kind of uh hurt immunity for at least a year but the big thing about this is that the entire democratic cultural response and this goes for everybody talking about how anxious they have to be and everybody talking about how they need to impeach to send the message that this is unacceptable all that is premised on convincing people right you're convincing the population to for example support democrats against republicans as a stand-in to do what they always want people to do and put country first and make whether or not you support trump a defining issue of whether or not you vote for a republican like if somebody i will not vote for a republican who says trump uh should stay in office and the thing is is that they can't win that they can't make that happen they can't make that work because they're not speaking to those people they're speaking to here's the people they're speaking to they're speaking to the democratic faithful outside of the whole thing uh who are going to be yes siring to everything who take everything that's yes medicare for all is a good idea but it is impractical yes we do need to uh be realistic about what we can accomplish given republican opposition then there's the people who you could theoretically engage to change the numbers the women's who don't vote or don't identify as partisan but then it's mostly gamma rays because they don't think this ***** matters because they've never seen it mean anything in their lives they have no emotional connection to the symbology that the liberals do because it is not the deal has not worked out for them the way it has for the liberals and then you have the people in the ***** cut republican cocoon for whom everything they get outside of it all the norms all the norm assertions every statement by every big company none of that like makes them go oh these things i like don't like this maybe i'm wrong they say oh this is a ***** conspiracy this is literally the elite telling you that democracy isn't real because remember they all think trump won on an emotional level even if they couldn't explain why they are motivated emotionally by a belief that trump is the legitimate president maybe it isn't maybe it's being deeper than than uh believing that he won the election like they might be think a lot of them that the people we have vote mostly shouldn't be allowed to and that means that they don't whatever the justification is the end result is that none of these entreaties to norms none of these entreaties to higher ideals will penetrate that bubble which means there can be no uh threat there could be no democratic uh like uh assertion of authority in the halls of congress no no ability to to cow the republicans into doing things because between now and then who knows how many people have stopped caring and the people who will who we know will care are going to be the same people who are always there and now we know a lot of these working class people who weren't paying attention are now kind of siding with trump i mean imagine imagine this imagine trump was your first ***** election you never voted before think of it this way never and there's a lot of people like this you never voted for four but this time holy ***** big stuff's happening kind of crazy what's going on i don't know no one seems to know the dem uh like there's no clear story mass are good mass are bad but now they're good and something about the chinese i don't know but i do know that i lost my job or family member died of covid or can't go to my favorite bar anymore or you know i lost my health insurance or something ***** well what the hell is going on you've got this political establishment that is unified in its message like remember biden and trump didn't argue about any actual difference in policy about covid or anything else they agreed 0:54:41 on the basic hybrid thing of lockdowns when you need and then open things uh when you can and uh mostly make it people's personal responsibility to wear a mask and then give people money uh some money uh to uh you know make up the shortfalls instead of shutting everything down and letting people stay home and paying them uh trying to ***** cut it off no maintaining the ***** economy at all costs that was the bipartisan answer so that's but you do have one guy there who all of the people other people in charge all the media all the big institutions say is bad and is fact uniquely bad and is beyond bad and is terrible and oh my god now what he's saying is mostly gibberish but what biden's saying is mostly gibberish but trump's gibberish is apparently dangerous then there's an election biden wins looks like you won but i don't know who are you supposed to know this is the media who knows what's who's who's ***** behind any of this stuff but they're kicking them out 0:55:42 they're uh they're they're kicking him off because remember these people outside of the dem enthrallment do not credit the democrats or the ***** constitutional order or or the media or anything for any good thing in life nor should they and it's insanely frustrating that you've got all these people who've decided that you know you might actually need to have public ownership of public goods instead of having like monopoly capitalists being able to veto your access to crucial infrastructure yeah maybe think about that beyond the thing you used to post beyond thinking we need to ***** nationalize the internet so that my grandkids are forced to like my 0:56:43 facebook memes that is how this is why i'm saying there could be no constructive politics with these people because it is all the most selfish brain dead entitled dog ***** on earth because they are the most coddled people in human history so their prescriptions for problems are the most self uh self uh reinforcing and uh um self validating self-absolving ***** on earth i want to bring back uh cap i want to bring back executions in the streets uh and uh no income tax healthcare is by lottery but you know it's it's legal for me to sell um this like the culture they're defending the national culture they're defending against the encroaching uh globalists which 0:57:45

is how a lot of people like to phrase it they like to say this is a national you know cultural this is an embedded cultural uh unit that is rebelling against uh encroaching capitalism you know the way like think of all those think about the plains indians and you know um and uh peasant europe and think of the enclosures no these people were already totally consumerized pringles they were already processed dog ***** and so their culture is processed dog ***** and the thing they're trying to well there's snow out there and the idea of oh i'm gonna direct him in the right way i'm gonna like convince them that my ***** thin ass uh reed of cod marxist uh jargon college jargon is gonna be more persuasive than the ***** visceral imagery of the american flag or the confederate flag for that matter and like the pageantry and uh uncertainty 0:58:47 and religious fervor of this your ***** nerdy ass ***** poli-sci ***** is gonna cut through that especially since all of the money will be right against you all the money that is within those you know remaining sectors dumbass like it's hilarious watching people who make fun of aoc and people who take aoc seriously and say oh you're a ***** rube i can't believe you idiots and then make fun of all of the high-pay media hacks who pretend to criticize the democrats but actually she dipped them back into voting for democrats how many of them are are ***** convincing themselves right now well maybe not right now we'll see that like josh hawley is it's like the the guy who's going to uh you know awaken the sand worm and and bring class politics to this like gibbering reactionary petty bourgeois tantrum that's a fantasy as rich and 0:59:49 you have to be either well paid or hoping you'll get well paid by by uh flattering an audience that wants to be reinforced in their worldview already uh there is no hope in either of these parties my friends the the things they represent are two flavors of ***** sickle i mean like i mean that's obviously a very glib thing to say oh the turd sandwich and the ***** the ship taco or i don't even remember the stupid south park but you know the truth or falseness of that is never in doubt they always were by definition they are but whether or not that matters to determine is determined by the context of their of the contest like i'd say like a 64 election like that's a real 32 that's a real distinction even if you're both talking you're talking about real 1:0:50 uh you know a bipartisan capitalist super structure undergirding it but right now everything is accelerating towards ***** every all conflict is in the benefit of both parties exacerbating conflict is in everyone's best interests at least to the point that they think that they can overtake it like the democrats they're aware there's a point where they might bluff beyond their capacity and then we could see them get slapped out and they don't want to risk that and that's why i doubt they'll impeach trump because they don't want to be shown to be holding a weak hand because what they want their fantasy and the fantasy of all liberals is at this moment those guys in the guy with the horns at the at the rostrum that image is the 911 during a moment of

national catastrophe the same way that 9 11 did for the republicans that is the dream of the democrats and the signal and the evidence of that is going to boil down to how many republicans break ranks how many republicans denounce trump how many republicans say yeah no this is too far and signal that they're willing to you know uh cut towards the democrats which has been what they've been trying to do break the regular republicans away from the base that's been the goal since uh clinton and got the nomination and trump was running against trump and this is another chance for them to do that but if they do a vote and the republicans are essentially uh unified all of that all they have demonstrated is that the democrats have no actual ability to govern and that biden will in fact be being having his policies dictated by mitch mcconnell i just don't think the democrats want to find out i think they're too afraid so that's why i doubt they'll do it they might not going to say they won't it's just right now my guess is they don't want to see they don't want to show how weak their hand is they want to leave it in the air so that scared republicans could like start really freaking out oh get some of those polls out there showing how many people were opposed to the to the uh attack on the thing thing is though all those ***** all of those almost all of those republicans in the house are in gerrymandered districts where the majority of voters there supported all this ***** and think it's awesome and will vote for any ***** used car dealer who runs against you saying he voted to kick the president out or he voted to certify the whatever and they don't want to show that they don't want to have that out there they want to have it out there as a possibility yeah it's like the republicans after the civil war waved the bloody shirt and it worked great because most people like who lived in the northern states which had the enough electoral votes to determine the president if they stayed unified had been shot by southerners uh or had shot a southerner who was likely a democrat so that bloody shirt was real this is all just a spectacle this is all just pretty funny and by the way i wanted to say this too anybody who after trump got uh permabanned was like this is really serious yeah but i'm sorry i treat that the same way that i treat the people who say you have we let the tech companies take over everything that already happened this is just the validation of that having that having it come in the form of president donald trump being permabanned is hilarious and thinking it's not hilarious doesn't change the facts on the ground just like thinking that the uh duffman going rappelling from the roof of the congress and stealing aoc shoes isn't funny i'm it's so funny because i remember from the bush years it has been a long-standing uh project by the intellectual left liberals uh the op-ed columnist types and and the the nation writer types that that the republican party is an existential threat to democratic uh governance in america and that therefore it has to be destroyed in its current form you see this a lot many people have made this argument over the years it's only gotten more intense than the last few but the way but that is impossible given the current uh uh lay given the current layout of like american political power the big empty places in this country were all of those the smart all of the smart ecology uh like sensitive types departed all the ones who went on to become the the debate the the white middle-class base of the an upper-class base of the democratic party that when they went out there the ones who stayed they stayed in places that are the democratic party with its play 1:6:3 towards the same base of middle class like understood forgetting their actual jobs self conceived of as middle class white americans mostly white americans with like black people as this permanent adjunct to the democratic coalition and like uh latinos and asians sort of being in in the in the middle strata you can't and then a bigger bigger chunk of people deciding the politics doesn't matter and checking out you cannot have you cannot destroy the republican party in those conditions any more than the whig party or any more than the democratic party could destroy the wig party the whig party had to be destroyed from outside it had to be destroyed by people withdrawing their support for it in concentrated organized ways and then taking that 1:7:4 uh power or taking that uh else what am i talking about the only place is the midwest where am i wrong about this is the rural parts of this country are filled more and more with reactionary white people of all job descriptions whether working college educated and most these people disproportionately not college educated by the way uh and then disproportionately college-educated urban whites and then black people as a hegemonic part of the democratic coalition and then that's and then those places where those votes predominate those white middle-class votes predominate are it's 1:8:5 a 50-50 it's a 50-50 split you're never going to be able to overthrow the democrat republican party within this uh array of courses something has to come outside of it and break through both parties support bases that's the only thing that's going to do it and in this current moment which activate a vast chunk of people who do not ***** vote and the key the reason that i think that means that we cannot be thinking anything that exists currently online is going to work is that i really do feel like this is all a poisoned well this is all this is all a mad language we've taught each other in this self-imposed sanitarium and then once we try to go outside into the sunlight we're going to sound like jabbering mental patients you gotta get the normals to start and you and if you can be normal with them then by god go and do it i know 1:9:6 that's ableist but guess what i get to say ableist stuff because i'm actually disabled unlike a large chunk of the people who consider themselves disabled activists who a lot of whom have self-diagnosed conditions i have like four distinct disabilities

oh down **Music playing** baby if i live without you i live without hank honk honk everybody talk pill time again uh are people doing sh sea shanties on tick tock this is 0:1:1 a cultural appropriation honestly from uh from coastal uh salt dogs and i will not i'm triggering people by drinking a white claw i'm embodying becky hood i have become becky destroyer of worlds that's me so apparently people are starting to post out of context uh clips from the streams to try to cancel me but my takes are just too strong and correct to uh to be cancelled so once again uh cannot be defeated sorry you're not going to get me because my every word and sentence and expression is a perfectly crafted conceptual uh item and none of it is going to be you can do nothing but try to squint at it to try to find out to try to make up something and sorry sorry folks for the discerning online denizen there's just no way so i'm i'm always 0:2:2 uh i always feel validated when people try to own me for my posts and my correct statements but they can't because they're correct and uh that is the defense they say the best the the per the pure defense against reliable is the truth right well there we go i cannot be hold accountable can't do it of course this quote will be great pulled out after i've been held accountable somehow could happen but right now i don't think so right now there's no way i could cannot hold me accountable cannot hold me to account cannot be held accountable cannot hold me to a count i can't 0:3:3 be held accountable you cannot hold me to account i will not be held accountable you cannot you cannot you cannot you cannot hold me you cannot hold me you cannot hold me to account there you go i'll make that my ringtone so apparently they might impeach him actually on the 19th which would be hilarious and that would mean that would make sense because the whole argument for impeachment right now is that it is symbolically important to show a line that you can't cross and 0:4:5 i could definitely see republicans getting behind establishment republicans especially getting behind making that a bright line because it does it looks a little dicier and less controllable than a lot of them are probably happy with but they're one they're going to want to string it out as long as possible and they're going to want to reduce antagonizing these people as long as possible so doing it symbolically like an hour before he leaves office would be perfect the perfect sort of thing that looks like action and people can convince themselves as proof that our democratic structures work but is in every respect just stage managed bit of public relations yes yes i know impeachment and removal are different but they could remove them too like an hour before he's supposed to leave anyway although that's a lot of senators that's a lot of senators and yes the senators are less uh less vulnerable obviously but you know a third of them presumably a number of republicans although not that many because it's a very bad map for democrats next time on the senate and honestly the fact that they they had a great map this time and the fact that they were able to what get to 50 50 was honestly a disaster for them and it means they're definitely going to lose the senate in two years unless of course you know they're able to hang this around their neck and everybody cares about this and it becomes the new political litmus test for uh you know seriousness and i don't know we'll see about that but you don't want to have to run for re-election in two years having voted to kick him out of office guaranteed guaranteed you're done and you know a lot of these senators it's like that's not the worst thing in the world oh you lose you just you lose your spot oh no now i have to get a pay bump if we do get i gotta say though as i said la out last time if you're worried about this whole thing breaking down then you clearly don't get it because they're sort of bad news everything is on a trajectory to ***** and i mean a world where you don't feel like there's nothing to do but post isn't that a more isn't that a more vital life even if it's scarier at least you're scared of like real stuff you're not just scaring yourself about computer narratives but like i said more than anything that's why i don't think that there's going to be some sort of catastrophic confrontation because it would be too destabilizing and i don't think that there's any real reason to believe that uh the choke points and the coercive and seductive mechanisms of power that currently exist are in any way been undermined or compromised to a permanent end by uh the ***** fit and the capital last week i'm not blaming anybody for posting i'm uh i'm a poor i'm a i'm a pure posting machinery took all of my uh energies and put them i don't recommend it for everybody r.i.p to a real one sheldon adelson uh you know my first gig opening for him at a uh at a massage torture cave that he was visiting that he had funded personally yeah a real rest in piss sheldon adelson but of course you know he's got the world he wanted he got he got a untrammelled israel that's able to do uh yakubitsky uh congratulations they got their iron wall and now he gets to go to uh he doesn't even get to go to heaven right there's they name a bunch of stuff after shabatinsky that's it they name a bunch of stuff after him in israel so he gets that instead uh there's one thing i wanted to say about elaborate on yesterday that i forgot when i was talking about the beautiful boaters and it's talking about the the regional barons who make up

CUSHVLOG 137. NO-GROWTH ZONE

our you know lumpin ruling class out in the hinterlands the real divide as we know now like demographically and electorally and politically and culturally is between 0:9:13 urban and some rural areas and the suburbs are the liminal area between them and like the democrats uh gains for biden mostly came in those suburbs where those lim those people those those knowledge economy workers who aren't the hipsters who fill up gentrified neighborhoods who want to be out in the suburbs and want to have a house but work in a professional capacity uh are moving towards the democrats because of how unhinged and um and ira erratic and irrational the republicans are being of course that's not every one of these white suburbanites the ones who work in things like i don't know law enforcement they are hardening in their other and their position otherwise but anyway that's the liminal space and the thing about these rural areas is you know um they they have towns in them they have cities but they're just they're smaller they're more provincial uh and **Music playing** the people who live there are really cocooned in this culture and what they all have 0:10:15 in common is that those places used to be where people farmed and where people where farming and agriculture still occur but not on the family plots that used to be there the the yeoman small holding farmer would that was the model american citizen and and uh and for whom america was created ostensibly that survived as obviously it survived as the mental idea of freedom that that reactionaries have to this day in america but it survived much longer than a lot of people think in the country itself you didn't see the real collapse of smallholding farming in america i mean obviously you saw a big move away from agricultural labor to urban labor as technology decreased the amount of human inputs that were required to farm but you still had family farms and it wasn't until the 80s uh and the work of uh guys like ed butts who was uh reagan's racist agricultural secretary earl butts rather not sorry 0:11:16 earl butts uh helped create a a modern agricultural subsidy program that doomed the small farm for the most part there still are small farmers around the country and they are as smallholders everyone are deeply reactionary but the people who used to have those farms got they didn't all go to the city and learn how to code they stayed around and became sort of a resentful uh and unmanned you know removed from like the matrix of of sufficiency and uh self-sufficiency and self uh you know actualization that they used to that used to be a possibility uh for agricultural uh for people who owned farms people who were able to buy some land and work it now that's mostly conagra and archer daniel's midland and monsanto and and a lot of it is and a lot of the actual labor is performed by immigrants illegal many of them 0:12:20 illegally uh illegally employed and the people who used to farm that are still there and the only story they hear is the story of the mad little crimson kings who run those little fiefdoms and they have all directed their psychic energy towards the big

crimson king in the white house i guess he's in the white house okay this is actually something that's trip uh freaking me out a little bit it's about how trump has not been heard from since they took his twitter account away he's the president he could just step out under the rose garden and there'd be reporters there in five minutes and he could just start riffing he hasn't demanded to go on tv he hasn't done a press conference has he made a public statement he i know they're saying he's gonna go to the alamo or apparently alamo texas which is a town just the stupidest people on earth they don't know what the alamo is they know alamo that's where they fought the mexicans alamo texas building uh town we don't know so did he say but the fact 0:13:24 that he's having it in san antonio or in alamo really shows you that he has run up the red white flag and it'll be interesting to see how long it takes for these people to get it that he has thrown in the towel because he'd stay in washington if he really wanted to press this thing you might do it in an alamo rental car a lot that'd be funny like the i mean the four seasons thing in philadelphia will still not be topped for pure ioducci that is pure uncut yanuchi the four seasons oh four seasons lawn supply i do wonder if somebody slapped him like i wonder if one of the joint chiefs just i would 0:14:25 not somebody's asking about who would be the protagonist of the mothman movie i would not really want it to have a traditional protagonist i would want it to be more um more removed and more uh pointless i guess like incidents not really a and like with a cost of characters that maybe has a through line like keel would certainly be in a lot of it but i wouldn't want them to be like have an interiority necessarily i'm not gonna apologize not gonna happen it is amazing when they try to get me canceled i'm just such a nice boy you can't do it i'm a nice boy with correct takes you can't get too mad at me or end up in the when you do you just look unhinged everyone who gets mad at me just looks uh like they i saw that red letter media is gonna do a review of the blob people are saying more and more folks the blob 0:15:27 tremendous people the horror the sci-fi horror people talk about a lot like the thing is obviously now i mean i'm sure john harper would have john carpenter would have really appreciated it if people back then liked it as much as they do now but the king is the thing is a towering achievement and it's one of the big reasons that i cannot credit anybody who argues that ridley scott isn't a hack because oh he made alien i'm sorry the thing is better than alien and it came out like two years later it's not even the best sci-fi horror movie of like the year period that it came out in i am not ***** interested in hearing about alien compared to ***** the thing and of course cronenberg's the fly great movie be afraid be very afraid snapping the arm puking on the donut shotgun to the head can't beat it but the ***** blob man written by frank darabon doesn't have i can't even remember who directed it not a uh not a auteurist thing that has been uh recaptured but in my opinion as good as those movies and in terms of its special effects maybe a little better the blob in that movie is so ***** 0:16:28 good and my favorite thing about that film narratively is how nasty it is how it kills several characters who are set up as the protagonist of the movie early on it's a pimp movie and it rules it lost money it's another movie that failed so i guess the only one of those that succeeded at the time was the fly yeah frank darabont and chuck russell wrote the screenplay who and the director was chuck russell who made uh he made nightmare on elm street three dream warriors which i have not seen since i was a kid he directed eraser with schwarzenegger your luggage and the scorpion 0:17:30 king wow that is a that is an interesting career uh he directed the mask too oh and he directed fringe the tv show fringe i am wrath that terrible travolta ripoff of uh death wish which i watched with will last year i don't think we even got through the whole thing god damn how the hell do you how do you make one great movie and then never hit the hit it again you probably don't know why your movie is good honestly but i feel like somebody says the mask is cringe now i don't know if that's true i feel like the mask has made a comeback because once you get through all the levels of irony you are back to looney tunes you're back to a guy hitting himself on 0:18:33 a car with a head on the head with a cartoon mallet it's the only thing you can do once you've you know got too sophisticated in your eraser came out the same year as mission impossible and has the same plot as mission impossible it also has some amazingly terrible cgi crocodiles which coming from chuck russell who made one of the great practical effects movies of all time really does tell you that the intro when they brought in those computers it really was the death knell for craft your luggage your luggage god i saw i didn't watch that whole schwarzenegger video i saw that it was seven minutes long but there is an alternative world alternative america where we did not where we did not have a constitutional requirement of uh citizenship or 0:19:34 of like native born citizenship to run for president and schwarzenegger not doesn't replace trump as like the republican party because that is go that was going in the direction it was going no matter what but as like some sort of um like high charisma spectaclized codification of like democrat neoliberalism because at this point he is a democrat schwarzenegger is a democrat i don't care what he calls himself he would i mean by the time he left office he governed basically as the same way newsome and and brown do uh and he could have and he could have been like the the counterweight because now we're in this dangerously un uh balanced situation where trump is this you know this ***** all all father who is able to summon the ***** the the the 0:20:36 thunder from the depths of the earth with his voice because he's able to connect to people at that level of you know fame and american um the classic american con artistry and hustling uh a charisma schwarzenegger has is better than trump at all of those things and he could have provided a alternative now not an alternative

to you know neoliberal hell just an alternative public expression of like spectacular politics that could have given something for uh for the non-republican base to care about and for non-republican non-voters to care about as it stands now we have this totally vapid uh democratic party that stands for nothing and isn't able to replicate the spectacular uh figure of barack obama that was the whole point as i said before of that primary why they let it go so long and why they risked bernie winning is because they needed to ***** like throw people out there and have the ***** ***** and i 0:21:37 the taste makers in iowa and new hampshire find the person who could replicate the the the obama magic couldn't be done there's nobody there schwarzenegger could have done it but without now he can't run for president he can't run for president here so sorry not gonna work too bad too bad but they would just it would be more likely that the democrats could actually like discipline the republicans and their base which we'll see how much they're able to do it because like i said i think they're terrified of seeing of pushing against the republicans because they're afraid of them making a decision to just not accept their intimidation which when you're talking about the democrats trying to intimidate people it's very understandable oh 0:22:55 no cuba back on the state sponsor of terrorism list it'll be interesting to see how much of this stuff uh biden rolls back and how much they just let there and act like they have no control over because remember guys oh those florida cubans and and florida someone's asking about uh the persian gulf everything everybody has sort of been failing including me to notice that there's been a very significant buildup of uh u.s military and israeli military operations there some israeli subs running around israelis they've been stepping up bombing into syria uh they assassinated that ***** uh iranian nuclear scientist and the u.s nimitz is out there ***** tooling around just waiting to crash into some boats and this is all after the secret meeting between 0:23:57 pompeo and mbs uh right after which the they declared the houthis a ***** terrorist organization which is completely idiotic and is gonna just get more people killed once again we'll see if biden bothers to lift a finger on that one but it seems like what they're trying to do is uh essentially like lash the tiller to the to the uh uh to the door uh and in such a way that ensures that biden is doesn't have a free hand to reset u.s policy towards iran away from the brinksmanship that it's currently being defined by and you know to which degree biden even wants to do that is up in the air but they're ensuring that it won't be up to them that there will be no way to reverse course by the time they take power another great another real reason uh another reason for uh why it's absolutely great that we have a what almost three months 0:25:00 yeah two and a half months no almost three months yes almost three month period between the presidential election and the inauguration of the winner because we have to make sure everybody can get their ***** horse cards to washington in time what's amazing is that it used to be longer it used to be march they didn't change that until uh as until they passed i believe the 25th amendment uh and they just moved it up to january just i guess it's like well we you know we want to give them the whole calendar year can you imagine if it was march if that the 20th yeah it's amazing how 0:26:4 many of those amendments are just mess are just actually fixing just bureaucratic elements from the original constitution that's how hastily and shittily drawn that thing was such an insane idea to federate it fetishistically but of course it must be pointed out that there is no ideologue there's no content to the uh constitutional fetishization in this country nobody does it because it's just such a great document they do it because they imagine that it exists to and they're correct for the most part that it exists to maintain their privileges in rat respect it is very similar to the magna carta which we which is thought of popularly by dullards like the ones who try to say oh the magna carta says you don't have to wear a mask give me chip shop those things are not law rules those things are not the prerogatives of regular people those are privileges of the barons and the one and the constitution exists 0:27:5 to maintain baronial privileges in in in this in a vibrant context of like democratic demands from below here's your democracy but here is the guard guard rails on it well that will prevent it from expert actually becoming democratic you can't right now or don't have to wear a mask it says the king can only tax my wall exports once a fortnight how many wool esports do you have you ***** ***** i do love that they have a constitution in the britain that is not written down which makes sense when you consider that the whole thing flows from the common law tradition which is all just laws made up literally as they went along which meant that at every level they 0:28:7 were attempts to accommodate power as it currently existed because that's how you make decisions it's oh here's a new thing here's a new challenge you're not finding some platonic concept you're not fully persuasive legal reasoning you are saying okay how do we accommodate this conflict with the system as it exists with the that is why napoleon was the good guy i'm sorry i mean obviously he was a he was a megalomaniac and he caused a lot of deaths but in the battle between the british and the french i'm sorry this is interesting someone says in the chat there uh his dad 0:29:8 is a const my dad is such a constitutional fetishist he thought the designated survivor in the line of succession was in the 1783 document that's so funny because all it says in the constitution about the state of the union is that once a year the president will be required to deliver or to deliver to the congress a um like a statement of of the nation or whatever it's it the content of it is is totally tbd the the way that it is presented is completely dbd it was originally just sent to congress written and then like the sergeant-at-arms or somebody would read it out loud uh i believe it wasn't until wilson that the president started delivering it in front of uh both houses and

then only after that are people like oh ***** they somebody might blow them all up somebody might uh somebody might guy fox their asses there's nothing in the constitution about anything it all had to be made on the spot that is why the only reason it worked is because george washington was around george washington in an era when the the elites of the 13 colonies were all divided by state which had to have changed but at the moment it was not they were individual like ruling elites political and economic ruling elites and they all made wanted they needed to come together under a federal government if they were going to get their ***** money back that they put into the war effort more than anything it was it was a bomb the beards talk about this and the origin of the american constitution it was a bunch of bondholders wanting to make sure that they didn't get left holding the bag which means it was the richest people in all the ***** parts so they needed a central government but the thing they were afraid of was not their precious liberties in the way we get told it to us they were afraid about their prerogatives their ruling class prerogatives being in any way uh take it away from them and like abstracted towards a state interest an interest that was beyond their narrow specific interest which of course in their minds was the interest of all mankind because they were good enlightenment uh psychos and so there was a mexican standoff the and and this whole document it got a lot of resistance there was a whole anti-federalist movement against the federalist papers had to be written to propagandize the thing because these local power uh holders especially the ones who were most distant from finance capital like southern landowners for example except for guys like george w washington by the way who had a ton of ***** uh uh sitting on a ton of bonds and was actually very cash poor after the revolution and had a very insignificant uh economic incentive to get behind central government and he um was the man of the revolution he was the man who beat the british and most importantly did not become king after that who went home became cincinnatus and because he'd already done that he'd already turned down power everybody who was making the constitution assumed that you could trust him with this position and so he just made it up he made up what presidential powers were as he was president and because he was like self-consciously trying to knit together a national interest out of the state's interest he did what they wanted but the problem for especially the southerners was oh no he's actually creating a central government no oh we didn't like the federalists were in like a marxian sense the progressive force in the early constitutional era and you can point out the fact that they were ripping off the the veterans of the revolution and the small holders in order to you know feather the bed of bondholders correct but they were also making it possible for capital to concentrate which if you don't have it you have a a uh decadent uh stagnant society which is what uh antebellum slave culture became and which is the inevitable byproduct of of of uh allowing capital to accumulate individually and not allowing capital to become something accumulated and uh dispersed like from a central perspective instead of by you know the million ***** individual **Music playing** river and uh that but that anti-federalist notion of unrestrained baronial power that is the engine of american reaction ever since and it has manifested itself 0:34:16 in different places and at different parties over the history of america but now it is firmly ensconced and in fact like the governing ethos of the republican party but it was the original motive force of but it was i would say it was the democratic it was tammany really more than anything it was the democratic subordination and uh and client relationship with the emergent working class of the cities that ensured that over time the democrats would essentially become the federalist whig party of uh the anti-federalist thought because we have all the land we have basically unlimited 0:35:41 land we don't need government all these the government exists to to like um over see disputes over resources like and uh you know police uh labor relationships but if you have self-sufficient farms and slave plantations although you know guys like jefferson will assure you over time this incredibly lucrative uh uh labor relationship that creates its own completely contained like cultural context where it's it all of its like worst deficiencies become like load-bearing psychic structures it'll just go away over time that's because they didn't realize how much more profitable cotton would get but if you have that if you have like thralldom where you don't have to worry 0:36:42 about politics because politics is the master's whip or sufficient smallholders who don't have to worry about working for a boss or disputing a paycheck just getting goods to market then you basically don't need a government that was the theory but you never have all the land even if you did you still have to ***** like if you want to be a small holding sufficient farmer you have to be able to sell your surplus product of your farming otherwise you're just a subsistence farmer and the whole point is that you can go beyond subsistence to improve land invest capital into your land and buy finished goods that's the most important thing exchanging your agricultural surplus for finished manufactured goods where do they make manufactured goods 0:37:45 jefferson's hated cities literally a a literally um symbiotic relationship between city and jefferson says yeah but but it's bad so it shouldn't exist okay good that's that'll that's that has anything to do with anything well haiti uh somebody asked about napoleon and haiti i mean one it's not like the british were better guys at that point they didn't they didn't ban slavery until the 1830s so all of those caribbean uh like the difference between jamaica and haiti is haiti had a ***** rebellion if jamaica had had a rebellion and jamaica had several very violent uh uh and partial and like momentarily successful slave uprisings that were brutally suppressed by the british they would have they would have done just the horrible stuff that the french did uh but his decision to uh try to retake haiti made probably in part because of his the 0:38:47 fact that his wife josephine was a descendant of the planters of the big whites of the island was a terrible decision and not and like morally obviously but you know in the context of early 19th century uh morality he's probably about uh on average for europeans understandings especially since so much of the uh the wonderful luxury economy of british of french cuisine and and uh and indulgent life was fueled by agriculture but more than anything it was a ***** mistake as taliran said about uh about the execution uh oh what's his name it was worse than wrong it was worse than a crime it was a mistake uh because he there was a a figure of comparable skill 0:39:49 and like mastery of the moment in haiti who could have collaborated with napoleon in the form of tucson and he wouldn't have known that you know toussaint wanted to meet napoleon and honestly if he'd if he if he had done that who knows what he would have gotten out of that conversation because one of the big reason that napoleon tried to reconquer haiti is because at that point he thought the only way that he was going to be able to change the balance of power with europe after uh trafalgar was by reinvesting his strategic situation in the caribbean and like turning the caribbean like into a french lake uh because at that point you know everything past the mississippi was technically france's and new orleans which is a major port in 0:40:50 but the real answer to that strategic question is but to give uh but to give napoleon a little credit he did admit when he was on uh saint helena that that was a boner he shouldn't have done that and yeah that's one of the reasons they sold us it to us and that's a big what if we want to talk about contingencies and counterfactuals what if that what if that back door that free real estate back door was closed because we weren't in a position to fight the french for maybe we actually have to record 0:41:51 with our political problems instead of fantasizing them away and turning us into this nation of fat toddlers who cannot reckon with political conflict because we've never been forced to uh resolve any we just find the people who can take it because they don't have political representation in the system we give it to them hard be they black be they native american be they immigrant uh and and or poor just poor in general and then everybody else gets a lollipop but we're out of lollipops and now we don't know how to deal with politics but yeah you want to talk about alternative north america how about one where napoleon makes a deal with tucson recognizes 0:42:52 haitian independence and then has him invade uh like uh mississippi has toussaint lead a black army into the heart of mississippi liberate all those plantations and give probably not likely but you know you can napoleon wanted to invade britain he made several attempts the the they attempted to uh land troops in ireland during the the the 98 revolution that was before napoleon but there was a long-standing french uh plans during that whole period to just invade britain because it's just it's it's so frustrating if you're napoleon how frustrating must it be like you marched across all of continental europe and you just dust the the greatest armies of thousand-year dynasties and you just battle away like ***** chess pieces and then there's island full of wool merchant cheese eating ***** these ***** bad tooth uh chinless freaks these lidless uh huns who just like eat boiled beef on a little shitty collection of islands you can't just walk over them because they ruled the sea they ruled the goddamn waves and what's interesting about the british domination of the sea is it really didn't even come down to technology or anything it literally came down to the fact that because they were like the premier uh naval power i mean they were a ***** island and they had invested in naval uh development for a long time whereas like big continental powers like france were inward-looking they were able to develop a store like a a soros of best practices and um and skill distribution that just made their crews better they were better at being semen they were better at boat ***** they were just better at it didn't matter the resource distribute this distinctions nelson somebody says nelson was a psycho nelson is one of the most despicable figures i've ever read about who is traditionally thought of as like a military hero because obviously you know every everybody who is venerated by history is some sort of criminal or scoundrel and that's fine you ha if you're occupying history stage you are in the sense you have to be operating beyond concepts of good and evil or else what are you doing there so you have to judge them that way but nelson was just a glory hounding psychopath who was willing to risk the lives of everybody uh for pure personal glory like he is the exactly type of showboater that you know traditional chivalrous masculinity is supposed to look down on but they got a giant ***** uh he did ***** he was a notorious uh cocksman who had a very uh public uh scandal about involving improprieties with society ladies uh but he was just a complete vainglorious the kind of character who is um historically like if you if they were accurately portrayed you know in a in a film or something would be like a stereotype of of narcissistic vainglory very much like custer custer is a similar figure to nelson custer of course was not anywhere nearly as good a cavalryman as nelson was a sailor i mean nelson was actually very good at what he did custer was a complete buffoon but they had a similar uh just psychotic narcissism yes they did blow up the pillar in dublin which i gotta say that's good on you that's that's just good form in my opinion that's the thing that people who hate on statue destruction don't get they say you're destroying history like just pulling a ***** statue down is making history now of course it should not substitute for politics and one of the ways you knew that the summer demonstrations were going to peter out without real uh long-term impact was when they started doing that but like as an isolated incident and as like a specifically targeted event it it is it is historical in his own way like blowing up the

***** nelson statue in dublin that is a historical event if that thing was still there how much more boring would that be uh then uh then having the story of it being blown up in his ***** head landing in custer's one military exploit with any kind of uh meaning or uh behind it like any any the only real credit in his record is the third day of gettysburg when he prevented the cavalry uh attack on the union rear that was supposed to coincide with pickett's charge and might have changed if it had been successful might have changed the outcome there but that's about it best civil war general i mean that's a weird category i don't know hmm there's different ways so many different ways to say best there's certain ways to like define best my i think that one of the most like uh i mean it's it's annoying that like stonewall jackson was genuinely brilliant but i hate him and i don't want to talk about that but like thomas i'm a big fan of george thomas the rock of chickamauga uh i mean he destroyed uh john bell hood's army but john bell hood basically gave him the hammer but you know he did a good job at it nonetheless save the army of chickamauga along with august wilch and ambrose beerus were all there defending snodgrass hill or i don't think they were on snodgrass though but that's where thomas was but they uh i'm bringing a cyber chalmer to uh well i mean first of all statues are almost never uh like as historically meaningful as like a cathedral i mean especially when you're talking about american confederate statues those things are mass-produced bronze schlock they're basically bob's big boys that were all built in the early nineteen hundreds by the daughters of the confederacy like that there's much as there's much of like a historical you know there's as much historical value to them now i'm the last south broken man on a halifax pier the last of i like george thomas uh uh i'll always have a soft spot for grant just because he's such a uh he's a hard guy that to not sympathize with for me anyway he seems like essentially a proto-fail son he seems like the kind of guy who he's like a model for a guy who was so here you go he was given the same lively he was given the same chances that everybody was in like the fertile uh early uh the fertile um the the fertile middle west you know or at that point it was like the northwest uh in ohio you know his dad was a relatively successful uh a tanner uh you know he didn't it was he was his family wasn't as poor as like the uh the lincolns were even uh but he didn't want to be a tanner tanning sucks and then he he went to west point because it was a thing to do he didn't really want to be a soldier and then he fought in the war he found out he's good at some things the mexican war he hated the war he fought in but he learned some things he learned how to ride a horse he was good at that and he learned he was cool under fire but then they sent him to garrison a bunch of ***** forts in california in the middle of nowhere and he just drank himself out of a job and then he went back to the midwest and with the same opportunity that millions of americans were given to make something of himself he of the the mirror image of mclellan a guy who had you know visioned himself as a military genius since he was a child and was finished very top of his class at west point as opposed to grant was a middling student and then won a few early engagements in west virginia which helped allow west virginia to essentially secede from virginia and was heralded in the eastern press and essentially bought his own hype and went insane like in uh that kids in the hall sketch where uh kevin mcdonald gets promoted to head uh the head male clerk and immediately snaps and like buys giant gold rings and beats people to death this guy thought that he could march on washington and over-pro the government he wrote that in a letter i think to his wife after getting some good early newspaper clippings and then he went to confront lee and he was so terrified of losing he was so terrified of failing that he was frozen grant had failed 0:53:7 his whole life somebody wants me to talk about the english civil war i might talk about it future because it's a very interesting subject that gets undertalked about but somebody in the comments is saying it's that 1688 is more interesting and you know if you really think about the english civil war like periodization is more important i think than trying to keep things pithy and the same way you could argue that like world war one and two are part of one larger process uh that the same is true of the english war and the glorious revolution and you don't it's really one event and it is this prolonged crisis of authority in like a budding capitalist system that is emerging out of like a decaying feudal husk and it was a battle over like what is 0:54:10 the um actual like proper place for um you know authority to reside in a merchant social order that is uh breaking away from the the feudal bonds of you know just the old feudal aristocracy and creating a new class like the people who overthrew uh the king and cut his ***** head off it was a class there was a class character like parliamentarians were urban merchants broadly there were of course big landowners who were parliamentarians but the base of the new model army was that east anglian people who were engaged in the new immersion economy that was emerging out of there england in the low countries what became modern capitalism at least where i put it like after some fits and starts and early creations like the thing really kicked into gear there and they wanted essentially to wrest power away from this old feudal order represented by the king but it was premature because the ***** social basis for 0:55:11 that kind of government didn't exist yet you still were dealing largely with the feudal uh a feudally organized society even though feudalism had been obviously in crisis and collapsed for centuries it had not yet created a alternative like social mechanism of authority and so the attempts to stand up parliamentary democracy without an attendant social formation immediately collapsed and cromwell kept having to ***** step back in i know that there's it's obviously very self-serving the way that

he always acted like oh i've been forced to intervene back here but i honestly do feel like if they could have put together a viable parliamentary order cromwell would have washingtoned it but he couldn't he couldn't washington was able to walk away because the social base existed to stand up a parliamentary democracy in america that didn't exist in the 1650s and so he just had to basically be the king with no 0:56:13 without a name and that was not gonna last and then so they bring back the royals but they bring back with the royals all the old questions about the catholic church as a stand-in for medieval bringing in those dutchmen because the dutch people actually were the ones who invented the ***** uh like concept of a uh of a merchant-based uh capitalist economic order like that's where the stock market first opened that's where the first joint stock company was chartered and the british essentially just took it from them like when the ***** uh royal fleet uh uh sailed into new york harbor and went up to peter stivets since one-legged ass and said hey ***** we're taking this and so they say hey you guys you know how you guys actually were forming these structures before us even can we just borrow your king your king who's been like kind of capitalized kind of soifed as it were protestantized and we'll we'll take him 0:57:17 we'll we'll take him from you we'll take him off we're their ruling class or whatever their their their what are the what is the chat fighting about someone's fighting i need to resolve this chat fight before i log off one of the packers playing i haven't really watched the game this year i will not i will apparently there's one dumb ass in the chat god damn them all i was told we'd sail the seas for american gold we'd fire no guns shed no tears now i'm a broke man on a halifax pier i might watch 0:58:29 we'll see people seem to be talking about what's cringe you i think that as well i am guilty of having used that word and trafficked and cringed talk but you really have to kill that concept if you're ever going to be able to act because all action is cringe all acts can be abstracted away from the context where they make sense and turned into something embarrassing and if you worry all the time about your actions not being cringe-worthy you will never that's basically what uh what david foster wallace's entire how cringes is uh is essentially social the most essential post-modern 0:59:31 ah the putney debate oh we love it folks we love the putt we love the diggers we love the levelers too don't jiren winstanley was the spiritual founder of the diggers in the aftermath of the english civil war or the inner regnum i guess before the final glorious triumph of of anglo-dutch protestant capitalism over uh anglo-irish uh but jared when stanley uh he wrote uh a pamphlet where he essentially prefigured marx's theory of class struggle as the engine of history uh what 150 years before marx did 1:0:34 uh or 200 years yeah like 200 years 16 yeah 1650 yeah and he says that as long as as long as some labor for others like his basic premise is that like as long as some what labor for others they will be in conflict because that relationship cannot be one of

equality it is one of uh coercion and mutual animosity and distrust that come from that and of course his answer was you know a kingdom of god where all where the need to accumulate is removed by the desire to uh the desire to live in communion with everybody and of course you know that's essentially what communism would have to be and i would argue it will have to have some sort of spiritual component i don't think it can be anything connected to a his existing structure of faith though because they're too culturally segregated but it's going to hap there's going to have to be an infusion of meaning into public life in order to allow people to make a new deal essentially where you and people don't want time instead of stuff unless that time has as much value as the stuff does and because our time is completely uh useless to us our time what our time to what look at our phones our time to be miserable and be anxious our time to worry our time to be disconnected from one another our time to pursue pleasures that lose their enjoyment with every indulgence that time why would we want give me stuff give me stuff the time has to have you have to be able to to spend that time meaningfully in order for that to make it be a good and that's what's so heartbreaking about q anon is that in many respects q anon is the sort of popular grafting of alienation and uh and disillusionment with the current economic order with a spiritualized like will to power you know they're able to do what they do because they believe they will win they believe they're right and they'll believe they win they can win which is something that no one on the left believes either of those things they if they're right they don't know they're in a constant contact a constant personal crisis about whether or not they're right and not knowing if they're right inhibits their actions in every move uh and they certainly don't think they can win uh and the left needs that the left needs that but i mean what they don't have to go to to lean on that the q people do is the i mean q was made by a combination of honestly at some point at some point the government got involved in queue there's no question i don't know who started it but at some point the government got involved somewhere at not maybe the level of distributing the actual proofs but at some level of of of psyopping around it because why wouldn't you it doesn't make sense i mean especially when you consider the hilarious number of actual literal deep state psyopers who are deeply enmeshed in the q anon at one but it was also a consumer response it was a consumer demand being met by the market and leftism can never be a consumer demand left met in the market that is the problem and a lot of the people who get mad at the left like the left they don't want to win it's a culture of narcissism it's a bunch of ***** babies that's all true but if you're making that point to condemn people and judge them is you're just wasting ***** breath because you're operating in a much more constrained political context you cannot depend on the spectaclized gibberish the *Music playing** did they do it did they impeach him did they do the impeachment do they hold him accountable that's what's mad really matters i watch some of it i watch the speeches one real ugos in congress some of the ugliest people i've ever seen in my life a couple of cuties but by and large beasts hideous just freaks uh 0:1:2 also just the stupidest ***** dollars just absolute both sides mouth-to-gate losers just dumbasses like half of those guys look like panicky they sounded like panicky uh auctioneers uh uh or like they were they were they recited their speech in front of the mirror for 50 for an hour beforehand and like we're practicing all their stupid hand gestures but beyond that one thing i did get is that accountability must be uh must be attained we have to have accountability the president must be but of course the grim comedy of that is that the job description of the president if people who reach that level of power and that level of criminality which go together are accountable to 0:2:5 the system then why would anybody and they need these people they need the faces so that president can't be held accountable very notion is absurd the very notion it's like it's like holding uh it's like holding a hurricane accountable can't do it the title is a peaches reference yes remember those remember her but apparently whatever they vote and i guess they're probably going to do party lines that like four republicans voting for so it's gonna pass and then it will be taken up i think in the senate by mcconnell like an hour before the inaugural so they might on i'm wondering they probably won't do it at that point like they're wait they're essentially waiting like for the thing to uh calm down one thing i will say that i feel like i'm being vindicated 0:3:7 on for everyone who says uh you don't know what you're talking about you've been wrong about everything is that they've already said that there's going to be 20 000 troops in uh dc for the inaugural they're bedded out they're bunked up in so they're they're going to be polite but firm you had your little tantrum now how do you feel bad still well at this point it's tough shift tough ***** we really cannot afford to but of course that doesn't mean the end of stochastic violence it'll only be the beginning and at every level as i have said and will say it will be encouraged by the state security apparatus and what fighting fascism will mean will be backing the biden administration as they extend the war on terror domestically that's it that's all that will have like this impeachment thing you can argue all day about why it's necessary but who is this convincing if it's about isolating the trumpest uh rump 0:4:10 from regular americans who care about the country shouldn't there be something and it's kind of amazing seeing people who have sort of laid in the cut when asked to do stuff about uh you know progressive actual you know deciding that now is the time for symbolic action and that this is symbolically important i mean i think symbolic stuff is jack off all over the place it's all jack off oh it's gonna let people know they're gonna say who's gonna see the same ***** web battle ***** who are already all alive all on their own side all have decided that uh you know posting is practice on both sides or have decided that if they're on the q and outside they're they're gonna bum rush state capitals because they have the ***** uh the fear of god and the love of god in them that none of us have even if it's delusional and 0:5:12 it's based on just watching too much tv but it's it's a real motivator nobody on the left left like that's even a thing has a motivation democratic voters are by and large absolutely cowering and holding the hems of everybody every democrat because they're terrified of being of the republican mob being let loose on them and so since there's no left like symbolic actions don't mean anything but it is interesting that people will say symbolic actions why are you wasting your time on this stupid stuff with medicare for all and then say that this impeachment this is a symbolism that matters so the thing that might i don't know drain the swamp a little bit by giving people an idea that there is something else the government can do other than punish people now that can go on the back burner uh holding the president accountable and reminding people about the the fascist menace that that needs to be a priority it's 0:6:14 uh it's all very it's kind of it's all going in a way that is very easy to see you know i mean if you can see this turning into this anti-fascism now this popular front that we're supposed to have with the democrats if you can see that creating anything other than like patriot act 2 uh uh you know patriotic to electric boogaloo literally because it'll be about the boogaloo boys this time then i don't know what to tell you because there's no other forces at play there's nobody in those rooms other than democrats and whatever the specific desires of any members of that caucus are they are overwhelmed by the structural incentives of the party itself and the people who run it and they kept talking about liz cheney as the good republican one of the most bloodthirsty narrow cons there are the daughter of a dynasty of blood i get why people want their feelings to be validated because that's why they go online to get their feelings validated and they even get it in their head that like sticking up for the 0:7:16 validity of the feelings of members of congress is somehow an important thing to do because it what it establishes the stakes it establishes how dangerous the moment is as if our anxieties do anything for us but give me a break give me a break i know people are being mean to me on twitter but they're all losers and i certainly am not accepting any uh any insults of my appearance because i know that i'm looking uh fresh to death lately i know it's all it's all coming together and yes as many so enough of that ***** let's get here let's talk about what's really interesting what we're all here for the republic for which it stands baby the biggest chunk we've read yet second half of the second part when the ***** really hits the fan when we get the great upheaval of 1885 we get the hay market we got a homestead strike and we have what is in my mind my favorite part of the book so far and i've enjoyed the book a great deal uh one of my favorite parts my favorite part so far has been a part where white uh carries out a examination of the political economy of the western cattle uh uh cattle drive and that makes sense since white's area of specialization is actually western expansion he's written books about uh the the the establishment of you know markets and and political entities in the west and a movie a book about the railroads so this is his wheelhouse and so talking about the cattle very very interesting uh and in fact let's start just talking i want to read a little bit from uh uh am i back on somebody call my phone i guess you're supposed to stop it but i don't know how oh my god am i gone i'm back okay good sorry somebody called my phone uh so the stuff that's in the first chapter we read dying for progress which is all boils down to statistic that white points out which is that throughout the 19th century a time of america's rapid expansion its economic its economy exploded over the course of the 19th century the average american got shorter and not and this is screening out recent immigrants from you know the benighted uh bogs of ireland or the shtetls of eastern europe native-born americans over the course of 19th century got shorter lived less uh and lived uh and had shorter life expectancies and got frailer and got weaker they literally got less healthy they couldn't they weren't thriving because industrial democracy their industrial uh industrial capitalism was literally and filling them with adulterants and and uh gim cracks and and uh tainted meats and and rotten food is terrible in such small portions basically so the whole rest of the half that we read is sort of reckoning with it's it's about the country reckoning and specif with and the liberal elite reckoning with the fact that the smallholder democracy that had apparent supposedly triumphed after the civil war the the land of freedom of contract and individual liberty uh and free labor where the scourge of slavery had been removed was not creating the prosperity the broad prosperity it was supposed to it wasn't recreating lincoln's springfield which uh white points out in the beginning of the book is the model of like republican uh political economy a small town surrounded by industrious farmers yeoman none of them terribly poor very few of them very rich uh many of them moving from one field to another most of them ending up with a home and property that was the idea and then by the by the 1880s and 90s you had uh south where uh slavery had been reinstated under another and another name and the economy had completely stagnated you had uh the eastern cities that were filled with uh just stockpiled with wretchedly poor uh immigrants uh you had 0:12:26 everywhere that industrial capitalism was being consolidated you in the railroads and in steel you saw massive numbers of injuries and deaths and terrible working conditions for and even those farmers who had been given the land after with the homestead act and all that came after it were in many places struggling especially in the west where unbeknownst to a lot of people when they started moving uh people out there oh no once you get past the hundredth uh meridian uh it basically dries up and there's no water and the agriculture that we assumed was going to be the basis of this economy is not really possible and so you end up with this uh economy of you know ponzi ski railroad ponzi schemes propping up real estate speculations that usually ended up with people going broke because you can't ***** grow up there so one way or another it's not going the way it's supposed to and we talked about how the liberals kind of made their transformation we're in the process of 0:13:27 making their kunian transition from from uh mid-century los angeles to a uh a more interventionist model and i want to actually go to the very end of the last chapter of part two uh and read a little bit here to uh bring us back to where we were last time talking about the sort of cri the the ideological crisis at the heart of like the liberal elite who became the administrators of the administration the administrators of the bureaucratic state in the 20th century and also the people who made up its media class his intellectual class and its political class and who had instituted after the civil war a a easy piece on the south with the promise of prosperity for all smoothing over um well when you know it the opposite happened everybody's 0:14:28 shrinking forgot they're ***** shrinking oh my god that's not great so uh i just want to read this a little bit about at the end about how the economists who had gone from being you know classical ricardo adam smithians uh to involving to absorbing like german ideas and then finally the the marginal revolution that would end up shaping the response of the bureaucratic state academics here we go most academic social scientists held back as labor and vanguard anti-monopolist pressed forward in the 1890s urging on cooperativist and state-based solutions to the long economic and social crisis the academics by and large were not willing to join the assault but neither were they willing to accept a set of liberal doctrines and social arrangements 0:15:29 that they had spent their careers in overthrowing instead they fashioned a new position which emphasized consumption over production corporations and large-scale production over competition and bureaucratic expertise over democratic control it was a position that some of the older liberals whom anti-monopolists had opposed could also embrace it jettisoned the laws affair reduced the scope of individualism and abandoned small government but it left private property capitalism natural rights and elite rule within a restricted democratic framework intact so that is a perfect little capsule description of liberalism as we have understood it since the progressive era which was that class of people coming to terms with the failures of uh contract freedom to generate the country that they wanted it to but the basic premise was because these were people in the property or near property classes who were around the finance capital who were not who were invested in the maintenance of capitalism the assumption is all that all those marxist notions all those socialist ideas that 0:16:30 oh the real root of this is a class conflict that we cannot resolve democratically the difference between someone who wants to work as little for as much money as possible and somebody who wants them to work for as long for as little money as possible that that is a conflict that can only be decided by force and in a capitalist system no matter what we tell about democracy that force is monopolized by capital and they didn't want to change that but they did want to keep it if not more humane more stable because this is the aftermath of as we talk about the 1885 of people would saw the largest out up almost like spontaneous eruption of strikes across the country um caused by uh the the knights of labor basically getting in over their head because as happened with all of the big labor eruptions in america and most other places honestly they were out of the hands of the formal organizations that they came from the types of labor did not want a full-scale confrontation with the state at that point 0:17:31 they were they were still very uh they were still new and they were still unsure of themselves and they were still very cowed by capital and but they were in the middle of this extended economic depression which all of the employers were using as an excuse to even if they weren't suffering their profit suffering to reduce and so how do we how do we deal with this well we get rid of some of this laws i fair ***** we regulate the trusts we distribute some of the the uh profits publicly but we keep the structure intact and that has been the model for liberalism ever since and in the section we read that there are two great examples of how liberal reformist instincts operate in this context where there are people who are embedded in capitalist relations find self-conscious uh identification with capital over labor but also have uh this the sort of sophisticated social uh self-conception that comes with acculturation and civilization uh being refined meant having some sort of or more importantly than being refined that's for the gentleman being um being useful being someone who could contribute to the public debate someone who could be uh administer a state apparatus uh or work with a reform organization i mean what what what they pride it out more than ever and always have is their own virtue and they sought to affirm their virtue by solving problems that were caused by the system they supported which meant that 0:18:32

their solutions would always exacerbate the problem and two great examples that white talks about here are indian policy and prohibition temperance as it was called back up uh and he talks about how the allotment system which was the single like most brutal assault on traditional native american folkways that was ever done out within the confines of like admit like the administrative state and the legal process as opposed to just you know uh genocide uh was a reform move yes of course it was allowed to happen and encouraged because it meant land would be allocated to hungry white settlers but for the people who pushed it they saw a future where native americans indians would be physically extinguished from north america if they kept their ways carlisle the founder of the carlisle indian school famously said kill the indians save the man and for those guys as cynical as it might have been and as as i said it was only allowed to become a a policy because it helped uh it helped the interests of those who wanted to uh exploit nato in native lands it did point to a real conflict which was the native way of life was incompatible with turning america into the rationalized checkerboard of uh private property that we were going about doing and so the solution for a good-hearted christian indian reformer is well make them have farms make them settle down make them farm and be like us and then they can live as citizens and we don't have to worry about them getting wounded knee and in the narrow parameters where the choices extinguishment versus assimilation assimilation is the more refined is the more civilized response even though it is in its own way genocidal but that's because it could not and and it's in action destroyed many native that is the end result of reform within a system where the reformers are not part of a broader press against capital but are within it trying to direct it it will only compound all the contradictions that are that are they're responding to and prohibition temperance is a similar thing these middle class uh victorian evangelicals were horrified by the drunken uh rabble of the cities who the irish germans and uh catholics or the irish catholics irish germans who would just get shit-faced all day when they weren't working you know 20 hours a week or 20 hours or 12 hours a day and instead of recognizing that the rise of saloons and the rise of drinking was a direct response to being hyper-exploited which was an untouchable assumption that to to to work to change that would be to violate sacred concepts of free enterprise and private contract no you just uh pass laws so that they can't drink there's a example that white gives of uh the reformers who are able to win temperance in um iowa but then with a with a coalition of you know the more uh the more refined catholic elements and the middle class protestants but then immediately as soon as soon as uh it was interacted and enacted lost their coalition's control because the the immigrant the immigrants didn't they wanted to drink and the response from those middle-class performers was to say actually you know what the problem isn't alcohol

it's the ***** catholics it's these ***** immigrants they're not they're not acting 0:23:41 like we said they should well they can't act the way they should you act the way you are because you were cradled in the bosom of the lincolnite uh freeholder america you got in you are there they can't act like you but then instead of recognizing that because recognizing that we recognize the inherent contradictions within the system that you're supporting you have to find a solution that only exacerbates the problem and the thing that hampered all levels of reform everywhere anti-monopoly soft money temperance all of which had virtue within them even the temperance movement was a genuine attempt to reduce things like domestic violence at every level they were undermined by uh the fact that there were there was some segment of the population that was uh opposed for one reason or another to that reform and 0:24:42 that would cause the reformers committed as they were to the system as such to decide to condemn them as demographically and divide within and that has been that's been the story of america more than anything is that our our polyglot nature has meant that at every crucial moment of conflict there has been more that breaks up the labor half the labor side of of the equation that and now and what is all this for what is all this to defend what are all these reform uh pretzels what is andrew carnegie going oh we're gonna buy we're gonna give everybody libraries and they can go read and not be sorry we shot the hell out of all of uh your your family members and are making them work 12 hours a day but here go read a ***** book uh what 0:25:44 what um what is this system producing culturally it's producing mass entertainment and mass amusements that are horrifying the middle classes but are the only thing available to poor people i mean they literally want these people to have middle class tastes when they are don't have the money of the middle class they think that middle class means something other than at that point other than ***** income in a social relationship they think that it's it's a state of mind that they need to impart and if you can't take it then you need to be kicked out of the country basically um so it creates a culture that they hate even though it's being generated by the logic of capitalism that they endorse uh it's creating alcoholism it's making people smaller and economically and i want to talk about i want to read a little bit and talk a bit about what i was saying my favorite part of the book so far white's description of 0:26:48 the political economy of the cattle drive i'm going to read a a section here that'll be relatively long but i think it's perfect because it describes so the description of the economy of of cattle investments in the old west uh and the cattle drives from texas into is essentially the same model that you find at every juncture of finance capital and the physical economy in america or any kind of economy in american history so let me just start by saying uh the whole reason that the cattle drive happened all those fears going up through to abilene was because texas longhorn cattle carried 0:27:49

a tick that made them uh dangerous to be around other types of animal because they had a fever that from the tick that they mostly became immune to as chi as as calves but which if the tick got to a different cow that hadn't had that would make the cows sick perhaps kill it so longhorns could not be brought to local rail hubs and shipped with other cattle like domestic breeds that people brought to texas they couldn't take them to local rail heads because they were not allowed with the other cows so they would have to go basically around to isolated uh rail heads that were sitting there doing nothing because one of the marks of the railroad infrastruc the railroad investment of the post civil war era is that a lot of it went towards building railroads that never saw much action and never got much uh traffic because they were all speculative white points out the railroads went first in most of the west it was not people showed up uh as uh settlers that oh here's the railroad the railroad went first railroad the army went first and then people followed now in a lot of places they didn't fall they didn't not many not very many of them followed because oh we can't actually grow anything here so you had a lot of just ***** uh rail uh heads just sitting empty and so that's a place you could take a ***** ton of diseased longhorns to take to the east and so they drove these ***** uh up into the uh into kansas and even uh and the thing that funded them this was like the people who were this was the single most sort of uh rationalized financialized and and industrial uh elements of the western economy which is what makes it so ironic that the cowboy mythos goes around it cowboys were not sodbusters cowboys were not independent uh settlers out on the planes huddling in their cabin against indian attack they were employees they were workers they were hired by big firms to prove so and of course the irony of ironies is that they had to kill all the buffaloes to fill this area with these ***** cows which many of them were uh miserable mistreated died starved in places that the buffaloes had thrived for millennia uh because because they were domesticated and you could move them and you could ship them and you could turn it into profit you don't have to go up to one buffalo shoot it and eat it for a year texas cat i'm going to read this here texas cattle gave an init this is page 595 if anyone wants to follow along texas cattle gave an initial boost of to beef consumption beef from longhorns was tough but it was cheap the grass on the public lands and for that matter railroad land was free always desperate for things to carry the railroads touted the great plains as a place where cattle effectively cared for themselves it spawned a separate genre of boosterism pretty much summed up by the title of general james s brisbane's beef bonanza or how to get rich on the plains great name for book by the way in the late 1870s and the early 1880s cattle raising spread steadily north i have to say he should have just stuck with um he should have just stuck with beef bonanza you don't need the ore there beef bonanza is so much fun uh okay by the 1880s cattle companies and corporations created by eastern and british investors dominated the western ranges uh and then he talks a little bit about 0:31:56 how uh teddy roosevelt went out east or went out to the dakotas to play cowboy and it was all made up uh british and scottish investors alone pumped 34 million worth of capital declared book value into the western livestock industry in the united states during the last quarter of the 19th century what attracted investors was an industry heavily subsidized by the federal government a set of economic calculations too good to be true and promises made by promoters that amounted a little more than a modern ponzi scheme john clay was a scotsman who remembered much of his adult life in the catalan who spent much of his adult life in the cattle business it was clay remembered a crew business at the beginning and that remains saw until the end the subsidies as with the railroads were enormous the federal government had opened up the public domain by evicting indians whom roosevelt despised and whose removal he saw is both inevitable and commendable uh the federal government provided roosevelt another cattlemen with free land and nature provided the grass and water that the cattle consumed the federal government and state subsidized the railroads that promoted cattle raising and hauled cattle to market for all practical purposes the producer in this industry was the product itself for cows and steers got precious little help from humans in surviving on the great plains their owners branded them rather than with when ready for shipping and sent them off to market a fairly simple set of calculations made profit seem inevitable catalin calculated the price of maintaining a steer at between 75 cents and a dollar 25 a year when stockman reported they could sell a four-year-old wyoming steer for between 25 and 45 with costs exclusive of capital and transportation being between three and six dollars a steer how could they lose if corporate reports were to be believed always a dangerous thing to do in the gilded age invest and not i'd say also now elon musk hashtag how is that ***** company still around hashtag how do you not think that this is a gigantic bubble that is going to collapse on all of us tesla is one of the biggest 0:33:58 it's like enron on freaking crack folks okay anyway investors were not losing anglo-american cattle corporations produced dividends of 15 to 30 percent between 1881 and 1883 the dividends as it turned out actually came from new investments and loans not profit from cattle the corporations actually had little idea how many had they owned because actual cattle are hard to find during roundups so to estimate their herds cattle companies created a book count book count cattle existed only in the ledger in an age that was perfecting actuarial tables and life insurance policies there was nothing remarkable about making educated guesses based on the average survival and reproduction of large numbers of cattle but men seeking investors do not make good actuaries in the book counts the west was a land of perpetual spring and toothless wolves real cattle died had accidents and failed to calve book cattle book cop cattle reproduced at a dependable annual rate usually 70 percent book count calves matured it begat more book cop calves western cattle corporations borrowed on their book count cattle which were immune to the vagaries of western life as a 0:35:0 cheyenne saloon keeper told a group of disconsolate cattlemen drinking at his bar while a blizzard raged outside cheer up boys whatever happens the books won't freeze now of course that whole thing eventually collapsed but it was uh everybody was bailed out you either lost or if you knew the right people you got bailed out and that for that right there that model that is the model of the american economy since uh essentially its inception but certainly since the civil war and it's the same thing as the railroads the railroads operated on the exact same way the railroads thrived on continued investment and gave people gave uh investors dividends to induce further investment those dividends not coming from the profits from often unprofitable railroads that have been speculatively laid out for free because the government just gave them ***** money and capital to do it uh but from more loans and investors how much how much how much freight are you actually moving how many how many uh people are paying you to ***** travel on your rails or how much 0:36:2 uh wheat is going on it that doesn't matter look at these returns how many cattle are you actually moving to ***** ability it doesn't matter we have them right here and what and all of these have in common is that you have a things that are common necessities like transportation infrastructure like agricultural production that are uh established through direct government intervention clearing the land uh uh providing in a real sense the capital and then private actors whose proximity to the plate to the uh interaction to the transaction is luck in the sense that it is personal relationships it's not ***** wisdom and vision and genius are then able to essentially act as as ticks uh creating fake propaganda and uh and fraudulent book uh keeping to keep a flow 0:37:4 of investor money in as long as they can paying themselves as much as possible until the thing falls apart that's the ***** housing crisis that's netflix netflix's numbers oh 70 million people watch the king's gambit that's just that's like the ***** cattle that's exactly like oh i've got 500 head of cattle headed to abilene look at this look at these notes look at so so social forces produce uh industries and then are then and then the uh the the product of them is is kept and privatized and nor should they and of course they say the reason you can't trust people with it it's because they're a bunch of uncultured swine who will spend it all on booze some of them 0:38:5 are but the one thing that is definitely sure is that if there is uh worker control of their actual like the capital they work with as opposed to just uh a wage the the super fluidity of the capitalist becomes very very quickly and very readily apparent and that is the last thing any and one of the signs that the working class uprisings that you saw with the 70s the 77 strikes with the haymarket and the eight-hour day movement and homestead were uh being met with enough brutality enough unified violence and enough resistance at the highest levels of both parties because as much as you have this efflorescence of anti-monopolist in both parties and he talks about the budding populist party emerging out of kansas and moving through the country and challenging republicans and democrats by the late 1880s the demands of labor symbolized by the american federation of labor and samuel gompers it emerged as sort of an umbrella organization of the emerging labor unions moved away from demands for control of workplaces and towards wages towards consumption okay we cannot be owners of the means of production because you will kill us if we try to do that and we're too su we're too we're not unified enough to fight you and win what we can do is especially since it's good for the damn economy is get more of the surplus in the form of wages which we can then spend at our discretion we can become consumers and that's what they became that's what they are now that is why so much of the hair splitting about who counts as working class is incredibly tedious and pointless and honestly i think it's mostly about people uh just looking to sanctify themselves morally like i think a lot of people who who go to college to learn about things like class oppression filter a lot of the stuff through a middle class morality and they hear working class and they think good and they think anything else is oh those are the bad exploiters and so you have all these people insisting i'm working class like well maybe maybe in terms of your your relationships and means and production but the reason that that was supposed to matter in the marxist conception is that people in those relationships generated social relationships with each other and generated class consciousness out of that we're in a situation where we have 100 330 million consumers there's nobody has a class character and so seeing people argue about it is very baffling unless you realize oh they're just trying to have someone validate that they're yeah i saw that hispanics and uh young people believe in q anon the most and of course they do because they have they have not invested in any of the ***** that we tell ourselves about this country what i mean by that is i mean like that these institutions have like a secret a sacredness to them in themselves like a lot of the q people they imagine that there is you know some america some ideal america that they're representing but the actual institutions of government and media uh to them are this disgusting corruption of that and that is a reasonable thing to think if you're just observing the world you turn on the tv and there are all of the major tech companies and every awful giant corporation telling you that donald trump is a bad man and he has to be stopped and he's not american and stuff oh and by the way here's uh you're not getting anything uh you're you are you are left to the devices of the market good luck in the middle of a pandemic there's nothing for you but you're supposed to care about this stuff and you're supposed 0:42:17 to be concerned about america's democracy as though it has ever done anything for you as though it has ever done anything for you i think q and on started with boomers you saw that in the early stuff but it's i don't think it's the same thing i think that those first generation of popularizers were facebook grandmas but once it became viral once it became just a shortcut for the system is filled with criminal lizard pedophiles which is a a sensational narrative hook for any young person who's disengaged from politics but is aware and also that it's a good way to get paid like that's the other thing is that the the the original like q anon uh conceptions and and 0:43:20 like the original uh proofing and stuff i think was done by a bunch of house-bound old people but once it hit tick-tock once it hit social like uh young people media it could be something that could be turned into a a hustle and all of us are looking for a hustle every one of us because that's the only escape route if you unless you have the money unless you are part of unless you're sitting on some of that ***** uh hoarded cash from the mid-century bonanza if you are even the cha like not e and and i'm not saying working class like maybe not a a boat ownership dealer but the bone ownership dealers like second son the boat ownership dealer second son especially since that boat ownership probably doesn't make as much money as it used to and it's probably got a bunch of ***** uh leveraging you're not getting anything nobody is getting anything and no jobs have any kind of promise of stability or or certainly stability at all let alone the kind of creative satisfaction that the knowledge economy 0:44:21 was supposed to provide the labor for people who went to school and got it and got and learned there's nothing there's there's ***** uh there's gig economy uh gerbil work unless you can monetize your own self somehow like i have i am i'm a perfect example and like the the bernie thing was essentially a q-esque phenomenon in that sense and that it provided a common vocabulary for alienated people online to talk with and then to talk to each other and let's see if there's anything else i wanted 0:45:25 to talk about from this section uh i did like the detail where he points out that when teddy roosevelt went out to dakota after his wife and his mom died on the same day in his house uh that he bought a gold-mounted bowie knife from tiffany and company trump tr really was a trump type in that he was a tough guy who people thought was a tough guy but who was actually a fancy lad but the difference between the late 19th century and the early 21st is the difference between having to actually do something to think of yourself as a tough guy and just tell selling telling everybody that you're a tough guy wisconsinites are built differently oh i wanted to uh quote this little ditty that uh nativists in massachusetts said the irish and the dutch they don't amount to much for the mix have their whiskey and the germans guzzle the beer and all we americans wish they had never come here it's a 0:46:28 reason that those people did not the middle class protestant american beef with the catholic urban immigrants was that they didn't have culture but they were the only ones who had culture nothing uh oh yes i wanted to bring up uh good old frederick taylor the founder of taylorism and scientific management of of uh work movements who brought mechanism mechanization to the actual act of performing work human mechanization uh people probably know a little bit about taylor but i think what's most interesting about him is that he was a laborer he was a foreman basically and he essentially made his own job he created of being a um mechanical engineer out of nothing he just bullshitted it and that's how when we talk about the formation of you know the bureaucratic class that interposes itself between you know the purely exploited worker and the capitalist uh a lot of them are you know these men of letters like uh like howell that uh white talks about but some of them are just hustle their way to bluffing people into thinking that they have a certain um a certain expertise and as long as that expertise can be profitably sold to capital it will have value and taylor no matter how spotty and non-existent the scientific basis for any of his theories was he was able like edison and other people he was able to sell himself to capitalists because he was telling them something they wanted to hear and he was a guy who had he got to go from the factory floor to a nice office because essentially he made his own job with ***** and that was a big part of building okay uh they talk a little bit about the i want to talk a little bit about the knights of labor uh so the knights of labor were like the first they were the before the afl they were the first attempt to create an umbrella organization for workers that would be able to coordinate across geography and across industries and they were not modeling labor unions really they were modeled on um originally the knights of labor were modeled on uh the fraternal orders like the freemasons and the odd fellows that were blowing up in america to fill in the gap of that social connection that you know they didn't have here and then a lot of them had had in europe and the sons of the knights of labor were were a explicitly working class uh fraternal order that over time was able to do things like collect money for strike funds and coordinate action and and move against workers and assert workers uh prerogatives but it was this jerry rigged system uh and it was it's apogee and then fall came at the same time which is that it precipitated the great uh 1885 railroad strikes and then it was uh once those were broken it sort of was on a slow decline and eventually was supplanted by the afl good old samuel gompers samuel gompers we'd love to hear about samuel gompers one of those names i remember writing down in my book in like ninth grade history there's i thought about this a while ago that there are certain things that i just get stuck in my head from never and because you know you mostly you don't learn what's going on or why you just learn discrete events that you're supposed to memorize it's the worst

way to teach the subject and it's the reason most people hate history and i don't think anybody in power is unhappy with that turn of events but i remember samuel gompers zimmerman telegram wilmot proviso absolutely the gadsden purchase it's another one teapot dome t-bot dome is so funny teapot dome is hilarious the 1920s were an incredibly important period in american history i mean it set the stage for a catastrophic economic collapse and then the the reforging of a new political economy out of the wreckage of it it had the prohibition it had the rise of gangsters that all said the only thing you learn about from the political strata of that era is the some ***** ***** siphoning some oil out of a hole in the ground that's it which in like the the panoply of of corruption one of a very low-tier thing i mean like i hate talking about like trump is as you know some horrible crook because they're all crooks but trump's personal corruption dwarfs anything like that and yet teapot dome because you gotta talk about something right and you can't talk about any of the actual stuff going on like the fact that the clan took over half the country example seaward's folly is a good one stewart's folly is a good one the cross of gold speech william jennings brian but if you're anything like me and you went to public school when you learned history it was just a collection of these things that you just had to remember why any of them happened what any what connection any of them had to each other sinners in the hands of an angry god absolutely oh you got to talk about jonathan edwards if you have a milkshake and i have a milkshake and i have a long straw here it is i go across the room i drink your milkshake i drink it up i drink the blood of lamb from abandoned tract all right let's see if there's anything else i want to talk about here uh that's pretty much it so for the next next wednesday we're gonna finish it next wednesday we're going to read part three which is the last part we're going to go through presumably the pullman strike the second cleveland administration uh and the fact that cleveland let another economic collapse happened and did nothing the democrat broke this floaming strike and then refused to provide any uh uh aid to suffering people because at that point it's baffling it's amazing and it reminds you it's not baffling really it's it's just it shows how over time the party system exists essentially to mask the confluence of interests at the top of both parties and they were divided sectionally for a good chunk of america's history as after the civil war the divide was regional it was not ideological the parties had basically the same structure in many ways regardless of the fact they had different demographics of support at the base you had a variety of people including a i would say a by this period in time i would say the the base of both parties is composed of people who are in favor of uh anti-monopoly action uh soft money to increase the the currency supply and and uh increase uh and help the position of debtors uh but at the top were hard money men maybe the only real difference the only idea the only actual issue difference between the two besides of course the administration of voting in the south was um was tariff was the ***** tariff was industrial policy but in both cases the preference for one or the other was not driven from the bottom up it was driven by the interest of the top which at that time were still divergent because of the regional differences because all that finance capital and specifically all of that industrial capital that needed the tariff to maintain uh to be to protect it from foreign i find that i'm always learning new stuff like i obviously am fairly familiar with this period of time but re reading this book a lot of things pop up like because people are always going to find interesting and and fun uh and insightful juxtapositions that you wouldn't otherwise know even if you have a general understanding also you get great names like one in this section there's a discussion of a corrupt indian agent which is of course uh a redundancy named valentine mcgillicuddy wonderful 19th century name and what's known and that reminds me of one more the last thing i want to say about this section and the book and that era reminding me of the indian agent thing is the fee for service model of public uh administration the thing about the united states at the civil war is that it had theoretically a vast amount of power over the continent a huge amount of land that had theoretically dominance over but its administrative capacity to carry out that authority was limited by its its uh undeveloped infrastructure over such a large sized country and part of that was technological we just didn't have the ability to really coordinate and so what filled the gap was self-interest in the form of fee-based services if you were a cop if you were a judge if you were a uh indian agent if you're if you had any role within the government as a uh as a regulator or or official you were not necessarily paid a salary so much as you were paid fees for the people who you work for which of course that goes against the idea of a public it should be provided for free but that would not have allowed for the motivation factor that wouldn't have not gotten people to do the work you've got a bunch of uh we've got a bunch of people fleeing the authorities for example into indian country from missouri like in uh true grit nobody's going to go and get them unless they know it's going to be worth their while and so you got to have bounties and that extent that logic extended throughout all of the administration for everything uh and that plus the spoil system was the basis for like the wildly corrupt nature of public administration uh but the thing about the spoil system and as i pointed this out last week which we we're told if we learn at all about it in history as this was a corrupt uh non-democratic structure and that civil service reform eventually like uh cleaned it up uh in reality there was the um the spoil system the parties to assert some independence from capital because they had independent funding sources because the deal with the spoil system was say you're like a bartender or a ward healer or a popular guy in the neighborhood you get a bunch of people to vote for the democrat

or the republican you're rewarded with like a sanitation job or you if you get a salary or fees you give a percentage of it to the party so it's personally corrupt like you had to give money to the guy the your patron but also it built the party capacities because and that was necessary because the stupid constitution by assuming that parties couldn't exist ended up creating a vacuum for administration of elections that ended up having to be filled by the political parties and meant that political parties ended up being a load-bearing member of a a load-bearing element of a structure 0:59:48 that was designed not to wild and what of the consequences of getting rid of fee for service and specifically getting rid of the the spoils kickback system is that the parties became even more dependent on large money donations from capital because who the hell else has the money all right so let's see the last part for oh yes and also he talks like i said last week henry george ran from gov mayor of new york against teddy roosevelt uh and he talks about that in this section and it was a three-way race between a liberal democrat who was running uh with tammany support even 1:0:50 though he was not a tammany man uh teddy roosevelt running as a republican but as a sort of quasi-populist republican and henry george running on a labor ticket and the and the working-class irish who were the tammany base they they liked what they heard from george and the way that tammany was able to win that election was by replacing the votes they lost to george with because because they recognized the threat where they saw it and that's the thing about tammany and the urban machines is that yes they were more democratic than the bureaucratic state that would come later certainly but they were still uh at the they were still structures 1:1:51 that served capital and that got a better deal for their uh constituents their clients than you know the raw market would have but that when push came to shove would coordinate with capital to prevent a real challenge to emerge to so they impeached them huh john morrissey yeah i uh i did a a dollop episode i guess not a dollop episode about john morrissey fighting build a butcher it's pretty fun third party win yeah that's a good question i don't know i mean honestly it might not even be a party we might be beyond that by the time it gets organized but uh depending on the whatever i don't know i don't know man but it's it's at some point presumably there would be a party expression of of challenge to this this dead conflict between neoliberal 1:2:55 inclusive capitalism and white nationalist this petty pooch temper tantrum because they will only reinforce each other and that to me more than anything is why i have no obligation to to supply any kind of rhetorical support for a campaign to raise the alarm and to demand a a defensive line supporting every hysterical argument about from democrats because none of it is going to go you're saying well we got to do it we have to fend off the fascist threat well when will that ever happen it'll never go away the ***** republican base isn't going to change their mind they're always going to be there and the only response to the democrats will be hysterical clapping and punitive police state measures because they sure should have no interest in draining the swamp by making life in this country any less miserable for anybody who lives in it biden today says we're not going to do a big uh reckons we're not going to do a big reconciliation stimulus we're going to go through the regular channels and work with the republicans and maybe in the end they won't do that but it's the same scam it's the exact same scam these guys are a threat to democracy these guys are existential enemies of the republic also though they are the and you will have to support that even as it makes everything worse even as it creates more yahoos more people willing to compete violence on behalf of their ***** orange god emperor more people uh violently alienated from society willing to carry i mean it's not people are worried about q anon violence and that's going to be a thing sarcastic political violence is going to be just a feature of politics but as i said crime in general is up and going to keep going up because this ***** is falling apart the social coherence is collapsing to the degree there never was any because it was all held together by plenty it was all held together by the promise of more that's what kept people together even though we never melded into an actual uh national identity and the answer to all these is going to the only answer that liberalism can give is suppression just like those it's it's the exact same thing as those reformist evangelicals trying to break up the indian reservations into allotments it's like we're caught in this death spiral global capital is un unleashed uh the only place for profit is at the expense of labor every job has to be uh proletarianized every person has to be proletarianized if they don't have access to enough capital and um you can either learn to code uh or be or just if you can't then you just have to take it you have to take it and remember that this is a good country and there's a lot of shows on netflix you can watch and you know that's only 10 bucks a month that those are your choices and if you don't like it the answer is going to be the ***** stick and there's going to be a lot of leftists a lot of leftists whatever that ***** means who are going to be cheering along the entire time because we have to stand strong together even though it will be the policy of this ***** party these democrats in power that will make everything that these i will never be held accountable how dare you even suggest how dare you even suggest that i will be i mean these people are how is it like the thing i was supposed to have been canceled for when i said that the ***** capital is not some sacred institution it's a goddamn uh it's a it's baphomet's uh ritual altar place um that's bad because it like lets them off the hook for the riot how how at this moment in time with these democratic institutions showing themselves every day to be frauds showing us every day that yeah in a class society democracy is impossible there is no such thing as democracy in a class society because one class has the ***** power and they're going to exercise it and your ability to to influence them will always be channeled and uh and reduced and dissipated and you might get you might get a little more pie now but eventually you will be put through the ***** shoots into the goddamn slaughterhouse if and in this moment we're supposed to be re-sanctifying this hollow ritual with meaning that it does not deserve sure ***** doesn't benefit anybody but the people in the political class who are trying to keep this ***** charade going as long as they can like the democrats think that they have the whip hand now at least in terms of public opinion they think that those they think and this is the important thing they have no way of knowing because they're caught in the ***** bubble just like everybody is like they can make fun of cute people for being delusional but i'm sorry if you're a democrat you're as delusional you live as much in a filtered reality that does not tell you anything about the average sentiment or uh like will to act in any way of the mass of the american people and so i watched that debate and everyone's saying america the american people are horrified are they what happens you hope that's true how do you know though you're just gonna bluff it and hope that enough winging the alarm and waving the bloody shirt will discipline these people but they're all they want to do all they want to do that with all they want to do with that with hand it's not push policies it's not oh here we got him on the ropes we're actually going to institute medicare for all no it's we got him on the ropes we're going to reaffirm uh the america's trust in our sacred democratic institutions and then launch like a uh domestic drone program to combat i think you're ignoring the fact that some lawmakers were explicitly targeted and probably would have been executed if the bob was more lucky this isn't funny i mean it's funny i'm if you don't think it's funny then log then you should not be on the internet my god uh but like was it terrifying for the people in it yes what's really weird to me is people who insist that like i haven't i have i have we all have some sort of um duty to affirm like the lived experience and emotional response of members of congress like their posters like their other posters their other like online friends of ours who are trying to validate they're members of congress they have more in common with each other they have more in common with kevin mccarthy and the q people as the new anti-masonic party that's a good that's not a bad comparison actually because and in a sonic party was a similar impulse it was people looking around at the at the bounty of of of the american of the virgin america finding uh roadblocks to the advancement that they thought that they would have in it and decided that it's it's that that couldn't be in this land of plenty that that couldn't be in america with its constitution and its and its founding heroes it must be in this secret of bunch of uh people hanging around and wearing aprons and who knows what in their they even had like a uh their own um like epstein case their own sort of woe or i guess seth rich would be better that there was a murder there was a famous murder of a former mason who was threatening to publish a book exposing masonic secrets in northern new york which helped spark the animasonic party coming into being and the anima sonic party was part of that uh drive towards it was it was a middle-class 1:12:7 movement much like the know-nothings ended up being uh in in the upper upper north of the country of the united uh of the northern tier uh it started in upstate new york but uh i believe there were eventually anti-masonic congressmen elected in maryland uh uh so like up through the through the mid-atlantic region uh but not the deep south uh and it looked it's a horror at the jacksonian democracy and the slave power that but could not find any uh it could not put any faith in the whigs as an opposition to it because it was filled with masons and q anon is a similar thing when you're just trying to make sense of this world and you're looking for bad guys they're everywhere in both parties now it takes a certain sort of american brain poisoning and uh essentially mental like suffocation to decide that donald trump is the person 1:13:8 who's going to defeat them but by the same token why wouldn't it be like the idea of a uh of a lone hero stalking the halls of injustice is is an american archetype and it's built into the way we think of the presidency like you can go why do these people believe in donald trump but of course he's donald ***** trump but he's also the president and we have decided that the president uh embodies something as opposed to just essentially being a vessel for interests far beyond his personal ones and that they're their adherence to the job is predicated on the understanding that they will carry out those will that will and that they're like self-actualization will the power is more a matter of embodying the moment and embodying the interests and powers and uh constituencies of the moment than of shaping anything but that's certainly not how we think of them like how could we put that much emotion behind it how could we invest so much of our sense of ourselves as democratic participants in it if 1:14:10 that's all the presidency was the presidency has to be some guy with a ***** anime sword who can cut through the gordian knot of injustice if he's not oh ***** it's pretty late damn i went fa i went long all right uh well we'll see what happens next won't we next week for example we will have all this and uh also by the way 20 000 troops in the capital so my prediction is still solid that it will be a orderly intense transition of power uh and then you're going to start seeing some people pop off and then you're going to start seeing the the fists of the state come to smack whitey in the face and tell them no no you thought it was one way the legend lives on from the chipotle down and the big lake they call you chico me like it is of november at the end of it with a load about or 26 000 tons more than the edmond fitzgerald the wreck of the memphis gerald that's uh indigenous midwest culture right there might not be terribly long today i might not go the whole hour just warning you depending on how how it goes but i wanted to show the flag today since 0:1:1 we only have a few days left of the trump residency i feel like i gotta put out as much content as possible since you know we're going to be entering the biden zone soon which man it's going to be weird at this point having trump not be president is going to be very odd because how is the press the media press i sound like a 90. the media how's the media going to deal with that because like they've all clearly decided at the top level that this guy is a threat to democracy they've cut him off from twitter but are they gonna be able to maintain that uh that unified face in resisting the urge to just cover him like he's still president because my god who wouldn't want to i mean you're gonna have otherwise what you're gonna have joe biden sitting in a rocking chair like grandpa sawyer and ***** texas chainsaw massacre give me a ***** break the inaugural i can't wait for that speech that's going to be a good sign of how much 0:2:4 fun we're going to have is how good that speech is how much one how much gibberish the problem is is that he's been pretty good on on prompter lately he was good at the convention i'm assuming at this point that they do have a special suppository or something that they give him that adrenochrome and ***** molly popping and then of course as soon as he finishes talking he just powers down completely and they have to put him in a ***** uh they have to put him in a sensory deprivation chamber for 12 hours to minimize over stimulation otherwise his brain will just completely uh implode it'll be fun though you know we'll uh we'll find we'll make it fun if we'll make it fun damn it we'll make this guy fun too this i mean he's he is by far the 0:3:5 most mentally uh out there out of their president since the like second term reagan got to be some humor there got to be some hijinks new radical song that's not a good one to me that's not a good 90s song to me i'm sorry um sex and candy these are the 90s one hit wonders where i wonder how i wonder how the hell they ever became because there's plenty of 1-8 wonders that are intuitive to me oh i get why the macarena was a big hit there's a periodic craving for a big a dance number big dance song people can do together but why the hell i'm too sexy i get why that was fun and popular i mean if you know it's it's it's fun uh if nothing else but what the hell is going on with some of these songs steal my song song still my sunshine is not 0:4:7 a bad song it's a fine 90s song certainly in the bucket of 90s one hit wonders where i totally get why they were hits dude old town road somebody's talking about old town road old town road is weird in that it's almost less a one-hit wonder which is a genre that has largely disappeared completely oh god how bizarre i hated that one that guy's voice was so whiny why who liked l-a-f-o-l-e uh lfo or whatever it was uh 0:5:9 girls of summer a terrible terrible song i get why it was popular though that was one i don't like but i get why it was popular some of them i don't like and i don't understand how anyone could like them but i definitely got why i mean they were a boy band oh man somebody mentions alien ant farm i was thinking about this the other week how much worse is it being what's worse what's all right i mean first of all there's a question if you're a musician is it better to have been a failure or a grinder or something or to become a one-hit wonder where you get one a little moment in the sun and then you're a punchline is it worth it i mean in past generations but monetarily it definitely would because in the old uh cd and album era i think if you had one significant hit you were going to make enough money there if you didn't you know do what mc hammer did and buy a bunch of race horses and solid gold pants you'd be sitting pretty but you know you'd still be now i don't even know if you get 0:6:10 that but there's got to be a special sort of sadness that comes with being a one-hit wonder where the one hit like alien ant farm their big hit was a cover of smooth criminal also in the 90s urge overkill from the pulp fiction soundtrack had a big hit that was a cover of neil diamond's girl you'll be a woman soon and not only does that sting from a from a monetary perspective because you've got to split royalties but you don't even get to be known for a song you wrote you wrote a bunch of songs you're probably proud of and nobody's ever heard them at least the one hit wonder can say hey people heard a song i wrote and they sang along to it and they liked it you just put some ***** rock guitar instrumentation behind a michael jackson song that's gotta suck i mean it's certainly a case like that some of them the one that 0:7:16 wonder is more popular version of the song that was covered in which case you sort of are the winner there no matter what but nobody's gonna forget ***** michael jackson because some ***** bald a bunch of alien and far people died in horrifying no one's going to make me understand who ariel pink is you can't do it who let the dogs out was a cover probably but there's no way that anybody did it as well as baja man i refuse to believe it they took every potential from that song yeah even mitt romney 0:8:18 had heard who let the bugs out one of the greatest politician moments of all time something you couldn't script start shirt white mormon reading a bunch of black people and just immediately yeah i got nothing today uh kind of waiting to see what happens on inauguration day honestly pretty excited about it uh i'm predicting one thing massive overwhelming national guard presence and what else is happening at the same time everybody who idiotically filmed themselves in the capital is getting arrested by the fbi some of them are tick-tocking filming them tick-tock filming themselves and those two things make it seem like they are in fact bringing down the hammer to let people know all right we're all having fun with this and you guys are useful to a degree but you are not um you're not calling the rodeo you're not calling the tune the piper calls the tune and you don't got the ***** scratch you are a bunch of uh atomized streamers and real estate agents and a small engine repair company owners and parts distributors uh and you are not a coherent political force that can upend our very very useful democratic structures i'm not saying that they're august or virtuous i'm not saying that there's anything sacred about them they are useful to power so they're not going to be turned over to these yahoos because because they believe everything they see on the internet including that donald trump is anything other than a complete ***** fraud i mean the the reason they all did that is because they thought they were being told by the president to do it and that he was going to then use their actions as a part of a plan to take power and he didn't have one he just went home and watched tv he told him he was going to march with them and then all these idiots filmed themselves because why wouldn't they that this is the this is the overthrow of the old regime this is like why wouldn't you have filmed yourself breaking into the uh the american embassy in tehran or or stasi headquarters after the fall of it turns out oh yeah no uh everything you think you believe is ***** and uh and and more importantly than that there are consequences for you believing this ***** and i think that a lot of these people are going to uh go back to posting some of them are going to become apolitical and get into really weird ***** which i'm very much looking forward to like deciding oh politics politics they're going to follow the rabbit hole into like some sort of esoteric religious ***** and if that happens i'm down i want to hear about what that what that is and then some of them are going to probably uh get get violent but they're not going to although now you've got uh the democrats terrified that some of the somebody in the in the national guard is going to kill biden because they know that this is a huge there's a huge percentage of people in this country including disproportionately white males in positions like the military who even if they aren't cube believers are broadly sympathetic to the idea that trump is better than biden and that probably even that they stole the election from them how much what are they going to do about it what are they prepared to do about it one that where one thing we can all say is that everything is going fine and there's no problems whatsoever i mean that's what's so funny about the people who insist on you being upset or you personally showing some sort of uh fear of fascism it's to say that your particular pet fantasy is not based in reality is not to insist inherently that things are good or sustainable that sure ***** is not true i do realize though that there is a real uh congruity between republicans under obama who would insist that obama say the words islamic terrorism and people telling me that i need to say fascism and the only difference is at least the republicans were asking you know the president of the united states to do it but the underwriting logic is exactly the same the under guiding logic is is that if enough people hear the bad scary word they will with the republicans it's agree with us on you know a policy and with the fascist thing in practice it's the same deal it's agree with democrats around a policy and i cannot i'm not going to sign up for anything that does that because the democrats have nothing good to offer anyone just they are people it's amazing the number of people who insist that they're like look i'm as left as anybody i understand the democrats are bad but you know strategically supporting them for x y and z uh one they don't care about your help really you're just some ***** on the internet you don't really have any power uh and two everything terrible that you're worried about happening all of the the the ratchet of nationalist and white supremacist violence uh and and cult-like savagery and like an unrestrained police state that's all ***** that they are encouraging at every step because they are locked in the death spiral the mitigating uh any attempt and any mitigating any popular opposition to a program of austerity i mean that's what both parties do they pitch it to different audiences but they both exist to predict project a alternative to what people don't like uh and then they believe naively uh or desperately that that's what they're gonna get when really what they're going to get is a bipartisan collaboration to bring about worsening conditions for everybody i mean it's going to be worse and they're both going to make it happen and the anti-fascist agenda that you're supposed to be signing up for in practice is just defending the democratic party as they create what a domestic terror organization a new uh uh intelligence agency staffed with like the the kids from uh captain planet who aren't gonna be see no this isn't like an evil unaccountable uh um repressive state institution like in the past this one is uh has a staff of uh diverse millennials it's like the burger king kids club here's a kid in a wheelchair here's a blackhead here's the latina these guys possibly couldn't abuse their power and try to suppress uh resistance to uh so if that's what the whole point of it is and that is it it's that's that's what that's what everybody everyone is disingenuously arguing for either because they've convinced themselves because they're too addicted to fear and too addicted to to the idea that they're in a cataclysmic moment in history where they could be defined by their resistance to evil in the form of posts or they really just want people to shut the ***** up and let biden do his job and this is a good way to uh go about that it's a good rhetorical cultural i saw eric levitz claim broadly claim explicitly the whole point of the fascism thing is to get people to not like them it's a it's a uh it's a messaging tool but who are you messaging the only people who care about these terms are people who are already in your discourse bubble they're already they're already sorted you're not bringing any new people into the fold you're not convincing any new people that's really what what people seem to be unwilling to accept probably because it shows how a functionalist they are how unable they are to do anything meaningful other than just fill a role is that our political discourse is pitched to the same group of of people who who consume political media and vote and that is a relatively stable pool of people whose opinions are made up the only way that you're going to break the dynamic we have now the only reason the way you're going to destroy the republican party the way that so many uh liberal leftists demand is if you radically change the the uh the demographic and size of the political subject in this country corey robin has been 100 right about this the whole got it i was i said this on a previous stream but robin has gotten the trump thing way better than a lot of other uh intellectuals who you'd think would be able to see what was in front of them but uh but you know are blinded by the same spectacular politics that ensorcel as i left like to say all of us so give him credit for holding strong one thing that uh one element of fascism that is totally absent in the current variety and i don't think anyone even argues otherwise is the uh territorial expansionism and you can say oh you know sort r saber rattling with iran or increasing bombings in yemen or somalia that's all terrible but it's mostly part of the machinery of or of of of of it's it's maintaining the machinery of the empire we have and that's just it we have already taken everything where is to expand and that's because fascism was the la the late piglets to the trough of colonialism the places that went fascists were the countries that because italy and germany were the european countries that because they became modern polities the latest were able to access the spoils of empire last at which point most of it was already taken the monroe doctrine uh uh had shut uh western hemisphere to any kind of expansion and africa and china were carved up between the uh the british and the french how the ***** portuguese and the dutch had more ***** stuff than the germans and the italians had and the thing that guys like mussolini and hitler realized is that in the world of the nation-state if you take as a premise nation-state competition as existential which europeans had for generations and which had been you know violently and horrifically and monstrously demonstrated in world war ii or i'm sorry world war one uh which was you know uh in many ways exacerbated by the colony the great game the colonial game um they saw oh we don't stand a chance in this contest the japanese military have the same epiphany we don't stand a chance unless we can access some ***** raw materials if we can ex get some of those new markets going if we can reach that next higher stage a higher stage of capitalism that lenin and the moral of horror that the allies saw that were able to 0:21:48 provoke at the uh at the axis was essentially that they were doing that stuff or they wanted to do that stuff one in europe at least uh hitler did germany did in the with the host plan where they were going to turn the ukraine into as a neo-feudal uh like a neo-feudal agricultural colony with like little communities of ss officers and their families as as colonial barons and then the the remaining uh slav population that hadn't been starved to death would be working in agricultural serfdom basically um so they did it to the wrong people and they did it after uh the rest of the european empires had uh to a degree or another civilized themselves by virtue of time passing there's nowhere to go now the we're not creating political there's no movement in 0:22:51 america at least of all trumpism that is trying to create a a polity i mean it's trying to create a national project and i think the reason that that matters and the reason it's not just uh ***** pedantic academic ***** is because it all goes to the question of well what do you do about it which is the only question that actually matters right obviously the academic definitions are meaningless the question is what do you do about it and the the the the emotional reality of the factions of question is that what 0:23:55 it means is what you do about it one support the democrats in everything they do because they are our only alternative and because they are a meaningful anti-fascist force even though as i've said we're actually operating a system where both parties move the ball forward in tandem inching towards ***** uninterruptedly and that they are like symbolically connected and that the democrats are as responsible as republicans are for the drift of things and so therefore supporting them obviously the degree that it's in any way you know effective is effectively helping everything get worse including the rise of whatever the hell kind of fascist demon you think is being conjured here and then otherwise if it's not that what is it punch nazis spectacles of violence i don't that just seems like more uh more personal expression 0:24:58 replacing political organizing uh or or posting a lot of it seems to be posting to try to get everybody to your level of anxiety and then make thinking that that will make people move forward and that might work if we had a situation where there was emerging in the land a a or a coherent nationalist movement to fill a a political space but there's no space there's just a bunch of ***** people milling around and people filling up carrying out uh individualized fantasies of violent redemption which is what we've been doing now for generations and if that's the case then the implications are that the goal or the the um the goal needs to be the project needs to be building 0:26:0

a left building a coherent uh expression of a class politics in order to challenge the democrats and republicans and by virtue of doing that challenge this drift towards like white met white violent fantasy which is a real and so if that's the case and i think it's true regardless of where you fall on any of the semantic questions the the need to fill the public space with real class politics is still in the set the necessary goal regardless of anything if you take that fact and add to it the fact that the uh the the lesson that many people seem to want to take from a explanatory model that involves words like fascism and and stuff is is to just do more clinging to the coattails of the democratic party and hoping that they protect you from from the mean bad people but uh and while they not the democrats might not be as as malicious they might not be as sadistic they might not be as racist they are as committed to the machines that produce not if not the feelings those feelings the willingness of people to act on them god elon musk being the richest person in the world right now i mean if whatever histories of the era like of the roaring 20s before the big collapse uh and i don't mean necessarily a collapse of like civil government but a economic correction which i think is inevitable just you know you know who the hell knows when it's coming the fact that the richest guy on earth was someone who didn't really make anything who did not have any basis for his wealth that made sense in any intuitive way bill gates made computers people bought the computers jeff bezos delivers things to you in computers and other computers also other products what does elon musk do he makes like 10 000 shitty electric cars that cost a ton of money and kill you a year and and lies about building tunnels that are that that and says they're going to replace uh like mass transit and they're literally their their theme park rides and he doesn't even build them i mean he's just he he games tax breaks and incentives uh in the green sector and uh and in space and stuff just to get his name out there and associate it with a vision of uh technological deliverance from this moment that we live in and then exploits that to absurdly overvalued absurdly world historically overvalued stock nothing has ever been as overvalued as tesla i know i'm not a bunch of an expert on this ***** but it's not i don't think a lot of people would argue with that i mean the underlying financials of that company are non-existent and what it is is the reason this has happened one because we are in this gigantic bubble where the money is just swashing around there's no there's nowhere to get profit so everything is just pure speculation the fact that he has become the cultural avatar for capitalism saving itself because everybody knows everybody can sense that this ***** is all in a bad trajectory unless you're a completely i mean unless you have your own fantasies of cue where we're all going to get eaten by reptiles and you're still and everybody is feeling apocalyptic whether you believe in global warming or not but if you do believe the global warming is real you do believe that we are going towards a condition of significant ecological crisis and and de ins uh instability but because you are an american more than anything and you're ideologically uh struck your ideological understanding of the world is structured or especially if you're somebody who invests in the stock market and you have a literally vested interest in capitalism is maintaining itself the conclusion you might draw from the crisis we're 0:31:7 in of oh this system doesn't work is not appealing because you don't want to do away with the system it does well for you and you have you have you also have faith in it ideological faith in it elon musk is the figure who has embodied the notion that capitalism can fix itself through innovation uh and through uh through brilliance and uh and dedication uh all the all those stuff that has brought us all of the greatest technological innovations in history that will also solve the present crisis whatever however form it takes whether it's energy or environment it can all be ameliorated by brilliant menovision menovision mostly uh applying their brilliance to the the thorny technological questions because if you cannot accept that there is a uh fundamental 0:32:8 problem with this the system that is producing these outcomes then the uh so the only solutions you can accept are that something is broken within it and that that can be technologically fixed that there that that there is some sort of application of engineering somewhere along the line that can uh bring us back onto the beam and elon musk's pitch to the world is that he can do it he's gonna get us all electric cars and batteries and underground tunnels that will soothe all of our social ills and buy us more time and people are willing to spend a lot of money to believe that and especially since at this point it's only an upside because the ***** ***** guy was 0:33:9 on rick and morty for christ's sake and so the fact that you have this significance this overlapping series of deepening ecological and economic catastrophes and crises that are compounding one another across a global economic system and the richest person to um to emerge from the system that exists to create giant ***** fortunes is this paper billionaire whose entire wealth is predicated on ludicrously overvalued stock that is entirely pumped up by pr stunts uh back room deals with a government and a worldwide self-delusion and need to believe in capitalism at the end of the day we just have to believe because the alternative is too unthinkable and and musk is 0:34:10 someone you can actually believe in not just from the sidelines but from the position of uh a investor and consumer you can make it happen you can buy a tesla you can buy tesla stock or you could go online and argue in people's comments about how he's a genius even though he today suggested that they build tunnels under miami which is in florida a state with a water table that is about three inches below the surface of the water of the of the earth and is entirely limestone i mean just a bimbo but and a and a classic carnival barker and it makes and it's perfectly fitting that he would be our avatar of global capitalism this scam artist and then look who is the

called you that it took what it took to get the wall street boys to take you seriously you would work much harder than any of them when they went you went to college with them back east when the union rep come by just try to sign up your men there are hundreds but you know most of them by name you told the workers stories of the sacrifices your father made for their fathers you reminded them of the times you kept everyone on the payroll when business was slack of how you were always ready with an advance to help with a new baby or a sick mother for 50 years they seemed perfectly happy without a union but when fdr signed the wagner act the organizers came again this time with a slogan the president wants you to join a union this goes on for a while but i highly recommend anybody reading it and burgers the small bourgeois in in the nation's interior that were the original fonts of new anti-new deal reaction at the cultural level and how over time they became more influential as more people came to agree with them but they were at first very very limited in number because there weren't that many people who were feeling that the bet the deal was bad because that was the time of the great prosperity but as things got worse as cultural differences sharpened especially and then after the neoliberal turn it only got bigger and bigger uh and now you've got people who have no financial stake and like the small regional economies are in fact as much serfs to them as the rest of us are serfs to global finance but who don't see that who only see because they've been their politics have been totally filtered through just the cultural affect that uh that they recognize and either accept or reject and that there's no real underlining politics but the reason they're doing that the reason they're listing that the reason they're they're responding to those cultural cues is and the reason that they want an answer that is that bloody and is that confrontational and is that apocalyptic is because things are worse for everybody and even if they are worse for you you can see them getting worse and honestly for a lot of these type of people they are getting worse but the ex the the modern version of this guy that that he's talking about here personally is talking about is mike lindell but of course he is the version from now not from them he is the version who was a crackhead for 40 years uh and then decided that oh uh actually jesus loves me more than anyone on earth and has told me that it is my destiny to become a billionaire pillow salesman and now he is a relative to the fortunes back east uh bourgeois factory owner like there's a factory that makes those goddamn pillows in in minnesota and now he is they're them he is he is the small holder the one from that that or small factory owner the small business tyrant uh overblown and now a cultural figure and potentially a political figure as well i don't know if he's got the charisma to be trump but he fits the pattern very well and the other thing that he has in common with trump and i think this gets underrated is that and this is also one of the things that undermines all the fretting about oh what if a competent trump what about a smart trump what about a trump who has a plan that's the contradiction in terms because trump's incoherence and idiocy are the things that people like about him because what got trump through the door more than any policies was that other dumb people heard him and knew that he was also dumb like them the reason that you're not going to see the reason that he was able to bowl just bowl over all those regular republicans and why no regular republican will be able to get his base no matter what they say is that regular republicans are for the most part smarter than the people they're talking to or imagine they're talking to and that comes across as condescending there is a degree of falseness and condescension to political communication that your rustic dumbass recognizes and sarah palin broke through because she was a genuine rustic idiot and trump picked up her baton because he is also a genuine rustic idiot but the thing they als but but because they were both genuine rustic idiots and because their rustic idiocy is what endeared them and made them popular it also guarantees that they could not create a political uh movement of any coherence to pass on and to exploit because they're too dumb to do that they're too dumb to care about that stuff they sarah palin is more ideologically committed to like conservatism as a concept than trump is but just barely she is a instagram ***** and she only ever cared about herself and so as soon as she got the national spotlight she blew it on reality shows and tummy tea endorsements and is now a ***** laughing stock trump was able to take that movement get to the center of it and take it to the presidency but as soon as he lost it's over he wasn't even this his attempt to to foment a coup and i mean yeah of course he tried to overturn the election there's no question he tried to overturn the election but he did that by just calling people and say overturn the election please and then just tweeting to his followers overturn the election please and then go in front of people and say overturn the election please if you're at the center of a ***** political conspiracy you actually have to have some agency especially when you're the president of the ***** united states and he had none because he is a rustic dumbass who is just interested in himself has no object permanence let alone a a vision of an enduring political legacy he doesn't care about passing on anything to anyone else because anyone else isn't him like talking to him about a legacy is terrible because you're making him think about the fact that he's not going to be here someday and he can't conceive of that because he's a dumbass and if he hadn't been that dumb they would have picked up on it and mike lindell is as much a rustic dumbass as but palin or trump which means his dumbass-ness will come off as authentic and it will mean that he will be as incapable of building an actual movement as any of them have been they will all get led around by the nose by ***** actual political operators who are keyed into interests of above and beyond the narrow ***** ego of these rustic dumbasses and they will make them do what they want to do which is why trump governed as a ***** republican the only big thing he carried out the only big domestic policy he carried out was a ***** tax cut he had a chance in that election even with covet and his horrible botching of covet he had a chance to win that election if he had fought harder for checks that was totally in his control to do even if mcconnell was going to hold him up even if pelosi was going to hold him up he could have fought for them harder he could have fought to put his name on him more instead what did he talk about in the run-up to the election he talked about how he couldn't get his giant shits down the toilet he talked about how cher was mean to him because he was too stupid even to know what he was to know where what he was actually like the buttons he was pressing or how where how much did trump talk about the two about the checks and how he wanted more checks he tweeted it a couple of times did he put it just front and center anywhere no because his advisors also didn't want those checks they also probably wanted him to lose honestly they were sick of him and he and he had no ability to push against that even though it was in his power because he didn't even he wasn't even aware of it because he wasn't even able to keep the thought in his head long enough to pursue it he was distracted he saw a ***** squirrel out the window or ***** uh he was watching the william devane for gold line commercial again that's and if he hadn't had that if he hadn't been that rabbit brained he wouldn't have gotten in that position in the first place where people would think he was a god emperor and want to ***** charge into the mouth of congress on his behalf the stupidity the idiocy the authenticity is what they're responding to more than see people say napoleon iii but napoleon iii spent his whole life fixated on becoming emperor of france he thought it was his birthright he got arrested several times and spent time in prison years in prison for trying to overthrow the government in his prison he wrote himself not have not just have a ***** ghostwriter wrote books where he imagined what like the political economy of a restored bonapartist empire would be he was actually pursuing all along a goal and then when he got himself elected president thanks to the potato sacks in the countryside and the sausage addicted soldiers and the lump and proletariat he was able to ex exacerbate the conflicts within the ruling class in order to overcome them and defeat them in turn and supersede them because he was actually the trade war is the closest thing they did to any kind of like economic populism and it ***** failed it blew up on their faces all it did was ***** popularized a bunch of soybean farmers in the midwest that was and because it's like we're getting killed in trade he's not doing it as some sort of attempt to create a new industrial policy and like create a bring back the jobs whatever the hell that means he's thinking in in pure terms of uh of of like state competition even though these are interdependent economies and it ended up just being a button-bashing disaster that helped nobody it did bring back the mcrib though i think i'm not sure if that's true but i think i read that one of the reasons they brought back the maghrib is is that china's retaliatory tariffs on on uh pig pork bellies led to a glut which meant that mcdonald's could swoop in grab them 0:49:45 like trump only cares about his own brand and not even like brand beyond himself like to his family him because he cannot imagine himself dying he cannot imagine himself not existing that's why he has to watch tv all day keep the focus on himself at all times and keep the volume up because he's got to drown out that ***** voice in his head telling him he's going to die one of my favorite trump moments ever just as a pure tableau of just monstrous uh crudeness was during the campaign i think he was on an airplane the campaign plan being interviewed and there was a big tv on and it was blaring this guy's supposed to be a billionaire running for president and he's just glued to the tv like all like right like like your grandfather which is why they love him because he's the same he's there is a identification beyond politics beyond even words 0:50:46 and it's a recognition just think how many times he has heard the ***** celino and barnes jingle and uh the empire carpet jingle in his life how many times has he heard uh the uh it's my money and i need it now you have a structured settlement and 0:51:48 you need cash now the people whose have those songs in their head all the time are unemployed loser types and failed sons such as myself uh and old retired people and the pres the literal president of the i was always wondering about the jd wentworth thing how many calls do they get a day of from people going hey i want one of how many times does the does the person at that uh hotline number have to say no we can only restructure an existing settlement we can't get you one i would probably to have fun kind of be like well if you want a structured settlement here's what you do 0:52:49 you go down to the grocery store you find a nice recently uh mopped piece of uh floor and you just eat ***** and hopefully on camera uh in front of witnesses if possible make sure to just go totally ham on it though you can't you can't ***** foot you got to really really really commit to hitting your call jd wentworth that's something guys no damn it well that's gonna be in my head for the oh god vaginal mesh ooh that's got to be one of the grimmest jobs is at the call center the vaginal mesh 0:53:50 lawsuit number caught people calling in to tell you about their mesh mishaps their vaginal mesh mishap their vaginal vaginal mesh mishaps vaginal mesh mitts vaginal mesh mishaps vaginal mesh mishaps vaginal mesh mishaps there we go did it three times yes please clip that that should be a clip clipping is disabled maybe because uh i'm getting canceled too much i don't know i never just said i never disabled it i 0:54:51 don't know how i wouldn't know how to i still don't know how they get these little pictures of me in the in the chat i don't know how that works like hey there's a little me what's hey there i am hey i was hoping someone would post that my little face with the new where the bars are arrested now billy shot cut that i had him in the knee together upset for the five hundred dollars me that could probably be having any family hey where are you oh won't you know that we need you now with the raw town the old hotel one time ready billy went away with the peacekeeping horseman loved a bloody good fight of course went away the big gun commander of accidents literally jordan did saw the arabs and he had another run when he had him in the rangers come machine gun hey billy son where are we now don't you where are billy bombs resting now one night billionaire time laughing singing on the lebanon nine came into camp not looking too pretty never even got to see the holy city now billy's out there in the desert sun and his mother cries when the morning comes and there's 0:1:2 mothers crying all over this world for the poor little barren boys and girls oh i want i want to find the remarks i want to find trump's i don't watch his speech because when he does four years ago we launched a great national effort to rebuild our country to renew its spirit and restore the allegiance of the government to its citizens in short we embarked on a mission to make america great again for all americans as i conclude my term as the 45th president of the united states i stand before you truly proud of what we've accomplished together we did what we came here to do and so much more now how could anyone anyone i mean i'm not even talking about uh actually 0:2:5 there's all these people who died from covet well uh that's because of democrats next question uh well what about the economy going bad that's democrats next question the economy was doing great before china unleashed the virus next question you lost you lost and the child eating you let them steal it from you according to his own claims if you take him seriously at his word none of this holds together as a justification it's astounding i mean i can see why he accepts this and thinks it makes sense but why anyone else who is supporting his agenda would think that it's wild 0:3:6 ah man it's really going to be something tomorrow when they swear at biden and he is not immediately arrested and shot the head on live television although i have to say that if that does happen boy will my face be red i will have been certainly owned that's for sure how's that is that better looks fine on my ***** screen *****

let me see what else it says here uh this week we inaugurated new administration and pray for its success why would you pray for its success it's filled with child eating murderers and global psychopaths you want to wish them success at eating children's brains that's the problem is that this is all this is old this is the way politics used to work the idea they're all on the same team and at the end of the day you go home and it was a hard fought match but you respect the other team and how hard they play because everybody knows at the end of the day this is an intramural scrimmage and we're not dealing with existential conflicts because both parties have accepted the terms and conditions of being a political party in the heart of empire the the thing that trump has done with his person not on purpose in creating an army of people who are now uh existentially alienated from all these institutions that they used to think were enduring means that all of these appeals to bipartisanship are genuinely uh idiot incoherent and and frankly insane uh and i'm frustrated seeing it because that alienation is a good thing i know it's scary because the people feeling it are the most heavily armed americans the most reactionary socially and mostly economically and that it sucks that they're the ones realizing oh yeah i know these this is a rigged game but everybody needs to come to that conclusion at some and so i would do wonders if you haven't invested yourself completely in the in the idea of trump as a person how do you absorb this i get how you were able to absorb everything else that happened because he was still fighting he was still claiming he wanted to win and he was telling people go fight but like ever since the sixth and specifically now i just don't know how the hell you square any of this and of course the real true believing like the people who are too committed spiritually because q anon is a religious movement more than it is a political movement people who are religiously and spiritually committed they're going to have their own they'll do what the millerites did after the great disappointment they'll figure something out which means there's going to be some q on david koresh in the near future because david crush was a was a the branch davidians were offshoots of the seventh-day adventists who were offshoots of the millerites and i know that that took you know like 100 years but nowadays with this with the caffeine and the drinking water and uh all of the internets and such things move much faster so we'll probably get q on david kresh within uh six months but if you're a regular republican who has over the past four years moved towards the psychic identification with him what do you do with this he sold you out when did it happen did he get replaced by a hologram was he lying the whole time and if he was lying the whole time what does that we extend our best wishes and we also want them to have luck a very important word i think that's him some people are probably freaking out thinking that that's a coded threat i think it's him saying that if it hadn't been for the unlucky event of coronavirus

i would be re-elected and of course that's true although he also doesn't seem to absorb and never could that he did ***** it up worse than it had to be he kind of spectacularly ***** it up and more than even his actual ***** it up he performed ***** it up like andrew cuomo ***** up just as badly as trump did at the state level newsome too the big democrat governors that are supposed to be our saviors awful huge butchers built complete incompetence but they took it seriously in front of the camera and trump never took it seriously because he's too stupid like i was talking genuine rustic dumbass to understand that he couldn't just insist it was gone and then have everybody agree with him you could get your supporters to do that but his ego wouldn't allow him to understand how few people that was relative to the population if he had pretended to care even it might have been enough and of course 0:8:14 i'd like to begin by thanking just a few of the amazing people who made a remarkable journey possible like he's see like he's talking like he's writing in someone's yearbook at this point have a great summer remarkable journey i thought this was a war to the death with a pedophile elite let me express my overwhelming gratitude for the love and support of our spectacular first lady melania and let me also share my deepest appreciation to my daughter my son-in-law jared and the parent don eric tiffany and lara you fill my world with light and with joy this is a ***** this is the oscar acceptance speech that he has dreamed of giving and never gotten a chance to i also would like to thank vice president mike pence his wonderful wife karen at the entire pets family the guys the guy who you have put in jeopardy for the rest 0:9:17 of his life mike pence is going to have to hold his breath when he turns the ***** engine on his car every day for the rest of his life ***** secret service agents or not i also want to take a moment to thank a truly exceptional group of people the united states secret service even though his wife even though his daughter and uh her her husband wouldn't let them uh also wasn't it a secret service agent who domed one of his supporters uh in the capital he literally is thanking the people who killed one of his supporters who was trying to save the republic on his behalf like he told them to do most of all i want to thank the american people the service president has been an underpant description thank you for this extraordinary privilege and that's what it is we must never forget that while americans will always have our disagreements we 0:10:22 are a nation of incredible decent faithful and peace-loving citizens who all want our country to thrive and flourish and be very very successful and good man maybe he did write this himself we are a truly magnificent nation either he wrote this himself or like stephen miller or whoever it is one of the people who's been able to figure out what he likes has figured out how to write like him at least how to use words in a way that he will find familiar and authentic which is small ones and a lot of intensifiers because you know vocabulary is pretty small but that's one of the things that supporters like about them that they don't feel all americans were horrified by the assault on our capital political violence is an attack on everything we cherish as americans it could never be tolerated now more than ever we must unify around our shared values and rise up a partisan what is this this is the most complete surrender 0:11:26 i have ever ***** seen he's run up the white the ***** white flag with the ***** brown streak on it ***** i mean obviously this is what he was always going to do and everybody it's funny the only people who didn't know this is what he was going to do are the q anon and and mega die hards and the biden sucking liberal psychos those are the only ones who thought that he had some trick up his sleeve where he was going to somehow cancel democracy even though he is a ***** toddler all right i'm looking for some more good stuff in here yeah he left he left he was a outsider he wanted there to be summits hardworking patriots america first uh we 0:12:27 achieved more than anybody thought possible all right let's hear the list tax cuts and reform well done once again all for rich people uh regulations once again job killing regulations that's the thing that maybe your average dumb ass might think helps them but in reality helps their boss broken trade deals with drew from pacific partnership uh that's all either they either just changed the name or it's all going to go back uh left the paris accord they're going back into the paris accord immediately uh replace nafta with usmca basically the same thing uh tariffs on china a terror war that we lost we got our asses kicked in the chairs in the chinese trade war uh billions and billions of dollars were pouring into the us and then the virus forced us to make a we prefer we hur we america outperformed other countries during covet 0:13:30 because of our incredible economy this is a good one america outperformed other countries economically because of our incredible economy and the economy we built if he didn't write this if he didn't write this that there is somebody in the white house who has mind melded with him our economy outperformed others because it's incredible without the foundations and footings it wouldn't have worked out this way we wouldn't have had some of the best numbers we've ever had of course he's talked about the stock market and what he's talking about economic build what we built is the ***** federal reserve system and the empty the endless flow of quantitatively eased cash to ***** banks the exact same stuff that the most hardcore reactionaries in this country hate the people who love him the most hate that's what he's ***** following back on it's almost as like there is no alternative to this within the political system and even a guy who appears to be such a pseudo-generous maniac and a 0:14:31 guy who is in many senses a complete def uh completely defies all all conventional political arithmetic and is able to draw on a leveraged network of support outside of the traditional political you get you get cheap money in one end uh and neo-surfed them on the other end that's what everybody's doing with different flavors

regardless of how much of an outsider they are and i know and that's why while i was supporting bernie and i really was invested in that campaign more than anything i did not have a lot of hope that his presidency would be in any sense successful as in getting things accomplished if there was going to be any any forward progress from a bernie campaign it would have been in building a constituency for policies that could do the work of uh pressuring existing systems from outside that was the hope and what we got instead was this we got trump and q lower middle class i guess i would say revolt with no political coherence to it and no political point a pure demand for the tv to be turned on to what they want to watch that's it they want to make sure that the tv is on their channel it's a fight in the living room for the clicker we also unlocked our energy resources and became the world's number one producer of oil and natural gas by far and that right there honestly is like the closest thing to uh a uh like a america first policy that is outside of the consensus which does recognize climate change is real and recognizes that there has to be a adaptation of uh of the the energy market if we're going to you know avoid catastrophic destabilization but you have to have read something to know that you have to have understanding of things happening outside of your ***** air-conditioned office and what's on the 75-inch television that's blaring the empire carpet jingle for 20 hours a day and that's that's why there's nothing to engage with with any of this ***** because as i said when we were talking about like what the actual politics of this trumpist movement is one of the keys is it is how are we going to unleash prosperity just let everybody dig for any oil there is on earth the on american earth anyway any any any anything that anywhere there's a natural gas pocket or a thimble full of oil you should be able to go and get regardless of how wasteful or pointless it is because if you recognize the trap that we're in we you recognize that we are in fact as a as a world but like that specifically the the downwardly mobile middle classes of america are trapped in a situation where there is no hope for them or their children having long-term stability career-wise economically uh home ownership a thing of the past health care access to health care on more than like a patchwork basis probably a thing of the past if you recognize that but you have also rejected any kind of socialist uh alternative if you have committed beyond anything to capitalism like capitalism is the bedrock that everything else flows from which is true of these people then the only way to get around that is well everybody can be their own little jr ewing with their own little ***** pump going in their front yard and what the hell does that do for anybody because i know that's neoliberal to talk about climate change because it is like an abstract question and most of the answers to dealing with it just so happen to also benefit uh you know transnational uh capital accumulations and people like elon musk but it is a real thing that really has to be calculated in your political projection

and a political project that is premised on rejecting the very concept in order to to support this um this re-emergent fantasy of the american smallholders striking it rich below the ground income sword wages boomed not income did go up a little bit 0:19:42 incomes went up a little bit but it was a little bit the american dream was restored and millions were lifted out of poverty in a future no that's none of that's true it was a miracle the stock market did get very high but that doesn't mean anything and i love the argument that a lot of these people make that well sure the stock market is mostly stock is mostly held by rich people but what about 401ks first of all half of those ***** things all your all your gains are going to be caught away by fees from the scumbags who are interposed themselves as middle managers of the thing and also not that many people have even those anymore we went from pensions to 401ks to nothing in like we rebuilt the american manufacturing base opened up thousands of new factories there is no way that's true i'm not even looking it up and brought back the beautiful phrase made in the usa and there's another problem with your any attempt to turn uh trump isn't into some sort of coherent populism that's an 0:20:44 alternative to what we have is that if you just uh if you incentivize manufacturing in america but from like a supply side perspective the way they do tax breaks or whatever what that ends up meaning will it either means you have to lower american uh wages to make them competitive with foreign countries or allow for or and in fact incentivize uh uh automation to offset them and that has been where a lot of the decline in american manufacturing comes from uh a significant percentage of it is not necessarily from outsourcing it is from autumn's automation that if if the gains of that automate automation are all privatized which none of these people have any interest in changing then you have done nothing oh there's a factory at the edge of town filled with robots that belches ***** toxic sludge into the river congratulations oh yeah they're paying another ten thousand dollars a year in taxes to to uh what uh 0:21:47 stage of ***** showing of hamilton in our nation was hit with the terrible pandemic we produce not one but two vaccines with record-breaking speed and more will so quickly follow they said it couldn't be done but we did it i don't know if anyone said it couldn't be done i think everyone assumed there was going to be something to be a ***** vaccine they called it and that's what they're calling it right now a medical miracle no one no one is saying that zero people another administration would have taken three four five maybe even ten years to develop a vaccine we did it in nine months one you didn't have anything to do with it this was all once again out it was public research outside of private ***** companies and secondly uh i really don't 0:22:49 think that that's true i mean 10 years come on uh he brags about uh the covet intervention uh economic intervention and honestly even though it was obviously very insufficient it was still so much more than people are used to that it did have a very significant effect just that two thousand dollar check the first one did drop poverty even as employment was collapsing that's how on the edge people are in this ***** country and that is why you saw such a bipartisan effort that and the election to make sure that it wasn't normalized because we don't give people the idea that you can just get rid of poverty that way and you can't obviously you know by itself but you could really get the ***** boot off a lot of people's necks that way you can't have that uh va choice accountability right to try criminal justice reform none of his justice is the supreme court i mean that's what but like these justices just betrayed him these three justices ruled against him they did not do it they didn't save him after the ***** democrats stole the election from him we give the borders we gave him the ball well we gave him the wall we did it he didn't even say anything about the wall oh god he says he achieved the more secure border in us history did not say we built the wall because they didn't build a ***** wall four years they got like what how many new miles of a fence were built it was it was like something like what i think a couple hundred miles something like that 450 miles it's a 2000 mile border i mean you know you don't need a fence for all of it and we stood up for america at the united nations withdrew from trade deals we rebuilt the american military already the usa bragging being an american president bragging about increasing the defense budget is so funny like oh uh wow that you had to really fight a lot of uh vested interests in congress in order to stood up against china recognize jerusalem as the capital of israel a thing that suffering people should really care a lot about principled realism got p minus peace deals i have to say that that has been funny watching them try to ring good press out of making the back room alliance between the gcc and israel public and that's why they did it hey trump wants to ***** win we're gonna yeah okay we like israel now historic change like oh yeah the uae in israel they were really a daggers drawn before trump but nobody cared that's the flip side you don't get nobody cares about this ***** anymore either way he says he started no new wars give him credit on that one i mean he could have although killing suleimani was a wildly irresponsible action the fact that ***** uh the new secretary of state is saying that it was it was like a good idea poorly executed wow we're in for some great times by gonna be wonderful uh we have asserted the sacred idea that in america the government answers to the people no you didn't you didn't by your own argument by everything you have said and done you have not reasserted that because you lost the election in a scam where the elites stole it from you and then you let them take it how is that reasserted you have had that the sacred idea for millions of americans has been this is actually uh very much reminiscent of kenny powers autobiography i was a as amer as president my top priority my constant concern has always been the best interest of american workers in american families

i did not seek the easiest course by far it was actually the most difficult i did not seek the path that would get the least criticism i took on the tough battles the heart fights the most difficult choices because that's what you elected me to do your needs were my first and last unyielding focus they put american people back in charge of 0:28:6 our you put american people back in charge of the country even though the godless child eating pedophile is now going to take power tomorrow after having had the hammer and scorecard supercomputer uh drop dump rather millions of illegal votes into the system and guarantee that you'll never see another ***** free election in this country wild the key to the national greatness lies in sustaining and instilling our shared national identity that means focusing on what we have in common the heritage that we all share that's always been america's crisis we don't have one of those all we have is money all we have is buying ***** all we've had is free real estate and uh consumer purchasing power that has been the shared american experience and 0:29:7 that's what shared american culture is it's a culture of convenience and consumption that's it and now everyone's brains are exploding and we're we are reaching record for the modern era levels of of polarization in part because that uh bomb has been taken from us our future is bright i'm looking forward yeah what a loser man what a loser and i got to think that some of these people who've been ***** investing in 0:30:9 this guy feel like losers now too although who knows who knows the ability to self-deceive is pretty uh somebody was asking about the 1776 project thing i only scrolled some of the highlights man just the most middle school not even middle school book like middle school student ***** on earth and of course what's really frustrating is the whole thing it was just this childish response to the 1619 project which is also wrong but and and this is like the horror of being locked in in this chamber of idiots in this fake uh this fake cultural conflict that has very high emotional stakes for everybody but which actually doesn't penetrate any of the deeper crises and and uh 0:31:10 issues we have in this country so you get the 1619 project which is this and this this is advancing this new understanding of american history that uh essentializes race as like the founding engine of america's institutions from all uh both political and economic and wouldn't you know also means that capitalism is uh is only is it can be a tool to root out the the most egregious base issue which of course in this frame is a is a concept racial animosity that is uh totally evanescence and subjective wonderful but it's written by real scholars and it's got footnotes and it's done is put up in the nice house style of the new york times and it gets the imperture of academia it hits all the right buttons of left liberal historical understanding and of course it flatters all of the very uh well-meaning well-off white people who read things like the 0:32:11 new york times magazine because it gets them to remind it gets them to think man sure would be nice if we could get some social justice in this country oh well all the other white people are too racist to let that happen and then what do we get as a response what is the reply to that it is this government-funded book report where a bunch of ***** crayon eaters go the constitution was written because to protect the liberty and with about freedom and protecting freedom and there's america it's about doing good freedom and that there's a bad not freedom and we fight against those so that america is fighting the bad freedoms with the bad not freedom with the good freedom and that is your argument and of course unmovable with sorrow more than with sorrow from the 1619 project and with of course you know exaltation from 0:33:13 the 1776 project but both of them committed to the same basic attitude towards our fundamental political economy and then that's the argument we get to have and then you get to watch that play out and pick your side essentially based on which one gives off the cultural signals that you are more amenable to not any underlining arguments because there aren't any i mean especially with the 70s 76 it's just pap it's all circular nonsense the constitution balance the need for government to do the things that we wanted to do with our needs for individual freedoms without defining terms without without talking at all about on whose behalf these freedoms exist for it's it's it's america is good because argument and then yeah it's grim i'm gonna find i gotta 0:34:15 find one of those 1776. i remember reading a few of the quotes from it and just being blown away by how banal uh it was like how could anyone above a middle schooler read the thing and find it compelling as an argument as opposed to just the thing to smile and read and feel good about which is of course why it exists i understand and people talk about how you know oh it's racist and stuff you know like it says that the civil rights movement is bad because it goes with for group rights which makes it as racist as john c calhoun yeah of course that's terrible of course that's bad but 0:35:18 it's all in the service of such vacuous non-argument i don't even the principles of the american founding can be learned by studying the abundant documents contained in the record read fully read fully and carefully they show that the american people have ever pursued freedom and justice which are the political conditions for living well to learn this history is to become a better person a better citizen and a better partner in the american experiment of south government like that's not a that's not an act that's not an academic argument it's not an intellectual argument it is a slogan it's just a bunch of slogans to get you uh head up and it's in response to a challenge from the the 1619 project boil down exist to comfort one segment of the 0:36:21 people who read this ***** which is basically college-educated people from the from the excerpts and from the city center that's what distinguishes which one of those you believe and neither of them have anything to do with the the truth or falseness of the statements that they're making considering especially that most of them have no i've had a mcRib that sucks i get the mcRib every time because they only do it

every 10 years so i'm like maybe it's better this time i had it for this last time it is not i saw the bill oakley uh review and that kind of made me want to try it because he said it's basically the same mcdonald's flavor but for pork instead of chicken or fish or chicken or beef and i like the mcdonald's flavor i'm a pig i know that it's programmed i'm programmed to like it and they they dot me i think got me like the things that taste like mcdonald's to me tastes good which is why i'm looking 0:37:22 forward to the plant-based versions because i guarantee you whatever they ***** whatever tire treads they find to replace the big mac burgers or the mcchicken it'll taste basically the same because it'll taste like mcdonald's so i had it and it really does not taste like that it's got this and it's not really even the taste it's for one thing it's the barbecue sauce which is not the mcdonald's flavor it's something else and secondly the texture it is not like pork it is like the only thing i keep coming back to when i taste it is like cartilage it's like a it really is like cafeteria food in a way that even regular mcdonald's isn't i do not think a henry wallace presidency would have necessarily changed the trajectory of america too much because to have him be 0:38:27 the president of an effective president you would have to have different conditions to that he could then utilize as president and by the end of this war the american left was was in retreat it had been co-opted into the into the the democratic party and you could argue that they didn't really have a choice considering that there was a ***** world war with nazis to deal with and yeah all those decisions were defensible in the moment but the accumulated the result of their accumulated uh momentum is that by the end of the war there really wasn't a constituency for pushing moving far forward and the real the real nut cutting came with the strike wave after world war ii but not because there had been a no strike pledge throughout the labor movement 0:39:28 during the war so that they wouldn't have to worry about um production problems undermining the war effort so a lot of grievances a lot of arguments a lot of complaints that were pushed off came to the fore again and there was a huge explosion of strikes both authorized wildcat and in that environment there was the uh the 1946 elections and then 48 where the by by the end of which even though truman held on the republicans had taken uh congress which is how they were able to pass the ***** taft-hartley bill which put a stake in the heart of the american labor movement even though it took a while to work its way through to the uh to the killing point and it's 0:40:29 hard to imagine wallace by himself changing that trajectory especially considering the fact that he was kind of a sap he was he was like an upton sinclair type he was a a naive um idealist type the classic to the forces of capital i mean maybe his soviet advisers could have helped him because of course the fun thing about wallace is that by the time he ran for president in 48 on the progressive ticket he was being handled by soviet uh uh soviet agents there were actual communists among his uh his highest levels of advisors but even with that even with them in the white house with him 0:41:31 leading him around by the nose what do you do to with a country where the uh where the energy has sort of gone away where the urgency of the early thirties and the in the in the bite of the depression has has been eased a bit and where the the the ritual of a patriotic war that included the entirety of the american uh social order coming together it's hard to see where absent any other change you get the uh the momentum and the organization and the will to challenge uh capital's reassertion of control see that's the thing why it wasn't easing the pain good it is good it's you're 0:42:33 work you're working always to try to make people's lives better but part of the part of the deep dilemma of being a like moving towards leftist politics and specifically working class and labor politics in a putative democracy is that by making things better yes you should demonstrate your worth and value but you also make people comfortable in america specifically that comfort was expressed by after the war the uh project of taking that restive working class the white part of it anyway that had been so threatening there in the early 30s and that fdr had been able to ride like a tiger for a while uh and making giving them middle-class livelihoods and lives even if you know they're still working for pay in a alienated life even if they still don't have control over the the conditions of their labor they get to live the way that the 0:43:34 middle class have traditionally lived and if they're living the way that the middle class traditionally live it's only a matter of times until they start thinking the way that and the fact that you move them away from each other they scatter them into these suburbs and then replace social life with a synthetic spectaclized that process it's it's designed in many ways to diffuse radical energy and diffuse working-class mobilization and militancy and that was the context where uh the the purging of the communists and and the leftists from the cio happened where the second red scare asserted itself there just wasn't the will to resist it amongst the working class 0:44:35 broadly thought because it was splintered along racial and ethnic lines and was part of it was in the process of being of having a lot of their material uh someone's asking 0:45:42 about if the original robber barons were the beautiful boaters basically they were and the process of turning like we've talked about in the book and we'll talk about more tomorrow when we finish up uh the republic for which it stands the process of creating like the modern liberal managerial state that the progressive movement enacted was a largely a process of domesticating our nouveau riche because guys like carnegie in rockefeller they really were they were a new type of rich person and the they were and they were creating fortunes that were unheard of in their size and they commanded the lives of way more people than like a ***** feud lord could have dreamed of and that and they acted in pure self-interest uh they competed like crazy against one another to destroy their rivals and in the process caused destabilization 0:46:44 caused prices to drop caused a run towards lower wages in these industries that led to labor unrest and violence and the political class and and the in the intellectual class saw this and realized last night fair was insufficient and the progressive movement and the creation of like a professional managerial class interceding between ownership and labor had to be built in order to channel their the the the sort of lump in base interests of these individuated billionaires and millionaires into a coherent uh class interest and creating the trusts was a big part of that because competition was one of the things that really stirred up uh labor unrest more than anything because competition is one of the things that drove wages down you could have if you had like a larger market share you could afford to negotiate more with labor at least not 0:47:45 do things like andrew carnegie did with homestead and refuse any deals and break the union and end up having a shooting war on the allegheny river between pinkertons and strikers which was very bad pr and gave energy and and win to the sales of a work labor movement that was truly radical and terrifying to so by the end of that process by the end of that that managerial process you create the fortis state by the end of world war ii where the ruling class has truly been professionalized turned into stockholders turned into chairman of boards and stuff and that and and expected to have come through education into these understandings of what it means to be a capitalist but that was only at the highest levels of wealth at the local level you 0:48:46 have these mini carnegie's many many uh many rockefellers and they never got out they never got the speech they never got the disciplinary and instructive uh social process they're still wild ornery wildcatters out there and uh like uh one of the first format formations of that was the texas oil millionaires to emerge uh around the middle part of the 20th century the guys who a lot of people think got the hunts and the richardsons and such they got people who were uh who were the subject of dallas and that's just like one version of that but like the waltons others like that people are giving me the business more about moving to oregon you guys are giving 0:49:54 me given me give me my comments giving me business i would like to say also just while i'm here that everything i said about the democrats trying to take this the capital uh insurgency as uh as a new 911 and an attempt to recreate the war on terror domestically it's all happening according exactly as that was said to happen there everyone is they got the media rounds going national former national security council members former military leaders uh democrats saying we need to reorient our intelligence agencies towards and we ins and there's even now a trial balloon 0:50:56 being launched about creating a domestic uh spy agency because technically the cia isn't allowed to spy domestically and the fbi is not an intelligence service the nsa of course and the pitch will be this is justice this is justice not making anything better for anybody making everything equally bad for everyone which of course is ironic

and hilarious because that is the reaction conservative critique of socialism right oh it doesn't make everybody uh conservative capitalism is about spreading wealth and socialism is about spreading the poverty around you know making everybody equally poor and of course that's dumb but it does apply to the logic of liberalism logic of liberalism because it has a ceiling on how much you can offer normal people 0:51:57 anything other than subsistence and uh and alienation and more than anything the knowledge that they are disposable is is to alleviate their sense of felt differentiation and treatment from others that's it i am also very much enjoying people saying that because biden and such are talking about a big stimulus that it means neoliberalism is dead or or that like the left has won the policy another thing that you could see coming a mile away an attempt to uh push off as far as possible any day of reckoning between biden's actual policies uh and the expectations that people might have had but i will say that on this is that last day of president that uh donald trump was 0:53:7 uh was bad he was a bad president he was very funny which obama was not obama was a very bad president too but was very unfunny so in that respect alone trump is actually very good you can clip that trump is actually very good because he's definitely funnier than obama and i do not i will not accept any argument that he was a worse president than obama i'm sorry if you mean worse in terms of worse better in terms of worsening the conditions for people on this planet i mean if you want to talk about you know oh uh in bigoting america's values or whatever ***** people like to ***** spew to ignore talking about the actual real consequences sure you can have an argument that that obama was better or something that he you 0:54:9 know he didn't otherize people and he made people feel safe to live an american i mean yes i can understand why that would but when you look at the actual numbers the numbers on the graphs going up and down the human misery indexes i'm sorry all terrible all committed to a system that will grind us but the important thing to note about both of them trump and trump and obama uh obungler autonomy within the system is pretty limited like we can say that obama and trump are both awful presidents but it really wasn't either of them who made that made the awfulness and when you consider how different they are as people and how their differences are so stark that they have created like these competing social categories that people invest with meaning but one of the reasons they do that is because their actual ability to effect change is very much non-existent they both came through a partisan political 0:55:11 process that selects for if not uh beliefs than willingnesses to go along with things as they are ensures that no one in a position of being anywhere near them in any room they might sit in is going every time a bungler sat down to talk about what are we going to do about this ***** housing crisis or any other question everybody in that room was on the same demonic team so no matter how smart obama was or how much he had pondered the the fundamental uh questions of american democracy and the contradictions at the heart of the american dream we sat down everybody is already on page on the same page and every question is comes down to a range of options that and then by the difference and the same is true of trump trump gets in that room it's people with the same stuff maybe they're maybe they're uh their domestic political imperatives are different and the structure is different there but the underlying fundamentals are the same and the difference boils down to one of them can you know make a public show of of wrestling with the powers of the office and write us two 700 page self excavating memoirs about how they did the only thing they could possibly do and then if there was anything wrong with what he did it was a tragedy beyond his ability to remedy and then trump who is just going to uh presumably build a 700-foot statue of himself with uh a running video of himself in the grimace and the in the that's the difference what is why people talk about vouch again i don't like why do people want to hear why do people want to deal with he's got more hair than me i'll give him that he's got like a top knot so he's got more hair than me so i'll give him that tip of the cap i sound like him i haven't heard his voice i mean we're both government issue ***** bearded white beardos so i wouldn't be surprised if that's true i understand that i am not a i'm not a unique specimen in any respect bread tube my god what an embarrassing term anarchism well i'm going to sign off in a second i hope to stream tomorrow we'll talk about the book like the end of the book and uh also we'll talk about the executions that will be carried out on the capital steps uh presumably i'm i'm from going what i've read on the internet that's going to happen around noon eastern so we'll have something to talk about but we're still going to talk about the books that would be very funny and i and you know what i will do it if the if the plan really does happen and trump comes on tv and says i'm president forever it's me and then he just cuts uh uh biden's head off with a scimitar i'll still talk about that ***** book because it's the la it's we said we were uh has anyone seen any of these like attempts at creating at doing local protests in state capitals when everyone goes home when everyone goes home to post and to watch football after tomorrow what are you gonna do if you were a q person but also if you were one of the mirror q people who thought that the revolution was at hand and that you were gonna get executed for uh 25 000 troops in the nation's capital kevin baker wrote an article i think for harper's like ***** 20 years ago now i remember reading it it was right after 9 11 and it was about how the military is the only institution with any kind of bipartisan trust in this country how it's the only organization with any kind of infrastructure or capacity to respond in crisis and i remember the last words of it were at the end we'll beg for the coup and we've already got half of the voting population in this country

literally begging for a coup and that's what they were doing like they weren't doing a coup when they went into the capital they went in hoping that someone else would do a coup because that's all anybody including trump can do because nobody has any kind of nobody's part of anything so everybody was just hoping a coup would happen and now you've got the national guard coming in and securing the exchange of power and securing the biden administration and finally ensuring that the dastard trump is removed from office you get closer to that other half of the which means 1:1:32 that the next crisis that comes the most realistic outcome will be someone coming forward speaking the neutral technocratic language of the military at a regis at a register that is heard neutrally by both sides which is now impossible between the political sides anything a republican says is filtered because they're saying because they're saying it because they've been trained to say it they know what works with the people they want it to work all their vocabulary their presentation everything is designed to make one group of people very uh happy one group of people very angry that's true of both sides neither one of them will be able to come forward and say we have a new uh we have a new government that would be read with anything less than instant resistance from the people who hear those dog whistles because it's dog whistles each way they'll hear those dog whistles negatively only the military can 1:2:35 speak with words and in and with symbols that both sides read as neutral both sides read as not part of the enemy both sides uh read maybe read as as sincere read as a friend in the friend so thailand does anybody remember the thai coup from a few years ago when there was when the president got or the prime minister got removed from office and his supporters flooded the capital and they got into a big uh public battles with the uh opponents because the the prime minister was incredibly popular among the rural population uh but hated in the cities uh and could and that bridge that could not be bridged and then when the urban uh parties were able to kick him out of office it sparked this massive resistance which was only resolved when the 1:3:38 army came out of the barracks when the tanks came down the streets and everybody went home alright folks so we'll see if i haven't been neutralized by a q wet team i will hope to stream sometime tomorrow after the inaugural uh i would say that uh i'm looking forward to trump's our biden speech but we know that they got some special adrenochrome for him when he has the big moments and it'll be boring and it will be mostly competent but hey who knows teeth could still fall out of his head anything could happen all right

oh stop sign speed limit hey mama look at me i'm on a hell way to hell on a highway to hell bow on a highway to hell on a highway to hell all where is my money i dm'd 0:1:8 one of the people who's still active who i bet two years ago q anon would not result in the arrest and prosecution of any top level pedophiles he's still online he's retweeting he hasn't tweeted for ***** days or weeks he's just retweeting other people give me my money he bet me a grand it's over trump left not with a bang but a whimper and it does look just from a cursory glance that uh the q people aren't are actually absorbing that it's over and that the whole thing was a lie which wow i don't know how the hell you pick up the pieces after that i honestly think there's a good chance that a lot of these people because if the one hope that you've ever seen to change things turned out to be a ***** con artist and the one thing that ever made sense to you turned out to be a big lie how are you supposed to move forward with any 0:2:9 confidence some people are gonna recommit of course but uh i think a good chunk are gonna are gonna become quiet to some sort or another which is good take it take a minute take a breath i mean when you swing in a miss that bad you can't just get back in the box you got to limber up a little bit you're clearly something is off in your swing mechanics if you are going after this ***** there is the i mean it's a it's funny how little we've mentioned we've seeing donald trump seeing the person of donald trump and thinking that guy cares about me and wants me to be better he cares about america and wants america to be better that is the greatest piece of like self-deception i can imagine that you willingly stabbing yourself in the brain with a ***** knitting needle and cutting out the frontal cortex because it at least 0:3:10 provides you with some relief from the itch and the torment well ***** those people irrelevant where's the violence where is the insurrection where what happened what was where why the stuff i'm supposed to care about i was supposed to spend the last two weeks since the sixth gnashing my teeth and all those other people who did that were in the same spot now and who had a better time who had a better time in the intervening two weeks honestly they probably had a pretty good time too because the key thing to understand about these people is that they like it so it really just

CUSHVLOG 141. HAIL TO THE CHIMP II - STILL CHIMPIN' boils down not even to whether or not you're enjoying yourself it's what gets you off and worrying about that kind of thing does not get me off worrying and fretting and making sure that i'm presenting enough concern is not anything that gets me off but 0:4:11 for these freaks they love it poor at poor uh dan besner and uh amber co-host amber uh did a totally reasonable cogent well-written piece about humanon for jacqueline and these ***** people lost their ***** because it did not do enough to condemn them as if what's written in the pages of jacobin is going to determine the contours of the q on movement in the next years absurd but i will say the funniest thing about it is people insist that you can't talk about q in in the context of causes you can't talk of the immiseration or more specifically the uh destabilization of formerly secure economic positions that makes people more vulnerable to this stuff you can't talk about that because that lets them off the hook for their racism and their hatred and their evil which is exactly what conservatives said about terrorism when you would 0:5:14 say uh hey how about we make it so that fewer people in the middle east want to kill us by i don't know scaling back our imperial designs on the region no that is uh giving virtue to these people this is not focusing on their wrong and sinfulness it's the exact same approach which makes sense because they're trying to create a ***** um a internal white terror 911 context for them to uh to stave off critique of biden and justify expanded um uh expanded internal surveillance and uh repression i don't think it's gonna work and i said this on the show but the big reason that we're on terror went the way it did is because the republicans had a willing partner in the democrats like they were both on the same they were uh in wrestling parlance after 9 11 the democrats were happy to play along to be the to admit their weakness 0:6:17 basically to admit what was that they were wrong to admit that the republican view of the war on terror the republican view of uh foreign policy the republican view on what it meant was the correct one and that the only difference between the parties is that the democrats do a better job of it the democrats are going to try it but here you've got an opponent who will no sell you the republicans as we saw in the impeachment hearing none of them what they got 10 votes they were not falling all over each other to say look we understand this was a huge deal we're so sorry we have to look into ourselves nope they said uh actually you guys said that uh riots were good last summer so uh you're hypocrites ***** you and without a huge it's like uh like when uh what's like roddy piper would do a a a chop like slap the chops of hulk 0:7:20 hogan and he would just start going and he would no sell it that's the republicans here so that means that the dynamic is not going to uh persist and they're not going to be able to wave the bloody shirt the way they want to but man the media and their handmaidens are going to try as hard as they can to do it holy ***** it's going to be non-stop banging this drop but i think i think that that was the high water

mark maybe wrong and if i'm wrong i'll apologize but even with only a few weeks retrospect it looks like that capitol hill thing was a was the high water it was the picket's charge it was the it was the culmination of a movement and then when trump disavowed it immediately got kicked off social media and then slunk away with his tail between his legs and then biden got in there with no problem uh i think that it's that the momentum will be dissipated that doesn't mean that violence will go away like i've said stochastic violence stochastic political violence is here to stay i think but the idea that there's a uh genuine trump threat to our horrifyingly banali evil mechanisms of democratic government uh is is gonna become more absurd as although man i 100 percent get how if you are just like a regular person who doesn't have like a political critique of the system as such but is aware somehow that the system is bad watching the media i understand how it could turn you into a trumper i could understand how it could make you ins start thinking well these guys are all in charge you got the guys in charge and then you've got the media all saying the exact same thing i mean the people the the press the media during this uh inaugural was north korean in its supplicancy the george they might as well have ***** had people come out you know in a giant um a coordinated dance move and like spell out corn pop on the national mall they they talked about how biden is a good and just and and kind-hearted man who's going to bring uh who's going to bring back uh uh unity and uh respect and all of every good thing he is a harbinger for its return and when things are just as bad as they were before he became president and the media is still talking like that on behalf of one party how do you not think that the whole thing is ***** rigged and that therefore the only person who is on who is not on the side of this evil status quo is trump because he's the only one trump is anathema none of the the republican party is gonna be brought back into the fold mitch mcconnell and roy blunt were out there and the irony and the fire funny thing about this it's really ingenious how this works so i really do think that everybody in the media everybody who's on there for all those networks talking about how biden is light itself and he's going to bring back civilization and he's going to banish the demons and how our long national nightmare is over uh they think they're helping they think that the trump movement and and the capital storming is sign of a uh fundamental undermining of necessary crucial american institutions of government and media and that by going all in for biden they're helping they're like uh they're it's sealab 2021. i'm happy i'm having you but they're just pouring ***** sand on it there's pouring salt on everybody because having everybody talk like that having this universal ***** uh uh hosannas for this guy when you have to know it's not it's things are still gonna suck and it's all just that you're feeling better because that um because the images are more pleasing to you than the images of the trump years but the fundamentals will be the same by doing that you are ensuring that anybody who is just watching this and is not invested in the symbology that you are is going to take away from it that you're all in this on you're all in on this together and the trump 0:12:25 is the only one who stands against you although maybe not trump honestly trump might have ***** this thing who knows we'll see but man he really did just ***** all over everybody didn't he he just went out there and said have a nice life goodbye oh and i'm gonna just i am going to uh pardon all of the most corrupt political scumbags on earth literally swamp denizens and no no assange no snowden no manning no uh ***** reality winner uh nobody who is threatened nobody who threatened the the state apparatus celebrities and fellow celebrities and fellow politicians people who he could identify with personally because that's all he ever could do because he's a ***** psycho and yes you're a chump forever believing in him but i think a lot of people we'll see are coming to the conclusion that oh the challenge of there being any 0:13:26 coherent post-trumpism is how do you fill the void of trump and i don't think you do i think it's going to be a splintering i think you're going to see a a wilderness period here but what's going to keep the republicans uh in play and likely get them back the house even with their being a pretty much open civil war now within the party i mean liz cheney has already had some local yahoo announced that there's challenging her for the house next year anybody who spoke against trump in the last two weeks will get a ***** high profile primary challenger how that boils down though but man it was really nauseating watching the news just people can people manufacturing a reality right in front of you but you're watching something that by any objective 0:14:27 standard is a hair-raising nightmare just think about this stripped of the ornament on the national mall surrounded by 25 000 national guardsmen and 12-foot tall steel barriers they led this ***** nearly 80 year old senile man out to bump into things uh swear allegiance to the flag get his ***** uh drool wiped away and then read a ***** speech off of a teleprompter and in well everyone's wearing masks and there's no uh actual crowd because of a rampaging pandemic that's killing thousands of people a day that's the reality of that ***** inauguration but what we were told we were seeing is some triumph of american democracy and the return of of values insanity 0:15:29 and and uh and everyone doing that thought they were thinks that they're shoring things up but what they're really doing is undermining it even faster by ensuring anybody watching that yes this is exactly as rigged as it looks like this is exactly as uh the last section of the republic for which it stands huh let's finish this buckler up so r.i.p to the gilded age you were a real one uh so let's go through this chapter by chapter the first chapter is about urban poverty uh and immigration we get all the 0:16:30 good jacob reese stuff about the tenements and the the horrible conditions within and the reform movements that attempted to ameliorate those conditions uh all of the all of them headed by people who thought that the immigrants who lived in those conditions were barely human anyway which obviously complicated the process uh and he talks about the assimilation of those immigrants into the american experience and this is where he really emphasizes that uh like the people who made american culture what it is like actually gave it culture were the immigrants the middle class protestants who were who were trying to turn their lives into everyone's life uh that 0:17:32 was where culture went to die and the degree to which that model prevailed in the 20th century is the degree to which american culture because that protestant home that they were fixating on this middle class home is is the place where the middle class expectations for values morality constrain behavior and thought to such a degree that impossible like yeah where what what american culture is is black it's jewish it's uh catholic uh and and poor poor protestant poor white protestant middle and upper class white protestantism created basically no culture and uh he finally talked 0:18:35 about baseball and how it became a a and how it was in fact a immigrant sport it was played mostly by german and irish immigrants uh the next chapter we got lizzie borden uh and which is although he said he claims white claims that she is guilty uh baseball statistics dork uh i keep i want to say rick james what the ***** his name last name is i know this guy is bill james bill james in his book about american crime claims that she was innocent but anyway uh he uses her as a good example of how white womanhood which was this thing that these systems were designed to protect uh was being uh undermined from within and the anxieties that that created in the people who saw everything going wrong people saw that all the things that uh 0:19:37 that the contract labor the contract uh freedom individuated citizenry individuated liberty notions that they had built uh was creating the opposite of what they wanted and but the main thing i wanted to talk about here uh is the populists because in this section we talk about the rise of the populace in the west i think of the populist movement as the last gasp of the conception of american liberty politically expressed before it was subsumed in the 20th century by broader ideas of like the working 0:20:38 class uh because at this point working class political organization is still incredibly in kohei you had things like the knights of labor and you had things like the uh the afl but there was very little political expression there was no amer there was no labor party nationwide labor party of size there were a few uh there were things like the greenback party of the 1870s that that were attracted working working-class votes we saw how uh henry george attracted working-class votes when he ran for mayor of new york but there was no single uh labor party workers if they were catholic uh mostly voted for the democrats if they were part of the urban machine uh if they were protestant in the north anyway they probably voted for republicans because those sectional uh distinctions mattered more than ideology and it is and white

points out that one of the things that has ***** american working class political 0:21:39 effect efficacy is that partisan formations emerged before the working class became articulated as a self-conscious notion uh in most in the european countries that got pushed the ball of socialism further mass uh universal manhood suffrage came at the exact same moment that the working class was coming into being uh here the the the party system that they were dealing with emerged in the 1820s uh when the model of employment was uh if there was employment was uh uh artisan based mostly where wage labor was relatively rare and usually a condition a and so when these western and midwestern farmers who had followed the railroads out west as the they've been told to by the republican uh forbearers vote yourself a farm party 0:22:42 and told you can find freedom with land property will be your liberty you don't have to worry about politics just vote for the republicans we'll keep a nice uh lid on inflation with the gold standard and will allow you to bring your crops to market but with the infrastructure that we've invested those tariff monies into and allow you to uh live freely well by the 1880s many of them were finding out oh financing and the manipulation of freight rates by railroads uh and the deflationary nature of gold standard is actually making that making it hard for me to be free even though i have land and the populist party was an attempt to articulate that politically to articulate a a producerist idea of american freedom and after the defeat of william 0:23:43 tyx bryan in 1896 and the subs and the transfer of uh like the reformist drive into the two political parties from outside of them where the progressive movement did most of the uh the work that they demanded but not through the expression of a like a coherent political party like the populists uh that dissipated and was replaced by what we got by the end of the but certainly by the end of uh world war one a political concept that was consumerist in its conception where people's freedom was not a freedom to make uh it was a freedom to buy and fundamentally the nature of 0:24:45 political contests in this country and ensured the working class when they did become a more coherent and effective political uh force would be amenable to exchanging the demand for control over the conditions of labor for more purchasing power and that is what we ended up getting in the 20th century we got a working class that over and over again in its political expression traded uh autonomy and power for consumption and that turning point for that i think really was when the populace were broken and one of the reasons they were broken is that they were unable to link up effectively with the working class as white shows uh the uh brian brian's democrats actually 0:25:49 saw their share of the urban working class vote go down even though the urban working class the catholic ones anyway were by and large democrats because this was a rural protestant dry movement evangelical in nature and that and was not like culturally amenable and keep honking i'm consuming are people saying there's a problem with the oh boy it's choppy oh no oh man that poem was dog ***** i'm sorry man but that ***** poem was terrible just awful all right well let's just 0:26:53 move through this then quickly i'll okay we've got the uh the depression of uh the panic of 1893 another uh another this time caught started in argentina but uh once again causing a significant collapse in credit and liquidity and there was nothing the government could do about it because it was committed at the top of both parties to the gold standard the gold standard was invaluable even though the base of both 0:27:56 parties was probably broadly in favor of at least bimetallism if not full fiat currency the upper echelons were completely controlled by gold bugs and that speaks to the the way that uh the democratic impulse in the in the american political system is will always be dissipated and uh diverted away from the like load-bearing structures of whatever those in power at the moment think constitutes the the governing status quo uh like it turns out that you can actually do a lot with fiat currency and you and you can still have capitalism and you can still have uh banks and you can still have credit and you can still hold your citizens enthralled to the moneyed interests even with fiat currency but nobody knew that back then uh and more importantly the people demanding uh currency devaluation uh and and more currency in the markets 0:28:57 were almost universally people hostile to existing power structures so just by that virtue alone uh it was not going to happen and while you might have the votes at the grassroots to push for uh expanding the currency at every level higher as you get towards the senate and the presidency you're getting to points where uh electoralism is diffused more and more away from a um i hate to use the word but accountability and that accountability is replaced by uh systemic incentives and that's why you had in the middle of this depression you couldn't get one of the two political parties to come forward and say hey uh what do we do something about this until william 0:29:59 jennings bryan shows up at the convention in 1996 and gives the cross of gold speech which cuts through all of the malarkey cuts through the bossaries cuts through the existing structures and allows the uh this demand to come forth but it is rather than the beginning of something it really is the last gasp of this producerist sort of jeffersonian jacksonian model uh when it comes back again after uh world war ii in the form of you know the small government conservatism that and libertarianism that is now uh you know the dominant ideology on the right uh it is in the it's not it is been fully consumption and i do think it's interesting that one of the last things 0:31:0 that he talks about is the role of the courts in establishing corporate personhood and a substantive due process system that made it very difficult for uh workers to strike but made it very easy for corporations to do almost anything they wanted and that is another example of the constitutional system doing what it was designed to do which is to dissipate points of responsibility away from democratic accountability because the judicial branch is of obviously the least uh democratically the the branch of government least sensitive to democratic pressure uh and the people appointed to judge ships are most likely to be amenable to people at the very top of the party structures that might be in power which means they will reflect those interests and 0:32:1 the period of the late 1890s or the late 19th century that that brought about the progressive movement it was a creation of it was a self-realization on the point of this middle strata of political class judicial and legal media and corporate managerial that the competition that had been the the bulwark of uh the early capitalist system in america was counterproductive and disruptive and needed to be reduced and that's when you saw the rise of the the trusts and that's also when you saw the assertion by the judicial branch of the prerogative to define the constitution to essentially make 0:33:2 effective working class political organization almost impossible and it's only when you have those things in place that the progressive movement which but that's for the next book in this six in this uh series uh i know is that one in there let me they have i don't think they have one for the whole thing yet in the it looks like there's no oxford history for the years from 96 to 29. so there's like a 30-year gap so someone's got to write that that'll be interesting oh it's called reawakened nation i'll so the next 0:34:5 book uh uh we're not gonna start right away i'm gonna think about it i'm thinking it might be fauner's reconstruction or maybe dubois black reconstruction not sure yet i'll take uh recommendations if anyone has them if anyone likes wants to dm me or something i have read late victorian holocausts that's a great book mike davis is absolute king there's no am i still like skipping or is it good i don't have just so you guys know i have no way of changing any of this i like people say switch to a different numbers and p's or whatever i don't know what any of that means i'm good now okay good it's skipping oh ***** i stopped skipping 20 minutes ago that's good but like that poem just back to the poem thing that poem is a perfect example of this you watch the poem it's dog ***** and then you see 500 people getting a line to tell 0:35:6 you how it's the most inspiring thing they've ever seen what are you supposed to think about that how are you supposed to think like am i wrong they assume that you will just go with what they want you to say but like the whole point of media fragmentation is that people can go to what is amenable to them people can find the voice that is agreeable to what they think already and what we're getting from the ***** state media about this inauguration is i can't imagine agreeable to anybody but fellow bubble members other democrat not even democratic voters but democratic self-identified voters people who identify emotionally with the democratic party the way that republicans identify emotionally with not republican party and that means you see that and all of your efforts to try to you know reinstall these values about 0:36:9 the sacredness of these american institutions is just going to further drive people more than anything it's just humorous because you know they're so excited they're so excited to be able to do this to be able to go on tv and assert that that we are in the best of all possible worlds now but what that means is they're going to keep being surprised as things they don't want to happen happen as and as people keep acting away what was the poem about i have no idea i mean i know it's mean to make fun of like she's a kid she's like 22 years old there is still something off-putting about being expected by a unbroken chain of people i will be checking out the new adam and one last thing i want to say about that biden speech which was just an absolute snoozefest he annoyingly he didn't have too many fuck-ups they really know how to keep him gassed up during the big speeches but the thing itself was incredibly boring and it's and uh soporific which of course is the idea you're supposed to soothe everybody back to sleep uh but there is the part where he quoted augustine and said something about you know a community is defined by and the sec and what he said was some ***** about like the common la our common love is i don't even know i don't remember it all sifted through my brains but whatever pablum it was whatever abstract principle it was it was incorrect the actual common object of our love is free refills that more than anything is what has spurred a lot of the political violence of the last year is being kept away and the ***** soda machine is running out the syrup is almost gone the bubbles are dissipating and all they have in in all they have to replace them are words and the words are supposed to do the job and they think that should work because it works on so many people but more and more it's working on people who are the least affected who have the most all right i think i'm gonna probably stop soon and the comparison between the way we the the rhetoric of the war on terror one of the things that seems to make people really mad when you try to really talk about the rep the trump phenomenon as a social phenomenon is that if you do not emphasize at every moment racism uh and and authoritarianism and fascism that you are letting them off the hook that if you talk about a material uh conditions creating the ground on on which these things emerge that you are undermining uh you know the the the rhetorical case against these people which needs to be made yes that is mirror to the way that the wright talks about terrorism but what i think is really interesting also is that when people say that when they say oh economics economics these people are just racist well sure and they're delusional and you're not going to get them and their argument you shouldn't court them you shouldn't think about what they want because they're raving maniacs and they don't even know what they want that's true but when you talk about addressing any kind of pathological social condition terrorism cue whatever by addressing the material conditions that spawn it it's not really about doing anything about the people you have who are currently part of that movement it's about stopping the flow of people to it it's stopping people who otherwise would not do that do it and there seems to be this idea that the q thing is like a dormant dna strand like just pings after a certain moment and then people will just flood its ranks and if that's true if there's something just in the dna of like lump and white uh culture that drives them towards conspiracy and white nationalism the activator is precarity and so the way to deal with an immersion phenomenon like that is to reduce the amount of precarity that is felt by these people who might be triggered that way but people resist that because if you could ever become that in their mind that means that you are irredeemable and you don't deserve better material conditions the very thought that you could be tempted into cuteness means that you don't deserve them and that is the liberal logic that underlines uh the whole project the the whole liberal left uh social project because we can't make things better for anybody we're going to punish the deserving and the emergence of this mega movement and q is a chance to beat the snakes out of the grass and punish them which is exactly what the bush terrorism huey long every man a king when no one i think i've talked a bit about humiliating in the past hugh long is what you is is is the southern expression uh it's not a coincidence that the huey brown came from the deep south because the deep south was the least was the area where uh where like working-class politics was least able to find purchase and was replaced instead with real demagoguery uh the kind of stuff that uh you know the the brahmins are always afraid of but uh at every point though that demagoguery is abetted by the very ruling class who claim to be afraid of it uh in this section of the book they talk about how the the adherence to white supremacy and specifically the democratic party as bulwark of white supremacy meant that the populist party could not make inroads among the uh agrarian workers of the south of the small like sharecroppers and stuff who were or the white ones anyway the ones who could vote and were uh also exploited by the crop lean system and railroads and everything and that's why the populists had to nominate brian in 96 because the southern populists are i mean sorry they knew that they would lose in the south that they would not be able to compete that they would end up giving the presidency to uh the republican which of course is always the problem that third parties have to deal with and one way you deal with it is by not caring and there were populists who didn't care in fact it was mostly the southern populists who didn't care because the real southern populists had been fighting for years against the right-wing bourbon democrat aristocracy ***** hated them because they were happy to use intimidation and violence and fraud to keep them out of power just as they had the republicans before them but it was that partisan adherence of southern democrats of southern small farmers that ensured that the populace could not uh how is the australian ballot causing voter suppression the australian ballot is the secret ballot it is the written secret ballot in the north a lot of recent immigrants didn't write or speak english they were able to vote because tammany for example in new york would give them a ballot that was filled out already and say go and vote uh 0:46:35 having had to have people go into the room and write the ballot themselves meant that people who couldn't read english were unable to who is the second funniest president uh somebody asked first of all somebody asked was anti-immigration the left position i honestly think in the 19th century if you're talking about popular politics left and right are kind of inapplicable they're a little they're a and then you 0:47:37 had like the establishment and populism was anti-immigrant because immigration was a uh complete cop because immigrants competed with native labor and that has always been an issue uh that sort of and but it is also self-defeating because immigrants are still going to come and if they are denigrated and uh and ostracized by uh the populist forces the same way that black free labor was in the south you create divisions within the labor pool that can be exploited by the ruling class at every point so it is self-defeating in the long run but it is also uh if not moral i guess inevitable would be the word when you have a situation like in the late 19th 0:48:39 century of a stagnant of declining wages declining standard of living and increased immigration uh but the kind of uh but and it was not universal like the knights of labor were anti-chinese but they made significant real attempts to try to woo uh southern black workers because they could they could identify uh southern blacks as american and and amenable to like the american producers ethos that they were trying to protect in a way that they could not imagine the chinese were and those kind of stuff those kind of distinctions can only be broken down by by the sort of cosmopolitanization that comes with uh capitalism but anyway the second funniest president i guess george w bush was kind of funny although looking back on it the 0:49:40 stuff that was funny about bush just seems so banal now it's kind of amazing i think biden honestly might end up being in the running depending on how senile he is or at least how senile they allow him to be seen as but we don't know yet in terms of ones who haven't yet george h.w bush was kind of funny just because what a dork he was i mean he puked on the japanese prime minister talked about how he didn't like uh broccoli he had dan quayle as his vice president another guy where you look back it's like oh that's adorable that people were amused by that uh but no like if he if he was if you could have seen him every day and if you could have heard him every day andrew johnson would have been the answer because andrew johnson is the president who's most like trump in person and not coincidentally andrew johnson is the last president to not um appear at the inauguration of his successor because he 0:50:41 was like trump an incredibly bitter little ***** who was all consumingly narcissistic and viewed the entire uh pageantry of like the american political um the entire the entirety of american politics uh through a personal lens through his own validation of himself like uh johnson claimed that he was doing what he did imposing an incredibly lenient reconstruction on the south uh to protect the small poor whites of the south who he thought because he'd been a unionist uh before the war and opposed to uh the slave power because he thought that slavery hurt poor white people the most and of course slavery did hurt poor white people the lack of the concentration of wealth in the hands of the planter elite meant that the south was wildly underdeveloped 0:51:43 compared to the north it had almost no public schools of any kind uh and very little infrastructure that poor people could have access to because why what what's that do for me as as a as a grand d of the ***** mississippi delta to have these ***** ***** going to school i don't ***** care it doesn't well there's no skin off my ass it's not like the northern capitalists who you know needed this ***** to facilitate the flow the capital flows that they were interested in in uh facilitating so it did hurt them but to johnson that was the only hurt that mattered because it was his hurt because he had a trumpian nixonian resentment of people who were higher up in social so even though he was pursuing what he thought was justice for the small poor white of the south the system that ended up coming out coming about at least in part as a result 0:52:44 of his actions and re-enthroning the planter class after the war was one where poor whites were by the end of the century in the thrall of a democratic party that was ruled by bourbon aristocrats who had no interest in seeing those poor whites advance and who maintained the disinvestment in public uh infrastructure the reconstruction governments that came in after johnson left office the ones that were often headed by carpetbaggers or in some cases freed slaves were the only governments during that whole period that actually invested in public infrastructure in public schools for whites and blacks and you had a figure like tom watson who emerges to be a populist to and at first tries to create a coalition between poor whites and blacks in the face of the persistent uh racial hierarchy ends up saying well if you can't beat them join them and becoming a fervent racist and democrat which might have helped 0:53:45 him sell magazines but didn't help the poor white do i think trump or his family will suffer any legal action i don't want to predict much anymore muggs game i would be very surprised i'll say that if any of these people go to jail or are even charged with anything i'll be very surprised because presidential impunity is baked into the cake we're looking forward not backward remember lbj was pretty funny that's a good choice called his dick jumbo that audio of him talking about his uh his bung 0:54:46 hole to the guy from hagar slacks that's just funny there was also a when i went to the lbj library uh they have a replica of the oval office and they have a phone you pick up the phone and they'll just play random parts of the lbj uh presidential tapes and i i put it up and one of them was him talking to catherine graham the publisher of the the washington post who i believe he had an affair with uh and he is just coming on to her like a maniac he uh i believe at one point he says bob was a steer and you were in a if i was a steer and i saw you in the paddock over i'd jump over and of course he talked to his aides posture and he also said i had more 0:55:48 talking about lbj or talking about jfk who of course has a reputation as this lotharios lothario he said i had more women on accident than that boy had on purpose and i absolutely believe that he had a bigger dick than jfk just for the simple uh uh james 0:56:59 buchanan was apparently a very erratic uh and touchy like a prickly guy like an unpleasant person uh and kind of like a fussy sort of school army type guy and yes was the first well he was the gay president that we can say pretty definitively exist i mean there might have been other gay ones but buchanan was definitely gay which that's tough for the gays because he is definitely a ***** bottom five president not bottom one that's ***** johnson but definitely one of the worst ones his predecessor franklin pierce was just a hardcore alcoholic which says a lot because it was hard to become an alcoholic in the 19th century because everyone was shit-faced all the time anyway garfield was a ***** nerd garfield was one of our most uh uh uh he's like he was an a real uh book i'm gonna maybe go in a minute here see if there's 0:58:1 maybe one more question frederick the great was so gay that he wouldn't look at 0:59:2 women like you actually wouldn't like set eyes on them but he didn't he also after his boyfriend got his head cut off in front of him the brits are freaking out about biden in what sense because he's going to reunite the 32 counties i don't think he's gonna reunite them i think they're doing that themselves ***** irish she's barely irish it's yeah apparently now for the first time in american history we've got irish a catholic president catholic speaker of the house and catholic supreme court chief 1:0:4 justice which would have made thomas nast's ***** head explode remember this ***** uh remember this one one of my favor my the ***** uh the bishops coming out of the ocean like alligators they did it they conquered people who in the 19th century those ***** uh bleached out brahmins thought were incapable of republican governments are now our governance are now at the top of all of our institutions really does show that uh that the stuff that people fixate on is uh rarely the ***** that matters but that's exactly why they fixate on it because it allows an illusion of progress an illusion of issue uh addressment addressment an illusion of progress 1:1:6 towards policy towards a better republic towards the shining city on the hill when in reality you're just you're just treading water while the machinery continues to grind

roland was a warrior from the land of the midnight sun where the thompson gone with her heart fighting to be done the deal was made in denmark on a dark and stormy day so he set out for biafra to join the bloody fray i'm 66 and seven they fought the congo wars with the fingers on the trigger knee deep and gore for days nights they battled the band two to their knees they killed to earn their living and to roll in the thompson gunner howdy folks this is a muncher only stream if you're not a munch head if you have not accepted muncherism as the only meaningful ideology of the 21st century then you need to log off this chat this is for munch heads only muncher number one munch munch house the munch is loose uh people don't know what i'm talking about uh it was revealed that the new slimer for the sequel slash reboot of ghostbusters just have to stop myself from doing some miming something that might get me taken off of the stream uh he's been is out and his name is muncher uh and he is if someone wants to put a picture of him in the uh in the chat here it'd be helpful uh or you can google him yourself he is uh i don't have a way to show it i'm sorry i guess i should draw a picture of him or something he is green he's blue instead of green he has six arms instead of the two uh and then he has a face of pure misery he looks just an embodiment of agony he looks like one of the damned souls in a bosch painting he is pure anguished existence he is begging for a death that has already come uh as opposed to slimer who's like just a big fat party animal who enjoys putting a lot of hot dogs in his mouth and what's interesting about this to me and the reason that i muncher speaks to me uh is something that a friend of the show josh androsky said he said that muncher is gritty for people who know that it's over uh muncher is a mascot of of true hopelessness because think about the trajectory that you have to do to go from slimer to muncher what is the distinction here how how are we to how are we to place the mantra in context so first we have in the original crush busters we have the ghost himself this slime and what is this slimer this slime up is a being a pure desire the the slimer he seeks to consume he cannot not for digestion not not for nutrients but purely for the pleasure of consumption and he is presented as such as as as a being of of a pure expression and desire at lust the

the the lacanian subject what is mantra muncher seeks the same out outcome the muncher seeks to consume the muncher they are quick to point out he wants to eat the corn there is corn behind the monster and the muncher he wants to eat the corn this is key that the muncher also much like the slimer he wants to eat the corn but 0:4:6 but this is the crucial distinction the monster does not enjoy the consumption of the court the muncher is at no point in finding his pleasure even momentarily satisfied because she is the simulacra he is the the copy of the copy of the original slimer his his consumption has consumed him his failure to wrecking realize his desires has consumed him and left him unable to enjoy anything much as we the consumer of the programs of the films are left to watch the ghostbusters film but have to have none of the pleasure of first watching the gauche buster the original busting of because the muncher is slimer emptied of any reason for being because muncher's there because 0:5:7 the ghostbust slimer was there because he was part of the concept of ghostbusters that genuinely insane man dan aykroyd thought of and he was a part of that muncher only exists because a certain segment of the population has heard of ghostbusters and therefore an investment of money into the ghostbusters franchise has some degree of probability of being recouped at some degree of level that can be put on a piece of paper to mark the market accountant to keep the flow of of bonds circulating through your your corporate entity that's it that's why muncher exists and so even though he's doing the same thing that slimer was doing consumption from beyond the grave this literal hungry ghost a literal hungry ghost uh his pleasure has been robbed of him and also the other reason that he is divorced is of of pleasure of of any 0:6:10 satisfaction is because he truly is slimer after 40 years of being slimer much as we collectively are slimer after 40 years of being slimer like america in its post-seventies form is a place where all questions of democracy of autonomy control over one's life and circumstances of life have been seated in exchange for credit basically and with that credit the ability to consume cheaply so what has that left us it started the go go reagan 80s we were the bright green goblin stuffing hot dogs in our mouth exalted in the pleasures that come with unlimited access to cheap goods anything we can imagine it doesn't matter that industrial capac industrial policy and employment policy and wages are no longer democratic questions that uh our control over the 0:7:11 pace of and conditions of and substance of work has been lost unless you can make it through the gauntlet of uh post-graduate education and get a uh get some job that gives you some illusion of meaning even though even there you are fully at the whim of what we've given that up that section of human self um self-realization self-actualization has been seeded in exchange for consumption and what have we done we have consumed and where has it left us it has left us at muncher it has left us covered in arms to grab to grab desperately and a face wrapped in to quote myself referring to the baseball crank another signal of the time and that is why i believe 0:8:12 that muncherism is 21st century marxism and must be supported against we love muncher don't we folks we love him we love the box look at this guy look at him he's blue he's got the arms man he's gone can you guys have you guys been able to get your head around how fast trump disappeared after being the only person in america in some significant ways for four years he is now an unperson we just like kaiser ***** jose i gotta say i did not see that one coming and i think more than anything it boils down to them get it taking away his twitter account uh and i think something about getting the twitter account taken away and honestly deutsche bank pulling the plug 0:9:14 uh disciplined him like deeply as much as he wishes he was still out there screaming into the void so that he could fill the void with himself he is he's finally for the first time maybe in his life feared a consequence and as a result he is allowing himself to be forgotten because remember he has the choice he could be out there he could be continuing himself like twitter and account or no twitter account he could just say hey i'm going to a rally you want to come problem is he would have to do that stuff himself now the machinery that existed before to allow him to say i want to go to the alamo and then they go to alamo texas because even the people he surrounds himself even the professionals are morons he can't just press a button and have he can't do anything it really does tell you and it really should tell more than anyone the libs that he was never in charge of this thing whatever you want to call it he was never a 0:10:15 puppet master he was never a string puller he was always being allowed to do what he could what he wanted because it served the interests of other people and that's the thing that people who like to point out like when you're trying to argue about fascism oh god they'll say it doesn't you can't point out that trump is incompetent the real fascists the original fascists were incompetent yeah hitler and mussolini were a couple of complete fail-son ***** fuck-ups they were guys who were in politics first and foremost because they couldn't get any other ***** work and they were too lazy or uh lacking in actual skill to support themselves any other way than getting on a stump and bullshitting to people i should talk i'm in the same phylum of human i mean i hope i'm not as evil and i'm honestly not as charismatic but they were fuck-ups and when they took power they didn't become any less fuck-ups they were essentially gamers i mean d-day succeeded in part because they were the german high 0:11:17 command was too afraid to wake up hitler because he slept till noon every day during world war ii and mussolini was like banging 15 of his mistresses a day in his stupid palace while looking at a giant globe like they were they were just they were lazy ***** the reason that they were able to take power is because they were given power by powers that saw use in them and trump was useful and he no longer is and we are seeing that absent those supporting institutions operate which is why uh it would be hilarious if they oh god no i'm just saying if they're gonna do it this stupid ***** impeachment oh my god the dumbest ***** on earth absolute i mean honestly you can't get mad at it or demand they stop doing it they're democrats that's what they do but it's ***** about holding him accountable i'm sorry he left he lost the election 0:12:18 he's out of office what you're going to double kick him out of office and this idea that oh you're going to banish him from future office we've already seen how much he is dependent on all these exterior things to keep him in power and secondly hey if you don't want to ***** face him in 2024 how about you do anything to deserve another ***** term how about that and that goes for the republican party too how about you like become coherent in some way to oppose just being pushed over by this guy and i honestly think the reason they're doing this impeachment trial is because they know in their hearts he's not going to get a criminal trial because we cannot hold anyone who's ever held real power in this country criminally liable for anything nobody can even imagine that anything they do either in or out of office either enter having to do what they're being president or not seeing the inside of a jail cell oh no no no 0:13:20 no no no no because as soon as that taboo breaks then the politicized prosecution of political enemies and losers is on the table and these guys are all criminals so and so instead we're going to get a big stupid trial in the senate that will waste everyone's time and do nothing and we'll just further emphasize to anybody casually paying attention to to proceedings that these the biden administration these ***** democrats don't give a ***** about do i go for it on fourth down of course i do that was one of the most absolutely i mean i can't get too mad i haven't really been 0:14:22 watching this year i haven't really cared about football for a while i really more at this point just want my boy aaron rodgers to get another ring because i think he's such a such a pretty quarterback but i did watch that game and that last that was about one of the most baffling just i felt the spirit of mike mccarthy and now he's gone he's definitely gone bye-bye apparently he took a flight to dc to talk to dan snyder which hilarious if it happens and you know what he i it would be fun if he did like a tom brady and went to another team and immediately won a super bowl but we'll see bye bye yeah no that was baffling that was that was really not great i do not buy any game stock stock game stop stock game stop stock no i didn't buy 0:15:23 any of that because at this point it feels like it's too late right i mean obviously they can keep going for a while but i don't want to be the last money in there i'm never i'm not on reddit and this truth maybe i should be on reddit more get on the ground floor for some public criminal behavior this has to be there's a there's a ***** hedge fund that had to get a private bailout to the tune of two and a half billion dollars because these ***** taquito eating ***** on reddit decided to buy a bunch of game stock stop the game stop stock with their stimulus checks wall street cannot allow that to continue there will have to be prosecutions or some sort of regulatory crackdown just because not because it's wrong or even illegal but because it is too disruptive to the flow it's too it's adding too much unpredictability to a system that is already of course one thing they could do is crack down on short selling which 0:16:27 is what this whole thing was premised on but can't do that because that's that's how yeah we're certainly definitely not in a in a bubble people asking about glenn greenwald or uh ***** jimmy door people are very frustrated by all these arguments one way or another or having or they're frustrated that they're being had this is the outcome of losing and having trump gone like if you have invested in you know politics to this point if your politics have been shaped by this online discourse and by the underlying assumption that online discourse can provide meaningful guides to action or meaningful coordinations of behavior that can affect politics then this moment 0:17:28 where the democrats are in power there's no real plausible way to pressure them now uh and because the dem republicans are right there that 50 50 senate oh god perfect for them to get to push off uh to for each dem for each base to be placated with uh accusations against the other for not being unifying enough we get back to the obama years in every sense but now with a fully developed political social media subculture which didn't really exist under obama or it was like it was it still existed but it was it was in this weird transitional period between the blog era and social media like that whole obama years you didn't really get until the second like the last uh the last two years of obama's term before you get something really like the even early 0:18:29 emergence of a self-conscious online like left-wing uh movement to use and so now you're gonna have a fully developed one with the same dynamic the same dynamic of powerlessness at the bottom and a republican part a democratic and republican party dedicated to you know bipartisan austerity in the face of misery uh at the top and that means that you know uh there's gonna be a lot of hate to be made and a lot of incentive for people to create big fl sparky fights with each other to simulate forward movement to simulate power and authority more than anything that's the really important part is that this stuff is about creating the illusion of momentum forward because if you're fighting with somebody who is on another show on another 0:19:30 uh has their own you know click and you can criticize them have them criticize you that dynamic that conflict can simulate a like a movement finding a direction like it becomes our virtual reality version of you know like a floor fight at a convention only there is no convention and there's no party and there is no um power and then no one more importantly none of the people represent anyone they don't represent anyone in the sense that there is a coordinated group of people who have like certain demands they don't have a block all they have is uh viewers and the thing about viewers is that there's a lot of reasons that you watch something or listen to something they 0:20:32

don't always they don't correspond politically because it's not really and i'm not really condemning this i'm not saying it's bad i think the argument that's bad is premised on another misconception which is if people weren't doing this they would be doing something more productive and maybe if they were online less they would find something more productive in their lives but as long as they're gonna be on here anything they do uh the i guess i just i just personally cannot invest but it's 0:21:33 because people feel frustrated i mean my god we're we're in the middle of a ***** pandemic the ***** economy is teetering on collapse they're uh they're got their thumbs up their ass about everything uh there is there is essentially an admission by the power the party that just took power in a huge ***** of self-importance this absurd spectacle of inaugural the return of sanity and unity and decency and then immediately said yeah there's really nothing we can do about any of this stuff the ***** up vaccine rollout the massive increase the the the massive the numbers of deaths oh more strains coming uh we're gonna see about we're gonna listen to the science but that still means reopening stuff because there's no alternative to keeping the goddamn economy moving keep the money circulating because we have no large scale uh capacity or interest in doing anything else anything that could actually be a meaningful check on uh spread instead fauci's out there today saying you know 0:22:36 what maybe wear two masks so that now when you're out you can feel better about yourself for having two masks and you can judge all those other people who only have one mask and then the people with one mask now have like a nice precarity where they can feel superior to the people who don't wear any masks and then feel like a weird hostility and uh resentment of people who show off by wearing two and so you get another layer of resentment field uh self-expressive politics to make up for the complete lack of any coordinated ***** uh ameliorative project here and in such a context why wouldn't you be pissed why wouldn't you want to see someone to blame and if you really have spent the last four years convincing yourself that these debates push the wheel forward in some way then there's a lot of emotional 0:23:37 investment in picking the right leaders and holding the wrong ones to account i mean the people a good example of this is the boogaloo boy thing with jimmy dore how many boogaloo boys are there in this country realistically how many of these guys exist what difference does it make and either way and i'm sorry people say this is like monstrously dangerous because oh people are gonna flood into their movement no no it's all ***** it is it is you are you are you're talking to this and you're talking to and about a incredibly self-selected group of political maniacs people who have driven themselves mad by politics one way or another and are invested in like public performance of politics that is a thin slice of the population that cannot and will 0:24:39 not like uh spontaneously regener like expand its size and the idea that well these people are being funneled into it who is being funneled where everyone is just online and you have to be a certain type of mindset to see this whole ***** thing playing out and go yes i'm gonna wear a hawaiian shirt and carry a gun around in a protest and that that combination of stuff the very last step of that is whatever they see on the internet that's the last thing that gets someone there it's and honestly the least consequential step of all of them i am not the most soy person ever thank you very much at least uh at least i have an actual beard i did used to have a neck beard i will admit but i do have an actual beard i always annoyed me when people would say call me a neckbeard after i got a real one i was like i'm sorry sir this is not a neckbeard oh good thank you someone asked about that hilarious uh american uh conservative piece saying that we need a salazar ma i love that because it really does show a lot of uh the very the pathologies we're talking about here um if people don't know salazar uh is like the he should really be more loved amongst like the the dork right you know like the book nerds like the guys who uh uh the insult types because he is of the 20th century european dictators he didn't come out of like the military or anything or even politics he was a professor he was an economics professor and when the military overthrew the government in portugal uh they no one really knew what to do and the only competent person in in who got a a portfolio was salazar who because of his technocratic uh uh economics economic uh skills was made finance minister and he did such a dang good job that they made him prime minister and eventually he was able to consolidate power around himself and away from the military uh and then he had like a franco-esque run as a super as the guy as pres as prime minister of the estado novo the new state which is like the syncretic thing that he created there uh and there's a whole and him and uh franco also shared the fact that their deaths were very prolonged and in salazar's case kind of comical because salazar had a stroke uh and everyone thought he was going to die and an opponent and a successor was appointed and was already ruling when he came out of the coma uh and they didn't want to i mean they'd already done the transition it was going and nobody knew how many marbles he still had so instead of putting him back in charge they just told him he was back in charge and gave him like a little desk and a little phone that didn't connect anything until and then waited for him to die and then after that the uh his successor was overthrown by a communist-led military coup well very rare thing indeed the carnation revolution which as i have said is the closest thing we really have to anything we can hope for so this is sort of like the right wing flip side of that like i'm i'm pinning for a uh a a american carnation revolution and the american conservative is pinning for an american estado novo but one thing that really exemplifies is what i'm saying and refers to that i was talking about the total boutique uh irrelevance of all of this online argumentation like i would say one in a thousand americans knows who ***** this is just a thing for nerds to talk about and then even in the but even on its own terms it's a failure because i read that piece and obviously it's garbage and he soft sells salazar's brutality because they were brutal it was a brutal police state they tortured and murdered communists they had concentration camps and also they carried out horrifyingly brutal uh colonial wars long past the point when it was pretty clear to every other colonial power in europe that it was no longer viable to have these things he was one of the last supporters in europe that the illegal white minority government which he didn't talk about but what he did say in the article is he created this beautiful syncretic thing this paternalistic traditionalism that gave everybody like security where they were and prevented the market from like totally destabilizing everything and prevented most importantly politics from poisoning every relationship and that since we're all too politicized now to really deal with one another and that is true and this thing that we have to deal with the fact that like the the basic premise of of um like political collaboration that has to undergird even partisan conflict has dissolved like that's a real crisis that we need to deal with but his res but the idea that the way to solve that is state shows you how just how much people don't understand what america is because even if you accept his description of the salazar regime of this i don't know on face value the thing that allowed it to work is that it was it truly was like a barely post-feudal hegemonically catholic country that actually did have like social traditions that could undergird a political order the idea that america could ever duplicate that is insane because there is no social betting social um restraint to individual desire everybody in america like the american traditional uh uh the ideal that the that that would have to undergird whatever he's talking about our version of that like catholic individualist which certainly couldn't be catholic because you know there aren't that many catholics in america and most of the ones who are protestant we have what we have as like an embedded social tradition is i get to do whatever i want and that's true of conservatives as true as it is of the most licentious liberal and i think the last four years have shown that pretty clearly any argument that that that there's that the patriarchal uh capitalist protestant order that like woke capitalism is overthrowing is in any way more like uh that is is any more more socially restrained any anyway less maniacally committed to self-satisfaction at the expense of everyone else like i get to do what i want when i want and and limitations on me are in fact limitations on freedom conservatives believe that just as much as you know the decadent bushwick uh witches that they hate do there is no involves uh a idea of social expression and liberty that is like it is not maximally committed to personal for personal satisfaction and for americans that means uh more than anything resource consumption and if that's what it is you cannot have any stable

uh non-political order overrule that uh and and and coordinate that because figuring out who gets what is politics and if there's nothing in your social framework that even suggests that anybody else but you get everything then you need you need either a strong like alienated technocratic uh you need a strong if you have a government that's gonna work at all it's going to be it's going to necessitate as much access to resources as possible and our crisis is a crisis of resource access and the reduction of it the reduction of the expectation of it more and salazar could tell to the the hungry masses of the 30s go to mass stop stop wanting to tell what stop wanting a car go to mass or they wouldn't even consider that the most part you're talking about incredibly poor people in portugal they just wanted to ***** eat but you could say hey the the ***** you know the bishop doesn't want you to do that think think of everybody else there's nothing doing that there's nothing to to ground us there's nothing to work from even if the uh the the uh normal americans even if our like white middle class the white middle-class base of conservative reaction in this country took power there'd be nothing there to ground them because everything i want when i want it is the sum total of american culture and america's expectation of and the only way that maintains itself is uh domination and extraction at home and but yeah it reminds you that the right is just as out to like the the online intellectual right is as out to lunch as the left is is this committed to building their little ships in a bottle and fantasizing about autonomy and ability to to influence the market and politics people want me to talk about australia day i have no idea why you would what what about australia it's is that like the fourth of july for australia basically i'm assuming that every year it's a big culture war thing because of the whole i don't know why they ***** are so what wrapped up about australia don't get too attached to it it will be uninhabitable in 20 years well i would not get too uh like fixated on on that hey thank someone is asking about kurt schlichter i i was idm some friends of mine the other day and i said what the ***** happened to him he this is his moment he wrote two books about an america that's like broken up by a civil war between woke people and and real americans why was he not at the capitol why was what is he been doing i mean i don't know what he's tweeting because he blocked me a long time ago but i would i would assume that i would have seen his takes like come through the trade transom because even though he had me blocked he was always good i would always find out when he said something insane because somebody else would say check out this and somebody like whoa i haven't seen anything from him since before the election he's still around right it's kind of blowing my mind like did he just lose his nerve because this ***** you would have thought when the election was contested and people were going to courthouses and demanding they stopped the count and people started saying we're going to go to washington a second american revolution you would have thought he would have been at the precipice of it you would have thought that he would have been like on point i'm going to see if he i'm going to see because this is honestly baffling to me how oh did he get well this might explain it wait a minute he has a town hall article about how joe biden is a draft dodger are you ***** kidding me that's his ***** where is the second civil war he's doing gotcha ***** oh my god he's calling biden president asterix what a ***** this ***** was talking about during uh the george not even george boyd during the ***** mike brown protest talking about loading watching tv while loading his mags what a ***** cuck he's whining about how they're not doing enough unity oh these ***** halfway i mean i guess you can't expect anything more from some guy who like sat behind a desk in kosovo and basically acted like he went into fallujah with the first i mean if you see that if you see that moment pop off after all that running your mouth and two books about it and that and honestly this should have told you all you needed to know about how serious this like insurgency was anybody who has a mortgage anybody who has a little bit to lose or uh or is like well secure enough in like the media ecosystem that they don't need to uh like risk their life and safety for uh clicks and and engagements they're not going to ***** risk anything and that is still the center of gravity what a ***** poser oh he's just whining about celebrities being mean to trump man i mean it's probably good that he didn't go to washington he's of the body shape to be one of the guys who yeah muncher sort of has filled the spot for trump isn't it like our collective expression like i think i've talked enough about muncher for now but i might come back to muncher we'll see yeah so about the new book i think i might do i might do black reconstruction but i'm i'm still deciding i will uh i will what's muncher educate this fool muncher is us consuming miserable oh man so there's a recall move for gavin newsom um i'm actually kind of interested in how that would work because the way they recalled gray davis is that daryl isa the uh carl arm crook congressman carl um congressman from orange county paid millions of dollars to hire canvassers to go around and get signatures and a lot of people signed them because he had botched the the blackout situation and he had i mean it was enron's fault if anyone's seen smartest guys in the room they kind of make and uh gray davis look like a sort of a martyr because enron was the one who ***** him over by you know manipulating um the energy supply in order to boost their profits but he let them do it he ***** let them do it he had the ability to ***** actually he could have seized that ***** and he didn't do it because he's a go along together he's gray davis he's a democrat so i have no sympathy for him like people are mad at him for a reason and but isa had the money and did it and of course in one of the greatest cuckings of all time he did that because he wanted to be governor he was going to be the guy who swooped in and replaced him and then schwarzenegger just goes hey i want to be governor and then he had to endorse him and just an amazing bit of coverage but for one how are you going to get are you going to get enough signatures now with every fewer people out and about uh and two has the partisan dynamic change so much that no matter how bad newsom is doing any recall uh will be will be assumed to be republican and therefore will be rejected by a california electorate that has turned pretty strongly against republicans in general but if he doesn't it'll be too bad because it would be a beautiful piece of history repeating itself if newsom got recalled and then the rock became governor of 0:44:13 california and of course people say well the rock is a republican he would obviously have to run as a democrat that's a no-brainer but i don't think that that would be too hard for him because he's already a uh you know on the on the um on the edge he's already he's already condemned you know divisive talk and stuff and that's all you really need to clooney would be good because remember california is nutty if there's a recall it's not like there's a primaries or anything there's one election where anybody who gets enough signatures or like files the paperwork can be on the ballot and so you could get like some celeb uh democrat to do it that would be 0:45:14 cool but john's the rock makes the most sense somebody asked if poser and hustler is a better word to use in grift or grifter i don't think that there's any reason to us use those terms at all because it is it's all the whole question of grifting is the spider-man pointing at itself meme because the grift if there is one is the grift of the presentation of a fabricated reality whereby your participation in online political argument and online political opinion formation is organizing that is not true now the people who operate from that assumption might not know that it's not true they 0:46:16 might be lying to themselves in order to keep themselves engaged because they have no other way of imagining themselves being and others might be aware of it but have justified things otherwise but it's such a pervasive thing and it so undergirds all of these things that like pointing out one person as a grifter over someone else seems to be a pretty small boar i mean how it's dissecting the grape like how do you determine everyone is grifting everyone is operating off of the same shared delusion yes liz and brace should run for governor and lieutenant governor of california america is a grift 0:47:21 someone says 100 that's one of the best things about lodge 49 is that not only did it show what it's like to struggle in this country the payday loan cycle and uh you know people putting off purchases and putting off health care because they can't afford it and stuff like that they get that part but then what it also really gets is that the people who are making it the people who are actually succeeded in this economy are not doing so by creating anything useful or by presiding over meaningful economic activity they are sitting on a nesting in nesting pyramid schemes they are there to be names on paper to move around money that is never that never has to be invested profitably in anything that just has to be moved around and just has to sit like the 0:48:22 whole the background of the show is that the the big defense contractor which they call orvis in the show which is modeled after boeing which is like which has that role in as like a key industry in the real long beach is closing and they're in the process of shutting down all of its departments and and selling off all of its assets and creating these big and then dealing with the land that it had it had been on and all and that so that was a real company you know that actually made ***** in the the fortist you know uh military keynesian heyday after world war ii and what's replacing it the the uh the chain restaurant uh and the uh the fake residential development and of course to tech sector which is the only place where you know real money has been made in 0:49:25 the u.s economy outside of extraction in the past 20 years uh is the most exemplary because that's entirely fictional none of those companies make money i don't know if anyone has seen the graph that was put that was put out recently of of uh the stock prices of non-profitable tech companies over the last few years it is a shocking image and of course we now have the richest man in the world being a man whose company makes cars a few of them that tend to blow up and kill people like tesla is a boutique car maker it's like ***** uh it's like tuckers or a duesenberg or ***** uh maserati it is not like gm or or ford or chevy in terms of it's it's the cars it puts out there's no reason for it's to be worth what it's worth other than the fact that musk has as i said before been able to monopolize the brand of a salvageable technological solution to 0:50:27 our and uber has lost more money that could ever make back even if it did become the monopoly uh transportation provider in the country could never make back the money that's been spent on but that's not the point the point is not to ever make money the point is to uh is to move the money around and as i've said with the tech sector specifically invest in technologies and now they're doing a thing with lift where like you have to bid for a route and like you have to take you have to take a lower rate to get more rides this is uh the opposite this is a this is a i believe daniel 0:51:29 bessner uh pointed this out this is this is like the old hiring halls for unions only from the owners where and where they get to dictate your uh your terms because they control access to the to the opportunities to make the small amount of money and the same way that the online political uh media ecosystem of grifting whatever you want to call it depends on people who want to be grifted because they want their engagement with this to mean something all of these stacked up criminalities they 0:52:30 exist because we need them to be there yeah the new social contract at uh the world economic forum it's neo feudalism if you need a spoiler alert it is you own nothing you you have access to things you have access to streams of data to housing to uh to food sources that are conditional on your relationship with the companies that provide them that you want a good quick definition of techno feudalism at like a at the level of your like economic relationships that's it and what that means is you have zero leverage over anything not only have you lost the leverage as a uh as a worker as a producer that was lost with the end of organized labor you have even lost your leverage as a consumer which was what we were supposed to get instead which was supposed to be the deal yes you no longer have control over your work but you have control over what you buy and that control exerts uh allows you to exert leverage in the market that's still too much that's too much leverage when people are going to have to exist with less and less so that has to go away too and that's the all right i'm going to wrap up here in a minute if anyone's got any more questions well somebody says they're not uh enjoying the surplus it's really more about the distributing the surplus that other people and because remember this is when we're talking about neil fueller's we're talking about it you know the way that that's going to express itself in america it's still going to depend on resource extraction and labor in other places of the world par other parts of the supply chain and then that surplus comes here and then it's distributed at the whim of no longer any kind of collaboration between you know people and capital that you saw in like the mixed economy of the 20th godzilla or king khan uh i'll i'll watch that movie for one thing for sure i mean i i see a movie if there's big things fighting in it even if there's cgi i don't care someone wants to say that they thought my diabetic joke was funny i i'm sorry if people were offended by that i it was really i was not saying that like i was not making a fat joke or anything i swear to god i was just trying to make fun of libs as always but i will see a movie where two big things fight each other i actually kind of did like uh the first godzilla even though it was too self-serious i enjoyed how much of a sense of proportion and size godzilla had that movie and also the fact that he was in it so little a lot of people complained about that i liked it because she didn't burn out on him i liked kong skull island did not like godzilla king of the monsters very much but hey it's kong vs godzilla and what are you gonna do what's wrong with that although it is very funny how they had to make kong way bigger than he is canonically because obviously the size differential is so just so big that it's not really a contest uh which you know they did that already with the original king kong vs godzilla but the one thing that always made it seem like a mismatch is the fire breath you know he has atomic ***** godzilla has atomic radiation he can throw it at you from across the ***** town from another zip code how are you as a and there's a shot in the end of the trailer where he like has some sort of device that he uses to reflect the thing i don't know they have definitely um in these new godzilla movies they made it a little better a little easier for king kong because um they've sort of made it so that godzilla doesn't get to blow the fire very much he has to like save up to do it which hey that could be the case biologically but of course the real thing is that obviously there's not actually going to be a winner or a loser they're going to turn on a real enemy to fight together because they're both good guys they're both now canonically good guys uh they cannot one of them can't lose and that's fine it's just who the bad guy is like i'm sure it's gonna be some other scarier monster i would really like it though if it was the people that would be the perfect king kong vs godzilla movie if they were basically made to fight one another by these humans for their own amusement more than anything or for you know the the dark power designs of some of them and at some point in the fight godzilla and king kong realize that and just start wiping out humanity but i don't think we're going to get yeah like deep ecology and the thing is is that there they had a so they've had a a weird through line of that in the movies because the whole like godzilla is presented in these new godzilla movies these new legendary godzilla movies as like this balancing force who restores the homeostasis within within the ecosystem once it's been thrown off and i don't understand how after now it's three movies godzilla has not realized that the thing destabilizing the goddamn ecosystem is not some giant uh ***** moths man all right i gotta i'm gonna go off but first i want to say something about that one division show the amount the degree to which the mcu people have gone up their own ***** is breathtaking the the degree to which they assume that everyone has not only watched all these movies and the thing is yeah most people probably most moviegoers probably have watched all of them considering how much money they made i'll admit i've seen them all but not only that that they ***** care about all this ***** and i'm sorry those two things are not the same and i will give michael bay credit for this above anything michael bay does not give a ***** does not assume audience investment in the crap that he makes there are five transformers movies which i've seen all of the lore in them like the internal canon changes from movie to movie there is no internal consistency whatever they want to do they do and they essentially forget what happened in the previous movies because they know you're just here to see some stupid ***** robots fight each other you're not here to do homework like in the fir the first words the first ***** words in the first transformers movies are a voice over by optimus prime saying in the beginning there was the cube and he says that this energon cube is what created life on uh cybertron and they're fighting over it i think in the and then in the second movie they introduce the idea of like the other this this race of primes who all like killed themselves on earth millennia previously to hides the matrix of leadership and that there are and even though the first movie showed the cube like making machines come to life when it touched them they had machines giving they had like baby robots being burst out of pods and robot heaven the fourth movie had a robot goddess i believe voiced by kate blanchette or somebody be the person who created uh life on earth and also the transformers and then of course the fifth uh sends it out so the tweet ah ah back in this room back in the cube i like to think that this is my my new posting cube my winter posting cube uh and we love it folks don't we we love to have the show man i miss him already i didn't think i would i thought i would be sick of it but it's just so weird i was gone and now he says oh i got the office of the ex-president and i'm going to be doing this that but he's not the 0:2:9 wind crawls maria so i wanted to talk today start today talking kind of expanding on the implications of what i've been talking about with regards to the real base of the like insurrectionary right in this country your not just the capital stormers but the entire swath of america that they represent electorally but more importantly culturally and a lot of confusion ends up stacking up around this stuff because the object of this revolt is so clearly now not really i mean yes it is racist that it is right uh misogynist and patriarchal and all that stuff but the target of its ire really is not 0:3:13 just the cultural structure that creates those things that they don't like but genuinely the economic structure that's tied to those because there is this is a conflict between a a a um national regional small bourgeois who are both who are feeling culturally attacked but are in fact in actual point of fact behind their back because they're a bunch of dumb asses and they're as lumpinized as the rest of us and lobotomized as the rest of us by the experience of living in like the in post-material america where we don't make anything we don't have we we we just consume and consumption is how we uh view all of our lives and so all of our politics and gets and the way we stack ourselves goes along that which means we're only responding to cultural stimuli they're revolting against that that's what they think they're revolting at but 0:4:15 the thing that's actually prodding them towards extremism not their opinions they are reactionary people but the extremism with which they hold them not just voting for republicans but going to places with guns to protest and then and if enough of them coming to washington d.c and just generally denying the result of an election which is this and i mean the libs obviously are using it to their advantage and they're all hysterical but we have crossed the rubicon here in terms of the way that our two-party system post-civil war has coalesced around questions of exchange of power that's true and has to be addressed and the thing that's driving that is not the opinions they're the same opinions people held in the 60s in the 70s under reagan and uh newt gingrich it's the same set of reactionary views driven by the same local uh local culture of you know small holder uh hierarchy you know a hierarchy of race 0:5:17 and gender and then within that uh whose family you're with are you are you at the top do you have the the uh the license to the fracking well or you know do you have the franchise for all of the arby's on the west side whatever like land-based thing you have that is fixed and is not a free flow of capital that can go one way or the other the way that finance capital on the coast is that fixed asset creates a culture around it politics is understood as this cultural war because the the assumed basis of capitalism that's driving everything is taken for granted that can't be challenged because it's been good for everybody i.e the people at the top who then create a culture around themselves that justifies all of their power that uses things like racism and and uh and gender anxiety to maintain those structures it is stabilizing of the local conception of 0:6:20 capitalism there but now we have this uh this ever accelerating uh global capitalism this totally unfixed finance capitalism that has replaced productive economies in the west and most specifically in the united states and it has a culture around itself that by definition cannot use a lot of those old structures because they make it harder to create a marketplace for transactions to occur because the thing about that local regime of power is that it has to exclude it has it's but defined by what it excludes and for global capitalism the culture of global capitalism the technologically driven culture of global capitalism and media that those things have to dissolve in order to create an actual comprehensive market so that you can sell to everybody not just part 0:7:21 of a certain you know chosen uh racial grouping that has like the cult that deserves the ability to consume because of uh virtues that are inherent to either their gender or their race no we have to create a new model so that everybody is is a citizen as in and it and that is the conflict that is uh understood as like the cultural war against regular americans or whatever but what's driving that is the real material conflict between these small holders maintaining their exalted economic position and the pressure of global capitalism to strip them of their assets that's the engine that's driving this whole train is monopoly and it it means that it's coming for everyone's assets first it came for the small amount that has held together that was cobbled together by the moment in the sun that the that the working middle class was able 0:8:23 to put out there you know just homes and home investments and maybe some stock that all got wiped out over the course of the last 40 years but they're still held these physical assets and those gotta go too and that's a real conflict but that's not what we have a politics about we have a politics that is this spectacle of cultural grievance because we have lost class consciousness and what that means is that there are going to be tons of actual working-class people who support this counter-reaction this reactionary battle against global capital uh like globalization and and they because they are declassified as americans because they do not live class they're examining the changing culture through the lens of where they're where they are their physical environment the actual culture the rural fixed culture or rural or observant fixed 0:9:24 culture that they reside in and they see this as an attack and even though it has nothing to do with their material interests it's the material interests of their bosses who have the same basic premise of totally uh wage destroying or totally uh abjecting the working class over time the only difference is in my model of local hegemony i get to stay on top and i don't have to worry about being proletarianized the same way that the middle class has become the same way that the pmc is becoming it can't it's going to come for me and i want to prevent that and that's the fight and it's going to list a ton of working-class people because they're responding to a cultural conflict that is the language we process politics with and that's the actual conflict happening here driven by a material conflict between regional and global finance capital and 0:10:25 expressed culturally and uh i think one thing that doesn't get pointed out enough is that that con that dynamic is the dominant political dynamic in every country right now in people want to talk about the big strike in india the the the farmers strike against neo-liberalization transfer of the economy because like modi is like the neoliberal if there is such a thing as a neoliberal fascist it's modi he uses hindutva nationalism to propel an agenda of hyper neoliberalization of the economy and that means they're getting rid of the subsidies for a bunch of farmers in uh in some states in india near punjab and around there uh and it's a and it's led to this long strike and revolt by these farmers and so that looks like the same way a lot of the anti-establishment politics on the right in america looks like traditional working-class uh uh mobilization against capitalism that's it looks like that a strike by farmers but 0:11:26 you got to remember that within the context of these states and the these farmers are the local landowners they are the landlords and they get their money out of the land by leveraging state subsidy like free electricity and water and stuff in exchange uh and then the hyper-exploited labor of the landless classes many of whom from poorer states and other parts of india who are brought in as essentially slave labor reproducing the old feudal system that and their revolt against neoliberalism it's it is a popular revolt and it is on behalf of some version of the people but those are people who within a regional uh network of power are on top that is true in brexit the brexit vote and the whole politics of that in britain it's the exact same thing

CUSHVLOG 143. BEAUTIFUL BOATERS AGAINST THE CURRENT

it is a revolt of regional power against london against against london and now not 0:12:27 even london it's basically it actually no yeah look because london was always such a load start like there it doesn't have the same like regional diversity like london was always london since the beginning of capitalism but it becoming brussels or hum uh frankfurt that was not acceptable that's the fight it's regional versus in the context of the eu uh global like hamburg represents uh you know our neoliberal consensus the same way the democratic party and like the bipartisan consensus in them in our politics does but it's on behalf of regional power not on behalf of workers workers might agree with it because they're expressing things through the cultural lens that they have emerged out of and it's true on continental europe orbit and all of the all of the neo-fascists who are uh who are now uh creating these regimes and and 0:13:28 the thing that makes this so difficult to parse and the reason that there's so much conflict about what to do how to respond to this how to respond to these people like should we is it is it wrong to try to uh appeal to them is that acceding to white supremacy or something you know like are they fascist is that is that and what does that mean and like is it working class or are they the pmc or is the pmc class of itself all of these really distracting and incredibly innervating questions emerge from this category error because you have a actual expression of of class wide resistance to neoliberalism being fully uh articulated and globalized and the fact that that is going to and that the the cultural shape of that response is going to 0:14:30 come from everyone who is being threatened by this but the people who are going to be threatened by this will express their alienation in the same way generally as the people around them and so that means even though you have like the working-class people of these exurban and rural areas are responding to real material uh threat the fact that like the working class has been destroyed the fact that uh like that the ones who even did get a college education but didn't go to the big city and tried to stay home that even theirs are getting squeezed and that the employees of a lot of these small firms who do not feel that alienated from their bosses who because of other relationships like maybe racial or something but like just cultural affinity being a bond that like overcomes their felt sense of alienation because remember they don't they don't express it to themselves in the top terms of class conflict the idea that their labor is being alienated does not occur to them that the whole idea 0:15:31 that that there that there is a fundamental violation in the very fact of the wage system they do not accept that because where would they have heard that where would that have come to them and if they did feel that in the moment and they tried to express that what likely surrounding vocabulary is most probably going to fill the hole and shape their idea of what's happening to them it all gets recuperated at the superstructure all that alienation gets recuperated at the superstructure but it expresses itself in a way that's identical to people who are just these regional barons who want to maintain their fiefdoms and so that means what to do instead of being a question uh draw the line for people between capitalists and everybody else and away from all these other absolutely distracting and counterproductive axis that all serve to confuse the line of battle and to uh subvert the most important thing that a nascent left a non-existent left has to do which is this uh divide the people and that hasn't begun yet the sorting the sorting has to come before you can create the thing because remember there's no army here there's no real left it has to be built and the first step of building is identifying a a uh population and we're not even there yet and all of this argumentation this and all this distracting all these anxiety riddle uh counter arguments that are all about preening about one's own moral superiority you're either showing everybody that you don't give in to that neoliberal and you understand that class is real and that all of this uh language of oppression and intersectionality is all just anxiety riddled white people and cynical minorities over everybody else and i get that or you're demonstrating that i'm not like those knuckle draggers i understand what it means to be white and i understand that to be a good person i have to feel bad about it and i have to express that felt that felt badness and i'm that's all you're doing but but the i think honest and good faith uh dilemma that powers all of this bad faith argumentation is that confusion because this battle that is now waging across the world this local baronial revolt against the boot the the the uh the hyper normalizing uh hyper rationalizing uh homogen is god damn it i forgot where i was going oh uh that that that's the sum total of politics right now and and the and the working class is only incidentally involved the working class is participating to some degree but because on the terms of the fake politics on the terms of the spectacle or are disengaged because they've made a rational choice and a rational analysis of the situation said oh politics is fake and there's no reason for me to care about it they understand that and so they are not participating or if they are they're participating on the terms of this baronial conflict which means they are operating not on their own behalf but on the behalf of so this is the conflict this is the fundamental category error we have and and because it's trapped in this box there's no arguing your way out of it the lines are set and cannot be moved and as politics progresses it accelerates and as conflict progresses and accelerates the the uh the urgency to pick a side of these arguments because they will be more and more relevant over time as politics gets more extreme in response to continually the terms are going to get so uh the stakes are going to get so high democracy the white supremacy you know uh the end of the anthropocene that your ability to break out of it is going to be impossible you're going to be absolutely pot committed to one another side of this of this war between the king and the and the barons basically and

that's why the only thing that might break this is for a orthogonal politics of explicit class res class alienation that generates a counter culture of its own that is immune to these discussions and distinctions and to organizing around these distinctions and shatters through them i've described this before but that really is it and as i've said before also the thing that it reminds me most of is the haitian revolution how you and i said this on a previous stream uh shout out again to my friend everett's age of napoleon podcast which is talking about it now and of course mike duncan had a really great series on it in the revolutions podcast he does uh but the politics of uh haiti on the precipice of the slave uprising after the revolution in france had kicked off a period of uh of political ferment there on the island uh the politics of that i would say in the court not even over the before the revolution and then also once the revolution started uh but before it had like become a real before it had coalesced into a real threat to power because after the initial wave of revolts and plantation burnings and and uh violence uh the cities were still held by uh the french and they were able to mount expeditions into the countryside to try to reclaim them and there was a period there where it was sort of stalemated and that was the period when uh the french uh uh representative on mission uh the jacobin sultanox emerged to uh coordinate the french revolutionary government response to the the violence uh the politics of the island were you had the one the party of the whites the big and small whites the regional local authority both motivated by a mixture of cultural and real interest conflict with france the cultural conflict with france after the revolution and after there was a movement in the revolutionary uh government to uh acknowledge at least colored people uh um as they were known as as citizens that was repulsive to the big whites as they were called because they were interested in the dominance of their government because then they could set their prices they didn't have to stick into the merchant tile system that meant they could only trade with the french metropole they could get the best price on the open market essentially the same motivation of our patriots our sons of liberty in the american revolution which was to uh break the trade monopoly with the british uh and the revolution was their mechanism in the same way the big whites this this racial discontent by the small whites which was powered by their resentment of the fact that even though they were they were on the island to make their lives they did not have land they they worked jobs in as clerks uh overseers the things that the things that the the kind of stuff that is alienating labor and that the big whites pay up uh either p paid them to do and compelled the blacks to do and the difference was color it was literally the the wage as uh as dubois dubois called it the the the skin wage was the fact that they had to pay them and that they could have their freedom and that they weren't compelled laborers uh but that tension between those two groups is exactly what generates uh political anxiety

and the kind of reactionary sentiment we see with the mega revolution as it's echoed at all these other places too especially all throughout europe um and whatever their even though that they they had a class conflict that underlied both it was concealed by this racial solidarity they were opposed by the the freed colored uh haitians uh who were because uh in french slavery uh the close custom the culture around uh inter uh uh intersexual intersexual uh interracial relationships was different so than it was uh like in north america like in the colonies uh you could of course sexually take advantage of your slaves and you have produced children but they were slaves uh in haiti the uh culture was different you many of the um many of the plantation owners 0:25:50 took slave wives and they generally and almost as a matter of course acknowledge their children by slaves as legitimate which meant they were uh heirs to land so that means that you would buy the revolution created a good segment of uh land owning and and then you know associated you know cultural institutions like lawyers and stuff uh free collar cult population this is very similar to how the democratic party is now the party largely of people who since the 60s have been allowed into government and what legitimized the political conflict and and generated it was the fact that the revolution in france in order to carry out the principles of liberty that they were trying to impose uh was moving towards equalization of citizenship between races which led to this conflict in uh haiti and then after the rebel and then after uh i 0:26:51 believe after the king is uh uh killed who should the they actually get a new french military invasion from uh oh this is after the i'm sorry so in the middle of this conflict between these two the uh which is being of course observed by the slaves at there is a slave uprising an orthogonal political movement to break up this conflict because the thing these two conflicting sides have in common is that they both believe slavery is the only economic system and that they will defend it completely and that and so in the and then when this revolution happens the french send the french revolutionary government sends a uh representative on mission commanding french troops santa knox his name was and he set about imposing uh revolutionary french virtue on the uh colony by backing up the uh free color party against the big whites going to war 0:27:55 against the big whites but of course not for uh and so you've got the government like having to choose between these two sides choosing what the side that they think has a deeper uh is more suited to the moment because you've got so many white people and so few black people on haiti that over time that uh that you have to have a stabilizing like uh influence and the way to stabilize it is to increase the pool of people who are exempt from slavery and therefore can contribute to the economy and will have their vested interest in keeping slavery imposed and keeping slaves down being slaves exploited and um and that means that in the broader interest of the 0:28:56 french colonial economic system uh recognizing free colored citizenship is in the best interest of the economy but the local interests of the of the local rulers of haiti it is against both because it undermines their relationships with the small whites and more importantly it subordinates their economic interests to the revolutionary french government which could mean having their property confiscated or at the very least they will be prevented from freighting with the british or anybody else obviously and so the revolutionary french government backed the free colors against the whites and they probably would have won but then what happened the slaves kept organizing kept fighting and kicked all those off and that if there's hope as george orwell said it will come from the pros in the exact same way in all these other countries and 0:29:57 hopefully at some point organizing to bring themselves together and coordinate their actions between themselves a un mystify uh class conscious counterculture emerging from a organization of uh people at their paces of business or places of work places of exploitation will uh generate the momentum to come in from the edge of this battle and because the two are at war break this stalemate and now what shape that will take i of course cannot say that would be absurd but then general contours that's what you have to put your money on and what the practical implication of that is is once again i'm a broken record log off at least log off to these arguments because 0:30:59 none of them refer to the matter at hand they refer to this phantom war between the barons and yes someone's asking about haiti's very bad situation which obviously a lot of people have pointed to to say look this is what happens when you let the proles take over they can't do it being in charge even if it is not racially mandated or even uh like morally mandated is pragmatically mandated by the fact that people on top have the understanding of the mechanisms of power sufficient to master their environment and that it's not that it doesn't even have to be a moral question you can't even say it's because they're better people they're more refined that might be the justification you use the practical matter is that they built the machine they know how it runs and if the people who are outside of it and by definition because they're outside of it they have not been really initiated into it the people really initiated to it 0:32:0 are always going to be a very small sliver of any effective and i mean you'll get a little bit of the middle class but if they're never if they're the vanguard if they take over then they will reproduce the exploitative relationship because they have to stay on top until you equalize labor you cannot get rid of hierarchy in that of that and that and the separation of classes so they say that that's that's tha that's the evidence that's that's why you can't and that's why revolution is never to be sought and it must always be avoided uh but the answer is haiti was in and the true and and and i would say that the case in almost every counter every example that is used in this way is that every the reason that the the record of revolutionary governments is poor in general uh in terms of like quality of life and stuff and political freedom which is a thing i'm sorry i know people love to jerk off to the idea of gulags but you do need 0:33:1 to have some freedom of expression culturally you do have to have if the like jack boots are bad whoever is wearing them because they're bad for your so your social structure they turn you everyone into cynics they make ev impossible for anyone to really believe in the project and people have to believe in the project or else it's just a skeleton of oppression that is might not be capitalist but it still all of them had to be destroyed all of them had to be strangled in their crib and the ones that couldn't be had to be at every moment that there existed opposed by capital and that pressure deformed them and and in the case of haiti it's not just that they were immediately ostracized and in fact de facto embargoed by the united states which didn't recognize haiti as an independent country until the civil war uh that was that'd be one thing the french extracted billions and billions of dollars over the decades in compensation 0:34:4 for the property that they that is an incomplete revolution by definition as all of them have been and that is why the moment the real spindle point the turning uh wheel of the dark tower the level of the dark tower we're on the the floor that we're on at the dark tower because they would never admitted it later because they didn't want to look wrong but none of the bolsheviks none of the ones who actually made november 1918 happen and it was a small handful of people and this is why vanguardists love 0:35:6 to fetishize the postfix because getting numbers has always been the left's problem once the new deal kicks in on the west because you buy off the working class in huge numbers it makes it your audience is smaller your discontented workers by definition is a smaller audience and so you have to fetishize the effectiveness and coordination of smaller p groups because that's all you really have and the example of and the re and you can't really blame them in some respect because we do have a historical example it was a handful of guys it has been stated before and i believe it completely that if the train the sealed train derails on the way from switzerland to the finland station and like lenin gets and that whole car full of people died there is no october revolution there is most likely some sort of uh cornulov-esque military pooched that initiates a um like an early fascism but like less mechanically advanced 0:36:9 uh than the the german version and less expansionary than the expansionary than the german version because it starts from a lower level of economic uh complexity like it was essentially a feudal country with a with a modern facade and then the 21st the 20th century just dropped in their lap at tannenberg and they had no way of dealing with that that's why they felt they they uh collapsed that's why so few people could be so decisive but anyway you would have had some sort of military uh counter-evolution that would have included by definition uh because you would have had the he would have had to really put the boot down just like after 1905 like the black hundred times 100 which would have necessitated some systematized programming of the jewish population of the russian empire and trotsky said that and he's 100 correct on that the man was a good historian which is why he was such a shitty leader because if you know how contingent this is and you know how many variables goes into it and you know how it's very hard to uh pick a side you need to be a little more but anyway none of them would have gone forward none of them would have gotten in that room with them and like yelled it out with uh kaminev uh about uh whether to go forward with it uh having to like decide at the last minute to to rescind the uh endorsement of the july uprising because it just didn't feel like the moment was right uh they did all of that assuming that their first shot would be met with a european continent-wide revolution starting in germany they 1 000 billion percent thought that they operated from that assumption that assumption undergirded everything else you can talk about tactical stuff you can talk about personalities but they're all shaped by that underlying fundamental belief and for a minute there it looked like it might actually happen there's the there's uh moments when like after the keel uprising of the sailors in in germany when uh when lenin is is like this is this is gonna happen and then it didn't that might have been when the door got shut i'm not saying it is i'm also i'm speculating on a hypothesis because if that succeeds if and the thing is is that the revolutionary potential in germany to succeed existed i 100 believe that i believe that the the organizing capacity and motivation of the working class in germany relative to the power of the old ruling class in germany after world war ii was such the power balance was such that a properly organized german working class successfully overthrows not just the kaiser but german capitalism and that if that happens people would say well they would be instantly attacked by germany england and france yes they would have but if that happens there is simultaneous working-class uprisings and general strike actions in france and germany or in england and it didn't happen there's a million reasons and you could if you got enough of them you might find the dark beating heart of history which is that everything is fully predetermined and that nothing has any alternative that we live in a world that is fixed on its rails and that only that only the illusion of projecting forward and the fantasy of looking backward through the glass darkly both ways gives us any delusion that we have any kind of uh alternative but of course we don't know that so we have to operate from the assumption at all points that that's not true because that is what it is to live and therefore that is what it is to fight and to struggle and to move towards justice how about this alternative world how about the place where benjamin butler accepts abraham lincoln's offer to be his vice president in 1865 in an 1864 election because butler had been a um he had been a doe faces doe face before the war you want to talk about like border state credentials which is why they had to put um the democrat johnson on the ticket butler he was from massachusetts but he was as much a doe face as franklin pierce or any of those other yankee scumbags he voted for breckenridge in 1860 not even 0:41:18 stephen douglas he voted for the south's candidate that is how committed he was to sucking off the slave power to maintain his corrupt influence so you want to get a guy on the ticket who reaches across the aisle my god you couldn't do better than benjamin benny butler so it's not like you have to worry about throwing away any advantage and it the war or lincoln's election was won by the army and that's why the democrats nominated mccllellan who even though he never won a battle was notoriously beloved by his soldiers because he made sure that they were well kept and taken care of of course because he didn't make them do anything um oh our casualty rates are so low because you're not fighting the enemy of course you like this that's why they picked him but the the boys in blue said no we're finishing this we're finishing this and by 1864 james mcpherson and others have said the motivation of 0:42:19 the the troops in the field about why they were fighting had changed significantly since the beginning of the war now a lot of them these aren't obviously a lot of the same guys because uh very few people who were serving at the beginning of the war were still serving at the end but uh the army was also much bigger by uh who in their letters home in 1861 are talking about keeping the union together the sacred union and our beloved constitution which we love by 1864. certainly after uh uh the breakout of chattanooga and sherman just plunging his dagger into the heart of georgia and the actual encounter between union troops and the practical reality of slavery in the south which many of them had never even really thought of had only even encountered in popular amusements led them to believe that this was a fight to end slavery that it was a moral bat and it's you can say oh that's you know 0:43:21 you want to justify why you're knee deep in your butt friend's blood yes exactly you have to consecrate you have to consecrate the sacrifice and the constitution wasn't cutting it by 1864 which means that the aperture of and so yes they want atlanta and that helped push it but it was never that close the boys in blue voted for uh to finish the war on the terms of ending slavery for all of time they had been radicalized john brown's mission was moving forward and then that cracker andrew johnson so i'm saying butler gets it as the vp because they offered it to him that's a killing glow they offered it to him and he turned him down just like henry clay turned down the vp spot from william henry harrison which honestly might have averted the civil war and allowed slavery to go out peacefully the way like ron paul thinks so although i don't know if that's actually true or not maybe probably not but man 0:44:23

how much of that is mere chance really does stick in your brain but anyway so that country then emerges and then as conflict with capital which maybe has been tamed 0:49:31 by this new emergent authority and and would have resisted this but would have been able to resist it only marginally because of how overwhelming the political unity of the uh the common american like you can't say working class at this point but you know the small holdings slash uh mechanic class their unification around this means that they would have to take it the same way they had to take the new deal like they had they didn't want the new deal they had to take it same thing as this they would have had to take it but that fight wouldn't have stopped and i'd say that like maybe you don't have an american revolution but maybe by world war one you have a eugene debs-led socialist america in a constitutional order the united states does not enter world war one and that doesn't stop the russian revolution but maybe it accelerates the german revolution or accelerates the french or english into revolt and 0:50:33 then you have a revolution that starts in europe spreads across the continent now of course the question of the the self-expression of the colonies that's the wild card but that dynamic was arrested like that's best case scenario what i'm describing this is like the people who when the people were doing this stuff this is the stuff that they were hoping would happen this is why they were sacrificing you know like you have to have a vision you have to have an articulated vision that you can move towards and when enough people are moving towards it then but anyway it's just it's just a 0:51:48 thought experiment obviously it just i i think the only reason that i do this kind of thing is not because it's fun and it is i'm a turtle dove dork the idea of like oh man imagine like it's the same but different like when he read that he wrote that book where it's like hey what if world war one had happened in america oh man that's cool i like that it's just i have that dorky uh enjoyment of the of just the the novelty of it like i like history what if it's like this ooh that's intriguing that's fun but also because by articulating what didn't happen in its fullness you can see where the real hinge points are where the spokes of the wheel show up where the light like where the aperture opens up and you can see some light and then that allows you to be able to recognize that when it emerges around you and to recognize the contours and recognize where the stakes are and where the stakeholders are and where the real power and where the real momentum and the real chance lies ah anyway where's the 0:52:56 spoke now i don't know this is why i'm looking backward because my current my vision my glass is very foggy i'm trying to i'm trying to get it cleaner i gotta look back so i can look forward i'm sorry and and i i i beg your patience at this time while i try to do this because it's the only way i know because i'm not in the economics guy i'm not really a politics guy first and foremost i am a history guy that's what it all flows from it's that it's the it's the i can't do numbers they make my brain hurt

i have to use my fingers i i can't symbols other than words are difficult and those symbols translated into scenes into scenes of drama that is how i and that is why like i try not to criticize people beyond my area of like confidence and why like seeing people get mad at somebody like matt bruning is so frustrating people who want to impugn that brooding over his motives are mostly uh it's like okay you're just trying to justify why you don't like this guy but so many people don't like him because of his presumed air of like well no because he assumes things that they don't assume like he essentially assumes look how what how how we're gonna get the socialism i don't know what what that i don't like matt hates history he talks about how he hates reading history he doesn't care about it like he doesn't create the scenes in his head so he's like i don't know about that stuff don't really care about that stuff so why would i what would i why would i invest my time on these questions the questions that do resolve into into brightness for me because he thinks i think numerically and symbolically in the way i don't uh is what would be the shape what would be the actual functioning mechanism of a realistic alternative to what we have now and so he tries to build that and then people get mad at him for like no no you have cap this is still there's capitalism and colonialism and stuff in there it's like i'm sorry man i'm i don't that's not part of the formula that i can build things from like you're wanting me to make like i said it's like he makes stradivarius and they're mad that he doesn't do a piano he doesn't make pianos and it's like if you have a critique of the actual like information and and and the analysis go for it but if you're mad at him because he's not assuming a cashless utopian space communism i'm sorry that's not that's not what interests him about the socialist project you need the grand romantic vision and so if it's a good idea hey maybe use it like there hey maybe there is a jump ball in the democratic party right now and like there has to be some sort of uh soothing the base in the sense of injecting liquidity at the bottom i mean honestly it might bomb down to that like i don't know what we're gonna get i have no idea what the democrats are gonna do it's probably going to suck but it might not be as bad as some people think and what it boils down to is going to be it's going to be up to things i don't know at all because i have not i don't have my hands on like the nitty-gritty of the of the power dynamics in the senate like it looks one way for the outside but i don't know what it's like from the inside so i cannot speculate to that point but if whatever if it does make some sort of if we do get like a real change like a lot of people are saying oh the democrats are serious about keynesianism now it's like it's not because if that happens it will not be because they have been uh convinced by all the smart arguments and all the people's op-eds it'll be because oh this system it has a it has a real problem of actual liquidity at the bottom we need to get money into people's hands to circulate through the economy or the thing will literally shutter to halt and that means we got to give it to him but so the decision is made not morally not at the level of politics or ideology it's made at the level of material necessity but then the shape it takes now you're at the policy you're at the politics level and a thing like an actual alternative an actual better alternative might get you something better the thing people who may state the debt what democrats specifically mistake here is that they mistake that for progress that is not progress towards a goal that is ad hoc uh like pathfinding by a system and the probably another stupid sterile argument in politics happens because two groups of people look at that look at that decision and see it as a progress the democrat sees in his progress and says look this is how it works the leftist sees it as progress and says but it's either insufficient or it's designed to undermine progress broader you know what i mean like they see it as yes 0:58:4 this is a thing that moves us towards another thing it isn't these are all contingent policy decisions they might add up to something but that is decided at a deeper level but i don't know like i said that requires the like specific political uh state of play analysis information that i don't have i am as brezhnev said a big picture guy and of course that also means i don't have a lot of specialized intelligence i don't have a very uh it's mostly i will admit but some people think that it's that makes sense and helps them in some way and enough of them do that then it has to be useful people are trying to hold me to account for uh saying that kellyanne conway is a 0:59:28 dime i'm sorry people you're not going to get me off the block on that one even if it impeaches me in all other areas and i understand that she's turned into sort of a good desiccated gargoyle but when she was on for the old heads out there when she was on bill maher in the 90s he would always have like a perky young blonde conservative on there she was foxy and when i see her i see her sort of through the lens of me being horny for her while watching politically incorrect with bill maher because remember i was watching politically and correct with bill maher the precise moment that my gonads were first being posting bonk what is this i saw that i saw a 1:0:46 meme about that it was it was the doge dog as the terminator with the gatling gun and he was firing baseball bats what does bonk mean bonk is horny please is it your i'm assuming it's you get hit with it like they have a a baseball bat and they hit you for being horny so it's the sound of getting hit for being horny okay i get it does that mean that i am uh that i am officially bunk pillled munch pillled and bonk pill that's what we are out here that's what we out here doing we're i'm going to answer one 1:1:47 more question on here i'm sorry i never really read it when i'm on a roll i can't really see i can't i cannot get distracted so i miss a big chunk of it apparently it's all terrible you people need to bring it come on at least not for me for each other i don't think 1:2:54 a war with china is going to happen i think that everybody is going to be compelled to get things a little closer to the vest now i think we might see a retrenchment but

iran being a big one because you know the pompeo and mohammed bin salman and netanyahu were making real sure at the very end there to keep the momentum really against any kind of rapprochement and uh there's obviously gonna be forces within the bind administration who are gonna be totally happy with that so we'll see will i get a vaccine i mean at this point it doesn't feel like i have to even worry about it like what when would i be able to get a vaccine how many months from now and at that point honestly it'll either be so obviously the good thing to do because it's like working or it'll be so that i'll probably already had covet i probably wouldn't i mean i have made no rush i've made no inquiries i haven't checked to see what my number is so i'm not in a hurry to get it i will say that and being a podcaster means i don't have to worry too much about exposure in the public so i feel like it's a safe risk and uh at this point a safer risk than just taking the thing i'm sorry i know i know i know he was 86 but when hank aaron just got the jab and then he's dead two weeks later i mean yes yes yes he's 86 i get it but i'm just asking questions i'm jacking off right now but i'm not going to lie when i saw that i did a little it's like damn the the guy was spry enough to be walking around and getting uh publicly taken to the hospital third party the way of the future one way or the other i doubt it'll be any of the existing third parties and it might not even be and i i think it's probably not going to be a conventional american style popular political party i think it might be more like a real i don't want to say vanguardist but like some something that is uh that is maybe incorporates an electoral element but is not entirely electoral i guess that's the way i would say and the reason i say that but some people say oh that's uh that's like the psl or that if they exist now they're just mutants i'm sorry any small third party that exists now is made up entirely of mutants don't get mad at me for saying that and if you are a mutant i'm not blaming you for that we're all we're all mutants i'm saying that there are not enough mutants and that the way mutants talk about politics is alienating to non-mutants and so it will not be like people aren't going to go into this org there's no transition belt they're going to make something themselves and you can be part of it you just have to be able to be at the moment and be able to recognize it particle man particle man doing the things the particle can what's he like it's not an important part of the man is he a daughter is he a speck he has watered as he gets that was the water get him instead nobody knows triangle man triangle man triangle man universe man universe man the size of the entire universe man usually kinda smaller man a powerful man i think there needs to be a rule about people talking about the gamestop deal the whole reddit revolt against wall street if you can't explain the ending of trading places you cannot talk about it you cannot have an opinion and you sure cannot publicly express an opinion now i will say about myself that i know a little bit about a lot of things more basically the skill of a conversationalist you know the ability to to have a conversation about something but not to really understand it or and provide insight about it and i know a decent amount about a few things uh and then there's a lot of stuff that i don't know anything about where i wouldn't even feel comfortable bullshitting and the stock market is one of them uh the one thing though that i will say with confidence definitively is that this will not lead to some sort of uh proletarianization of finance this will not bring down the overlords of wall street uh this is essentially somebody counting cards to casino and you can count cards at a casino for a while but eventually if they find out that's what they're doing they just kick you out and there's nothing you can do about it because it's a private printer prize and they can provi they can decide who gets to go in or not and they say get out of here and so whatever is happening now one the vast majority of the money that's being made is being made by the demon class not by redditors that's what's facilitating all of this that's where the running is really going high frequency trading and the like and uh two that if it does provide any like destabilizing element that will be fixed they will solve it they've already put a 30-day ban at td price uh on trading some of these stocks apparently water robin hood is down they're gonna just change the rules because they're the house some of these guys individually might lose some money here but once the this uh leak in the system leaking the machines the the ship is identified they're gonna patch that they're gonna put somebody at water seal on there has anyone seen the commercial for uh this um it's a super sealant

that you could use to patch like you could make a boat out of it they did that in a commercial and the guy who does the ad who's like the billy may's r.i.p to a real one uh uh hype man is the most philadelphia accented man on earth and he just says the whole time is the water seal watch the flex seal that's it flex seal their water is never gonna get in there we're never look at the water water's not getting in here or there because of flex seal they're gonna slap that flex seal on there and that water is not going anywhere because they are in charge this is the house that's the one thing i know that's a great philly accent shut up water ice the the watching though every 0:4:6 like every doomed business model every like jurassic web 1.0 ass 20th century like buggy whip ass place that has just been like has a target on his back for the last 30 years and is now a joke like gamestop and blockbuster build-a-bear workshop and not obviously you know new to the list but a very late and dramatic edition just watching them one by one get picked up it really is like irony has taken we have an irony based economy now and some people some regular folks are gonna make money out of this for sure some regular old redditors are really gonna make their nuggies off of it and if they do god bless a lot of them are gonna end up losing money though and it'll eventually be uh sorted the the the bug will be found in the code so i would 0:5:7 say if anybody's making money cool but for the love of god walk away from know when to walk away from the table you never count your money when you're sitting on the count but like just hit the button hit the button and get out of there when you still can because there's no way anybody who is not who has not sucked at lord epstein's table if you know what i mean alone summer's evening on a train bound for nowhere i met up with a gambler we were both too tired to speak and wedding finished speaking turn back toward the window oh that's the end never mind all right so uh i wanna post you can only talk about the gamestop thing if you can places 0:6:10 all right i'm only saying this because i always kind of have felt like i kind of get the ending of trading places and i will now try to explain what i think happened at the end of trading places and you guys could tell but from that how far i am from being able to talk about this stuff like how about that as the rule um because i'm sure somebody in here has enough experience with stock markets or the film itself to be able to explain to me if i'm right or wrong and if i get a bunch of conflicting answers then i will uh assume i'm right and that you are all just either trolling me or bullshitting so we know at the end of trading places uh eddie murphy and dan aykroyd have intercepted the crop report that the uh that clarence beaks was going to give to the duke brothers which was going to say how florida's orange crop had gone now if and by the way let me just say it's a parenthetical as as someone who 0:7:13 watches movies that are made in 2020 20 2020 and 2021 now for a popular audience the degree to which trading places which starred eddie murphy at draenei was a big

movie and was expected to have a mainstream audience the degree to which it does not explain almost anything about how that stock check stock works it just assumes that you understand it is kind of amazing like the central premise that the duke brothers can corner the frozen orange juice market as long as they know ahead of time that there will be a reduced number of oranges and therefore the price will go up because of a shortage like you have to know that and it's never really explained in the text and then the ending is completely unexplained i really wonder i mean i guess it just speaks to like the charisma of those two guys and how much people love them at the time and you know of course jamie lee curtis's boobs that people just like allowed that to just go over their head whereas now everyone is so obsessed with understanding movies and our understanding of movies and our criticisms of movies basically come down to whether or not we think the plot makes sense having nothing to do with like did we like the characters or the tone or the performances or if it's funny it's does it make sense so everything has to be spelled out for you like your baby it's kind of astounding i just i don't know what a young person who's weaned on baby food movies does seeing trading places and as i said trading places is not a like it's not genius film it's a john landis all right so the duke the the re first we have the reality there was no damage to the crops they're gonna have a lot of oranges which means that if you knew that ahead of time you'll know that the price is likely to go down so they know that but they give to the dukes a fake report saying that the crop has been damaged significantly which means that the price is going to go way up so they send their boy to the uh commodities exchange in chicago i think because they take a train i think the commodities exchanges in chicago not new york i think a lot of people assume that the end of that movie is in new york i'm pretty sure it's in chicago right am i wrong because the place they go they i mean they're in philadelphia originally you know like the duke brothers are in philadelphia and they take a train at the end of the movie to like that's when they get the money from uh coleman they go on a train from chicago and they never tell you where to they it's amazing and i think a lot of people assume it's to the stock exchange it's not it's to the commodities exchange in chicago and coleman tells them my life savings sir please don't lose it all and they don't explain what to what they want him to do with it they never say in like a movie would now thanks coleman we're going to take that and buy a bunch of orange juice futures now before the the trading starts tomorrow they don't say that they don't tell you that they go in to the thing with orange juice futures that they already own them and then when the dukes start buying to corner and other people see them buying to corner they all bid the stock up or the price up before the announcement now of course they don't want that to happen but a little bit of it is necessary like when you when you fix a fight you're not going to get all of the odds because the fact that you put a bunch of money on that side is going to get a few people to go with you and it's going to it's going to um inherently limit it a little bit and like that's acceptable but then what happens is when they find out what happened with the orange juice oranges oh no there's tons of oranges the prices that no one's gonna buy uh oranges for this much there's no way people are going to buy oranges for this site price because there's so many oranges and that means everyone needed to sell oh i forgot while they were buying when it got to the top uh dan aykroyd and eddie murphy sell all there so they buy it they buy they sell off and get the cash from this huge sale of all the all of the orange juice they bought the day before and then after it crashes back down they buy them back and then the difference between that is all the money they made and how they get on the yacht and they get the lobsters and crack crab for dinner and then the fact that the dukes were on the other side of all of that trading meant that they lost all that money because they were doing it on margin and that means that it would it it's all on the assumption that you're not going to have to pay it back until you do and then i got it what's so amazing is how much of that is not in the movie at all like not only do you have to kind of understand commodities trading and the stock market you have to understand the story through implication like they don't then elliot doesn't tell them that they are buying them early they don't say that they are holding them when the trading starts just narratively it's astounding that they wouldn't add that like that's extra stuff that i had to add to make it make sense and i'm hoping that that is correct because remember these are futures so what they're basically doing is they're betting on what people in the future will pay for frozen orange juice and damaged crops in florida means they'll pay a lot for it a bountiful crop in florida means it's not bad writing it's if it's it trusts its audience because none of that stuff is dramatically necessary or funny it's exposition it's unnecessary exposition if you can just do some job work as a viewer and connect the dots yourself instead of having them baby food formula speed it feed it into your mouth they've turned this on to terry shivo's just getting nutrient sludge of exposition and plot stuff fed into us and how many movies have you seen that came on the last 10 years i would like to see a chart of how often the phrase as you know has been uttered in films over the years and i have a feeling it's gone up recently because that dialogue when a character says to another as you know everything that comes after should not be in a movie it's absurd these people would not say this to each other it's going to be totally uh dramatically inert this is not a conversation that people would happen because they already know this you have to show them through other means there is no patience there is no expectation that an audience will have the patience to do that it's not their fault they're not dumber it's more than anything to do with attention spans and the way that we interact with entertainment essentially as we're watching it in a way that we didn't used to we used to give things our full attention not because we were more virtuous but because there were less fewer distractions that's it and so i say 0:14:25 how dare you to anyone who says that's bad writing because if i'm right and you're telling me i got it right that's all in the movie i didn't have to go to wikipedia i just took my understanding a layman's understanding of commodities markets and stocks and and applied it to the text and i assumed the stuff that was there well it wasn't there and boom it's there all right they do explain that yeah they explain how the commodities thing works but everything else about the end of it you have to intuit like the fact that they bought early and that they're selling it again or they're buying it at one they bought their but they're selling at the beginning stuff they already bought and then so all right cool i understand the end of trading places then i get to talk about it but i will still limit myself to what i have any confidence saying which is 0:15:26 one i'm not gonna do it because i guarantee you i would lose my goddamn shirt i am a german peasant through and through i am a good time party german not meant for numbers it's not what we were there for the germans they had protocol they had proto-capitalism as early as uh they had they had proto-capitalism in europe before the dutch or the english around the same time as uh the italians and like the italians they couldn't hold it together because they just like uh they like having too much fun they like partying i'm sorry uh they're not shivering their ass off in the bogs and fens and morse and and prussians are engineers prussians are like romans like it's all about engineering it's not really about uh about like manipulating finance which requires a degree of imagination that isn't really part and parcel of yeah prussians 0:16:32 are artillerymen prussians they're bridge builders like the romans um anyway and no background in it family i i come from that uh the people who came to the midwest to farm and then eventually settled and just moved into cities to get jobs and then thanks to the large s of the federal government through the new deal uh and uh were able to get home equity uh for cheap that that's and then like without having to uh gain like a advanced degree or to hold capital and so not a lot of stocks trading any of that stuff pensions that's your number one source of like uh finance capital that you're gonna have access to and of course the equity in your home so i don't know anything about this stuff i'm not gonna to do it i'm not going to try to become a billionaire even though the idea like my god if i put if i just put a little bit of money 0:17:35 on that at the early stages i would literally be a millionaire right now and i could become the joker which is the only reason anyone should want to be a millionaire is to become the joker and instead i'm not but it's like no no if i had done it i would have done it in such a way that i would have it up i have i said this on last chapter but i've done several parlay bets where i try to do i'm gonna hey i don't like a better

bunch of money but i'd like to make a bunch of money in sports betting you can't you don't really have that kind of uh layout you know like if you bet uh if you bet on like small differences you kind of have to bet a lot to get any to make it worth your while unless the odds are good and then you know you need to know uh and so that's where you put in your prognosticating and every time i've done it not only have i done uh parley or every time i've done a parlay football bet which is where you bet like 10 20 bucks or whatever on the outcome of three or more games or the stuff in uncut gems those are parley bets and like if any one of them doesn't work the whole thing the tickets uh uh validated but if they all work you get many more than the like if you bet them individually like the the odds and every time i've done it not only have i failed it i got everyone wrong meaning that if i had bet the opposite if i had hedged my bets by betting my exact opposite i would have made a bunch of money i have no instinct for it uh i like playing poker but i'm a bad poker player because i worry about the money too much it gets in my head i i just have never been able maybe i could apply my renewed zen i haven't played uh sports i haven't played uh i haven't gambled in a while so and when i ha and so i'm pretty rusty i like the idea of gambling but i'm just too sweaty about it and i think i would be too sweaty about doing any of this stock so i'm not going to do it as one thing i know the other thing i know is it's all going to end up fattening the the the goats of the same goat sucking scumbags who are in charge of us and that uh if there is any government response it will be to make sure that right the one thing that happens is regular people are not allowed to do this anymore because the whole point of this and the whole point of you know what literally the point of us uh fiscal policy since the civil war when we have decided to establish a gold standard when we decided to say hey because they'd opened the the the united states opened the genie uh or opened the the pandora's box rubbed the lamp whatever you want to say whatever metaphor you want to use they opened pandora's box of uh fine of um of fiat currency during the civil war because there just wasn't enough species or species around to fund an army and so the us for the first time published from a central not from like local banks but from the central government published issued currency they were called greenbacks and they were backed by the bayonet of the grand army of the republic thousand which of course is always the case with money it all ends up boiling down to the confidence of the institution that is presiding over the transaction that uses it that is that is what backs all currency everything else is a abstraction to mystify that relationship because the more aware people are of that fact the more dangerous democratic institutions are to existing power structures and people say mmt it is mmt but the problem with mmt is that it is right but beside the point it's georgism for the 21st century you will not convince people to socialism you will not convince

people not based on class interest but based on truthness of a theory to change things material interest is the only thing that will do it it cannot be theoretical so yeah mmt 0:21:44 is correct i'm willing to accept that it is a accurate description beyond that i'm sorry i don't know what else i'm supposed to do with this tell everybody about it yes people are dying to talk about this people are dying to have conversations about what really backs up the monetary supply just like they're dying to have discussions about cancel culture and uh whether acab is um insufficiently radical or whatever the whatever arguments we're all having on here the ones that all the people who really matter to this equation are not having and you're gonna start with this have it around good but evangelizing it which seems to be the point seems to be to be just it's it's the same sort of liberal uh socialism uh that henry george invented like i've i've thought for a long time from my first really heard about it is mmt is there is the return of georgeism only it's even it has even less popular support than that because 0:22:46 georgism actually did have significant um uh appeal electorally among the working class the henry george made an amazing showing as gov running as mayor of new york against uh tammany and the republicans uh on the labor platform and people exposing georgism made inroads in the populist party uh and uh made-up members of the knights of labor and i mean it was actually persuasive at the grassroots this is you talk about on twitter this is mean politics even if it's true so anyway to get back to the point so they had exposed the naked raw nerve they've exposed the bone of money at the civil war and they needed to to defeat the rebellion they needed to summon the yankee leviathan even though they were all all the rulers anyway it's not like they were completely opposed to the uh like liberal uh ident like um identity concept that the jeffersonians who ended up creating their mutant 0:23:48 conf like calhounite confederate it's not like they didn't share their liberalism their essential liberalism their idea of like property being liberty and a lot property being inalienable by politics and that any politics that threatens the uh to make property alienable is by definition uh evil they believed that that was and in the republic and then it's just that in the south that was an articulation that came from the jacksonian democrats in the north it really was the whig party before the civil war you could really say that even though the democrats were the naturally hegemonic party in power at any given time in congress thanks to federalism by the civil war you essentially the the war you had uh uh what what essentially happened is that the conflict that immediately emerged between uh the federalists and the the jeffersonian 0:24:49 republicans at the beginning of the foundation of the republic that we had a series of compromises that maintained a political consensus government that existed but in at the level of political economy what they basically the way they resolved that problem the way that the constitutional compromise resolved the problem was essentially to say through the mechanism of the states you guys build your political economy along jeffersonian lines and we'll build ours along hamiltonian lines and by the end of by the civil war you have a battle between the the uh the wigs by that point like the wig uh american idea that came from clay uh and was articulated finally and fully by lincoln lincoln who was a wig before he was republican and who idolized henry clay the south was governed by people at the state level who had come from that jeffersonian small radical small government hostility to central banking and taxation 0:25:50 power and expansion of federal money and the war happened because these things became unresolvable at the political level because the political level it was always a situation of kicking the can down the road until the material conflict between the two regimes became insurmountable which is what western expansion did it made those insurmountable and it made the political uh system no longer able to accommodate it that in a nutshell is the civil war what what made it happen and uh so what the uh northern whigs had to do was create this federal machine and they didn't want to do it they did what they had to do to survive but those guys believed in the centrality of property and it's uh it's equal equal equation to liberty and that meant that they could not allow a situation where um the the mob the deimos 0:26:51 could actually distribute resources to emerge they had to keep control of the money and so after a big number of series of debates and arguments and splits between parties and within parties there was a consensus to move to the gold standard and grant started that movement it took a number of years because they had to like one of the big reasons that the period between the civil war and world war one is so economically stagnant is that for most of it you had this deflation first they were literally taking money out of circulation to equalize with gold and then they were just not ever putting in more liquidity whenever the economy would shiver to a halt which happened all the time uh and that's why that's why silver and and um liquidity like financial liquidity became the signal question of the moment and i would like to point out that if people want to understand why we're in a situation where yahoos are breaching the capital and politics is a spectacle of mine mind-blowing insanity 0:27:52 insane devotion to to cartoons to a figure like donald trump like think of this a game show host inspires the siege and uh investment of the us capital that happens in this country and i know we can joke about it but in american history this is a an insane thing that happened this is a thing that even 10 years ago if you'd conceived of you wouldn't have been able to get your head around it if you really want to understand why that's happening i would say take a look at a similar situation economically for americans around the turn of this century uh we're seeing the promise of american uh manifest destiny small uh uh liberal republicanism the the the model that both jefferson and hamilton strove to were both moving towards in different with different methods because of different cultural conditions that were reinforcing and all that 0:28:54 it could come a cropper it had failed it had failed the vast majority and there was this insert there was a politics that embodied that dissatisfaction and what was it its form it was form was the candidacy of william jennings brian the man who would not see us crucified upon a cross of gold and his campaign was around the issue basically the single issue of democratizing monetary flow in this country by giving by by essentially taking uh injecting liquidity at the bottom that's what it boiled down to and that is of course what democratic control of the economy will produce which is destabilizing for many reasons and you can say it's bad too because it like it leads to waste and over production over consumption and it's like yes if it's unmoored to class struggle if it's more to class struggle it can actually and create 0:29:55 genuine conflict like between uh the democratic entity and the actual powers within a a social order and and that was the debate we're in a similar situation now of our neoliberalized deal our post and in fact not even that because we still think we still imagine we're living in the new deal era we haven't even metabolized how much of that uh framework has been destroyed because we don't really remember it but we still think in those terms we still assume this level of uh of like socialization of re of uh of wealth distribution of wealth downward and it's going away and we're seeing it fall apart in real time what was the presidential debate about what did the two parties argue about was anyone saying anything i mean the for what was it two thousand dollar checks right that's the closest thing did any of them even talk about that during that campaign did that trump who's supposed to be the jacob coxy reborn 0:30:56 american populism on the march tom what would he do he talked about how big his shits were and how they couldn't go down because that question two thousand dollar checks is already such a grotesque diminishment of democratic horizons on the question of the economy to go from we're going to go from having metal gold as our bat as our backing of currency to a bunch of silver to reverse the leverage relationship between debtors and creditors which was the driving force of populism was debt just like debt is the presiding fact of and what would we get whether or not to get a check and that wasn't even one of the things they actually talked about 0:31:57 in such a thing when politics is so restrained but our lives are so bad how are we not going to invest all of our energy in meaninglessness in whether trump is president of course that's how our politics are going to be organized at all levels this is just an example **Music playing** and of course there's social s fractures that not exist now that are recognized in politics in a way that they were buried by those politics that's true that's always the case but it's our failures then that set us up for our failures now it's just been one long slide but anyway to try to get back to what i was originally trying to talk about when they re asserted the gold standard it was to make sure that control of where the money goes investment is concentrated in these banking institutions that these people preside over not in the hands of actual people and that was the goal of post-war monetary policy to keep the money where it's going because it was a giant continent that was just waiting to be invested in to produce massive profits yes it was settler colonial expansion genocidal expansion of course but to the people within it it was not that it was manifest destiny and they were they had the capacity within themselves to actually democratize investment can't have it and so in this current context if this is like the the uh that oh another one of those openings one of my god maybe we could maybe if it's maybe if the only thing we have is is market speculation maybe if moving numbers around on a piece of paper is the only thing that generates economic activity in this country which it is it's a totally financialized economy it is all not the speculation it's it's a it's a minimal amount it's a sluggish amount of real economy and trade on which has been stacked an infinite level of micro transactions and swaps and encounter swaps and speculations and futures bets and cdo's blah blah time not investing in the time it takes to get a thing from one place to another not any of the actual production of it if that's all we have why why can't everybody do that why couldn't everybody be doing that instead of it being funneled through wall street so that all of this money all of the excess part all of like the transactional element of it is instead of being concentrated there distributed universally not equally but closer to and allowing people to invest in actual productive economy maybe around them oh can't have it can't have it and so it's gonna get the hook one way or the other oh yeah someone yes exactly like the thing that generates economic activity right now is our collective consciousness it is our memes it is our culture it is our anxieties it's us it is we are just the brain in the jar the body is the rest of the world working and toiling to bring us things we're just supposed to think about them we're supposed to interact with them synthetically and interacting those things with things real things synthetically at the end of the chain of resource are of um we are just the neurotic consciousness of the world economy we exist to think about everything else that is being produced to interact with it by buying and selling it and talking about it and spectaclizing it and turning it into social life turning and that's that's the actual state that's what the american economy is which means that it really could be democratized theoretically but of course how could it be done it could only be insisted on from the bottom but if it was insisted upon it would be re it would be uh resisted and that resistance if it did not succeed would eventually become hostile and you would have that's the thing that the mm tears and the georgeists and the the cod gramscians who think that you can march your way through institutions and then just flip them over fail to get is that there will always be a point of maximum conflict a point of genuine uh a

point a point in a conflict when a existential question emerges if this conflict is from the point of view of capital there becomes a point where any further um any further submission because of course you will submit as much as possible because coming to final conflict is no good it's wasteful but you only do it as much as you need to and that changes depending on uh the force of your opponent like the new deal happened because capitalism had had to make a deal it was not sustainable anymore in given how much popular organized opposition to it existed and so the new deal was it was 0:38:8 set on the terms it was an advantage to the working class as you wanted to buy by the leverage the working class had in the situation when a new crisis emerged in the 70s that working-class leverage had been completely hollowed out uh and it was like termite it was like they had a big siege engine just got eight by termites over 40 years and those termites were prosperity they demobilized the working class and and so when it happened to happen behind the scenes and there was nobody even there to press the point and so we got this if we get to another conflict point because things get worse and and that fat and happiness that sedative of prosperity that we had been narconized with wears off there will come another point of conflict and within that you get up and within that context there becomes a point where if capital gives up anything else it will cease to have internal coherence and it will be vulnerable to actual uh threat and if that and that can't happen and so at that 0:39:9 point real force is exerted and then the opponent the working class whatever you want to call it has to make the decision whether they can win that fight this is why i said if the german working class had been organized the way that the bolshevik party was but of course they couldn't be because of how successful they'd been and how advanced the capitalist country germany was the bolsheviks succeeded because they were in russia not because of their ideas their ideas were perfectly fixed their ideas were perfectly applicable to the situation of the russian empire at that point but they were not transferable because the situation didn't obtain every there but there was sufficient organization and uh and counter hegemony within the german working class that if they had been aware of that they had reached the end point of the bernstein kowski road of reform by after which capital could no longer make 0:40:10 concessions if they had been all aware of it then they would have been able to make that moment the final conflict and that point will always come and i would say that democratizing our finance industry which is all that we have which is the brain stem of not just american global capitalism that they're going to democratize the uh system of that it cannot be allowed and no amount of convincing people about mmt will get you there only class organization there somebody's asking about irish 0:41:14 unification i i talked about it a while ago and said that while i think it's cool i don't really think it's possible but somebody dm me to say who's in ireland and and is

following it closely and say this thing could actually happen that it's not crazy to imagine a unified ireland thanks to brexit which hey you know what wouldn't it be cool to have a big thing happen in the world that wasn't just awful and depressing wouldn't that be great and especially if it's because the dup psychos were too psycho and we're like we can't just insist upon uh like adhering um psychotically to the great britain we have to out blimp the blimps in our devotion to some pigheaded national uh economic nationalism that's totally you know lost it's past itself by date and then doubling down on it and then driving out all of the moderate uh reunionists just like in the exact same mirror way that our republican party is operating because the one place where uh reactionary politics are most similar to the united states is in northern ireland the irish unionist community there is the closest culturally politically to ours of any right wing anywhere in the world i would say they are young earth creationist anti-abortion uh neo-confederate psychos i saw when i was in belfast and i went to uh the shanghai chancel road when i went to chanco i saw one of the housing estates they had a james buchanan on the side of a building and of course all of the they had scotch irish but of course what's sad is that our uh left politics could not be further from uh nor that northern irish left politics because we're all settlers we're all we're all presbyterian psych blood drinking uh psychos none there's not a there's not an oppressed crappie to be found even even this the most green son of aaron to ever take a coffin ship from temporary to new york is a uh is an irish catholic you are you're a hun you're a goddamn orangeman australia is pathetic because like they're clearly trying to be like us they're like doing it on purpose it's kind of self-conscious but the do you the the the northern irish uh or the the scotch irish psychopath snake handling maniacs they're not doing it for anybody they're not trying too hard they're just trying it they're they're galvanized they're not these phony like you're in australia what are you mad about yeah you're settlers but like you banished your enemies to the outer wastes and you get to just get shit-faced and crush tinnies and flip-flops 300 days a year until of course the place literally becomes uninhabitable in 20 years no no no the canadian right wing the american right wing are cut our australian right wing are cocked versions of america's right wing honestly america's right wing is a cucked version of the northern irish right wing that's the real steal the ulsterman ian paisley reverend diane paisley and morocco indian paisley i'm going to arrest the pope i'm on they were queuing on before queuing on ian paisley tried to punch the pope at the european parliament i'd uh uh uh you know if you yeah did you guys everyone know that he had to be restrained of course it was like hold me back stuff but he actually like tried to do a citizen's arrest on the pope that is some margaery taylor green john paul the second for crimes against the people for tiddling allah's kids i and pierce they place you yeah we're cocked versions of them man but no australians canada

cut versions of us and uh the irish irish version of us is maybe the most cuck people on earth holy can't hard to get more cuck than that other than maybe like ukrainian nazis holy they literally almost destroyed your country do any of those of course they don't they can't read but uh those ukrainian nazis should really take a look at uh aust 0:46:21 plan which was herman goering's plan for ukraine and eastern europe after the war which was to redirect agricultural uh output in such a way to essentially enslave like 20 of the ukrainian population and have the remaining number die of starvation that was the nazi plan for ukraine you take the holodormo whatever degree to which that was real and it was there was mass death in ukraine after stalin took power that's fact what it was a combination of a bunch of factors definitely including bureaucratic incompetence uh uh and unnecessary violence uh national chauvinism all the evils of a colonial administration that was continued even though there had been a change in government because you know colonial administration is colonial administration and ukraine was them it was a minority within the russian empire and then of course 0:47:24 though uh the main thing though was a genuine famine which had cyclically hit that region throughout its generation until modern ecological technology changed that uh agricultural technology caught up and changed that dynamic that was a step and that was the main driver of it but whatever degree the soviets were involved would have been a drop in the bucket to what they were going to do to ukraine if they won the war they would have kept a few of people to be basically like uh uh uh draft animals in little neocon feudal like village uh uh castle grounds they were gonna recreate medieval uh like the old they were essentially trying to recreate the old teutonic knights domination of old prussia like that's what they were trying to recreate when when the when the when the uh when the teutonic knights went from jerusalem got kicked out after the crusades had nowhere to go didn't want to go home had nowhere to go to because they were all disinherited second sons they waged a 0:48:26 holy war against the remaining pagan population of eastern prussia and lithuania and that crusade was very successful and it led to the extirpation of the the of paganism uh the replacement of it with catholicism they were the it was essentially a confederation of like landed uh knights who had feudal estates where they had slav serfs and that would be what they were going to create in ukraine but it would have required way fewer hands than they wanted then uh they were way fewer hands and miles than it currently existed because they were going to intensify the surplus and ship it all to germany and so the easiest way to deal with that is just to deprive them of the food just take it from it way more systematically than stalin ever did 0:49:27 that was the plan and it was they didn't do it because they lost and these are out there waving nasty flags like i wish you guys had genocided me cucked but this is the thing there is nothing to respect about about uh any of these reactionary movements

there's no the thing that people get caught up with a little bit i think well-meaning people honestly you know ambiently racist white guys who might be persuaded to be more democratic or to be more egalitarian but like are just driven by their cultural context to you know respond to this kind of stuff uh the thing that is romantic about it and that speaks to people in a way that the left doesn't is that rootedness is that futile sense of a social reality that transcended the market and that no politics which all left politics are which is multinational multiracial egalitarian can maintain those local rooted things because things like race and class race hierarchy uh uh race uh racial awareness racial distinction those things are part and parcel to those local regimes of control and they are the things that people respond to through the echoes of history and they see the left and they see nothing there that can maintain those things and in fact it requires that all remaining bonds be dissolved but that's the degree to which i can sympathize with any right winger who who comes to the right through that through that reasoning and some there's some i will i will roughly say that that is an appeal that exists and i think that the question of who those people are and how to talk to them is one of the central ones that is dominated like the neurotic online left because so many people who are online are these people are these uh you know highly alienated but acculturated white men those are the people who don't who have the time to sit on the internet are alienated enough to want to spend their time doing that and so they're considered up for grabs of course the fact that they don't really stand in for any greater number of people and they stand in for people who by and large are at least connected to the productive economy which needs to organize before anybody else in order to really challenge capitalism that they are essentially irrelevant like we're talking fail sons neets and people who have office clicky clack jobs or fake jobs and those people no matter how much they feel real and feel like the sum total of like the political consciousness in this movie in this country they are self-selected and they are disconnected from the people who have made the conscious choice or unconscious choice to realize politics is and they just need to live their lives which is the majority of people who are closer to the bone who have less time to sit around and worry either behind a desk at work or behind a desk at home looking at a computer either way they're online either way they're whether they have a job or they're unemployed whether they're in the pmc or their uh whatever they're somewhere there and of course this isn't all of them plenty of these people have like real jobs but their social milieu is going online but the problem with that reasoning the flaw in it the reason that i cannot countenance the right on any terms even its most romantically you know pre-capitalist is that that doesn't exist anymore man that's gone it's like salazar's regime that was built on top of a literal like the wreckage of a failed modernism like portugal was one of those countries that tried to keep up with the capitalism and like tripped and fell on their face three steps out honestly because it's too nice it's too nice in portugal why do you want to sit in a count house looking at coins all day like some dutchman who lives in a bog you're in lisbon for god's sakes drink some madera and so they tripped out of the gates uh smashed their face in and we're basically living in the ruins of feudalism oh yeah you we can create some sort of integralist thing even though of course it wasn't even true the guy's article is they had concentration camps they tortured and murdered communists all the time they were insanely repressive and they were rage colonial wars on a massive scale which he also doesn't talk about but anyway now that's gone man there's nothing you would be building from the rubble of american liberalism into your imagined like uh embedded social organism that can like achieve homeostasis with its natural environment instead of being constant conflict with it it's not exist it's a bunch of boat owners and not just boat owners uh watchers it's a bunch of it is de-culturized atomized consumers fully stripped beings who do not have any shared anything beyond their understanding of culture and identity through spectacle and then wiring it through their personal desires not through any alienated sense of spiritual connection to anyone outside of themselves all of our ideas about religion and place and race all these things that are gonna that supposedly are going to hold us together against the storm of neoliberalism they are on the they are all embedded in the uh the quicksand of atomized no matter what these people think when when the when they these guys imagine these ideas these rooting concepts they imagine them being the thing that transcends selfishness because what is the question of politics right now on the left and right then how do we feel how do what we have essentially realized everywhere is that if we just let uh self-interest govern things through a network of you know facilitation of transaction selfishness will drive us to destruction because the al we will alienate ourselves from each other every day and the only thing that will be able to fill the space will be consumption and that is incompatible with the limited biome and it's just incompatible with with the second law of thermodynamics for sake and we have to put some pressure on the gears we have to tap on the brakes here collectively and there's a bunch of ways people say to do that uh just kill half of the third world echo fascism people want to say and then of course you have the liberal response how about let half of the third world die which will be less mean and require us to have a less core civic social order to facilitate that level of but another answer is have there be something other than the market to determine our social activity for the love of god demarcate some things return to us our unalienated lives to and the thing that does that in the imagined societies these guys have created in their heads their their ideal idea idealized feudalism pre-modernism pre-liberalism

pre-judification of world pre-sissification of the world pre-solification of the world the 0:56:44 thing that gives it is belief it is belief in yes god but god is an expression of a social life that gives one meaning and purpose beyond oneself indulgence and that those ideas are invested with that and that's what gives it as cohesion it took generations and generations in the black death and a bunch of other to dissolve that and replace it with selfishness and self-interest as the soul uh presiding uh source of um self-direction i guess that we can only be sincerely driven to self-interest we cannot be sincerely driven to subverting to sublimating our self-interest into others because we don't feel connected to one another to put it bluntly reformed can only be done by continuing to move through the dialectic stages and contradictions of capitalism and 0:57:45 gain the technological uh uh sufficiency and concentration of capital resources to solve problems of resource scarcity and to distribute and to relieve pain to relieve pain to allow people to live and to find meaning outside of transaction and consumption and that is the work of the left and the your most your most sincerely hearted neo-fascist of course he's racist but he's racist because like look he'll talk you for 20 he'll he'll talk you into it in 24 hours why he's not technically racist and in his mind he doesn't think he is and it doesn't matter if you're saying but he he is he's lying it doesn't matter you there's no judge to say because you're right that means anything he's still a force in the world you have to contend with just saying it's not no no you're fascist you're racist it doesn't work because they've worked it out for themselves while you're wrong just like i've worked it out for myself when a right winger says 0:58:46 i'm wrong and i'm not going to change and that's that means that you have to be challenged and not defeated on the level of arguing someone out of these beliefs but in providing a context and a movement that can give people who would otherwise make that choice another option that is what it is and so many people confuse this idea of like you need to go to the q and on people and give them a pamphlet about joining the dsa no if you're doing that you're gone it's about what is what where are people being sucked and what is sucking them there and one thing that's sucking people off in the direction of this reaction is the fact that they do have things in their social world that they do think that they that that means something more than the market but they aren't they're all are they're all just uh symbols they they don't signify the emotional connection of a pre pre-capitalist subject and so when people 0:59:47 get to work just like on the left when people get to work the sum total of their work in the absence of meaning in the absence of spirituality and the abs in the absence of belief powering it is self-interest look at the people at q and on now look at how every one of these as they're getting arrested was either a federal agent himself or a informant where they were there to uh uh embezzle money from some fake gofundme they were running or they were doing uh um they're doing some sort of social media

scam they're all picking each other's pocket like frank zabortka said that's all of us we have to forge a new not before we do anything but in order to defeat capitalism which we all agree and beyond that there's a simple fact that you don't have the numbers chumps the working classes only weapon is numbers and the fact that the thing doesn't work for now although the technology is being created to make this no longer true that's the point of silicon valley a material point beyond people getting their beat whack beak wet and keeping the money flowing silicon valley exists to make it so that in the near future that's it and then politics can just be deleted from the program politics as such there's just corporate relations you have an hr director instead of a representative in congress just they zero that line out if they can get that sufficient technology now of course the race for that technology is a race we're both in because if that is socialized if those technologies are socialized we could actually build the thing we can actually build the thing relieve the pain relieve the source of uh the retreat to hostility and violence and othering the gen that powers these this politics primarily and and makes it impossible to create class solidarity and your racist your white supremacy it guarantees that you're only going to get white people or at least white people and a nice chunk of like assimilated into whiteness people that ain't enough and the same way that any like and um and uh like hotep that's this the that is that is black reaction it's black reaction but we code it through a left lens because the way that race is politicized in america like blackness is politicized in a way that no other uh it is polarized black identity is left at a semiotic level so the black reaction is hard to see sometimes and and that and that whole thing is black reaction and it's the idea that we're going to protect our identity within this thing within this capitalist system and once again the people who are actually mobilized are the people who have some degree of capital within it that's who is able to be online those are the ones who have capital to invest in in media ventures and political ventures the ones who are able to assess some level of ascension in the pecking order of capitalism even though they are you know held down you're going to get reparations but uh like how are you going to get reparations why what would you have you don't have the numbers you have to we all have to work together to have anywhere near the the power to offset the advantage okay did any of that make sense good yeah i thought this was a good one i felt like i got some useful stuff out i do i do hope we see uh irish uh irish unification i will say one thing if there is people worry like will the troubles start up again with like the dup and those guys pulling their guns all the people who really care are our mega people uh and the guys with guns are all just selling fent like all those loyalist gangs just are drug dealers now they're fat they're just too tick-like they're not they're not gonna have that they'll be a little bit though but they wouldn't do they wouldn't do the whole thing yeah

marjorie taylor green is basically a dup uh member of parliament she by the way could very well be that the if i don't know what's going to happen with trump like he seems like there's a very good chance that he might just shrivel up and die uh he just was that broken by this but he could come back can't say but if he doesn't she could fill that hole i think even more than bobert especially since she has a much more like incendiary record like all the shit's getting brought out about her and the thing about it is the liberals are all thinking oh enough of this is going to come out and then she's going to have to resign i mean i'm assuming that's what they think because or or what do they think they're going to get the house to kick her out if they think nancy pelosi is going to expel a member of congress for stuff she said they are insane but even if they did it she would then be a martyr and that is what you want to be if you got to become famous on the right becoming a martyr is one of the best ways if you don't or she's gonna go to jail or something yeah i'm sure we need to hold her accountable folks yeah we'll hold her accountable by making her there is no chance that we can unite with the barons the barons are our enemy theirs they're more committed to maximalist capitalism that their deepest commitments are to capitalism their essential argument is if the whole thing breaks down and we have to go to like a hobbesian state i would rather build up from that and try to reassert like my my previous privileges under the magna carta then a seed to like my power slowly being attenuated by by a dot like the eventual assimilation into a global capital market they would rather go down in the blaze of glory the real hardcore of it that's what they're fighting for the same way that their ancestors the confederates did they came to the point and they they preferred like none of them were going to get none of them none of the guys all of the guys at the top of the confederacy all of the big landowners i'm sure a lot of them were very leveraged and indebted and needed to keep you know they needed high cotton prices and uh in order to sustain their incomes but a managed a managed end to slavery a managed climb down from slavery the kind that would have happened if the republicans had been allowed to govern if the republicans had been allowed to govern if lincoln had been allowed to govern without the confederacy being created and westward uh territories were where the the the extent of slave territory in was defined that would have caused a collapse of some sector of like the the cotton economy if it had eventually happened but it would have been over time and those at the very top would have been able through uh increased markets increased increased access to uh to credit instruments and bonds and all the goodies that come all the investment grade goodies that come from a diversified economy and they could have climbed down but they wanted to keep it because it was more than just system of government because these things become fused with our essence they are inextricable based in superstructure at the

wasn't it says it wasn't god damn it ***** oh my god wait a minute now ah did i do it oh i did it i don't i got you know what i did guys you want to know what i did i ***** turned it off and turned it uh no okay boomer that's why well that will never affect me because duh of course i'm a ***** boomer that's like saying okay mammal i do not have any kind of sense of uh insecurity about my generational cohort i am 0:1:4 i am old for a millennial and i am old for a millennial like i'm i'm one of the oldest millennials and also i've always been like at the very far edge of uh the whole scene you know one of those people stopped listening to new music once i although i do think it's funny that now i'm gonna try to ***** expound on some ***** that's supposed to be pseudo profound and it's gonna be on the heels of having like spent almost half an hour ***** around with my phone before i turned it off and turned it back on again so i've already impeached my credibility as a ***** interlocutor before we've even begun so that's always a good way to start but i'm all about transparency as a way to undermine judgment and protect oneself it's very good move it's a smart move oh the insta stream was i thought it was the twitch deal and 0:2:5 i thought twitch was having problems and so i just tried to do it on instagram but then it was ***** up there too so that was i realized nope it is my phone and then i thought well what's the last thing i could possibly do i could ***** turn it off and turn it back on again because i'm pretty sure what is happening is that even though i was connected according to the computer with the wi-fi uh that it wasn't really there like because whatever happens when you haven't turned the phone off and on again recently enough and so i literally just blew in the ***** cartridge so it could have been muncher that scamp it just occurred to me i can't believe how long it took to think about this with muncher being this avatar of our like joyless consumption at the end of history like 40 years of being slimer just consuming consuming as a hungry ghost with no anima no reason for being because we've been stripped of our of our control over our lives and become beings of just pure uh consumer hedonic 0:3:8 uh uh examination of spirit like just the the hungry ghost of buddhism literally after 40 years we're we're now blue and pained and in misery and what does muncher munch what is depicted behind him in that horrific 3d tableau they unveiled corn he munches ***** corn the only agriculture corn and soy are basically our agricultural exports not just our exports the basis of our heavily subsidized uh ***** monsanto franken diet that we all eat corn in the sh corn in everything thanks to high fructose corn syrups corn in a ***** gas tank as i said on the iowa state fair dock that we did you could build not you could build the twin towers out of corn and crash them 0:4:10 into 747s made of corn every day it's in plastic it's everything and sucking the corn anyway that's not what i was coming to talk today about i have an actual point here that's why i call this one a vote ball sequel because i feel like i'm getting another piece of the puzzle together that has made me pretty confident that i can now really start to try as people have asked me to to put something down on paper because i feel like there's been a missing piece a way to talk about things a way to approach the subject that's made it hard for me to imagine a coherent thing out of it that i could move forward with now i think i have it but first let me say that the other day i said that i uh knew how the what the ending of trading places was and i explained it and i asked if that was correct and most people said it was right but i did get a dm from 0:5:11 someone who pointed out that there's one detail i missed which is that they did not take dennholm elliott the butler's money to chicago to buy the frozen concentrated orange juice because this is a futures market as the guy pointed out to me these are commodity futures what they were doing is they were taking his money to act as collateral to make a margin to and then like basically taking on the assumed debt uh implicit in that arrangement selling their uh future contracts as in saying i will buy i will deliver you frozen concentrated orange juice at this date for this price and they sold those at the height of the frenzy and then after the real crop report came out we were like oh no there's not going to be that much demand for oranges because we're going to have a glut of oranges they bought those contracts at that point and 0:6:14 pocketed the difference by just literally being the middleman and that comes down the reason i didn't know that is because i didn't really understand that i really hadn't uh fully internalized that that's what a futures market is like you're literally just it's just time it's not the commodities themselves so that's a man culpa i didn't get that part right is take us from where we were talking about like the social base of this baronial revolt we're seeing now the beautiful boaters against global capitalism and we talked about their uh democr their like demographic and geographic distribution their politics and all that stuff and how that is the actual like power structure that is resisting capitalism not the people not uh uh because because yes we are all being alienated by it but our alienation is being uh gathered around the cultural uh 0:7:17 concepts generated by that culture that those regional baronies basically and uh and as such like we're not actually um we're not actually seeing any real combat about you know the underlying system of economic exploitation undergirding both flavors of capitalism uh both essentially it's essentially a battle of time it's it's the future versus the past of capitalism and then and then the present is like the and we are subject to this dispute and we can pick sides but that's because we're being we don't live as as as workers we live as uh as consumers as of spectacle and of everything uh munchers as it were that's as far as good as far as it goes but the one other thing that 0:8:19 i have kind of been gnawing at and trying to understand and i've used the college thing a lot that people are sick of me talking about college as like a way to try to get at understanding the dynamic here but it and it all felt clumsy i felt like i was onto something but it felt clumsy and this is what really made it click for me is that forget about college necessarily what we're talking about is so we've got two political wings right we've got the two battles the two the two super structural battles or the super structural battle between the two uh types of capitalism as reflected by the political parties that they uh uh are represented by right the democrats and the republicans and so we talked about the voters and that's the social base of uh of the republicans we haven't talked as much about the social base of the democrats but as you can imagine it is the white people who instead of being local barons instead of controlling capital in fixed positions like franchises or oil extraction industries or anything else they uh work they work their way through the credentialing process 0:9:20 to apply their minds to gain high status relatively high paid work in the that's the voters like obviously at the top the billionaires but these are the voters because disproportionately the vote people who vote vote most frequently vote in primaries and therefore shape the re like the political environment that we we live in and are just absorb every day are older wealthier versions of the voters of both sides so we are talking here unitedly even if you say oh they might not technically be capitalists they have capitalist interests and most of them even these pmc people they have investments in the market beyond even a 401k in a ***** house like they have they are invested in the market they are capitalists the way that the petty bourgeois often 0:10:21 are where it's not a universe it's it's not a unrestrained position of you know uh of capital ownership but it is their wealth is and their position is so those are the voters but the politics that we're seeing and the politics that we care about and the politics that we imagine the politics represented not by cable news but by the internet i.e politics as it's understood by the younger people who don't make up the voting base of politics but make up the activist base that online and in the real world creates what we call a political like movements momentum the left and right as represented not on television but online these people are the ones that we all are and these people are the ones that we are all arguing against and who who we uh spend time just 0:11:25 dissecting the motives of and and things like that because this is the self-consciously political level who are they they are for the most part not working class in the sense of being directly exploited as employees you know for their labor as a you know not even getting all of the the the cultural ***** that comes when you're dealing with you know a high status jobs you know like your your uh your retail workers your your doordash whatever uh they largely don't vote and don't participate in politics necessarily because they see it as false because they live too close to the reality of its fraud which people in the middle are and when they're kids and most ex most susceptible to creating structures that dominate the thinking that goes on the rest of their life where they are programmed they're too comfortable to have that they 0:12:27 have to be disillusioned no one at the bottom gets illusioned in the first place and so that means that we're not talking about uh the working class in general and we're definitely not talking about the poor and more than that we are not talking about the generationally poor yes some of the people in this middle that we're going to be talking about are money poor from poor money families but they likely have a college degree and at one point generated had ideas of like um um upward mobility and probably more than likely more than that most likely they came up in that middle section of like a pmc or a small business small bourgeois or that remaining slice of labor aristocracy that does exist there's still a labor aristocracy folks it's small and shrinking but it's still there the public sector in in trades it's there like if 0:13:34 they went to college they were the first members of their family to go something like that uh who were talking about who actually not only votes but creates the space of online argumentation the space of political self-conception the kind of thing that gets somebody to put on a ***** hawaiian shirt and walk outside during a riot with a gun or just to make somebody decide to go out and throw a brick and a cop like these things are not created by our social relationships near so much as they are created by our pseudo relationships between uh the internet and ourselves because where else are we getting anything where who these people are are the children of those people at the top they are the downwardly mobile children they are the children who went to college with the expectation that life would be if and if they did the things that 0:14:37 their parents told them to do and not just their parents everything around them told them to do they had a social contract in their hand and then they graduated from college and maybe they fail son into their parents basement and became pepes maybe they uh became a ***** dsa member whatever the hell it is it all starts with taking that first step off after college and just tumbling into a ***** abyss which no one had prepared you for and that's that feeling that fall that's what's powering politics at the level of activism activism remember because if it's not if it's passive spectacle observation it's just tv and it will just be continue with being what it is any anything any illusion we have that we can shape the system away from total annihilation it 0:15:39

assumes active political participation not voting and not imagining oneself to have a ***** identity what we have since we don't have a social order and we don't live class and we don't for the most part have class struggle in our lives we have a spectacle and we have consumption our uh our activism is inflected with that our activism is spectacular and it is more than anything libidinal because we are not activating we are not being um being activists on behalf of any sort of submission to a cause greater than ourselves because that requires a faith in one another an emotional connection to other people both intimately and abstractly that persists beyond one's self-gratifying impulses that's been scrubbed out of us that has been bleached out of us we aren't those people we live in the culture that they created for a long time and we see what they what their lives were like and we used the language that they used we use the vocabulary and the ideas and the symbols that they use but they are hollow and empty but we don't know that there is nothing that isn't there's nothing to contrast it with so everything is ashes i don't care how religious you are if you're a ***** christian in this country you are as much of a dire soulless materialist as the most epic bacon the ***** uh and that means that when we become active and the politics we create and the politics we've created until now what we are creating is a politics of aggrieved customers because we at a level deeper than thought are operating are being driven forward by pure self the desire for pure self um uh self satisfaction with no conception that self is infused with others because we have that drilled out of us our entire lives i don't blame anybody for acting that way and that is why when i say this i'm saying i'm not saying i'm not accusing anyone of anything i'm not saying anything bad about anybody i'm including everyone who is listening to this myself the entire politically active second generation dispossessed downwardly mobile americans who make up the political class now the they don't have any other way to be this is the only way that you have to be now people who have politics that they think are good like to think that they work thought themselves to those politics and that what made them uh not selfish made them like act for socialism and fight for socialism it's because they had some sort of conversion something about them was different and special and it really isn't that it's really which shoot which demographic uh um corn shoot you get pushed down by through basically almost entirely chance and that's what sorts you not any virtue on your heart it's like ***** plinko you can end up in a shoot thanks to banging into things that are based on your race gender uh class where geography everything injury disability these things are shaping things not some universal drive towards transcendental you know politics which you need to have to power a meaningful left but no one knows that because they don't have anything to contrast it with the anybody else's lives and so if all we know is our lives as consumers in this society and we relate to this new retraction of the social contract as consumers our desire will be to speak to the ***** manager it will be to complain to someone in power so that they change it because the customer is always right well the reason we're so ***** people are so pissed is because the customer is no longer right if he ever was it was a ***** con that was run and now at the end of the line the reality has been revealed and how are we going to play deal with it and so our politics which we think are activists and we think are moving us towards a better world and are generated by you know real human solidarity and they are at some level because once you start acting that way you start realizing oh the world there is this thing better than me oh my god there is sacrifices that mean something 0:20:46 and that changes you but you're still embedding all those experiences on top of this rickety structure that's created because you think that politics is complaining to someone else until they fix it for you because we have no understanding of ourselves as social coordinated actors we are only individual isolated actors and consumption is our expression of autonomy and action it's the only thing we can do and so we do it and so if you want to talk about every ***** pathology in politics cancel culture and ***** uh uh the rise of fascism and the question of is it fascism and the question of who's oh well you know what what could you say slurs at a tsa mean all of these things are pseudo controversies this arguments to be had that are being indulged by people who think they're acting out of altruistic uh you know socialist instincts but are truly just trying to get their ***** rocks off all of it is yelling at someone who 0:21:49 you can imagine is responsible for your pain that's it and it's disguised as leftism it's disguised as rightism obvious all of it is fake it's a ***** masquerade to re to hide from ourselves the reality that they were just yelling at a customer service rep what is twitter what is social media but an unmoderated customer service chat room to the united states of america where we say uh fascists in the streets fix this uh wow uh record-setting global warming uh excuse me anybody that's it and no one is paying attention no one is recording any of this uh your call is not uh important to us you will not be held after for a quiz on your happiness with the interaction you get nothing you have to make do and so we make a politics of sadism of punishing people that we 0:22:50 can imagine are responsible because we are cut off from even imagining productive politics that challenges capitalism from a position of strength and solidarity that transcends race transcends gender transcends generation but is unified around an understanding of humanity that insists that there is more to the human experience than can be expressed in numbers which is the drive of the capitalist algorithm ex pulling the soul out of humanity like kalima pulling out ***** indiana and so take something like uh the woke versus unwoke question on the left you know ooh slurs oh 0:23:51 should we say slurs to when we're doing socialism uh or is that you know alienating you're talking on behalf of people who aren't there and you're only making it an issue

you're making an issue preemptively these things are not emerging from like real uh connection or real events they are all people hypothetically creating situations to then get mad about that's it before they even come up if they came up in the subject of struggle a lot of this ***** would disappear like you should say slurs or i shouldn't say slurs why would anybody be who really cared about the issue at hand who is going to a ***** like a meeting to unionize a workplace or a meeting with an activist group why would they care about their if they can say slurs and why would anybody else care slurs were said incidentally you know they would have bigger ***** to worry 0:24:54 about everything flies off into neurotic flights of fancy because we're not looking to fix anything we can't even imagine committing ourselves enough for body and soul and heart to do that we are looking for someone in our vicinity to blame i remember the dsa convention i went to this is in 2017 this is right after dsa blew up after the trump election and we all went there as like press i tried to actually go there as a uh as a uh delegate for the cincinnati dsa but i ended up not doing that and there in the lead up to it there was a big controversy because a lot of the delegates said that they weren't getting enough money from national to pay for travel to since chicago and like and that the the stuff that was there which was like there was discounted 0:25:55 uh like living arrangements provided and there were meals and stuff but and it was like subsidized but it wasn't free and so people got insanely angry about that and started like yelling about how this was you know classist and it was it was showing you know that that the poor couldn't uh uh involve themselves in this and you know in the moment those sides seem to be very like that seemed to be a meaningful debate about you know how do we extend democracy out and how do we recognize things like you know class privilege and access to resources how do we allow the subaltern to speak but the whole time i couldn't help thinking that if there was real stakes here people would figure it out instead of making it an argument and making it a conflict with the in within the organization which is never a good thing if you want an organization that is effective like you might have been right in the narrow way 0:26:56 that there could have been more done to provide but making it public and making a big argument about it by definition weakens the organization like the idea that it's all good like i'm sorry like the idea that you're going to do public struggle sessions in an organization that's trying to recruit people which means that you're involving people who are just looking up from afar you're demanding that they take a position on arcane note matters like this before they can even enter the tent why would that not scare people away and for what benefit you could figure this ***** out and it doesn't take people being cops and it doesn't take uh people being wreckers all it takes is everybody looking for an outlet looking for a manager to yell at and it's not their fault they're captured by this as much as anybody and nobody's gonna think or argue their way out of these conflicts because they're serving a deeper need than anything rational so you cannot break off from them unless you find another place to find that meaning and energy something outside of that loop that loop of of of 0:27:58

hedonic exaltation and then despair and that heightened and that ever heightening need to intensify the cycle in order to make up for the fact that it's ***** wearing off it always wears off and you have to seek something else and then that that is why the questions that occupy the minds of people day and night day in and day out baffle me sometimes because the movement that's going to come is going to have a religious not in a sectarian sense but in a sense of a articulated spiritual dimension because it will be arriving alongside and embedded in real struggles between people where bonds are formed emotional connections that transcend the rational accurate uh symbolic representation for relations that we have to uh console ourselves with 0:28:59 because we build so much of our emotional lives around and that will create uh when i say religious i just mean that like if you get into a meeting and you have a conflict with somebody instead of flying into a ***** rage so that you can make a scene and be a martyr and get people on your side in your conflict with the other people in the organization who you've decided are actually the reason we don't have socialism because you're mad at them **Music playing** if that you could kind of like work things out more easily if the hair trigger if the if that hair trigger wasn't there waiting to spring on someone else because that's what we're really there for if you're really there for something else then conflicts holy ***** you can resolve them you can agree to formats for resolution of issues and go through channels instead of creating dramas that reinforce your sensual relationship and the reason for the 0:30:0
reason that this is the dominant form is because the people doing this they grew up as consumers they did not grow up alienated from this system like i was on minion death cult the other night last night and they asked me like a lot of these people who are like you might not the robin hood deal it might not cause a revolution through you know the mech the manipulation of stocks and stuff but it's gonna alienate a lot of people it's to disillusion a lot of people away from believing that the the capitalism is you know anything other than predation but i said that we already have a critical mass of americans who know that already who don't need to be ***** disillusioned 0:31:1 the poor and it does not make them into a weapon of political activism because being poor is not a relationship that builds uh durable self-sustaining uh conflict with the state the way that labor does it's got to be from the point of view of labor that's the only way it's happening that's the only way that a spark's going to be lit that isn't going to be consumed by this but these middle-class kids like i said not necessarily uh from the families of the beautiful boating small bourgeois ownership class uh not necessarily even high level pmcs but like if we're talking about the last generation to get any of that good juice nurses uh school teachers even those labor aristocrats those few remaining uh you know union factory workers but also like skilled laborers like hvac guys and plumbers and ***** uh um electricians like those those guys still exist the building trades those guys still exist and they make middle-class lives for their kids lives of comfort lies where when you're growing up you do not see the world as alienating it is alienated as as like the tendrils of trauma many of them like induced by your own body changing on you and others from externally externally bend you towards like trying to seek understanding and like the more costed you are the less you see capitalism as it is and you see the system as it is the later you come to that uh moment of alienation the harder it is so that's why the move this this coming tide this rising that may or may not that will come but may or may not come in time that's the only open question is going to come from the real pros but not that doesn't mean that people who grew up that way and now find themselves like really struggling and therefore resent being said that they're the pmc hey am i like i'm not i under yes but you are falling and it's a different relationship to politics if you can drop that ***** anchor that you're holding if you can drop that that if you can kill the ***** karen in your head you can join man you can find it come on in the water's fine it's not here yet obviously it well in tendrils and in in grass fire conflagrations that exist but i'm not there i don't know where they are sure as hell isn't around me but wherever it is and when it starts coming together the ***** the drums that's i was trying to remember where it i think we're going to do black reconstruction i don't have a copy yet so it might not be right now but i think we're going to do black reconstruction next boy came on that's it drums and you can ***** drop this ***** and get serious or you can decide actually no that's not real because it doesn't give you the juice that's sitting on your ***** ass gives you and it gives me like i said this is all me i'm literally yelling at myself every time i talk about this ***** just the question is does this refer does this make sense to you does this sound like i'm describing the world if it does yes i am projecting i am projecting 100 percent the question is am i projecting out like yeah everyone's projecting that's literally what you do that's all that that's all that like thinking is you're the only point of reference you are the only point of reference i'm sorry doesn't matter how many ***** footnotes you put in your ***** like everyone's projecting the only question is like who and who makes sense and who doesn't is does it sound like they're projecting accurately does it sound like they're describing a universalized experience or are they being bent by neuroses and self-interest no it's not solipsism because you recognize that what makes truth is not anything in your head what makes truth is what you can reflect through others because everybody that thing about you're the only one that applies to everybody so comparing notes laying experiences on top of each other and seeing what makes what connects that's it that's the only real generator of meaning and fact and truth that's it nothing can come from within yeah i finally realized that that's like really really what i'm really all about i'm a feminologist what's it yeah 0:37:30 that really is me a phenomenologist amateur phenomenologist i'll put that on my ***** uh because everything else it's like it's all good i love it history economics politics love talking about it but at a certain level you have to start um you have to start playing with tools that i don't really handle very well numbers for example there my fingers are very uh clumsy so if i can stay up here that's where i really feel like i'm snapping things together but then once i try to like come from the other end i gotta use numbers okay that felt really good so i'm gonna i'm gonna put together some stuff and i'm gonna start writing soon so look forward to something soon i'm very excited and it'll all and then the beauty thing is is that i will preface the thing 0:38:32 by saying look uh there you can look like the statements i make in this book i am not going to cite myself i am not going to i'm not going to back it up i'm not going to have stats i'm not going to have numbers they exist and i believe that everything i say will be built on a nice structure of you know well uh integrated you know uh uh uh they will mostly be take or leave concepts and if you if you if you accept them i think they really will they will all hold together but if you reject any of them that's fine and you may have your reasons but it's up to you to decide are my reasons good or are they bad do i really disagree with this because there's something wrong here or am i looking for something because i now now people can find their own research 0:39:33 people can people can i don't the whole point is to is to reject that like that's that's the thing that gets you locked in here the idea that if you can know to a fine enough degree why something is happening if you can get a swiss enough a well timed enough little swiss watch of every phenomenon in within like uh the political system that that will help you find the right thing to do and that's that line will never appear because if you don't want to cross it you will figure out a way not to cross it the line of risk the line of self-sacrifice you will if it's always going to be a question of empirical understanding you will always be able to xenos paradox your way from ever crossing the line you have to ask yourself deeper questions and if you want to try to 0:40:37 like pull things towards you know more grounded observation to back it up or say oh yeah the whole premise of this is wrong knowing when to quit knowing your ***** limitations in a world where you can convince yourself that you know everything that's one of the only ways that you can really uh be productively uh intellectual because that's what allows you to sort of you know showcase your best cut of meat and not the ***** that's all cut and uh the beauty part is is that no matter what happens and no matter what i write in this ***** thing i will not be held accountable 0:41:38 can't do it can't be done can't be held accountable sorry not **Music playing** can't

be done can't be held accountable and like i make fun of that phrase but look at it when they say someone needs to be held accountable they are writing a comment card because they're not gonna do it what they're gonna post about it they're gonna do the if everyone did the same thing they did to hold the person accountable what would change about so if that's not it clearly the implication is someone else is gonna do something i think the real hope the real thing that drives everyone participating in the political project unconsciously or not is that the way the world changes is that you say things enough you find the right phrases and the right words and everything clicks and then everyone just changes their view simultaneously and then acts differently because of that and that's not that is my friend's idealism that's not what doesn't it is conflict it's forces in conflict right now we are in the middle of a class war it's turning into a class genocide and a lot of that reason for that is that the actual working class is not fighting it they're essentially just getting mucked without putting up a ***** duke because they are not self-conscious and organized as a that project has not even really begun there's embers of it from the burned structures that have been met destroyed especially since the 70s all over the world not just in the united states or even in europe and now we have to live in the ***** but that's what's going to ***** move things not just not people uh all complaining in unison to some imagined power that will address our grievances they're in power to ignore our grievances and to only address them in a way that helps them maintain their power as soon as the power is threatened by your unified demands those demands will be ignored which is why people saying that cancel culture is why uh like discord could get away with cancer uh with uh suspending the wall street beats the page like oh if you guys hadn't created this idea and and precedent that it's okay for tech companies to sense their speech they wouldn't use speeches and excuse no they would use something else as an excuse they're in charge they do what they want and because they are just telling us how it is and we have nothing to say about it when they figure out a justification all they have to do is figure out what the ***** room tone of the cultural moment is and then use that language if they had to do it during the bush administration they would have said it was about terrorism now because the cultural tenor has changed the cultural hegemony is different they'll tell you that it's because it's racist or nazi or something they'll use the tools that are there but and the reason nobody can accept that even if they believe it intellectually is because if you really understand that that's the case no amount of this ***** will do the job no amount of complaining to the manager will do the job and you have to re orient your understanding of what political political action is and nobody wants to ***** do that because it looks hopeless and nobody wants to suffer unnecessarily and the only thing that breaks you through that lets you do the indie anna jones

leap of ***** faith into the goddamn hole is if you have a thing beyond reason an emotion an emotion that is generated by a feeling that transcends language and rationality otherwise known as faith not in anything specifically it's all arbitrary it's all symbology it's all the things that work it's the simplest it is the most religion is basically getting the these symbols that can con that can hold the most emotional meaning in the fewest characters or lines **Music playing** john brown yourself indeed not about the killing and this is a perfect example john brown has become the idea fix of the like online left since 19 since 2016. correct no one can argue against 0:46:45 that why is he fetishized because he killed slave owners because he cut the heads off of some ***** slave runners because he speaks to the manager and cuts his ***** head off it's fetishizing violent retribution again against our aggrieved individuality our the contract has been breached and someone needs to pay that's what we're dreaming about but we still do need john brown but we need john brown because what drove him to do that a thing that violated his christian sensibilities and also made him a ***** marked man for the rest of his life was fate he saw the moment the context of that of the of the ostawatomy massacre was that a big confrontation had just arisen a final big like apocalyptic confrontation between the free state forces and 0:47:47 the slave uh authorities in missouri and there was essentially a siege of lawrence a bunch of ***** butternut crackers were were huddled around lawrence threatening to sack it and and like the the free state governor and government were inside of it and they backed down the free state side back down because nobody wanted to spill any blood and from that moment brown knew it was going to happen if it was if there was not an intervention if he didn't do something to change the contours of the conflict what would happen is missouri would end up becoming a slave state and this was the fear of the antebellum abolitionist and nobody talks about it anymore but it is actually absolutely i think what would have happened missouri comes this is a slave state unbalancing uh unbalancing the senate so that now there's a majority of slave 0:48:50 state senators uh and the northern states would have seceded the northern states would have just said you know what by which the federalists threatened to do during the war of 1812 at the hartford convention which is one of the things that helped drive a stake through the heart of the federalist project and then slavery would have persisted because the south would let him go good you guys go we're gonna have our little shitty uh ***** neo-feudal uh suit like pretend to be knights in our armor doing tournament joust like a and that was going to be what happened unless the stakes changed and so they went and found some ***** uh some relatively low level uh pro uh slave state missourians some of whom didn't even own slaves they were just there 0:49:51 to you know maybe get some land in exchange for votes cut their ***** heads off and overnight that changed the stakes of the conflict so it was not someone's going to pay for this situation that can't change now some manager is going to get talked to so i can feel better this is going to materially change the conditions and drive us towards a conflict which happened after bleeding at people talk about the ***** oscillatory creek but after that happened brown and his ***** kids and his retinue ran around the whole state of kansas as like a like the wild hunt of medieval ***** europe like riding into uh pro-slavery settlements and just rustling cattle and having shootouts with us cavalry and ***** uh doing jail breaks and ***** and becoming like legendary 0:50:54 figures and drawing two kansas free staters who were willing to ***** fight and that's what galvanized northern sentiment to make the democratic compromise that had allowed the uh the democracy to hold together in the face of the wigs splitting up and the you know their opposition becoming hegemonically anti-slavery that was the last that was the ***** way for thin mint that mr creosote could no longer and as soon as as soon as the question of bringing in kansas became central to the party platforms uh it was no longer the democratic party was no longer viable and honestly it might not even matter because ***** lincoln swept the north even more uh because it's not like there were a lot of votes for breckenridge or bell anywhere in the northern states even where it was a two-man race uh uh lincoln cleaned douglas's ***** clock and 0:51:55 the thing that changed that dynamic and of course there's other stuff and there's no way to say that if he hadn't done oscillatory creek that like we wouldn't had a civil war like obviously but he he acted out of a sense of the terrain he was not acting out of a desire to see vengeance done and to see himself his bloodthirst slated i was in his 50s at that point if he wanted that he would **Music playing** oh man chinese new year they're gonna rub our asses into it and we have it coming so when you they see somebody fetishizing john brown asked like what are you really into this for and hopefully people will get that but like it means more than just symbolizing it you have to interrogate yourself and you have to find you have to log off and not just like not go on the internet not have anything around you at all but yourself to ***** sit 0:52:57 with until you hear something because there's something there we're all drowning it out every ***** second of the day we're like in harrison bergeron we don't even know we're doing it we gotta ***** sit with it and then you got to act to the people around you and you got to build those relationships through experience that let you carry through and do things that are against your immediate self-interest because you're carrying with you a warmth that's always there it's always renewing that's cool all right there you go so yeah something's gonna be it's gonna be some stuff like that in whatever i i do try to meditate i've been bad at it lately but uh i do like it 0:53:58 and i hope to get better and you know it all sounds like a like a retreat to the self which is exactly what happened after the 60s but that's inevitable like i said this experience does not for most people generate anything differently and even among people who it does generate something into their experience might not allow them to activate their new beliefs and they might end up getting just beaten out of them by life you know like it is this it only generates bad uh d you know it only generates this this empty hollow depressed life it doesn't it it it suppresses the spark of you know of of something beyond that that the awareness that you are actually connected to something off and so most people aren't going to be able to do anything effective their whole lives it's unlikely the only the things that make it more likely are things like class struggle being articulated as such which i think is going to happen but like i said you know we're just we're on a timed we're mostly going to continue to like the majority of all of us we have to remember this no matter what we individually have whatever one of you whoever you are when you're hearing this whatever you decide to do with your life there's no there's no likelihood that the that anything like the majority of people is going to have some sort of shocking change of recognition that's not going to happen they're going to they're going to be they're going to go towards their demographic uh cohort as long as they are experiencing life uh through the lenses of the consumer and that's why the 60s fell to that because it was it was a consumer revolt in the same frame in the same way only it was about it was the high expectations were even higher they were already getting stuff that objectively we would be drooling for but because of that they had higher expectations than the culture could give them and so that was a that was a consumer revolt too and now we're having another one the difference is that there is no big bucket of gravy at the end of the rainbow to drown these ***** with which is what demobilized it last time there's no there's no more ***** there's nothing in the cupboard full proletarianization and deep neopetization is all we can look forward to and that terminal crisis the the the lack of a uh realistically conceivable alternative to full of miseration if nothing changes that that's the thing that changes the conditions and spins the ***** cane and as long as we're our eyes are open and our hearts are open we can maybe participate in that but everything else is for entertainment purposes only it is not real politics it is it is a big argument of people trying to uh trying to to find someone to yell at about why and the left and right are divided demographically once again not everyone but for the most part white male uh grew up in the suburbs especially if the parents are like middle class but not college educated oh you are going to uh be blaming the blacks you are going to be blaming the blacks and if you go to college where you learn all about empiricism and about how god is dead and that we are what fill the void and that therefore we have to rebuild the world you know out of dead sticks well you'll learn about things like uh like the bell curve and you'll learn about iq and you'll learn about uh survival of the fittest and stuff like that and genetics and that gives you a reason to do that oh look at that that's so nice thank you if you grew up in like an inner ring suburb if you went to if you uh were went to college and if you aspired to because of your middle class upbringing you aspired to a knowledge economy job you're probably uh on the left somewhere like this and then the split depends on like the specific conditions of that so if you uh if you are one of those you know one of those children who got a job in like the pmc strata even though it's precarious and like you have a ton of student loan debt it is like a status job relative to you know working at mcdonald's or driving an uber but you don't 0:59:11 have a lot of money uh or i mean but you do have like a decent amount of money and an expectation of more like you have that and so you can see yourself as precarious you can definitely feel aggrieved that you didn't get the deal you signed up for but you are still feeling like you're on a you're on a track you're probably for warren if you went through that the whole treadmill and ended up falling you're probably for bernie so once again i'm explaining these things i'm talking about myself and reasonable uh extrapolations from that experience y'all can tell me if this sounds familiar all right cool i'm glad that makes sense all right i'm feeling like i'm ready 1:0:36 because like the college thing i felt like that's a good that is the experience that like demi delimits this because we're talking about uh uh we're talking about people who basically all went to college they almost all did but their response to what the hegemonic college like manners of aspiring uh managerial you know because there is no more there is no more dignity in labor there's only dignity in clickity-clac work um everybody goes into college expecting that that's the experience that like generates everything and that's the experience that everybody who makes culture does and the people who are moving towards what they think that they should do which is multiculturalism which is progressivism which is materially grounded for ones who 1:1:39 are successful because it means that they have to keep affirming these values in order to maintain their job positions because it is imposed it is an imposed thing and those areas so that's a reason that they have to hold these views you know the reason that they have to be uh woke because there's a like a prod on them to do it um and then there's the people who say ***** this and become conservative the thing that distributes them is not necessarily class because among these people we can be talking about beautiful boaters kids we can be talking about professors kids doctors kids cops kids construction workers kids anybody's kids really as long as they went to college expecting their life to be as good as it was when they were in high school that's the experience and what distinguishes it is basically geography rural and exurban and white conservative inner ring suburb and urban and white and 1:2:42 other politically active minority liberal and the college is just the shoot that they all go through that's it and now and that's what i was not really able to articulate and why a lot of people got caught off and caught up on me talking about college that it's not really about college it's about geography it's about whether you grew up around a hegemonic culture that was uh generated by the global neo-liberalized spectacle or in a more uh more socially embedded um regional culture and then they all go to college and then they get sorted into republicans and and i'm not saying that it's destiny for any individual person i'm not and i'm not saying that this is this describes everybody i am saying that if you get a bunch of people and they have these experiences it is these experiences of whiteness in a rural or ex-urban area versus uh you know uh whiteness in a diversifying inner ring a wealthy suburb experiences produce different uh like general reactions and general uh like ideological formations and those are the things that are uh dictating like the political uh scheme but that it is sterile it is not it is not because it's detached from class politics and class power in this moment of total immigration it is sterile and can only spin its wings and cannot effectively oppose the full boot of neoliberal uh globalized finance capital because it's only it's being fought on behalf of these retrograde reactionary elements that by their very constru uh nature and structure cannot allow for working class solidarity because they make exclusions on cultural lines which **Music playing** but they do it on behalf of global capital and the conservative does it on behalf of this this uh these barons this archipelago of but they're but none of them are doing it on behalf of themselves as a through class interested as a class project a class operating as itself and for itself operating for other classes for the pmc finance oligarchy and what will break that is the emergence from below the orthogonal uh release of a working glass energy the drums that boys can aim and the only and that this is not should not blackpill anyone would be like oh politics is useless it should free you these things that feel intractable conflicts between sides that are dread like this is the western front and you can just bypass it you can just say oh that's not for me you can be like that drill tweet where he gets the bill from the ***** waitress and he goes no thank you i you can liberate yourself from caring which is what is oppressive anxiety as i have said that is the electric prod on the nuts that keeps you in line anxiety because we're too well off to fear and then and that and anything that loads you up with more of it paralyzes you further is not good for you so you can ***** yes you can do the maginot move you can go through belgium and ***** this fantasy that i could there was doing something worthwhile with the podcast beyond entertainment like i still think the show is good and entertaining and i hope people still listen to it because it's fun and it's it's entertaining and it's a good product it's a good entertainment product but it did not fill the the void i had for political engagement and and uh but that was really just a a veiled uh search for personal meaning which i didn't have for a while the bernie campaign sort of squared the circle and said oh you can do the fun no difficulty thing and also make the world a better place justify yourself justify your existence and so i was like hell yeah but then that broke down and it came it's an entertainment product again but i had these greater ambitions these these pretensions more than anything of intellect or whatever and that required me to figure out like well what am i going to actually say but as i said writing is working and i don't like working so i found i found this stream process as a way to do it and i feel like i was getting to places and i was getting to nuggets and i was getting somewheres but at every point i would find where every point where it felt like ah i can start writing now i would convince myself that i needed to keep doing this instead for what i thought was uh like i didn't have enough reason i didn't have enough uh information i didn't have the insights yet but boiled down to i still think i'm gonna die any second therefore i have to get it all out now now of course i'm not dying haven't been but thinking that kept me on the easy track but i can't do the easy track anymore because my entire life has been seeking the easy track and i'm running on a runway i mean i'm not dying but i am getting older and my ability to hold on to this adolescent worldview is becoming uh un untenable and the only way that i can make that work the only way that i can make my job work in a meaningful sense is if i add craft to it and that means writing as scary as that is midlife crisis correct correct my the t starts going down the red lights start going on and if you've lived a life uh fully those kind of things should be okay the reason people have midlife crises is because the the the life of the post millennial is in 2000 the post post-20th century a middle-class and upper adult is one of sustained prolonged non-ending adolescents and not necessarily like being immature in some intellectual sense i mean not having a real imagined interiority for and the thing about living that way it's the way that you are taught to live it's the structure of all of our social organs to tell you that it is the undergirding logic of capitalism that society is the sum total of people's self-interested acts because those are the only kind of acts that truly exist and can be priced and therefore meaningful and that can only work as long as you are able to uh keep separate two facts that as a educated western person you know to be true one that you're going to die someday your physical body your meat will expire because it is finite like everything and that your consciousness is the only consciousness that you recognize as real in the universe i.e god you are god and you're gonna die that is the mindset of the western capitalist subject that is unsustainable just like the society that is made to produce these people and is made up of these people and whose institutions uh reinforce that mindset is doomed to a final irrevocable crisis and that's why people freak out around midlife because they are running out of the ability to lie to themselves that they're not gonna die and i personally have clung to politics and the idea of being a political theorist out of a desire to reason myself out of that dichotomy like yes i'm going to die of course i'm going to die but maybe i can help make the world remake the world along the way because obviously like many in my generation i do not have children i was i have not reproduced i mean part of that is because that narcissistic track makes people value their own pleasure over the sacrifice that's required to raise another person but also even if they wanted to it's harder and harder to do it expensive and so i find myself without uh a legacy you know what i mean and the thing is is that a legacy is not necessary if you have community if you have love that transcends your individual you individuality that is the religious spiritual connection to other people and if you have that then as you get older as the pleasure that you seek becomes less uh accessible it is replaced by other deeper pleasures those aren't to be found so make a mark on the world by writing some masterpiece that somehow synthesizes all world history and uh and philosophy and brings about uh if not in your lifetime in the future uh the the new jerusalem and that premise is as much a denial of death uh as the one the personal one because this social order is already dead look just like we're all already dead in the sense that the end point is certain like here it is this is a point where every individual and every social order ends and then there is you the individual you know it's here somewhere and you know you're getting towards it but you don't know where it is and psychosis schizophrenia that powers our society is gen is generated by the splitting of the human into a body that feels and senses and a mind that imagines itself separate from that process now if the mind is separate from that process it cannot conceive its own end it is infinite and the mind has but if it's not at every point being re-grounded to the body it pulls you away from not only your body but the reality of the interiority and personhood and godhood of other people because we're all god obviously god is every consciousness in one giant diamond and every one of us is a tiny facet and and i think what i've been getting at with all this stuff about like politics as uh spectacle as as customer service as uh it's obviously a lot of people say you're really just talking about yourself i am talking about myself but people like me are the consumers and generators of political culture people very much like me in class position in education and so when i'm talking about myself and i have been talking about myself to myself for this entire time uh it has been in an effort to make sense of why i personally am addicted to the spectacle of politics even though i know it is not generative of change even though i know it doesn't contribute to making the world better for anybody that in fact it only contributes to making my life worse for me and i've been trying to make sense of that and if it's useful i think it's useful because the people listening to it who are listening to me because i they have a cultural affinity they have a similar frame of reference to me in a language that i have and can understand my metaphors they see something there because they see it there too because and hysteria that is the defining characteristic of politics at the moment from q and on to you know uh blue and on and in between and also all the hysteria uh and which finding in the left and all the weird occult on the east or on the on the right is a product of the fact that we individually all know we're dying but cannot reconcile that with our consciousness and are living in a society that is dead and is just sort of moving through the remainder of its momentum and that we can't do anything about either of those things even though our point of view that is nurtured by everything around us insists upon our because the the reality of of of of existence and i've said this before on stream is that everything has already happened we do not think our way personally individually to anything our our emotions and the thoughts that connect to those emotions afterwards are all generated by our encounters with the world we do not generate that like you start crying before you're sad like we know that neurochemically you start crying before you feel sad the sadness comes afterwards to make sense of the tears and what that means on a social level is that there is this distance between our understanding of the world and the world as it actually exists the physicality of it and in that delay is where we live and we're really just hanging out there we're not in charge we are bystanders like we can't make our bodies not die and that means that we're and if you are an educated person who knows as all westerners do that god isn't real and as i have said christians don't really believe in god either they are making the same uh um hedonic calculus that the rest of us do of i'm enjoying personal pleasures finite pleasures that are at the expense of others but it also but all of those pleasures the piling of them up increases my anxiety because i know i can't take them with me and they will end someday that is an in resolvable conflict unless you create a fantasy create a story that connects those two things and christianity is a story uh islam is a story they're all stories and i would argue that evangelical protestantism is essentially the defining uh religious uh expression of that contradiction and that wahabis islam is as much part of that and mainline christianity that is now turned into liberalism which is its own secular creed is this another version of the same thing and that is coping as people like to say on the internet cope we're coping so if you don't know if god's not if there is no supernatural there is no eternal there is no ineffable because we can't feel it remember we only know things if we can feel them if we have felt them we learn through experience we connect bits of like symbolic rationality to physical encounter and so since we do not physically encounter anything ineffable anything religious really anything's truly spiritual we reason rational reason to the reasonable position that all there is is individual pleasure and hedonic indulgence but that over time becomes unsustainable because the clock and the clock culturally socially planet-wise is now ticking louder than and that is that causes midlife crises it also causes political breakdowns because in the west in in we're talking about america here specifically politics is not a battle between exploiters and exploited it is it is an expression of a reality of class oppression that thanks to spectaclization and media and atomization and all the things we've talked about manifests as a neurotic essentially extended public nervous what i mean by the middle order are people who whatever their relationship uh the reality of the life is that they spend more time unalienated than they spend laboring i mean obviously they spend all their time alienated but i mean they are not laboring at a pre uh they are not working if you know what i mean even if they have a clickity-clack job they're not really working that much they have a lot of free time if what define america and its dawn was free real estate now that the free real estate is gone our breakdown is happening because of a different free thing free time but not unalienated free time in a post-capitalist you know post-scarcity world hyper-alienated free time in a hyper commodified hyper individualized and oh and that means that that karen taught to the manager politics is the politics of people individually and then collectively as they talk to each other and express their politics and and go online to talk about it and and and perform them at voting booths and in in public demonstrations is a is a nervous breakdown because everyone knows at some level whether they believe it consciously or not that this society is gonna die just like they are and what i mean by that is not like gonna die apocalypse i mean that there can be no better moment than the present and that is what drives the neuroses of the last man that we all are uh which is that our bodies are going to die and yet we cannot imagine that and our society is going to die just as we cannot imagine that because it is all it is as totalizing around us as our minds are in interacting with it and uh and so if you want to understand what politics are it is it's that now the reason there's so much category confusion and so much argumentation and splitting the hair about what causes the middle class or whatever is because these neuroses overlap on a true actual material uh geography of exploitation exploitation of resources and humans and that means that stuck in that middle strata it's just like being stuck in your body there is this this there's this gap between the the unresolved unquestionable uh reality of death and of the end of society and our uh hopeless and and powerless position waiting for it that is the reality of the middle class existence where you have the relative ease to have leisure but none of the materials security to ensure uh secure to secure uh to feel secure in it what i mean it's a recipe for uh individual and then individuals interacting with individual group uh psychosis things like qna because if you're trapped like that and your body is dead your society is dead all we have are our minds our illusionary separate ego consciousness and then uh the collection of those that we can cobble together into a political coalition and so we think that we can think our way out of it we think that we can i and again when i say we i mean me and you can tell me 0:24:9 if i'm wrong we imagine we hope we we um we soothe ourselves with the idea that we can think our way out of it because just as we cannot bodily conceive of living forever we cannot conceive of a meaningful political mobilization because we do not have class consciousness and so we drive ourselves mad and i drive myself mad trying to think our way to out of this think of our way to a point where we choose our end where we choose how to end the system and what to replace it with where we choose the moment of our own extinguishment and our own uh resurrection and it is the uh that fantasy and the fact that everything that we see and encounter reinforces that fantasy propel our politics in a into a neutered uh and now the point of this is not 0:25:11 to say we're all it's all don't care about politics and even to log off i realize now that the log off thing was literally me looking me in the eye and telling me what i had to do i don't know what you have to do with the computer you probably have a bad relationship with the computer because most people have a bad relationship with the computer but how that manifests i don't know uh i definitely do know though that my relationship is bad and i know why it's bad and so i know that what i have to do is cut off my justifications for maintaining but the thing is i'm still a podcaster slash public you know talking head type person i'm i uh i don't have any other skills 0:26:12 i like doing this and i would like to get deeper into questions not really political questions because politics the the grass towards politics was my grasp towards a illusory immortality to history which is where i feel most comfortable and where i feel most intellectually stimulated because i feel like i understand it like i've said about the the thing that the hegel said the owl of minerva flies at dusk the the fact that everything is protein and floating at all times in the present means that i do not feel at my most useful comfortable insightful when i'm trying to talk about the current moment i feel like if you can periodize a a era that has already happened you can find something there that's meaningful and because this is all one story you can find the patterns and meanings there that can be applied by other people to the world as they like i think a good example of this of the of the way that politics is neurotic 0:27:24 is on the question of the broad question of social liberalism which is supposed to be the wedge right that prevents working-class solidarity one way or the other like on one side of the divide you think that social liberalism uh is uh makes class conscious

class solidarity impossible because of the inventorate white racism of the american working class and middle class and that that is deeper than class relationships and cannot be overcome or you think that the uh cynical uh appropriation by middle class liberals and like neoliberal institutions of uh uh like identity grievance is what stopped is what prevents class solidarity either way that's the liv that is the wedge and both sides of the left think recognize that as the wedge but the reason that 0:28:25 it's the wedge i think is because we're only absorbing it through the spectacle of politics and we're only expressing it through the only less spectacled performance of activism and uh electoralism and i think the reason for that fundamentally is that well social liberalism was the product of the mobilization of the most oppressed like racial uh cat and eventually gender categories of a society asserting their rights refusing to participate in society without their rights and that's where it started and then it was ratified at the top by institutions that were dedicated to maintaining capitalism and therefore reducing friction points and keeping as many people in the 0:29:26 community of consumers as possible so it was it was generated from below and then ratified from the top which is one of those that which is one of the things that causes the confusion about like oh is black lives matter is that an expression of like black uh oppression or is it a cynical uh neoliberal ploy it's both coming from both ends coming from both sides but in the middle it is experienced as a marker of um virtue for a segment of that middle class population the ones who most likely went to college and absorbed social liberalism there because once it was ratified at the top it had to filter down through the superstructures through things like institutions and you had you went from going to college and learning about how like the the rising tide of color 0:30:27 was going to swamp white supremacy from professor lothrop stoddard to learning uh uh abolish whiteness by uh that candy dude ibrahim kindly the thing that happens there is that is that in the middle the the governing institutions ratify a shift that is the product of genuine uh genuine oppressed uh political mobilization and then it's generated in the superstructure and people encounter it and the people absorb it because of where they grew up what they experienced going up what uh what career the path they took the values that they hold otherwise uh they are accepting it for what they think are reasons of personal virtue they think i believe like the people who have the signs that say we at this house black lives matter you know all love is 0:31:28 love those people think that they're doing that oh and i should say that this is more common among relatively secure coastal members of this strata and of course i am excluding people who are members of these groups who are obviously motivated by self-interest but a self-interest that is totally understandable and is separate from this neurotic thing that we're talking about and while people think that they have gotten to uh enlightenment social enlightenment through their own virtue is they are validating their class position and absolving themselves of the guilt involved in being in that middle strata where you are alienated where you don't really have control over anything to the degree that you can feel empowered but you also are the beneficiary of a ton of direct exploitation you are the beneficiary of things like the the uh the um the gi the racially uh applied uh fha program and the gi bill and uh and gentrification and all of those things as well as of course this the labor of our colonial subjects on the periphery we're all in a position where the only things we can find around ourselves to distract ourselves are indulgences that by definition are tied to and in that situation social liberalism is a way to consecrate that relationship i'm not bad for doing this because i am not filled with these reactionary social views and what that and what that means is that when we have discussions on questions of social liberalism and how to integrate them into class politics they are dominated by neurotic white liberals who are unconsciously for the most part trying to defend ace a thing that is central to their very fragile psychic ecosystem that allows them because when you're trapped in the waiting room of hell which we are our bodies are going to fail our society is going to fail we cannot imagine a better future for any of our descendants if we have them or ourselves no day will be better than the day we have now realistically they will only get worse but they're not but the end hasn't come yet unless you fully accept at a spiritual level by embodying your by living in a body by feeling then you will try to get out with your mind and you will build sand castles and sudoku puzzles and riddles that you will solve to avoid being in your body to avoid confronting the reality of the life you live and then those stories those those puzzles become life and that is what internet politics is it is everybody asserting their own uh fantasies of uh absolution and uh liberation that are premised on a delusion of a unlimited consciousness now of course once again i'm referring to myself but once again if that sounds familiar and so what what happened with me is that i realized that when i'm doing politics by doing this by but i'm lying to myself that this is enough that i'm helping uh it's not premised on a desire to help or love like i have talked about it's selfishness it is reaffirming to myself that i can still do this that i can still solve the riddle of history and consciousness and uh but what i can do is the thing that i have avoided because i thought i was gonna die and that is right and now i know in a way that i never really did before that i am not on the precipice of death that thing that i thought has really been my like i thought my whole adult life that my hypochondria was this curse but it was a mental function it was a function of my mind to avoid work to avoid alienated labor to avoid uh difficulty because the frictionless plane of pleasure is all you can hope for if you're gonna die and there's no eternity and there's no judgment and there's no connection if that's true and nothing we encounter will tell us that that's not true at least nothing i encountered in my life told me any otherwise then acquiring pleasures is it it's like mario with the rings you've got to grab or no sonic has the rings mario has the coins either way you're piling them up but you can't pile them up they're go away and they are evanescent and every desi no desire can be fulfilled and all that stuff and so the hypochondria was a way to justify something that otherwise i wouldn't be able to justify to myself because well if you're gonna die very soon and you don't have time to create human connections and do meaningful work and to live a fully embedded like embodied life then you might as well grab what you can 0:37:39 like the god we become the muncher that's i'm not kidding about the muncher being the avatar of this of me i mean of me if you think you're the muncher tell me but i feel like i'm the muncher and it is and it's it it's a ghost it's it's without us it is a it is a and what i was really doing was like trying to pick my own and and the only way out is through and i thought i understood that but what i've realized is that i was really just trading one delusion for another and the only real way to build the spirituality that can stand in for a lifetime of of of deracinated hedonism is by 0:38:40 struggle by struggle and there's no struggle to this this is just so easy for me just sitting here and just talking and the thing that keeps me going is the delusion that oh i'm gonna i'm gonna keel over any minute no i'm not i have time unless i get hit by a bus but then if that happens then all the rest of this is irrelevant i have time to actually sit with my body and sit in my body and try to make something that means something i don't know what it'll be i don't know if it'll be fiction or novel i'll probably try to synthesize something from what i've talked about on here into like a short volume that'll probably be the first thing i do but i'm gonna have to actually do this and i'm happy and i'm excited i'm a little scared but the only thing i know that right now i have to do is i have to get rid of this specific outlet because what it 0:39:41 the reason that this has been bad for me at this point now i think is that i as a result of the fact that i flee my body all the time and that i am able to generate theories and ideas and stories and narratives to justify almost i end up thinking all the god damn time and that's not good for you period and it's not good for me that's the one thing i know 100. but i think writing could be good for me writing could be part of that whole uh you know soul craft thing that people talk about uh because that gives you a reason to sit and think through things because the vlog concept 0:40:42 was i got to instead of sitting and thinking through things i got to just have kind of flight of fancy thoughts all day sit down put them together for a while and then walk away from them but then have to keep doing that and doing that and doing that instead of doing instead of blocking off specific time to apply those ideas which i think will be much healthier for me because it will allow me to live within my body and to cultivate relationships with other people and infuse them with meaning and so i don't know what that's going to mean in general but i just know that for that to happen i need to wean myself off of the easy intellectual fix of coming on here and just rattling off uh but as i said i will still do these because i need to like i said 0:41:44 i'm doing a lot of reading for the lincoln project and i want to talk through some of it but as a dialogue not as a monologue anymore and then i said i'd also like to do question and answer uh streams as a dialogue and then the monologuing can be contained to uh to a application of craft not just talking which is too easy that's why i sought it as a career i mean i didn't know i was seeking it but i got there and i was able to succeed because i'm good at it but it's too easy for me nonsense is like oh i'm so brilliant i'm so genius i mean it doesn't take anything it doesn't challenge me it doesn't make me have to live in my body like when i'm doing this i am a being of pure thought i might as well not be a body and that is this it's a high that i then chase the rest of the week and i have to avoid that i have so i hope people have gotten 0:42:48 a lot something out of these like theory bombs and most of all i hope very much to be able to turn them into something more coherent more supported more thought through in written form because understanding finitude is understanding limitations i cannot beat everything i cannot become the all cons like the all-expressing mind that changes the world none of us can and one of the real insidious things about online politics is that it gives us the idea that we can be everything because it is this frictionless plane where we get to theorize all day and call it politics and that 0:43:52 theorization is wasted it's wasted time for the most part because politics keep getting keep saying this will come from experience not from thought it is thought is then thought comes afterwards thought comes as a way of making sense of experience not as a way to direct experience and that's why i don't think that saying that we have to accept that this order is dead and that this society is dead is blackpill nihilism because of course it is anything that comes after whether it's unimaginably worse or better will be unimaginable because of the totalization if there is a hope of the future it will come from us and i think we have the ability to do it we not only 0:44:54 have the resources we not only have the technological advancement and the capital accumulation we have the brains to pull this off if enough of us step off the hedonic treadmill and move towards a spiritualized and i think that that that's more hope i think than you get if you theorize and and doomscroll all the time no matter what politics you think you have no matter much of a hardcore ml or whatever the no matter how whatever kind of pill you swallowed the world as it is presented to us in its pseudo form this ex this this like synthesized matrix of overlapping neuroses and breakdown is hopeless and of course it's hopeless because it's it's just an expression 0:45:58 of of uh terror it's an expression of uh of our inability to conquer our contradictions and that's because it's pure thought it's because it's pure reason it's because it's rationality and rationality is by itself and so i realized that i was not going to be able to to to make any progress for myself if i stuck unless i stopped trying to turn this into something that it can't be like what i want to do what i want to do is create something and that requires work and so i'm going to as i said pair these back to what twice a week and also i am going to and look you can hold me to this if you see me posting on twitter tell me to log off because i am making a concerted effort to just not and i got criticized a little bit for the last vote ball for saying that i was not understanding that like all of these things that i'm describing have contradictions within themselves that get worked out and that new things emerge yeah that's true the reason i didn't really notice that is that i wasn't really talking in universal terms i was talking in specific terms and i know that i have this specific unhealthy relationship with online politics that does not mean that online or any of the events that people discuss online are not meaningful and could not provide uh the context for the emergence of new new uh plate tectonic political arrangements that could generate new areas of struggle of course that's true but you will not find that by looking at it the internet because of its communist ability to connect people is useful to the extent that people use it productively so twitter useful reddit useful the whole thing useful if it's being used if you're using it if it's you're so look for that in the future hope to get something together and hope and i will update progress wise as i'm working on it on here but uh if i have another like if i get another vote ball idea you will not see it here you will see it elsewhere heroin is someone says heroin is useful too heroin is useful opiates are useful like when marx called the uh uh called religion the opiate of the masses he wasn't using it the way that like uh uh edgelord atheists use it he was using it in its 19th century term which was as an anesthetic used in surgery as a necessary medical application the heart of a heartless world he called it not opium but religion but that was the reason that he compared the two they have uses we are not using we are being used by them though because we are using them as uh as ways to self-soothe and as ways to slowly kill ourselves because if we can't have a better day than the day we have now then it is up to us to pick our end to pick when we go out that is the fantasy of the apocalypse too that we all fixate on that like well if everything is going to be worse than today and all of life is the accumulation of pleasure and pleasures will go down over time precipitously we might as well find a way consciously or unconsciously to pick a moment to to say peace but doing that is at the expense of every other person and pursuing that line cuts you off every moment that you're doing it from every other person it leaves you a terrified guilt-racked sliver of consciousness that cannot reconcile itself i mean i joked a while ago that like jeffrey epstein is the dmt surge at the end of america hasn't the last four years felt like that guy with the bull horns walking around the capitol building this feels like your brain sort of writing you off stage and that's what we're all doing but as i said the ones who are doing it the most and absorbing this the most and eating the lotus is the most are more than not relatively comfortable and the ones that are being precarious and being made precarious which is a lot of them are encountering class the experience of exploitation and they will in a in a hostile and antagonistic relationship to capital in a way that they never have before and the question becomes how do they manage that crisis how do we all manage that crisis and i and i think that the black pill is a get out of har work free card 0:52:8 it is a way to say nothing can get better i cannot imagine anything better for me or for anyone else in the future and so therefore i can indulge myself entirely and i can just eat kick it keep eat skittles for dinner until i die and yeah you could i mean it's gonna be harder and harder you know as uh our access to those uh soothing pleasures becomes more less and less but you can stuff yourself well well you can and it will leave you alone it will leave you isolated and terrified and there's no way that you won in that encounter even if you thought even if you were right even if you looked around you and you were the genius who figured out that everything was 0:53:9 hopeless it doesn't make your life any easier just like being the genius at age 16 who realizes oh my god i'm gonna die and god isn't real okay well what are you gonna do about it and i mean my god like people are horrified of like a new waves and waves of viral infections and new covets that's terrifying but i don't know how you could say that that could make you black-pilled i mean my god like the consumer engine of the american economy is about to collapse you're telling me that that does not give you some sort of hope not necessarily that something better is going to happen but that something different is going to happen then you assuming that it will have to be worse i'm sorry no one can know that you can only convince yourself that you know that to give yourself permission to keep doing what you think you want to do uh so with that i say uh not so long because like i'll be back not next week not 0:54:22 this wednesday but i think next wednesday i'll i'll uh oh man on twitter sorry i will announce uh what book what if i'm gonna do black reconstruction or something like tomorrow i think and know how i'm gonna i don't know how long we're gonna but that'll be my only tweet and um but on friday we'll uh we'll do a hangout stream and we'll just talk talk you guys can ask questions and chill but yeah the uh the i'm not i'm not going to reinvent the wheel here i got i got to sit down and i'm not going to reinvent what you know i'm not going to reinvent the wheel by writing either whatever i'm writing is going to be just a shard a sliver of insight hopefully and craft fingers crossed and quality maybe but it will be of good it will be of great 0:55:25 use to me to do it and hopefully fingers crossed it'll be of use to yeah we could do a state coins well we're not we already did the state coins we could do something um making money take it to the limit one more time show me a sign take it to limit one more time okay it's going good i don't have my computer right now so i would go by faith that i'm broadcasting i'm having mineral water right now it's very good 0:1:1

all right first of all thank you to everybody who has said log off to me when i posted today this week but you can stop i mean if you want to keep doing it as a bit that's fine don't do it when i'm replying to someone because it's someone else's mentions and they don't need them clogged i said that at the time because i needed to take like you know what i felt was radical action to to refocus myself but i've spent enough time this week really applying that reasoning to the project to the point where if i post a couple times a day that's fine okay and i have not been posting more than like twice a day and i've been spending maybe an hour daily on twitter which is a huge difference from my uh genu my regular uh diet of online and since i have to do online to a degree for the show i'm not gonna totally log off so it's about finding a balance i 0:2:4
i no it's not a slippery slope see that's the thing the slippery slope thing that's when you aren't self-motivated that's when you're that's when you're like slapping nick uh nicorette patches on to avoid smoking uh in fact like making extreme demands of yourself like that is a sign that you don't have a healthy relationship with the thing in question uh i i feel like i have a healthier relationship and therefore i'm fine so if you see me posting a ton that's not great but i don't think that will happen so just basically so that like i can reply to a friend of mine and not have to worry that 15 people are going to be in their mentions saying log off which is just going to annoy them i want to be able to talk to people who i do have like actual relationships with if it contradicts what i said last time well i celebrate myself and i sing myself i contain multitudes so but thank you for your concern uh progress i assure you is being made 0:3:6
and i'm very excited about it but i'm not just writing the book all day that would be insane i have other things to do i have actually a number of projects now that are all erupting at once so the progress is so this is the first of what will now hopefully be a weekly friday vibe stream where i will interact with chat talk about stuff i've talked to chris about maybe having guests if he can help me with that including

him like talking to chris and i love talking to chris so that'll be try to do that every friday and now starting next wednesday will be another stream about a book i have said black reconstruction but i've thought about it i really think like considering where i started with the the white book i think really the most the thing that makes sense next in terms of like reducing uh would be the phoner reconstruction book so 0:4:9 uh eric foner's reconstruction the unfinished american revolution uh we're gonna i'll talk about the first chapter since it's only it's friday and that'll be next wednesday already talk about the first chapter of phoner's boner not boner i'm sure he got that a lot growing up uh eric bone bones reconstruction so we'll do the i'm not gonna i'll blew that i think we'll do black reconstruction after this one i am doing a racism i'm doing an imperialism but the thing about fonder's book is that it covers a longer period of time and it is more uh it's it's just got a broader sweep and like i feel like you go from white which is the whole gilded age from the end of the civil war until the uh election in mckinley then you do fauner which is the whole of like reconstruction from an academic perspective and then you do do du boises black reconstruction 0:5:12 that feels like uh that makes sense to me as like a uh a vector for acquiring uh like the correct historical uh framework for for building out from there and then after that we'll see those are gonna be the next three or the next two starting with first chapter of phoner on wednesday you don't have to have read it obviously i'm not just gonna talk about what's in there it'll be a jumping off point but that'll be that and then that's gonna be the two that's it though we're not i'm gonna try not to do any other ones if something really gets me i'll write it down i'm not gonna not gonna just come on here to yell i will post after this i'll post a tweet saying what uh next week's book club will be please don't respond log so what are you guys up to what's going on with you hep cats and kittens someone's asking have i seen babylon berlin it's very much up my alley i should watch it at some point i haven't seen it yet though 0:6:13 let me get because i mean if i'm mr counterfactual now if i'm looking backward now in this period of stasis for me anyway you know politically you want to talk lincoln assassination another the other big one really that comes to mind immediately after that is the on the failed german revolution so that'll oh man i've not seen the stand remake uh it i've seen some clips from some people who've watched it i've noticed no one's talking about it it looks absolutely terrible uh i mean and it's not like the 94 one's that good but it makes the 94 one look like the kubrick shine it basically makes this this stand makes the 94 that this stand is to the stephen weber uh um 0:7:15 cable shining as the 94 stand is to kubrick shining yes lex g is really where i've been finding out don't don't bother the poor man but that he's my favorite uh uh he will not he will not allow you to to uh to follow him anyway he's locked but it looks absolutely terrible and it really does it does make it hard not to feel like mass mark

mass market entertainment is getting worse and i know that that is a thing that people resist saying because it makes you sound like an old man yelling at a cloud and there is always an emotional element to that that is reducible really to just you know things are better when you're younger than when you're older when it comes to culture and a bunch of other stuff but man uh just like everything about it just seems so and that's too bad because i love the stand i mean that i read i read when 0:8:16 i was a kid i read the like the thousand page version with all the stuff that got cut out of the original release that obviously probably should have been cut when like uh king was at his most gacked when he was mr ***** yayo uh and just writing 10 but man the new one looks bad i'm hearing that the trash can man played by ezra miller is thermonuclearly terrible uh so why is toppo chico bad for you it's mineral water what are you talking about why what are you what are you people trying to do for me what are you trying to do to me now i'm trying to cut back on uh on 0:9:24 uh dr sleep was and it's it's very funny because the whole reason that stephen king hated kubrick shining is because jack torrance was him and kubrick's version of jack torrance is not redeemable he's not he's not a man who had some weakness and slipped gave into his worst instincts he is he was a he was a vessel for evil and so it's 0:10:27 not surprising at all that king hated that because it was essentially a two-hour long uh a dissection of his darkest impulses and an essentialization of them and that's fine what that's it's it's to be expected but his his 30-year long attempt to essentially erase the kubrick movie from existence first by making that and then doing the terrible sequel which was then made into a somehow worse movie although i have to say it's very funny to me that he wrote the book to help expregate the movie from existence and reaffirm the privacy of the original novel and as a result dr sleep is a sequel to the book not the movie and so that means that dick halloran didn't die uh and also uh the overlook blew up and so at the end of the movie when they when 0:11:28 the other the book doctor sleep when they go to the overlook it's just a big field but the movie is a sequel to shining the movie and it when they go back to overlook it's still there did i not send a uh a uh a twit a tweet a twit a tweet about the stream i thought i did i don't have my computer i can't leave this i thought i sent us i'm sorry i don't have my twit my my computer right now is down i oh man the shining 0:12:30 sequence in ready player one spielberg is a demon i mean he's incredibly talented but he is a ***** demon allegedly contrasting him with cameron i think really shows you that like spielberg is is terrifyingly narcissistic and everything that he does comes from that i kind of honestly sometimes think that his most autobiographical movie aren't any of the ones about divorce and the suburbs it's temple of doom when you can think about who he pals around with and in hollywood who else uh it makes up it makes you think that like that was actually the movie about his life the the

uh for the idea that women are to keep around as arm candy but they're not there to have any kind of emotional relationship with uh real real time is with the bros 0:13:32 including the small the small friends and sometimes that uh fun involves uh maybe in temple underground where you do fun things and you chill out and how the mark of sophistication is the willingness to eat things and perform rights for example that maybe normal people allegedly i'm just saying silver gives me the ***** creeps as a person he's very talented and it's interesting contrasting him with cameron who probably is a bigger jerk to work with than spielberg but clearly is not part of the uh i'm not against hanging out with the boys but you know you need a uh you need an 0:14:34 integrated self and i don't think you ever got one i think spielberg is very talented i spielberg is able to uh to create investment in uh characters visually which is very difficult he's able to make you identify with the character and then create stakes for that character's actions that compel you to keep watching just just with depictions of them which is a tough oh yeah the lincoln movie i loved the lincoln movie when 0:15:39 i saw it i gave it like four and a half stars on letterbox if anyone wants to go back and look at it the politics of it are genuinely terrible i mean like all the spielberg's politics overt politics as opposed to the meta-politics that he's dealing with the uh the actual um overt politics of spielberg's movies and this is one of the things that makes you know that he is you know a hollow man is is this sort of the sort of soulless liberalism that it's horrifying to imagine somebody investing that much uh energy in depicting because it's so just the background radiation of life why would you feel the need to do that why would you feel the need to assert in this culture the need that that like compromise is the most important thing it's like what the ***** especially since the context doesn't even make sense uh abraham lincoln was not compromising with anybody they were they were burning and destroying half of the goddamn 0:16:40 country in the middle of all those debates about the 13th amendment and you're supposed to side with lincoln over stevens uh when they're discussing plans for the south and stevens is talking about d uh just uh exploring the entire planter class and redistributing their uh their land and lincoln's like oh you do fall as if what we got instead is so manifestly better than that would have been but honestly i feel like the real slander if there is one is that i don't think lincoln i think lincoln was would have pursued a course closer to what stevens was proposing than to what we ***** got from johnson which is one of the reasons i want to really explore the concept of a counterfactual non-assassinated lincoln reconstruction but the thing that makes that movie good is one the actual storytelling visually is compelling like when when they're doing the vote on the 13th amendment and then the bells chime it's it's i 0:17:41 teared up and of course the performances are amazing and yeah daniel day-lewis is the definitive lincoln and uh those those elements are all great but they're in the service of this soulless entity and that's the spiel that's the thing with spielberg is it there is a hole there there is a big gaping hole and the more he the more he's able to hide it the more he's able to alight it the the more sort of purely pleasurable his movies are like jaws but where he like reflects it like lincoln like like his more overtly political movies that he's done recently like uh the post and stuff you see that hole and it's like it's a little creepy jaws isn't soulless of course jaws isn't soulless because he's not showing you his hole he's not he's not putting a flashlight in his hole and you could thank carl gottlieb and and ***** dreyfus like these are collaborative processes wow like spiel et's jurassic park fantastic i gotta re-watch close encounters 0:18:47 it's been a long time i don't think lincoln was gay he probably did gay ***** though with like joshua speed he probably did some gay ***** but i think gay ***** was pretty common among his class and time really because one thing to remember is that guys didn't get guys got guys in like the aspiring classes in the 19th century got married late they did not get married in their early 20s they got married often in their 30s what where the hell were they doing during the height of their uh their like essential drive they were probably doing you know obviously there was a lot of prostitution but also but i don't think that he was like i think i think he he i think it was more fluid in general like talking about gayness before like the modern era is 0:19:50 kind of uh a misapplication of terms anyway buchanan i think was like exclusively for the dudes buchanan was a guy who you would because the got his uh the big reason for that the big reason i think that is because of his close intimate friendship with another politician of the year another doe face named uh who was briefly vice president although he died before he could get sworn in of malaria i believe in cuba william rufus devane king who was known in washington for his flamboyant attire and affect uh and i believe andrew jackson called the two of them aunt fanny and miss nancy or something i gotta re-watch the abyss that's the cameron movie i've 0:21:4 probably least familiar with i saw it as a kid and i time pence got fired got pence got hired by the um someone says pence got hired by the um heritage foundation he's also probably he's i heard he was doing a podcast uh which is probably from the heritage foundation which uh is very funny because at first you think this guy is a charisma zero why would anyone listen to that but he actually got his start after a failed political bid in talk radio which is kind of amazing and it really does tell you how uh indiana it really is the blandest place on earth that mike pence was like the rush but i i but he had to go to the heritage foundation because i can't think of a 0:22:15 less popular politician right now in amer in america than mike pence not necessarily like he's the most hated like emotion like there's a lot of emotional investment by it but clearly any of the real trump people don't like him they feel like he did show himself to be a ***** as trump told said to him uh and then he's still too creepy and

and socially conservative like overtly socially conservative for to become a resistance hero like i joked that he was like a leader for he's more likely to be the democratic nominee for president than a republican nominee for president and i mean obviously i think at this point democrats like him more than republicans but they still don't really like him he's still creepy he's still good so i can't think of anybody with less of a political future which is kind of amazing because you'd assume that you know the vice president is is well positioned but i think we've seen the last of him obviously 0:23:16 there's no way of knowing but i think we might have seen the last of him in elected office he's just going to shrivel into a little prune in his little heritage the idea of trump at a think tank would be pretty funny as long as they gave him a twitter account they might i'm wondering if they're going to give him back his twitter account at some point because he was just such a big draw but honestly the longer he's away the more relevant he feels doesn't it feel obviously this is all subjective but doesn't it feel just like oh we really did kind of conjure him into being and like we made him the over ruling like mind in the country because we needed him and then as soon as the tensions that he provoked became unsustainable shy of an actual military 0:24:18 confrontation that none of us are uh ready for we've just collectively like popped him and sent him off like like ***** witches of eastwick we'll yeah it's like he's a topo we created like on an acid trip and now it's like we're eating orange slices and he's just fading into the any movies i'm excited for this year uh all the big ones i i am interested somebody asked about that the fred hampton movie i don't think it's going to be good or anything but i am interested in seeing it it'll be an interesting document of the time i mean i think it'll be honestly very interesting even if it's terrible you know how how we're thinking about stuff like the black panthers in the current moment when you know like the black struggle movement has re-emerged as 0:25:21 sort of the synoquinon with the left but it's also at the same time being co-opted into like a justification for neoliberalism like those three things are happening at the same time and that's that's why the argument about that is stupid because they're both happening it depends on which end of the ***** thing you're looking which side of the kaleidoscope you're looking through uh and apparently it's got squibs so i will see it uh also i'm a chump king kong versus godzilla i'm sorry i don't care i don't even care that's gonna be on a small screen they're fighting looks cool uh i liked i'll admit that i liked the dower uh grimdark godzilla from 2014 that a lot of people hate just because they don't give you a lot of godzilla and i think that is rare in blockbuster filmmaking now uh and i like kong skull island so we'll go and of course who of course number one with a bullet although we'll see if they delay it 0:26:22 again if movie theaters are back by the fall ghostbusters afterlife so that i can in fact i must see the muncher with my own eyes i must look into the mirror myself and see that the the the joyless subject whose only uh desire is consumption but for whom consumption dune i gotta say i did not like the trailer i've gotten over a villain to wave at this point and it's just why is everything got to be all why can't why isn't there any ***** color anymore it's like i saw like a grandpa but like not everything where's the color i will see that though i saw buck boy i did not like it i gotta say 0:27:25 i i got what it was going for i think but it didn't really yes uh i've heard about the uh the creation of new detroit in nevada how there's gonna be actual corporate uh company towns i mean that's that's the trajectory we're on it was going to happen at some point and now it's just happening i mean that's really a lot so much of the anxiety of the moment is that ***** that we all knew one way or another was coming and knew would be bad when it got here is happening and we have no way we can't imagine a way to stop it or change the trajectory and yeah i mean this is just the next step of a process that's already happening in most of our big cities especially 0:28:27 any of the ones that have a lot of tech money in them i mean detroit itself literally already is new detroit downtown detroit has been a private fiefdom of dan gilbert's uh uh quicken loans i think for years now they have they run their own they run this the security no dan gilbert is cleveland he's from cleveland and he owns the browns but but he also owns the middle of downtown it's not no it's it's detroit i love being incorrectly corrected i love how detroit is the is the center of uh a pizza chains the 0:29:32 hometown of little caesars and dominoes i believe like the owners of both of those have swapped off ownership of the different sports teams over the and i love the fact that uh monahan the guy who founded domino's is like a opus dei psycho catholic who founded his own catholic planned community and college in florida and you'd be you'd think that there'd be more of awareness that detroit has its own pizza style especially since pizza hut ironically the one that's not from detroit has sort of as its baseline pizza one that's most reminiscent of i will i don't know if i've said this 0:31:0 on the stream before but when i was a kid in a small like a 30 000 person town in wisconsin like an hour away from milwaukee like not not a suburb like like a little like a a medium-sized town uh pizza hut in like the 80s and 90s that was the nicest restaurant uh i went to as a kid and not because we were poor we were like you know decently middle class in income it's because that's all that's that was there weren't nice restaurants in in in like large parts of this country back then so the things that i associated high fine dining with like low lighting at banquettes uh the pebbled glass or pebbled plastic cups that kind of looked like they were glass and of course the buffet those were all those were all from um i think though that that i 0:32:10 think that that type of fancy dining is no longer i mean i think that kind of decor is not no longer what people think of when they think of like nice restaurant i think now uh now it's lighter it's like brighter that was like kind of a mid-century thing

like you watched mad men everybody is you know smoking cigarettes the other nice kind of nice place we had just because it was dark was we had a the closest thing to a restaurant we had was a place called friar tux and i think there were like maybe one or two other locations in the area but it might have been the only one and it was it looked outside it looked like a fake little medieval uh building and it had very narrow sort of arrow slit windows and the waitresses all wore very very short uh 0:33:11 monk frocks with like a cord belts and they made real and they sold burgers people are talking about stop getting kicked off letterbox i have to say i i got on letterbox a while ago i enjoyed it i'm still on there i you know i basically if i remember to if i remember to put one in i will post one like i'm not like tracking obsessively every movie i put in there anymore but uh it's been fascinating watching that place be get the neuroses of social media sites as people have like as essentially people are moving like locusts from one social media site to another and generating this cloud of neurotic energy about culture and politics mostly in order to get frisian from their 0:34:13 interaction with the internet and in a while it after a while it kind of like peters out and they lose the ability to get that hit and so they have to move on they're like the ***** aliens in independence day uh or otherwise known as like the human race and now they're on letterbox and so now letterbox is the new tumblr twitter where everybody can just oh now we can all uh have struggle sessions every day about these specific films no matter how old they are and uh the way people respond to them fun good stuff definite sign of a oh god jimmy's grotto in waukesha the home of the panzerata which is like a gut bomb uh calzone i only went there a few times it's too heavy but yeah the fact that stav got ***** banned for doing some joke for 0:35:15 objectifying people film is objectification by definition and it i do disagree though a lot of people are saying like that these puritans who are going on there to conduct witch trials about problematic content and problematic ways to view films they say don't they get the film is for perverts that film is about you know desire and and all that no i think at some point they get it it's just that's what turns them on what turns them on as much as you know uh uh uh like brian de palma is turned on by the voyeuristic male gaze and as much as film is about the male gaze for these people who are on there now getting his getting very upset about that and and uh and essentially creating like lists of prescribed entertainments that's for them their perverted pleasure that's their uh libidinal uh indulgence so essentially there have 0:36:17 like film is voyeurism and then there's this metaphorism where you're not necessarily even looking at the movie you're looking at who made the movie and who watched the movie and that's where you get off so it's all it's still perverse it's not like these people aren't perverts they're just as perverted as the real pervs it's just that now they're in there too and just and that the problem though is that when that becomes

the dynamic uh it it has to escalate the conflict destroyed people got mad at me for for not liking knives out i don't get that i mean it's really not the politics i just said that there's a weird thing people do where they say like you guys talk too much 0:37:18 about movies you only look at them through a political lens well i don't but when i talk about it on my political comedy show i'm probably going to talk about the politics why else would i be talking about a movie if i wasn't going to put it through a political lens that's the whole that's the frame of reference for which why we talk about everything that doesn't mean that's the only way to enjoy a movie the only thing about a movie to enjoy it's one element that you pull out and talk about it's not the only i mean one of the problems we have is so many people think that politics is the only lens to look through things and also that the if you say one thing about a movie if you express one opinion online it is a consecrated uh totality of your beliefs about it but i was put off by the politics of of uh knives out but even if you cut out the alt-right kid thing there's there's nothing there that i enjoyed at all and so then 0:38:22 but if we're talking on our politics podcast about why it's bad i'll bring that up but there's plenty of other things about it that oh christopher plummer died r.i.p to a i actually people say what about culver's there wasn't a culver's in manner to walk when i was growing up there i didn't have culver's until i moved to the milwaukee 0:39:25 area there might be one there now but there uh what else didn't i like about knives out the structure of it i i mean i like those well for one thing i don't really like those kind of movies i'm not a big fan of the agatha christie contact the the the the sap the concept like the agatha christie whodunit thing it's fine but it's not something i seek out so that it's already not going to grab me on that respect and then the way they did it also it is interesting though seeing regional you can really trace uh the pattern of um of retirement migration like internal retirement migration of american 0:40:28 populations by the way that regional chains uh move around like there's a culver's in i believe there's culver's in florida and there's culver's in arizona now because that's where wisconsinites move when they get old and they want their food they want their do people i can't believe it either but people do actually no yes people refer to arizona and if i was going to do that if i was one of those people i would absolutely pick arizona over florida to me that is not a contest i mean yes the ocean is nice but if i move into the water i would move to the pacific and also the ***** humidity and the giant bugs and everything the desert is is is a transcendent place or can be and uh so i can see i can see the appeal of arizona but neither of them are like places i 0:41:35 would want to move i mean people move there because you get to live the life of a retiree which is like this frictionless convenience festival and that's terrible for your brain i didn't see jodorowsky's doom because i don't i've never been a dune guy it's not really my deal uh and i saw the lynch dune a couple years ago and it was uh not good i mean i i don't think it was good at least but it was visually interesting which 0:42:36 is more to say than you can say for the new one at least from what i saw in the trailers uh and i've seen some jodorowsky movies but i bet that would have sucked too i bet that it actually made that movie squibs are not the only thing i care about in movies but the lack of them is just something that that saddens me because you're seeing as i've talked about just the hyper the hyper uh elimination of meaningful uh 0:43:39 artistic elements within films like there are fewer and fewer places where people can make decisions in the interest of quality they can only make it in the interest of the budget someone was saying that squibs aren't just like the the the uh death of squibs isn't just about money it's about safety but if those two things were in conflict what do you think would win i mean it's only coincidentally safer and that still me doesn't mean that you should get rid of them completely i think uh chris pointed this out uh you don't have to make every ***** if you're making a movie with a bunch of shooting you don't have to have everything be a squib you can have plenty of things where you guys just fall over with no blood whatsoever but when you do show some blood show some real ***** blood instead of okay everybody's gonna have a like 0:44:43 that's a perfect that's a perfect example uh chris said like commando in the end of commando when he shoots everybody on that island most of them do not have squibs they just fall over but a few shots you get an in-cut you got an in-frame you got a cut to a close-up and then there's some squibs in a modern version if they did commando again every single person who got shot would get a big cgi blood splatter i saw awakened fright i just saw it a few months ago it's a great it's a hor it's called a horror movie and the horror prince the horror uh question that is asked because you know all horror movies are premised on what if what if this really happened 0:45:46 and how terrifying that that nightmare would be like what if freddie the the mike marinelli street movies what if you could be killed in your dreams you know texas chainsaw massacre what if you uh picked up a hitchhiker who uh was part of a family of cannibals wake and fright the question is what if you were forced to hang out with and that is a terrifying thought i am looking for i got to say i'm still want to see tenant even though i i think the interesting thing about nolan is that nolan is it's 0:46:52 very he is really the director for our time because he is a figure where he is as he's like he is someone without a soul like his films are fully soulless and what he replaces soul with is uh self manufactured puzzles like just what i have no interest in people as such but i do have uh interest in in challenging myself to get out of and that very much is like that's what film is that's what the internet is now it is we've sort of cast off any we've cast off our bodies and we've decided that like while we wait for oblivion while we wait for individual death and for the death of our species we're gonna basically 0:47:54 do mental crossword puzzles and that's what that's what nolan movies are that's

what all of the arguments people decide to invest with yeah because like yeah like complexity you know neither godzilla nor king kong will win as i said in the other stream they never never never have one definitively win i do like though that when they originally did king kong versus godzilla there was the american version king kong won in the japanese version godzilla one they should do that again that'd be funny although honestly they would switch it now at least in america like they would want godzilla to win because like king kong winning would be too uh like imperialist or something it's a myth oh never mind i never saw it i'm not a big i'm not a huge 0:48:55 godzilla guy it's going to have a definitive winner interesting well if it's not king kong then it's ***** i'm sorry if it's not king kong i'm sorry if it's not godzilla it's ***** oh the godzilla king of the monsters the one they did a few years ago is not good at all uh no godzilla come on godzilla beats king kong i don't care if you make king kong bigger so that they can fight on even terms king kong gets somebody asked 0:49:57 about a relatively obscure movie from a few years ago standoff at sparrow creek that is a movie that a lot of people should watch people who are like freaking out about uh q anon and the proud boys they should really watch that movie because it really does spell out how this actually works how much of how much of what we think are these uh like insurgent uh reactionary militia movements are in fact being directed to some degree from the leadership positions by law enforcement i mean we just had that confirmed with the the proud boy leader who was arrested the day before uh the the capital uh breach with the just enough just just the the right amount of uh like i think uh weapons uh like magazines uh rifle magazines to get arrested so that he couldn't go but all of his supporters went i mean if they're all if they're all informants i think people really need to ask themselves well what are we actually getting out of 0:50:58 all of this drama and like are we really are we really fighting evil or are we playing our part our necessary part in a public conflict that only serves to reinforce state power wow the real right wing threat is esoteric fashion eco fash i i don't i gotta tell 0:52:16 you i don't think that's true i don't think fash is a threat to anything i think all of these things are components of one big post-fascist regime that is it is empire in its death throes it it its violence comes home to police those within its borders who can no longer be but that's not a political it's not a political contest it is all of politics it's not the stakes aren't real because there is no alternative within the structure within the points of conflict the uh the emergence of of an alternative is going to be i hate to say it orthogonal to everything else there'll be a reconstruction board game okay 0:53:28 that sounds interesting wow we really are just waiting around in the ***** uh we are in hell's waiting room aren't we just like no alternative nothing nothing can be better so we're going to imagine ways that things could be better in the future and the way things could have been better in the past to make the future not what it's going to be and i'm part of that i'm not blaming anybody for that but i think that you have to understand the current political moment and culture in those contexts and doing so i think robs a lot of the drama out of it and robs a lot of the urgency out of things that really aren't that important because politics is dead but it will not stay dead because the things that have killed it the things that have narconized us to politics the things that have made it so that we can't be effective political actors 0:54:32 uh are going away are changing uh the conditions that paralyze us are shifting very quick and that is going to give us new avenues for for political action that can't be predicted or extrapolated out from the present and that's i think that's the thing like that's the thing to remember when you but i would like to play the reconstruction board game certainly i uh i'm uh someone's asking sativa or indica i'm not i'm off weed right now it's like i'm trying to recalibrate and and just start from scratch like knowing where my body is knowing what's real and what's been exacerbated by by 0:55:33 chemicals and i have used sativa because it gets me like on point but i don't think i need that anymore uh i'd be interested in the future to maybe try something uh that like puts you in your body as opposed to makes you gravitation reputation's going good i've been meditating all week 20 minutes or so a day after having been off it for a while it feels good i'm gonna try to keep okay this is good the aoc thing i don't like talking about afc because she is a she's a voodoo doll like she she's she exists to to uh to pour your frustrations and anxiety into one way or the other uh but the whole thing the whole trauma narrative that she's going with i don't the 0:56:34 argument about like whether you whether it's real or not absolutely baffling that these are conversations people are having she's essentially acting like an influencer like that's the way to understand all this stuff like her talking about her trauma and now they're gonna have like everyone talking about their trauma she might think that this is like a political play that's going to help her side versus the republicans but that's only here that's only at the top of her reasoning the real reason she's doing this is because she's she is a millennial and that's what you do she's a celebrity she is an influence what is a member of congress even a member of the squad which is a tiny fraction of a fully neo-liberal democratic party caucus what can you really do especially since there's no popular movement that you can direct or coordinate with to put pressure anywhere you you stream yourself you stream yourself what am i 0:57:35 doing i'm streaming myself she's streaming herself you post she's a poster she's an influencer that's what we all are people get mad at her for it and that's beside the point people want to defend it and say that it's like a politically effective that is also not true it is what you do instead of politics i mean i i'm not a fan of of this idea that that everything it that all trauma needs to be fetishized uh and wep and used and and that because it rests on this assumption that that other people are going 0:58:37

to respond to your narrative the way you want them to and that's just not true which is why it ends up just being self-indulgence and and self-promotion but again that's all it can be getting mad at any politician at this point is like getting mad at the weather i don't want to talk about that guys i don't know i'm done talking about housing i never went to kings island when i lived in cincinnati never been a huge theme park guy because the lines never were never good hated that hated going somebody says thoughts on the rise of incest porn i was thinking the other day that because i just rewatched under the silver lake which is i think a really great and underrated movie that is extremely relevant to the current moment in a way that is actually interesting and provocative as opposed to just being lazily uh you know like it's you watch a movie like that and then you watch movies that are like clearly going off of you know twitter topics and and trending uh uh talking points and and uh and are clear and are like written by and for people who are online all day uh it's it's night and day like that there's no pandering in that movie but it very much speaks to the moment in a deeper like uh like basil level uh and i was just thinking about how the whole story of that movie is about a downwardly mobile middle-class white guy who literally cannot get a girl i mean not just because he's a psycho i mean he is a psychopath and that's all part of it like it's about misogyny in in many ways but he can't get a girl because the girls are all with rich guys because and uh no no no none of the women his age uh the guys don't have any money and incest porn is sort of the same thing like the girls your age are with your dad so you have to have sex with your stepmom also for incels specifically who make up a big portion of pornography's uh base users uh the another lure of uh step step pornography is that you know porn porn fantasies are they have to be to some degree plausible or attainable to really tantalize and so if you're talking about people who really don't go outside the home at all uh even even like the fantasy of workplace sex is a bridge too far so the only person you can realistically fantasize about is someone who you can ***** without leaving okay somebody i think to wrap it up the last thing someone had a long thing in chat just now saying that we're a schizophrenic society because of the divide between our digital and uh real selves and i think that's true but i think it even goes deeper than that because that is only a proxy for the greater the deeper divide in the modern self between the chronologically grounded self i.e the body in space and the uh mental mind self that is that is unbounded by space or time and the internet is more than anything a tool to allow us to spend time in our bodies that is not processed chronologically and therefore cannot accrue meaning because meaning must adhere to experience and there is no experience to like you get mad and you get angry and you get horny and you get uh scared but it's essentially your brain tricking you into feeling those feelings that is and so where you as what you uh assign the cause of those feelings is also made up by your brain which is harder to do when the source of your emotional responses is a material interaction that occurs in a chronological space-time i was pretty old when i really got into the internet and i think that's one of the reasons that uh one of the reasons that it wore off for me is 1:5:31 because the the it was never as satisfying i think as it is for younger people because uh the contrast between a life that i had had or i was imagined i could have had instead of it was greater whereas i think for younger people the internet is taken for granted but that doesn't mean that a crack up is not inevitable i think that we're in the process of a full social uh breakdown but not that doesn't necessarily mean the apocalypse or the end of anything it means people are getting to their end of their particular ropes the the coping mechanisms we've met we've created they have a fuse they don't last forever there's only so much dopamine you can get from a pseudo existence and it's different for people like some people it's longer than others but everybody gets to a point and uh i think we're all getting there and i think one of 1:6:32 the big reasons that we've had this big explosion in political hysteria in the last year is because of ***** cobit and it's weird how we've normalized covets so much that we forget that there's no way that i anyway can imagine things like q anon occurring the ***** capital breach occurring without a context where our coping mechanisms have been radically reduced the things we have had historically in this country to allow us event to allow us to compensate for the lack within our lives our rem are sucked in and if that persists it's only going to get weirder i think we're in for weird weird weird times uh but weird times are when when new things emerge by definition and that's something that it's obviously scary but to me it's less scary than the narrative 1:7:33 that a lot of people have internalized of total social uh fixitness of the idea that these categories are un uh unchallengeable and people have said that i say that but i just mean that that looking through the current structures that is the conclusion to draw conclusion the last movie somebody says joker was the last movie they saw on theaters last movie i saw in theater was uncut gems which we talked about a little bit on the last episode about trump movies but i'd like to just end here talking 1:8:35 about how uh you could i couldn't really pick a more perfect film because that movie is about the uh the death drive of american society i mean i know it's specifically about you know judaism and stuff and like jewish experience but as a it is part of a broader uh a broader analysis of of a people americans who believe themselves to be eternal beings but who have physical bodies and who can't reconcile those two things other than by subconsciously seeking death on their preferred terms like the beginning of the movie he's getting the rectal exam and it's actually kind of up in 1:9:37 the air and i actually thought he was going to get a call halfway through that he had cancer and then he gets the the call oh i don't have cancer yet oh he doesn't have it now that doesn't mean in five years he's not going to have it that doesn't mean in 10 he's not going to get it and he even talks about his family history he's probably going to get it does he want that does he want to wait around to ***** get chemo and and get sick the thing that everybody watches their family members go through with horror or do you die on your own terms going out on top and that is why that movie has a happy ending he got what he wanted but in real life you can't do that and one of the reasons we're cracking up is that it's a society of howie ratner is trying to dictate their end but you can't know because you set it up and it doesn't come because you're not you're not you don't want to die in your conscious mind and then it doesn't happen and then you have to keep doing it you keep doing the same thing and it just it drives you into into his into uh madness and it's driving us all into madness it's especially funny seeing that movie right at the moment where like bernie looked like he might win you know before covet happened it's like oh if you could pick a moment wouldn't that have been the moment but you don't get to pick the moment you don't get to be howie ratner he is he is a classic uh hero in the sense that he he ***** he saw the moment even though he didn't know he was seeking it and he he got his end he got an end on his own terms all right uh that's good i felt nice this is fun i like this it's uh the stakes are lower i can uh talk things out without feeling like i have nowhere else to put things uh but so next wednesday and i'll tweet this after i'm done uh we will talk about the first chapter of eric foner's reconstruction as i said if you don't read it that's fine we'll talk about it enough that you'll get the gist and if it sounds bye

*Music playing** peas peas peas peas eating goober peas goodness how delicious eating goober peas we love the goober peas don't we folks we love to eat a goober pee it's the best you go you take them you put it in your mouth you march through georgia with your group of peas if anyone remembers that they probably don't that was a civil war marching song about peanuts that's how unentertained people bear back there they had to sing songs about goddamn peanuts how sad can you imagine how bizarre how bizarre so today we're going to talk about the first chapter of reconstruction but before we start just do a little how you doing everybody don't worry if anybody didn't do the reading it's no big deal the first chapter uh is mostly 0:1:1 setting the stage it starts with the emancipation proclamation the signing of the emancipation proclamation and it's uh essentially focuses on the way that the civil war had broken apart american society how it was exposing and intensifying friction points between elements of the social order uh and most importantly creating new formations and new relationships between them that's that's what uh that chapter is really about before you even gotten to the end of the war uh and what phoner does is he basically goes through the north and the south and examines the uh ways that the different broad social groupings of the north and the south have been changed by 0:2:2 the war starting of course with the slaves who by 1863 had begun in huge numbers to resist plantation authority to flee to union lines whenever they have a chance and to in general withdraw their labor from uh the confederate war effort this is what uh du bois i know calls in his book general strike that's how he frames it that what fonder is getting at here most importantly is that this is an assertion in the context of the war of like black uh freedom and and uh an assertion of uh black rights uh and a demand for not only the end of slavery but the end of the the social caste system that had emerged and on the other hand the non-plantation-owning at the same time that this 0:3:3 was happening at the same time as slaves were sort of rebelling and resisting slavery and aiding the union army uh the up country as their known southern whites the poor subsistence largely subsistence farmers of the appalachians but and essentially anywhere uh of mountainous terrain where plantation agriculture and the hegemonic

culture that plant technology plantation agriculture created couldn't sustain itself and in those places resistance to the confederacy was always relatively high and got higher over the course of the war as the confederacy uh asked more and more of smallholders of poor whites and less and less of uh the rich plantation owner class 0:4:4 the the south instituted a draft before the north did it exempted before the north it had its 100 man policy it exempted owners of slaves i believe more than 20 slaves from uh most interestingly and importantly i think uh the interests of individual slave owners came to conflict with the interest of the confederate uh cause because there was money to be made from dealing cotton and other materials to the yankee and veda which was too much of a temptation for many southern uh uh southern plantation owners to resist meanwhile the poor up country whites were the vast 0:5:7 majority of the uh military they were they were they were the the cannon fodder of the war uh and they were also uh asked to pay the lion's share of taxation and suffer the most the ones who stayed home due to shortages in food there were bred riots throughout the south there's a the most famous one was in richmond but they were and this led to a wide light wide-scale sabotage draft resistance uh and union sentiment uh in the upcountry of the south now that did not translate to some sort of solidarity with slavery upcountry southerners blamed blacks for slavery as much as they blamed the owners of blacks for slavery and i just there's one quote from that fauna uh puts in here from a methodist circuit riding preacher in uh eastern tennessee 0:6:8 which was a hotbed of anti-confederate sentiment because it was mountainous uh and in fact if it hadn't been for the quick deployment of confederate troops to uh root out unionist sentiment and hang unionist leaders there's a good chance that eastern tennessee could have seceded from tennessee the same way that western virginia did earlier in the war which by the way west virginia uh being able to secede from the confederacy and become its own state that was the one site of the war where mcclellan was able to distinguish himself at all that's where he got his early reputation was in securing western virginia which allowed it to secede from the confederacy that would that could have happened in eastern tennessee uh except for the the confederate army which came in and started hanging people without due process because they love liberty so much but uh what this this preacher this anti-confederate uh you 0:7:9 pro-union preacher william brownlow said that he wished to arm every wolf panther catamount and bear in the mountains of america every rattle snake and crocodile every devil in hell and turn them loose upon the confederacy i just and that's the way that like people who now all have confederate ***** flag ***** on their houses and then their shirts and stuff that's how people at that point felt about the confederacy because you're always most aware of the exploitation uh being perpetrated by those uh nearest you and then and that hostility between the upcountry and the plantation regions that had predated the war and it was exacerbated and intensified by the war uh and founder notes this just to say once again that this is a moment of profound friction and conflict and change the relationship people have to their government to the institutions that they have taken for granted is in flux uh and then in the north uh fauna talks about the way that uh anti-union sentiment was to be found the butternut regions of southern ohio and illinois indiana which were filled with people who had migrated from tennessee and kentucky and virginia and who had slave slavery sympathies but also among the urban irish immigrants and the draft ride of 1863 is a big example of that and in this case you have people who are being asked to fight for a union that they do not feel that they are being uh um benefited by that and to defeat a system that they do not find to be there is one interesting distinction though which is that uh while the northern weather confederate uh elite found themselves in a situation where their narrow self-interest was often in conflict with the self the the collective interest of the confederacy the confederate project in the north being if you had access to capital and you were in any way in industry uh your self-interest was in fully supporting the labor of the uh the war effort because that's where the money came from uh the the northern economy was completely revolutionized by the injection of a vast amount of liquid currency fiat currency into the economic system uh in a country which had not had at any point before that a national currency that's the thing to remember is that before the civil war there was not a lot of currency in circulation in a lot of parts of this country especially farther away from cities and places where there was currency it was issued by banks which had charters from the government allowing them to uh to to issue currency backed by a um and in order to fight the war the united states created greenbacks which were backed by nothing other than america's force and uh which injected which created a explosion of economic uh activity was incredibly beneficial to um northern agriculture but was uh and also about uh was very beneficial to people who held debt who were in debt to financial institutions because they could pay back with cheap money that which they borrowed with dear money for for workers for that burgeoning class of wage laborers inflation cut into their uh uh their actual income it red they saw a real drop in a drop in real wages over the course of the war which was one of the things that exacerbated hostility and so in pointing this out phoner is saying these systems are in flux and more than anything we are seeing one system be destroyed and another defeat uh victorious uh the contradictions within them both contributing to their victory and the the to the defeat i don't think there's any case to be made that there is a moral that you could say that there is a moral superiority in any sense to to the jeffersonian small government model as it ended up being practiced in the south because one of the big things that kept those poor whites so

poor is that there was very little taxation or infrastructure or or public education of any kind in the south which is one of the things that actually paradoxically allowed for the uh tension between poor whites and plantation economy to remain latent was because not a lot was asked of poor people there was a very little taxation in the first place uh and that and that allowed the state to sort of be seen as you know not an interdicting fact in people's lives but the reality of that then that ended up being that people were stuck in a pretty much a permanent condition of poverty uh that they could not overcome that they could that the ladder of uh improvement that like wigish model in the north allowed for was totally uh off the chart off the table 0:13:24 for southern poor southern whites but that was not because it was not the result of uh explicit policy but rather the lack of policy it was not necessarily directly tied to uh tied in the minds of you know poor whites to uh the state itself to the to the powers itself that changed though when taxes started going up to pray for the war and conscription started to send and then in the north you have this new industrial economy ex spinning up into existence in order to fight the war and defeat the confederacy uh and in so doing creating one the huge expansion of the concept of rights the concept of liberty in america uh in a positive direction instead of the notion of you know negative rights that had predominated in the constitutional in 0:14:26 the early federal era uh because of you know the the the fact that there there was a war on that was over the course of the war more and more identified with the cause of human freedom but to fight that war and to win in the win that war and to create the economy that could do so it ended up uh concentrating economic power in the halls of uh finance and and among this new class of captains of industry these new industrial leaders and who would use that power to guarantee to assert assure that for themselves that whatever political uh reality emerged from the war it would be one that would take as its basic premise the inviability of private property the inviability of uh of the financial sector more than anything phoner in this chapter is 0:15:29 saying that is pointing out the the the points of friction conflict and opportunity and uh i think more than anything emphasizing the fluidity and that fluidity which in retrospect can often appear to be predetermined because you look at a situation and it often does become difficult to see where anything different could have happened but the reality of the war is that so many established forms were breaking up that that what came after was really contingent and over the course of the book we're gonna find out exactly how those contingencies solidified into reality uh oh but i was off track for a second i was talking about how i don't think there is a moral there is no argument you can make morally that the plantation system that emerged in the south 0:16:31 out of the jeffersonian notion of small government was in any way superior to the northern federalist slash wig notion of internal improvements and central authority

so if there is no moral superiority there and even like stipulating let's stipulate that that the federalist free system isn't even better i mean i i don't think that's true i think if you have slavery in your system it's inherently worse but forget that say they're fine or say they're equivalently immoral because they're equivalent in that they are systems of class oppression they are systems of extraction of surplus from one group of people for the enjoyment of another that's the case in both systems the mechanisms the social forms are different but that's the reality of both of them and then they went to war with one another and one of them at every point all of the things that were supposed to be virtues of the system ended up undermining the ability of the state to defend itself whereas in the north every sys every element of the system combined to make this uh system into a more effective fighting force into a more effective defender and exorter of its state uh prerogative and if morals are out the q out of the door then the which one was better to me is solved hamilton was right jefferson was wrong the war was the civil war proved it you can't say one was morally superior to another or that one system had uh had a superior respect for individual freedom or rights or liberty or any of that ***** neither of them did they are both systems of securing class rule one of them secured it effectively one of them secured hilariously and effectively and was essentially subsidized by the other until it could no longer sustain it until that relationship could sustain itself at which point it was destroyed but that conflict had to be resolved through force because both sides had enough uh had enough access to land and enough access to capital to build essentially competing social structures within a fantasy of a national government which had a constitutional system that was designed to sublimate conflict until it could no longer be sublimated any longer at which point conflict became uh overt and boom did larry flint really die damn all right r.i.p to a real one are they gonna roll his dead ass uh into a volcano or something that'd be so if anybody has any questions about what was in the first chapter we could go over them a little bit otherwise we'll really get into it i think next week i'm gonna do two chapters and i'm gonna for that one i'm gonna like take notes and everything and go through the thing about the american system is that it is designed to sublimate all i mean this is true of all democratic governing deliberative uh institutions is that they are designed to mystify and baffle and sublimate conflict away from uh from reality and into into sort of performance but the ability to keep doing that is really just predicated on it's not predicated on anything intrinsic to the system it's not predicated on the values that the system inculcates it's premised on the ability of the system to ameliorate conflict materially and in america that has always been the ability to after uh to offload issues offload social conflict through the uh assimilation of land uh and the distribution of uh resources through expropriation here and then globally that that's

been always it and and the current conflict we are in is that we have reached the point of where exploration has become diminishing where we have diminishing returns for ex-corporation and that that that means that the latent conflict is re-emerging uh and the civil war was a similar situation the the uh the only way to ameliorate the conflict between the northern and southern modes of production was continued expansion on the terms of the south but that over time became too uh too existentially threatening to uh the northern political system and and economic system that's why i often wonder if the whigs had gotten in there after william henry harrison had died say william henry clay becomes president instead of john tyler and you have a wig governant government in the aftermath of the 1837 panic 0:22:42 sort of re-orienting politics away from expansion and towards internal improvement that perhaps you don't have that headlong dash to the pacific uh and the eventual annihilation of the south i someone says the slavery was the only system that could make the south economically competitive with the north that is true because it was it was it was it was the it's the land that allows for uh for um you know massive profit through the sale of uh cash crops but the thing is why the ***** are they competing it's the whole notion of the of their of them being in competition arose from the 0:23:46 historical accident of uh of the states coming in as sort of equals rather than as the the emerging as a as a uh but regional conflict between regional ruling classes has to at some point be sublimated and that was the project of european uh centralization the creation of like the the creation of the uh of absolutist monarch model of like the early modern era you know like louis xiv that was not at the expense of like the regular french citizens it was at the expense of local barons it was at the expense of regional power and that was true everywhere that that how radical were the german 0:24:48 immigrants in missouri during the war in reconstruction they were certainly more radical than the ***** regular white people who lived in missouri that's for sure uh the germans were responsible for missouri uh staying in the union uh it was german militia that drove the pro-secession uh forces out of st louis at the beginning of the war and uh denied them the ability to to and yeah uh immigrants of of missouri 0:25:50 but also ohio wisconsin uh they were pennsylvania they were more class conscious certainly than uh native-born northern uh forces for the most part because many of them had come from they had they had fled like uh absolutism uh and specifically a lot of them had fled the uh the destruction of like the artisan class by the industrial revolution and they he came to america to try to reassert like artisan rights uh which put them in conscious conflict not with not just eastern banks but also large landowners like part of the problem of class consciousness or at least oh as the conflict of the native white americans seeing the slave power for what it was is that they did 0:26:53 not have that uh that instinctive conflict with large landowners in the south northern

northerners didn't anyway like they might have seen slavery as a competing labor system but they did not see themselves in any way as personally oppressed by the large landowners of the south whereas for a lot of these germans when they saw the big land owners of the south they thought of the junkers they thought of the yonkers of prussia who over weaned the the the german uh confederation at that point and and and uh were the were an occupying foreign force in most of the rhineland which is which is where many of the german catholic immigrants came from so when they saw the fancy lads in their with their dueling and their and their fake uh walter scott cosplay they saw the face of their own exploitation and their own ***** you i'll 0:27:55 pronounce it how i want junker that's stupid i mean it's i'm an american i'm calling it junker there's no such thing as native white americans okay tell that to them talking about it's like self communities by through their own self-conception i haven't read 0:29:9 the new matte carp article yet i'm looking forward to it his election analysis is always absolute fire i don't actually someone asked about the counterfactual uh 1848 that's not one where i really feel like there was a lot of uh possibilities outside of what actually happened uh that was really that's why would i have read that i because it 0:30:12 was a a movement of people who had no c common cause that there was no unity at all and in and you can't even say that unity could have come through struggle the way that it might have happened and was happening to some degree for the course of the civil war because there was no struggle to unify with through it was always piecemeal haphazard uh the cop the spontaneous uh un marshaled and unlit led uh and it was a it was a continent-wide emergence of more than anything bourgeois insistence upon uh like the liberal state and as that meant a lot of coalition building 0:31:13 with like early forms of working-class organization but once again the working class in practice was still very much in its infancy at that point in europe the majority of uh workers who rebelled in the cities of europe during 1848 were not uh wage workers for say they were mostly artisans who were being squeezed by the and the uh you know concentration of capital which was still which was early but was still was still pressing them it was essentially a uh a uh yeah it was a combination of a new urban small bourgeois fighting with a sort of pre-capitalist aligned with a pre-capitalist artisan class and on an odd hack on an ad hoc basis mostly organized around questions of nationalism and language uh and in such a situation i really don't think that they're 0:32:16 there there are way too many things that would have to go drastically differently in order to have the overall contours of that well maybe the idea that the american revolutionary war was the second english civil war kevin phillips talks about that in a really interesting book called the cousins war uh which where he essentially says that the revolutionary the english civil war the revolutionary war and the civil war are all one long conflict in the anglo-sphere between uh land owners a feudal

landowning uh ruling class and an emergent merchant uh middle class which would 0:33:18 eventually take over from feudalism and that those three wars are essentially the wars that over the course of those uh 300 years saw feudalism fully overthrown and replaced by uh capitalism and i think that there's a and his main argument is is that the social basis of the two sides in all three of those wars is basically the same the english civil war obviously you can't say that this is true completely you know there were examples there were counter examples on each side but it was broadly a battle between uh emerging urban urban merchants and big land owners the the round heads the puritan side were city dwellers were merchants and uh the cavaliers were 0:34:20 the large feudal landowning class then the civil the revolutionary war is essentially a battle between uh the most industrious and most religiously uh effusive of those uh merchants going to the united states creating essentially their own country uh and then going to war with a homeland that was still largely controlled within itself uh by the large land owning old feudal order although of course there were plenty of you know the the wigs at that point were already like the merchant party they were the urban party within that and they were by the way the people who are most likely to be sympathetic to whose pittsburgh is named after was the way a wig politician who supported the uh the colonists uh and then the civil war is of course the culmination of that on the home uh fully in the united states uh and then every 0:35:23 and once and here you have the large the the the neo-feudal the attempt to like the attempt was essentially in the south to recreate the uh the old feudal order uh in the new world conflicting with uh the new the merchant state the industrial and like these battles are are are a war in the place where capitalism is emerging and it's in its like most effective and uh durable form out of sort of a feudal loam but that process is not a a fast or uh decisive one it is a it is a dialectical process it is 0:36:24 existing forms of power negotiating with emergent forms of power through politics and when politics fails through warfare but at every point the victory was made was won by uh capitalists at the expense of the feudal order and by the end of it the mule funeral guys in the revolution did not mostly side with the united with uh the revolution that's not true the reason that cornwall marched south uh after taking after they took uh new york is because there was much more loyalist sympathy in the south amongst the large landowners now guys like washington and jefferson of course were pro uh um were pro-revolution but that was not true broadly among the 0:37:27 uh the large landowning class in the south so he tended to be more loyal more tory uh guys like washington the reason that they were for the union is because uh have you ever noticed it's mostly guys from virginia the state that's closest to the the northern uh merchant capitals that's whose economies are most tied in there those were the people who were the most who were the large landowners of the south were

most like most likely to support uh the patriot side washington george washington was a uh was absolutely a um even though he was a landowner he had the mind of a ***** merchant he he was his entire life was consumed with the notion of uh advancement of of of social and monetary success which are antithetical uh values 0:38:31 to the decadent uh land-based urban ruling elite who were beaten largely because their social order looked down upon the sort of striving that people like washington made their lives around and part of the reason for that is that washington did not come from a large from a a family of huge like noble birth he came from a middling class of of landowners and uh clergy actually who came to america and immediately started grinding he was he was from a long line uh which is not true of the lot of the large landowners uh of the south who supported uh supported the king and the thing that in that book by the way that will that phillips gets really into that reflects what fauna is talking about is that in every region there is a conflict between up country poor settlers and the settled uh like delta plantation region settlers uh 0:39:34 and wherever and who had whatever politic the politics of the uh of the elite were the upcountry poors had the opposite so wherever there was hegemonic support for the uh patriot cause among the local elite the local uh smallholders and poor people poor whites were tories and wherever the large large landowners and large elites were tories the local small holders and poor people were patriots and the challenge the challenge that reconstruction presented was the challenge of knitting together these dispossessed groups into a political coalition and that did not happen and the 0:40:37 fact that it didn't happen is why uh why the yankee leviathan ended up becoming uh completely captured by uh the emerging industrial robber yes that's the other thing about virginia is that it was the largest of the colonies population uh and it was also very interested in expansion westward which put it in direct competition with uh england after 1860 proclamation which for bad uh settlement beyond the appalachians and guys like george washington had direct financial interest in seeing those lands explored settled and sold because land speculation was a huge potential 0:41:49 revenue source oh the impeachment trial who ***** gives a ***** who ***** why or how could you care and i'm i understand that some people hear you say that and i think oh you're being an edge lord you're not and i understand i don't want to make peop i don't want to feel like oh it's not a big deal it was pretty ***** wild when people rushed the senate and like that is kind of wild that that happened and that the president told people to do it that is that is a new shift that's a new phase i understand that but this particular uh thing this particular process the impeachment trial after the guy's out of office it really does feel like more than anything it is a emotional uh pressure release it is a way for people to have their feelings validated and go through their trauma and then sort of heal about it and if you want to do 0:42:51

that if you have the trauma and you feel like that's helpful that's fine and if you feel like watching this helps you do that that's fine but expecting anybody who is who does not feel that trauma that they have to join with you in this spectacle that's what i don't understand and that's where i refuse to go along with it because everyone knows what's going to happen there is no amount of eloquence there is no amount of persuasive evidence that could be presented that will get a conviction out of this process there are not enough republicans who want to lose their next election basically and so they're not going to do it they will not happen and with that in mind i honestly wonder for a lot of these people who insist that this is a very important thing don't you worry about that fact don't you worry about the fact that this horrible transgression is going to go down in history as having been validated by the deliberative process of the only way this thing makes sense as a political project is if you are really convinced that that capital breach is going to be the thing that destroys the republican party that that the center of gravity of american politics is going to shift away from republicans because they refused to condemn this thing fully and i think that's the only kind of that's the kind of thing you can only believe if you really do live in a bubble if you and and of course no one is more bubbled than these ***** ***** in washington and more and i think even more importantly nobody is more invested in shifting politics away from real stakes and material interests than either feudalism not in the sense that because people are pointing out like we're going back we're going towards something that is going to be neo-feudalist techno-feudalism and doesn't that mean that feudalism never a mode of production is a bunch of things it's a bunch of social concepts and the thing is is that feudalism had at its at its social base an understanding of the world that is not the same as capitalism the capitalism a set the liberal liberal subjectivity is not futile it is different and so in since now liberal subjectivity is hegemonic if capitalism is replaced with this system of like feudal obligations enforced through technological means not through social means you could say that like as a mere um mechanism of extraction that you have something that resembles feudalism but its social basis is completely the undergirding social logic is one of capitalist individualism and to say that and that means and so whatever comes out of that will maintain that i mean if you really want to go back far enough like it's always been a war between masters and servants and masters have always won uh the only thing that changes is the is the rationale and conditions and social basis of that mastery like when the when the bourgeois overthrew capitalism it was not liberation it was not human liberation it was not the subject being it was one group of rulers being replaced with another was there anything progressive about the you cannot have the possibility for socialism until you have capitalism first right socialism is a shadow form of capitalism it is it is only conceivable in the real context of capitalism and capitalist relations that allows socialism to emerge as a conception uh like the freedom of like the the the liberation the of of a feudal order of a pre-industrial fuel fuel order is essentially a regression and 0:49:35 then capitalism gives birth to socialism as um well see that's the thing about russia they really weren't supposed to be where where socialist revolution happened they 0:50:37 really weren't modern capitalist societies that had like that had reached the point of uh of contradiction that could be resolved through yeah like i'm more and more come to the idea that i kind of think that once the once the german revolution failed the bolshevik should have made a deal with the peasants i think maybe bakarin was right in the whole debate about what to do about industrialization and what to do about because the the entire premise of the ***** bolshevik revolution has been had been as the opening act of a world revolution yeah but would have would world war 0:51:39 two have happened the same way see that's there was no when bukharin was arguing for this stuff the nazis didn't exist yet they were not in charge like that you you're looking back through the lens and saying yes but they needed to do all that to win world war ii that's not historically grounded that's trying to and yeah it's like people love to give the soviets credit for for beating the nazis but they essentially handed the keys of the world over to the united states who were just who were where the nazis got all their ideas from explicitly hitler looked at manifest the thing is is that 0:52:41 there's nothing that's inevitable nothing is inevitable in retrospect when things have solidified into history you can see why maybe something else couldn't have happened those superpositions don't solidify until the moment of action until things occur that can that can that can be looked so like the degree to which people turn marxism 0:53:42 into a teleology of inevitable victory which i think honestly is more of a 20th century thing than a thing people still think uh that was a way to to justify themselves to justify their actions to justify their adherence to uh a regime as like the sole uh repository of you know like the but there is within like when within capitalism there is the potential for socialism that's just the fact that's the truth and then you have to analyze that question and okay if you if that's true and socialism is superior then how do we ***** get there you cannot assume in the inevitability they didn't have 0:54:44 the specter of catastrophic climate collapse but they did have a real belief that they were all going to get killed in a nuclear war people forget that like people who want to be doom-pilled now about my climate there was for the among educated people in the all of the world there was a very strong belief that any given day a nuclear war might happen that would and that now is so receded into the backdrop of people's minds and been replaced with climate dumerism that the fact that this thing that was very close i mean it wasn't just the cuban missile crisis there's a able archer uh there's i mean there were two soviet uh military officers who had it in their in their hands to cause the nuclear war once during once in the 80s and once during the cuban missile crisis and both times they said no and their human decision is what saved humanity it was nothing having to do with our systems of mutually shared destruction and our beautifully crafted it was human choice it was human agency in the moment that's how fluid and how contingent **Music playing** and of course it could happen and honestly it'd be kind of funny if we end up getting a nuclear war anyway due to climate change conflict that's but that sure ***** wasn't what people in like 1963 were thinking was gonna happen i think you'll i'm just saying that to basing your actions in the present on an assumed social outcome either good or bad in the future is always going to just end up being in practice uh self-indulgence because you're you're at you're not responding to reality you're and the question is are you make what are you making that reality for and i think if you're assuming annihilation the only reason that you would want to make that reality and live as that reality is if you want an excuse if you want an excuse to not do things that are difficult to not sacrifice to not build your spirit because what's the point but every day you do that and you're still here you're hurting yourself and everyone we are in fact already dead i mean like we're we all died already it's like your life in the grand scheme of things is around down to zero like it's already happened and this society is already dead but what comes after it is not known it's not black pill god damn it i'm saying you can't no you cannot know but if you if you sell yourself you do it's not because you studied everything then you've come to the correct conclusion because you don't have enough information nobody has that information that information is not accessible no matter how much the fantasy of online uh uh of the of the information super highway and spinning around the world of the idea that you can reach out and grab all the knowledge and pull it under yourself even if you could do that you still have to sort it you still have to prioritize it and those choices are not being made objectively they're being made from either love either from a desire to to see love expressed in the world or uh out of a desire to selfishly maintain a a life of of indulgence whatever that means because you know you can it can be miserable but it can be a misery that is familiar oh and on this somebody asked about anti-natalism uh i i'm fully against that you have to believe in a future even if it's not going to happen you have to believe in a future if you don't want kids ***** because you don't like the idea of sacrificing time for someone else okay but acting like you're doing them a favor by not bringing it into the world yeah first reformed is a great film in a movie i didn't really appreciate uh as much when i first saw it because of how enmeshed i was in the very pathologies that uh ethan hawk's character presents uh like he's gonna blow up the koch brothers but not because he wants it's going to make anything better it's because he wants to go out on his own

terms it's because he has given up on connecting to anyone or anything outside but of course that doesn't mean anyone is obligated to have kids like ***** freaks psychos like rouse doth that doubt it think but if the choice needs to be it needs to be interrogated at the personal level not fobbed off on some ham cack-handed and self-serving analysis of the geopolitical world or the amount of ***** carbon in the atmosphere carbon is not made up but your idea of what's going to happen is made up i'm sorry has to be you don't know as much as you think you besides we might not even have to worry about the question of having kids if that ***** about ***** like plastic ***** up endocrine systems is is if that if that keeps happening at the rate it is then you won't even have to make the choice everyone will just be sterilized children of men's style and then hey that'll solve global warming because like there you go there's two things that you can look at the data and they're both very compelling cases for human extinguishment through climate change and also the fact that we might not be able to uh reproduce in 20 years because everybody's balls are filled with both very compelling you can fixate on both of them you can't know either way and they conflict with one another one of them could solve the other problem either way you still gotta ***** live nobody should be telling people to have children or not have children that's weird what who are you shut the ***** up that's just a weird thing to make political and it speaks more to some sort of psychosexual thing honestly or or a compensatory thing than uh than any real politics now that maybe the garbage the algae bloom will eat all the co2 i think the most important thing to just remember about all that stuff is that you cannot filter your underlying spiritual attitude your underlying uh matrix all right i'm gonna wrap it up so next week i'm gonna read the we're gonna read the next two chapters chapters two and three of reconstruction i will have some notes this time next time which i didn't do this time sorry about that so we're gonna go through it because i'm reading it on my phone actually i've got the kindle app on my phone which means i can't look at it when i'm talking here so i'm gonna have to start taking notes the thing i didn't really realize until today which uh my bad but so chapters two and three for next week reconstruction by eric foner bye-bye baby the canals and the bridges the embankments and cuts they blasted and dug with their sweat and their guts they never drank water but whiskey by pints and their shantytowns rang with their songs and their fights navigator navigator rise up and be strong the morning is here and there's work to be done take your ticket your shovel and them all dynamite we're to shift a few tons of the seriously delight yes to shift a few tons of this earthly delight hey folks sorry about wednesday uh i was not in a place where i could get very good wi-fi so it wasn't been feasible to stream but i definitely even if i can't do two streams a week i want to at least do the 0:1:3

book club every week the vibe stream maybe not every week uh like i don't know about next week i do want to do more with chris though uh i want to do the one i last weeks with chris i thought was really fun and i honestly prefer that to just like trying to read the comments because honestly they're hard to follow and not a lot of them are great i gotta tell you guys a lot of bad comments a lot so it's hard to parse the good ones from the bad ones much funner to do it with chris so uh i'm gonna try to make that like maybe every other week because i don't want him to feel like he has to do it every week but anyway one thing i want to do every week is do the damn book club so let's just start off very quickly uh with chapter two so fauna really lays out when he's breaking down the social order that is emerging and 0:2:5 the social conflicts that are emerging in these in the southern states specifically is among the different populations who are ready to accept union uh victory and accept uh federal authority being reimposed there is a consistent um pattern whereby any group will sell out basically the the uh the interest of any other group that they do not feel that they are part of so like the white southern unionists for the most part are perfectly happy to say the union ones slavery is abolished but that their rights need to be in some sense uh over held over the rights of the freights of the of the 0:3:6
newly freed slaves but it's important to note this was not simply a mechanism of racial discrimination by itself uh fauner points out that the uh relatively prosperous free colored population as was known then of new orleans was also perfectly willing to sell out the interests of of former slaves in exchange for being sort of uh affirmed

at the top of a social hierarchy uh and it is important to remember and something that i think gets lost in a lot of the um the top the uh way that we frame civil rights the way that we frame um like the virtue of citizenship is one of the things that's that like uh does make uh like the a black american population seem to stand in for 0:4:8
sort of like the virtuous the most virtuous of us as in the people in the united states who have benefited the least at the expense of others a lot of that boils down to the fact that they didn't have anybody to sell out there was nobody that they could have tried to negotiate against and sacrifice their interests in favor of because they were at the bottom of the now what that means though is that as a result the black experience of america is one that has with it like an actual uh a enduring solidarity that transcends class that there is something like black destiny or or black rights that need to be considered by people even if they might not you know even if you're doing better than that than other members of that group uh economically there's still a um an obligation there which is one of the big reasons that you know black uh 0:5:10 people when they do vote vote overwhelmingly democratic regardless of what their uh economic um position is but it's not because people are better it's not that the culture they create is more virtuous it's because there is nowhere else to go and one of the reasons i think that america is such a monstrous country in its history and and why it's it has become the country that has sort of remade the world in its image is because thanks to proscribe the existence of proscribed classes like blacks and uh land that could be endlessly explored from native americans meant that social solidarity was essentially never never needed to be when it was never forced into being through conflict because it could always social conflict by those among those who 0:6:13 are part of the police could always be offloaded somewhere else on to somebody else first racial minorities in the united states itself and then later foreigners elsewhere and now we're in a situation where um the the frontier is closed the myth is over as greg brandon has pointed out and we don't know how to be social we do not know how to uh accept the idea that there is obligation to other people that transcends our individual interests because american history has essentially been able to avoid dealing with that question at every point by sacrificing the interests of somebody else somewhere else or someone who looks some different way and that can't happen anymore and now we don't know what to do and we're having a gigantic nationwide nervous breakdown now the reason that i think looking at reconstruction and looking at a different reconstruction that might have happened given the actual materials 0:7:16 that were in play if because is that by accepting and and teasing out the notion of a uh of an alternative of a country that does come to terms with obligations and social solidarity and what it means to be you know a citizen beyond just personal autonomy at all costs uh that we had the up but we could have done it because to say otherwise is this to say that essentially is to take the the the pessimistic like the doom approach that well we were tainted because we had this land and because we had these racial categories we were doomed from the beginning well if that's the case then why do anything why care about politics why focus on any of this stuff unless it's honestly a way for people who are relatively comfortable to uh accept 0:8:20 that to to stop feeling guilty about it to say essentially you know what i wish we were in a country where what that had some sort of social obligatory structures and i wish that there was humanity to our interactions and it wasn't just cold-blooded uh calculation but that darn racism those darn that's what are we gonna do oh well what are you gonna do about it i i guess i i can feel a little bad that i ended up at the top of this uh situation but there's nothing i can do about it so uh i can blame racists in the past and races in the present none of whom are me and that really does let us all off the hook i mean all kinds any kind of black pill you want to take any kind of doom-based politics you want to take whether it's whether it's a progressive one that emphasizes america's racism or a super racist one that says that multicultural society 0:9:21 we can't have anything good that's all just a way to avoid the obligations of being a human a human and the obligations we have to each other that transcend any of these uh political arguments or our narrow understanding of history which is never a real conception it is always a story we tell ourselves we can always tell ourselves any story there's no answer here there is no true thing that we can drill out of our past we can notice patterns and recognize patterns and try to recognize patterns when they emerge around us but there is no facts there is no fundamental thing that we can take from these there are only stories we can tell ourselves and i am trying to tell a story that leaves the aperture of possibility open forever for for change because to do otherwise is to is to abnegate your is to abdicate your responsibility as a human so in 0:10:27 this chapter fauna also talks about the reconstruction governments of the war years because reconstruction is thought to have begun in 1865 but the union held huge chunks of southern territory through military occupation starting in 1862 and then expanding over the course of the war so uh there were essentially like reconstructed governments already being built before the war ended and he goes through them they were in tennessee uh maryland kentucky and louisiana those are the ones he focuses on um and what happened in most of these was a miniature version of what the civil war was in general which was an overthrow of a quasi-aristocratic quasi-feudal planter elite by small holders and the emergent urban merchant class the bourgeois revolution the continuation and the fulfillment of the bourgeois revolution that began 0:11:28 with the american revolution but which was essentially arrested by the creation of the and what's interesting is when you look at the record of andrew johnson as a military appointed governor of tennessee during the war he looked like a progressive he looked like a man who had been fundamentally altered by the experience of the war who who was noted for his stern hand to rebels to his uh his vehement prosecution of of traitors and eventually to his sort of open-handed treatment of former slaves but what's really important to note though is what was propelling this from johnson was the resentment of slave owners felt by a guy who at the end of the day was a quasi-illiterate tailor and who had never been accepted and never could be accepted 0:12:29

by the the the best parts of tennessee society and had with him sort of a nixonian grudge and that's what powered his politics that's what made him a unionist during the war that's what powered him towards uh suppressive uh the suppression of uh the pro-secession faction in tennessee but then once he becomes president and his and uh his resentment goes from uh a planter elite that is now dethroned to the new ruling class of washington dc i.e radical republicans that resentment goes uh that powers him and now powers him in a different direction towards uh re-enthroning all the people he used to hate in his mind for the good of the poor whites but in reality for the re-inscription of all of the most reactionary quasi-feudal elements of and 0:13:32

the other thing uh that i think really needs to be emphasized in this second chapter is a theme that's going to be important to focus on as you go through the whole of reconstruction which is a push and pull between the necessities of prosecuting the war which meant confiscation of property which meant abrogation of all the liberal values that uh that the the wig the whig model that uh governed the union sides governing uh ruling class held and those very uh ideological precepts and with them the the desire especially powerfully felt by lincoln to keep the borders the border slave states on the union side uh i honestly think that that focus of lincoln's is probably his biggest blind spot over the course of the war it's understandable because obviously you don't want the border states to secede but once you get to 0:14:33

the middle of the war once you get to the like the point where military occupation of these places is already established where like tennessee is under military application maryland delaware under military occupation hell louisiana is mostly under military occupation they don't really get a say anymore you don't really have to kiss their asses so much eh but lincoln was operating from the same deliberative uh ideology the same liberal orthodoxy that dominated the republican party and that liberal orthodoxy is and uh this is a thing that richard white talks about much more explicitly in the republic for which it stands uh that liberal orthodoxy is one of the big hindrances to the war uh to the recognition of the actual implications of the war which is that 0:15:34

if we are overthrowing this uh social order then certain things are going to have to happen to carry that out one slavery is going to have to be abolished but also the power of the slave owners and their ability to exercise power is going to also have to be abolished but to do that would require a reordering of the state's relationship

to citizenry that was anathema to the um center of gravity of opinion uh in the republican party and of course the the financial and merchant interests that funded the republican party and the thing that needs to be pointed out is that there were two things pushing against that liberal orthodoxy one was just the exigencies of the war itself like uh benjamin butler and sherman and these guys who did radical stuff like slaves as contraband and then giving them land as as uh sherman did when he was marching through the carolinas that they were not doing ideologically they were done out of necessity i need i need bodies i need people to do uh to dig ditches and and build fortifications why not use these people who literally are begging me to take them in uh or or sherman i have these people i don't have any means to feed or take care of them give them some land and let them farm themselves and then i can focus on winning the war so that's part of it but the other thing the other most crucial pressure that pushed uh the war effort and reconstruction policy passed where uh the average republican officeholder was comfortable with it was a it was a pressure from below that generated uh the real productive tension with the governing ideology of uh the north and between the governing ideology worth of the north and the project of winning the war and which is where fauna breaks down the different ways that um uh the ex-slave population assert their um their rights their and their independence from uh the the slave economy and the slave society that was and fauna points out very astutely and something that i think gets overlooked a lot is that we talk about reconstruction and the end of slavery as a challenge to getting and as a challenge of getting the whites of the south and the north for that matter to be comfortable accepting black people as equal citizens but there was a flip side to that which is getting former slaves to accede to being part of a white ruled political order how the hell do you go from being the property of people the people who prescribed through your skin color a a a non-human basically status uh and then living amongst them as equals or even punitive equals of any kind like just as contract freedom which is what as someone who connects how can you even imagine that you could exercise contract freedom with these people and it really does suggest that you know the uh that with all druthers being uh had that what would have been the preferable thing at least for the former slaves would have been black self-determination you know i mean i uh the kind of stuff that the uh communist party uh pushed for in the 1930s uh like not just land but political autonomy within the land that they would have had and that's actually something that there's a book fire on the mountain that somebody recommended to me in this chat and i read it's it's pretty interesting it's an alternative history which i love book where um john brown's raid is successful and it sparks a rolling slave rebellion that over the course of years leads to uh general um a generalized rebellion against slavery throughout the south and the establishment of like a free black republic in the american south which becomes socialist which links up with uh european socialist currents to the point 0:20:40 where eventually by the mid 20th century the united states itself has had a socialist revolution and is now allied with this former part of itself but the problem with that dream is that it was black self-determination was essentially impossible to enforce wherever it came into conflict with the white prerogative of power simply because there was no uh there was no mechanism for it the same way that the the native americans were essentially unable to effectively combat the westward expansion of the united states former slaves were in a similar situation where because of the fact that they had been literally deprived of everything but their lives for their entire uh existences upon freedom the the they did not have access to the capital or the 0:21:42 organizational forms or the that could have effectively anyway uh made an assertion of autonomy against white society they had to collaborate they were cursed to have to collaborate uh with with whites in order to gain any kind of and uh what fauner points out here is that in places where white prerogative existed like labor like this the uh like labor conditions and and the conditions by which labor is sold and also the disposition of land there was very little that uh former slaves could do to assert their autonomy places that they could though were uh in domesticity uh and then with domesticity you see uh a wholesale retraction out of the labor force of a former slave 0:22:45 of black women uh who were gonna work at home like was the ideal among white uh families women were not supposed to work outside the home ideally there was a domestic sphere and uh and part of black self-determination and as the as slavery ended was withdrawing women and children from the workforce and into um and of course that wasn't able to be universalized and in many cases it was resisted by local white authorities but it was a a assertion of of autonomy there is an interesting quote though i wanted to read from the this chapter uh where fonder is talking about this assertion of uh of autonomy and he says family itself rather than a white owner or 0:23:46 overseer now decided where and when black women and children would work and i think that's an interesting sentence because it points to the way that that invisible hand of the market that of course is not invisible and is it's is actually you know the the uh the concerted rule of its most effective super structural work at mystifying coercive relationships because the family was not going to be able to decide if women and children worked women and children might have to work if they need the money if they need the money they might have to have someone go out and work in the field or work domestically they don't have that they they will if they want to stay fed have to accede to that but they will not be forced to they will not be directly uh told to by 0:24:49 a white owner or overseer it will be just the market it will be the fact that they don't have enough money and so that becomes it's felt as a voluntary relationship but in reality it is as coercive as the slave relationship but because it is felt as autonomy and that's one of the things that has powered capitalism to the heights that it has is that it can generate a lot of social misery that is impossible to place the source of now when it comes to labor the assertion of black autonomy boiled down to a demand for land ownership which is obvious when you think about it that was the cinequinone of freedom for all americans going back to the revolutionary ethos like yeoman the omen small holder was the ideal citizen someone who did not owe their labor to another and could sustain themselves on their own land and it was very it's kind of amazing when you see the uh sort of bafflement and and outrage by a lot of even northerners at the temerity of the slaves to insist upon uh ownership of land uh when that was the fundamental uh expression of american liberty the 1860 republican was um was advertised with the slogan vote yourself a farm which culminated in the passage of the homestead act of course many balked at the idea of giving just giving the land which of course super absurd because the idea that this has happened worked for the idea that this was a handout is monstrous because these are literally people whose labor had created the wealth in the first place if they were owed anything it was the land itself uh but even more absurdly is a lot of northerners insisted that there was no authority to take the land that that the limited prerogative of the federal government did not extend to the to abrogating land from people but there's another quote from this chapter where a former slave while talking to a union officer who is uh not being enthusiastic about the idea of taking uh land because it's against it goes beyond his authority says if you had the right to take master slaves you had the right to take master's land too which is obviously the case because until the civil war slaves were property the distinction between slaves and land from a legal point of view you might argue moral but again if morality was entered into this then that equi that equation would never have existed was arbitrary and that really is the entire uh role that's the goal that's the um that is the reason that we have things like the constitution and the reason that we have our political institutions is to draw arbitrary lines of power which protect private prerogatives and protect the existing power structures and resource distributions that we have and i think but i think it's very point important to point out the slay the case for redistributing land to former slaves was legally as i've said and morally unassailable you can't argue against it it's on its face true and it didn't matter because the only thing that yields power the only thing that makes power yield is power and there was not sufficient organized power to assert uh uh black rights to land beyond what in limited areas they were given almost as experiments but one of the big uh things that created conflict between the um the new regime the new uh reconstruction regimes and the ex-slaves is that ex-slaves wanted to pursue a subsistence agricultural living they wanted to grow

food for their families and maybe grow enough cash crops for a little bit of folding money what they did not want to do was spend 12 hours a day in the field to grow cotton because they knew through experience that that money would not go to them which of course was true and you actually saw a parade of northern do-gooders who went to the south to buy up plantations as experiments and have ex-slaves grow cotton again experimentally and then sell it as a way to raise their standard of living was the expectation at all points that the lion's share of the profit would go to the person who had uh who had who had uh assumed the risk of buying the distressed plantation property and not you know the people who actually had worked the land their entire lives and who by any measure should have profited from all of it and so the the the prerogative the the uh the free slave desire for a subsistence livelihood was in direct conflict with the drive toward capital accumulation which had defined the plantation agriculture before the war and was going to reassert itself after and then just to end up the other thing that fauna talks about is the emergence of uh a political organization and expression on the part of uh the the black population in general and then later the former slave population uh as the as reconstruction begins uh in the immediate aftermath of the war uh the black population that asserted itself in what was what in for the most part came down to self-organized political conventions that met voted on resolutions demands for land demands for rights and treatment and then essentially set them as sent those uh resolutions as entreaties to washington but they had no actual legal sanction but what they were were the first attempts to organize and create a civic culture that could then interact with the uh the governing culture over time and at the immediate aftermath of the war the vast majority of the people who showed up to those conventions and spoke and wrote the resolutions were uh were free blacks from before the war uh and ministers uh many of uh the teachers uh and veterans essentially those members of the black community who had some extended interaction with white institutions at some level which gave them uh the uh the toolkit basically to go to a convention and and you know organize it and and interact with the the government and such now as time went on that changed though as reconstruction deepened and as former slaves in the up country and in the deep plantation regions as they came to self-organize uh those conventions that convened further off from the time of the end of the war became more and more dominated by actual former plantation slaves who were learning essentially the ropes of uh civic engagement as as they emerged from a condition of servitude and uh just to let wrap up uh on the third chapter uh fauna talks about the endemic and horrifying nature of violence carried out by uh whites against former slaves all throughout the south thousands and thousands of murders assaults uh at this point not really the lynchings that we think of like the ritualized

community lynchings but more essentially guerrilla attacks like attacking people in 0:34:6 their homes or on the road um and what that shows more than anything was that for reconstruction to have any success and i think and this was something that was it dawned on northern readership pretty early on uh there would have to be a significantly punitive uh approach to dealing with former slave owners uh there would have to be a continuation of violence uh and that reality was the one thing that lyndon johns or lyndon johnson andrew johnson could not countenance and the real disaster more than anything of presidential reconstruction which happened after the lincoln assassination and before the radicals reasserted control of the process uh was that he wanted to allow the former slave owners essentially to get off scot-free and what they were gonna do with that freedom uh is pretty clear which was intimidate the former 0:35:7 slaves into a condition of of essentially de facto slavery through horrifying application of violence and this honestly for me is the thing that makes me most most believe that a under lincoln instead of johnson would have been fundamentally different and would have changed the trajectory i don't know how much but somewhere from where we ended up because i just simply do not believe that lincoln having fought the war the way he had and uh would have allowed or would have been um comfortable in any way with allowing that level of violence to determine the social relations in the post-war south especially when he had an entire party at his heels ready to ready 0:36:11 and willing to affirm a putative approach to the former slave owners uh and that is why i really want to you know do something with that idea because uh it is one of those places where like the shadow of history sort of casts its paul and and you get you just shiver and you think what could have been but uh but yeah everybody but andrew johnson by the end of the war knew that there was no way that you could just wish away social conflict in fact uh a white former governor of north carolina and i'll end with this quote uh said in 1865 with reference to emancipation we are at the beginning of the war and that is the reality of it and some people were aware of that and accepting of it others weren't and the real tragedy of american history one of them is that one of the people who wasn't or if he was he didn't care was the president of the united states okay so that's the overview so we're gonna do 0:37:13 chapters four and five for next wednesday if anybody has wants to talk about it a little bit here um someone asked would lincoln have abolished the constitution lincoln loved the constitution and the problem is everybody loved the constitution i don't think that the constitution would have been abolished you know like that i do i do see a ability after a protracted conflict after a protracted like essentially a second civil war which would have happened planters and their allies would have 0:38:15 resisted that the exigencies the realities of administering this the the republicans were pushed way beyond their comfort zone in terms of uh abrogating authority from the

constitution by the exigencies of prosecuting the war if that war had continued to be prosecuted not as a ground campaign with armies but as the suppression of a guerrilla movement and the standing up of a new like multi-racial uh order in the south that that process that dynamic of the constitution sort of being pressed and and the verities that underlie it being challenged and undermined i think that would have continued too and then maybe even that lincoln but maybe you know maybe a summer administration or something says all right let's rip this thing up that would 0:39:17 have been a necessity to a political structure for this country that would have been flexible and um flexible enough to accommodate uh subaltern demands and it would not obviously have led to some sort of peaceful uh um socialism you know i think that the the german example pretty clearly shows that that's not in the cards that capitalism knows where the line is and will fight for it but every move towards the creation of a of a genuinely multi-uh racial and multi-ethnic class means that those points of conflict become more and more contestable by the working class which is 0:40:18 the opposite of what we had in this country where at every step every working class uh explosion has been contained and nullified over time the most sustained one of course being in the early 30s being contained into the the structure of the new deal and then over the course of the next 30 years uh sort of dissipated and and co-opted and neutralized and now we are in the situation where class as a felt social experience no longer exists and has to be rebuilt and any way you slice it the institutions that the constitution has left us with are huge hindrances to that and are eventually going to have to be episode 500 will not be a clip show i've not seen the new curtis dock 0:42:0 yet i will though six hours jeepers christmas okay i eight wow 10. holy mackerel it's it's it actually never ends you start watching it and you watch it forever it's like the entertainment an i did watch community to the end and i did like the yahoo season i think the yahoo season gets underrated have i read the killer angels who do you 0:43:3 think you're talking to of course i read the killer angels i remember the killer i even went to uh i saw gettysburg in the theater as a little kid and most brutally i saw guys and generals in theater which is genuinely the worst movie i've ever paid to see and i watched the whole three hours and what's beautiful about it is yes it is noxious confederate apologia but it is also a terrible movie just from the point of view of filmmaking it sucks and the funniest thing about it is that like with most civil war movies it saves money with its battle scenes by just having reenactors do it they just say hey you freaks who already own your own uh period detail accurate 0:44:4 guns and uniforms you guys come into a battle and we'll film it well the thing is the the problem is the average confederate american uh war civil war reenactor is like a 45 year old like carpet salesman who's got like a gut like a michelin tire around his neck around his stomach and then you watch these shows and you watch these battle scenes and you just see these round ass guys like eating mini balls and it's that's not the civil war the civil war was like 90 pound 18 year olds but there is a scene where uh where former senator george allen from virginia and a bunch of other guys play dress up as confederate generals and sing along to uh the bonnie blue flag that is a genuinely surreal and hilarious moment i was in vegas this time last year 0:45:32 time certainly flies or does it i don't know it's been like one long day but also um 0:46:40 oh somebody else asked me a question on twitter that i thought would be a good uh thing to answer here because it is an interesting question somebody said they want to know what is what would be was there a european uh equivalent of the 1905 revolution and yeah it's the 1848 revolutions and the fact that they happened in 1848 and it happened in 1905 and russia tells you really all you need to know which is russia was way way way behind europe and and by the time it had its uh its first stirrings of of like a social ferment away from it's so the the social ferment that comes from the impos imposition of capitalism into a feudal system that's what the uh 1848 0:47:41 revolution was and by that point in russia you literally still had enslave a land land held like baron held serfs in russia you did they had they had a serfdom that was uh more uh like in more embedded and and then serfdom had been in continental europe for in some cases hundreds of years and so they didn't get there they didn't get their first like explosion of that i have read late victorian holocaust by why does 0:48:46 everyone think carter was so great if anybody thinks carter is great it's got to be there's the only people i can think of think carter is great are people who like that he his post-presidential career which i think is largely commendable people who like the fact that some american president has called israeli uh occupation apartheid which also commendable if you liked his presidency though it's either because you're just a contrarian who who wants to stand up for somebody who was uh sort of unfairly maligned uh and honestly he was unfairly maligned for a lot of the stuff that people blamed him for publicly like the hostage crisis although you know they didn't have to give the shah a sanctuary and let him go and do get but i think a lot of the people like it like it because like him because they feel like he was honest with the american people in a way that like reagan wasn't and that he was punished for being 0:49:48 honest and that is just that's perfect liberalism it is the because of course carter was telling the american people stop being materialistic stop stop measuring freedom by what you can buy and what you can spend without giving any indication that he was going to change the underlying economic engine of this country which depended on that he just wanted you to feel bad he wanted you to to to have a little uh hull monitor in your head to to judge you for your uh for your desires while still living in a society completely dominated by consumerism and more than anything that's just bad politics and of course it got completely rinsed by reagan saying no we'll cut taxes and i mean that's the thing it's like carter was partly human carter i don't think is 0:51:5 a real reptile but he was a real liberal he was a real ideologically committed liberal and that is that makes you an enemy to to the human race even if you don't know that you are even if you think you are that's one of the beauties of liberalism is it can convince anybody that they are doing things for everyone's good when in fact they're just reinforcing and protecting the system from uh from uh it's from the downward pressures from pressures from below and of course he had a very bad foreign policy i mean he sent uh money to the mujahideen before the soviets even invaded what 0:52:7 was the this is interesting somebody says what was the deal classical when was the decade classical liberalism stopped being progressive uh it was about the time that the term progressive was discussed was uh coined the eight the late 1800s uh it's important to note that this it's the the people who have been progressives since the turn of the century the the tier of people who are in in that middle tier of academics politicians managers lawyers professional managerial types they were in the 19th century they had a strict adherence to uh small government orthodoxy hard money uh and uh survival of the fittest social doctrines and what happened over time is that that went from being a uh the most humane way to organize the 0:53:8 government because it opposed monarchy concentrated power and slavery because the the anti-slavery forces in the north the the the northern whigs who are opposed to slavery did so through because they believed it was morally wrong to for anyone to be compelled to labor by anything other than the market the market should be what compels you to labor not everybody of course that doesn't stand for every abolitionist wendell phillips for example and john brown for that matter didn't think that but that was the pervading orthodoxy it was the most humane way to organize capitalism but by the end of the gilded age that system had broken down and the new people who came to that social or just came to those social positions it's not the same people remember they're dying out and they're being replaced by new people and the new ones they're replaced by they find that that orthodoxy doesn't work anymore and their new understanding of the most humane way to organize capitalism is through uh mixed economy uh social safety net welfare the the things that become 0:54:9 the progressive model that has dominated ever since but all right and just a couple more i'm thoughts on st louis i don't really have thought any thoughts about the city i do have some thoughts about the saint uh i don't know if you guys know this but he was actually he's the king of he was king of france i believe the only king of france to have been sanctified or beatified uh and he uh was a very very uh earnest and and 0:55:10 passionate crusader but also a very bad one uh he did a couple of crusades that were uh complete botches and he actually died on campaign in africa uh of dysentery his duty house out in a camp why do i hate the english they're the one i mean i don't

hate the english like as people but like english civilization those are the guys their combination of uh technology and bureaucracy and when i say technology i mean things like protestantism and uh and uh you know uh their naval stores and like that uh double entry bookkeeping whatever that they but whatever bundle of things they came together not only gave them a technological spear sort of to to use in the in the battle for world resources but it also generated a culture of bureaucracy that allowed them to carry out monstrous acts of colonial domination while maintaining a civil veneer and a uh functioning um political culture in the metropole and that model is the model that all capitalism has followed ever since we were just took the baton from them that's why you could just give me give me a time machine and let me just honestly i don't even have to give napoleon like a modern navy because what would they know they wouldn't know how to do with it just give them some ketchup packets give the french some ketchup packets so that they can go out and put out on the sea and not have to worry about getting scurvy just give them some barrels of ketchup packets to just go out and then they put the ketchup on their food and then they don't have to worry about their teeth falling out and this dumb limeys have to you know they have to turn back because they ran out of produce and they're all they got all got giant uh because that the bureaucratic culture that that alienation that is central to english social order and that we then transmogrified into like a mad dog settler colonial version of it has has rendered meaning has destroyed any meaning beyond that which can be quantified has destroyed social meaning has destroyed the soul and we're all now living in this desanctified soulless universe that these but again that's not the fault of english people now although a lot of them do seem to be very genuinely miserable and more than anything sad that they are empires and still around which is how is that like people like people are often horrified by the turks for not recognizing the armenian genocide which they should be or for the japanese for acting like they didn't do anything wrong in manchuria but look at the english whining crying that their empire is gone when the fact is that for the crimes their empire committed they should have just had the entire island detonated and sunk into the north sea they got to keep their they got to keep the elgin marbles and they're gonna whine and complain that they don't have their empire anymore all right i think that uh i think bertovo is going to be streaming uh fortnite pretty soon so i'm going to log off uh hopefully god willing and the creek don't rise wednesday we will be talking about chapters 4 5 4 5 of reconstruction bye-bye huh baby wow is it working like first first shot wow that's just popped right on great good about it feeling good is applebee's going are they all gone what happened where are the chain restaurants of yesteryear because they were all on very shaky footing 0:1:1 before covent i can't imagine many of them are still around unless they're going to get bailouts which would be very funny if there was some sort of like chili's bill where chili's is all in capital letters the chili's bill and it's all money for chain restaurants because honestly like what are you gonna do for people for whom going to those chen restaurants really is a social event the closest thing they have to one anyway i mean it's what replaced the kiwanis club and uh and the elks and and vfw is going to uh applebee's neighborhood bar and grill uh yeah i know they got the ppp money but i mean i think they're going to need more they're going to need even more if they want to uh keep keep that keep it going because even before uh the collapse of uh the retail sector and dining they weren't doing great 500 episodes can you believe it folks 0:2:2 what a long strange trip it's been it is indeed a very weird and disturbing universe we inhabit isn't it certainly is how the hell do we get five goddamn 100 episodes out of this thing i have no idea we'll see how many more we get i hope it's a lot 500 more why not just become a permanent fixture in the podcasting universe still be a podcast when they turn into brain implants courtesy of elon musk that'd be pretty getting up here all right so let's start talking about chapters three and four or chapters four and five rather of reconstruction by eric fodder uh so the first the fourth the fourth 0:3:3 chapter uh the about is about the re the attempt by reconstruction authorities to impose a free labor standard on the former south which had a lot of problems as you could imagine and i want to start with the hilarious little anecdote that foner finds in here that so the basic fundamental reality that all of this attempt to struck create free uh labor institutions in the south contracts and all that all that was based on one fundamental fact which was not assured to happen which could have gone otherwise this is why i fixate on uh the notion of contingency and the idea that the reconstruction could have gone differently is that all of this uh that we're going to 0:4:5 talk about these chapters is premised on the uh the wholesale pardoning basically of the confederate uh elite the the slave holding class which is about 200 000 people who uh who brought about the war for their own choice we're responsible for the war uh and we're given a pass by andrew johnson where said go back to your land you get your land back uh we'll even give you back your political rights if you sign a little thing saying that you're loyal or whatever uh and then even if you and if you made a lot of money even if you were one of the most elite you can get a pardon uh if you asked me nicely literally they had a provision if you had more than twenty thousand dollars in property you had to ask for a personal pardon from the president which johnson started handing out like uh hotcakes as soon as they started asking for them so the upshot of all of this is that the slave the ruling class gets to maintain or try to 0:5:6 reassert anyway some of them had difficulty uh in fact when they found their uh their plantations ruined and their their uh their confederate uh bonds worthless but a lot of them were able to maintain their land and maintain their influence and a lot of them fixated on the idea of just going back to the way things used to be uh and one of the ways they did that according to fonner was uh by going back and recreating the uh the high chivalric feudal cosplay that characterized southern society uh mark twain actually when he wrote about the confederacy he had been a uh he was mustered into a missouri confederate unit early in the war and then quickly deserted uh-huh and then after the war was very critical of the confederacy uh and southern society 0:6:8 in general and he blamed the war on walter scott he said that uh that all of that uh romantic feudal uh uh fantasy got into the heads of the planter elite and proving that the uh claim that they were like the burbans after uh the return the fall of napoleon uh who were said to have come back having forgotten nothing and learned nothing which is why the reactionary democrats uh who took over uh souther the southern party uh after the war were called bourbon democrats uh they were in they were committed to trying to act like nothing had changed even though they just got their asses kicked and the entire country their country was burned to the ground uh they staged chivalric tournaments tournaments straight out of ivanhoe complete with knights adorned with lances and plumed helmets and ladies competing to be 0:7:9 crowned queen of love and beauty made an incongruous reappearance although in what in one north carolina community the cult medieval nobility waned after blacks organized the tournament association of their own so here you see the the conflict the conflict that would define reconstruction a planter or one of them anyway a planter elite trying to reassert the old way of being with the fact of a free black population uh uh making it impossible or at least making it much more difficult than they because how special is it how special is your fancy little tournament if if your former slaves can run around and pretend to be so one of the big uh impacts of the uh the abolition of slavery and uh the abolition of the plantation model was the end of plantation paternalism uh which was the by any standard it was the the uh the one 0:8:13 sort of saving grace of the plantation uh slavery model uh economic model relative to northern wage labor which is that in the northern wage labor system if you were not of economic use to capital buh-bye you had you were not no one was obliged to you in any way and if you didn't have family who could take care of you you were jwf jolly well uh in whatever else you want to say about slavery and it was of course monstrous beyond measure uh aged slaves slaves who could no longer work in the in the fields were taken to be sort of the uh the the uh their um maintenance their their li their uh sustenance was the responsibility of the slave owner and the slave owners thought well at the end of the war well if if there is no more if there's no gratitude 0:9:15 on the part of the slaves which they insanely thought there should have been uh and there's no um and there is no obligation when i have no obligation to uh the slaves either and so things that used to be part of a plantation uh compliment like food and shelter were charged for and and slaves who couldn't work were markets the pro and of course for uh for northerners they might look at that and say fine that's great fun finally free labor associations not this quasi-feudal arrangement but the thing is is that the assumption underlying the free labor institutions of the north which they were trying to impose on the south was a civic equality where market transactions could take place in which the uh the white southern society was committed above 0:10:16 all else to refusing to allow to occur so that's another one of the conflicts that uh that the northern authorities who are trying to administer reconstruction really kept finding baffling they were trying to give people the chance to to live as americans as they did in the rest of the country and these southerners they just refused to go along with it and they just could not on the on the part of uh freed slaves there was a real uh desire to uh access that yeoman vision of freedom the the vision by the way that was abraham lincoln's presiding vision for american liberty the idea that because of the because the idea that access to land allows the american citizen liberty 0:11:19 from the market liberty most importantly from the uh the compulsion of wage labor wage labor might be a station in life but in lincoln's fantasy of how america was supposed to work and how it kind of did work in places like his springfield in illinois uh which is what which is the concept that richard white begins his book with laying out springfield and saying this was lincoln's vision for america uh what that required was uh self-sufficiency in land access to land so that one could make make money in the market but also sustain themselves on the land meaning that they could save money choose employers as they saw fit not as the market dictated and that they could save money to improve their the amount of land that they held and that was something that many many former slaves were dying to try to access but uh that 0:12:22 but one thing that stopped them was johnson administration's refusal to redistribute land the single biggest catastrophe of the johnson uh presidential reconstruction era uh and also the fact that for the former slave owners the only social uh value of the black population was as labor for them the the idea of blacks being independent yeoman was totally anathema because that would imply that they were members of a community members of a society which was absolutely uh not what they wanted if they needed if they were to exist they were to exist for the benefit of owners for the benefit of and this is a thing that northerners kept running against and being baffled by uh and it was funny so many northerners actually came to the south bought land 0:13:23 tried to create their own plantations motivated by the belief that uh that if you gave uh uh former slaves and it's uh the market incentives that they would produce profits for you uh through cotton cultivation uh but it over and over again uh the former slaves resisted being used as uh profit making for someone else which they knew instinctively it was the relationship uh because they had only encountered it their entire life in in favor of sustenance in favor of working land for their own families benefit not for the profit that they knew they would never see uh and that became a big problem for a lot of northerners and for a lot of northerners it confirmed the stereotypes that they had heard from former slave owners that you we have to you have to have a system of compulsion of labor in place or otherwise they won't work 0:14:24 the blacks won't work and the fact was they won't work for you at your um on your dictates which was enough to throw them into furor because they could not see any other social utility to the very existence of these people if they were not there to provide surplus for their ownership class which uh and a lot of those uh northerners were baffled because they thought no no no things are different now it's different now now we're we're uh collaborating you're not i'm not your master i i'm your employer and they were baffled by the fact that former slaves didn't have that motivation to see their bank uh balances expanded and i and that reason a big reason for that is that free labor ideology that the north was trying to impose on the south was premised on a notion of civic equality that obscured the reality of class conflict 0:15:25 because even in the north with this fantasy oh everyone's on the same side we're all building the other was a lie but it was a lie that was allowed to be propagated and and accepted by many people in a false consciousness because of things like um civic equality because people were all considered to be within one uh unit like if you had uh if you had land you could vote but black suffrage was completely rejected by these early reconstruction southern governments and so and black skin was was uh socially prescribed from huge areas of of social intercourse and so in a very real way uh black people former slaves especially the south were demystified about they were they did not have the the uh inculcated illusions that the culture of of uh civic democracy in the north had allowed to spread and uh there was a very concerted effort among the freedmen's bureau uh and the specifically the uh educational institutions that they sponsored throughout the south for the former slaves to inculcate on into the former slaves and their children uh the value the idea the idea that class con conflict could be alighted and transcended through education and self-improvement which was an endemic belief in the north but that just could not be sustained in south and they were doing this the the they were the freedmen's bureau was frantically trying to get this message out there in large part because uh the people in charge of the freedmen's bureau which was a revolutionary institution in that it was doing things that the united states government at the time was sought essentially as anathema in any other context the sort of direct provision of of help poor relief was considered uh offensive to free institutions at the time because of the the pervasiveness of this free labor ideology uh and so the uh bureau was wildly underfunded understaffed and even the people who did staff it were largely interested first and foremost in reducing the need for their uh for the institution to exist they were trying to undermine their own remit as quickly as possible so that they could uh so that that they could stop this transgression against free contracts and and liberty uh as quickly as possible and very few people were willing to recognize that the reality of emancipation and the real reality of this new class war in the south necessitated a changing relationship between governing but even the earnest desires of the freedman's bureau to eliminate themselves were stymied not really so much by the former slaves who did of course come to the freedmen's bureau and saw it as really one of the only institutions that had even could potentially uh uh give them justice since all local courts and uh and legal institutions were arrayed against them and were completely packed with bitter former confederates uh but it was the former confederates themselves uh the the johnson and the freedoms bureau gave the south back to their planter elite on a platter on the condition that they do something to try to uh institute a free labor system in the south and they refused they looked they didn't know only look at gift drops in the mouth they pissed out in its teeth and the one thing that the freedmen's bureau did that might have actually created a cis a situation where um where there would have been a basis for enduring the enduring establishment of black political power in the south which was necessary because it was necessary to change conditions and to truly um uh fulfill the revolutionary implications of the civil war because you know the interests and passions of the north were always going to be short-lived relatively because of the lack of their personal investment in the outcome uh it was going to be it was going to be only through the uh in the intensification of black political uh uh power that would have asserted on the ground uh uh black equality

CUSHVLOG 150. RECONSTRUCTION JUNCTION III - MORE LIKE

and the thing that could have done that was land was ownership of land and the freedmen's bureau did actually in the very immediate aftermath of the war begin a program uh of land redistribution not only was land that had been claimed by uh former slaves from abandoned uh plantations and such codified as owned by them 0:20:34 but uh land that had been given to slaves as a war exigency by sherman for example marching through south carolina was ratified and also uh general oliver o howard issued circular 33 which set which was debate one of the basis is for the 40 acres in a mule notion that that set aside or or planned to set aside 40 acre tracts for freedmen to cultivate on their own and if that had been followed through on and intensified uh you that i think is really the chance for uh reconstruction to have taken a different turn and for american history to have taken a different turn uh and andrew johnson mother uh single-handedly and against all of the momentum that was happening on the ground in the south uh cancelled all redistribution ordered all slaves ex-slaves off of land that they had taken or had been off uh given uh fired and re-assigned all uh 0:21:38 commanding officers in the union army who were committed to land redistribution which was not none there were several radical generals who were uh committed to a project of land redistribution who were assigned or removed from from power when they resisted uh johnson's order and this really is this is the the bad turn and i know a lot of people want to be cynical about lincoln and there's plenty of reason to be so uh but i just honestly do not believe that abraham lincoln would have done that more than anything because the notion of uh freedom in america being the freedom to cultivate one's own land in addition to access the market was lincoln's entire guiding principle his political uh hero was henry clay and johnson's was andrew jackson and i don't think that you can say that going from one to the other in the middle of this 0:22:39 incredible moment of ferment had no impact on anything it just doesn't they now you can say well it might have gotten they it might have been rolled back anyway but the fact is there was no force in the south who could have made it go away at that time the land was in the hand of the former slaves they were telling it the union army was supporting their claims then the president said stop it the president said that not really under pressure from anybody else not part of any groundswell of support in congress as an individual decision he decided to do that so even if the pressures to break up uh redistributed land would have emerged they would have emerged later in a atmosphere where the continued tenancy on that land would have 0:23:41 would have built the power to resist it that's the thing that people forget when you when they talk about these things mechanic mechanistically well all these ins all the racism was still there these institutions are still there yeah but as soon but if the the reality on the ground is different then the uh incentives are different and the balance of power changes over time and i think a situation where access to land was not stopped or would have it would have not only stayed where it was it would have accelerated because it would have solved a lot of the problems of reconstruction from the point of view of the northern authorities the persistent violence and and the the uh the persistent need for freedmen's bureau uh um intervention to to provide food and supplies and and uh and uh legal aid for former slaves it would have reduced the workload they wanted to reduce the workload and blacks being able to sustain 0:24:43 themselves on the land would have helped them do it but instead of that being allowed to ferment it was stopped and not just stopped they were it wasn't like they didn't just say no more they sent the army out to pull people off the land people who resisted people who said no that's not fair we cultivated this land it's ours and who believed that things might change with the new congress they were forcibly removed and that to me is the i don't see that happening president but i think it's we need to point out one of the most interesting things about uh about the contradictions 0:25:44 that are built into reconstruction and one of them is is that the fundamental liberal ideology of basically everybody from the north who went to reconstruct the south in the image of the north was that the interests of capital and labor are identical they believed that and like i said it was the yeoman fan it was the yeoman land access that made that fantasy viable the idea that yes you might have to work in a factory you have to work for somebody else but you can always get land and work it yourself too which meant that you could choose the uh uh the conditions of your employment because you could always just grow turnips that was the fundamental thing but it was still even with that a fiction because access to land is not equal obviously access to materials are not equal luck is not evenly distributed in fact it tends to accrue to people who already have resources and land but it was a fiction 0:26:47 that was maintained by the reality of social mobility which was real uh as well as the racial solidarity of the white north and the idea uh which uh honestly more than anybody uh john c calhoun was the most perceptive about his entire argument for slavery was as long as there is a subject race then all whites regardless of their social position will see themselves on the same side and that will obviate the inherent class tensions that would otherwise emerge because calhoun uh hofstetter has an art has had an article uh about calhoun called the marks of the master class because he said that uh calhoun's analysis of class conflict was the same as marx's that it was the basis for society and then it was inevitable but calhoun said that racialism a racialized society allows that class conflict among whites to be uh obscured and it did uh and then let's not forget national identity nationalism the idea that you're 0:27:48 an american that you're part of an american project that you have a vote that you can involve yourself in the political process these things obscure and mystify the reality of the of the basic fact of class conflict but a war between and it really was a war uh over resources over contracts over conditions of work between ex-masters and ex-slaves was class war unmasked because the ex-slaves did not have access to any of those mystifying social relationships of nationalism of racial solidarity to obscure the reality of class conflict and it was very much in the interest of the freedmen's bureau and everyone amongst the northern uh elite to get away find a way to get that mask on to re-mask that class conflict which honestly is one of the factors that would have been most crucial in motivating genuine land redistribution because as i said access to land was the synoquinon of yeoman freedom and guys like lincoln understood that and i want to end uh the discussion of chapter four with a quote a long quote from uh the end of it uh thus began the forging of a new class structure to replace the shattered world of slavery an economic transformation that would culminate long after the end of reconstruction in the consolidation of a rural proletariat composed of the descendants of the former slaves and white yeoman and of a new owning class of planters and merchants itself subordinate to northern financiers and industrialists now just stop here to say uh eugene genovese was in the 60s was a marxist historian who who studied the culture of plantation slavery he wrote a book called rojo jordan roll which is very influential in sort of the cultural history of the antebellum south and he turned into a neoconservative like many did after the failure of the 60s revolution when he decided i guess that the marxist nostrums the marxist teleology was a fantasy and that capitalism was essentially inevitable and when that happened he looked back on his writings about the antebellum south and decided you know what this was superior this was better than what came later and honestly if those are your two options i don't think it's necessarily correct but it's arguable but the thing is it was not inevitable and this is what uh this is what fauna emphasizes here in this section the historian however must avoid telescoping the actual course of events into a predetermined linear progress both planters and friedman viewed labor relations as a shifting conflict on a terrain whose victories and defeats remained provisional and trial and error altered each group's perceptions of its own self-interest a new set of labor arrangements did not spring up overnight and there was no preordained outcome to the workings of what a federal treasury urgent agent described as quote the new system of labor if system it may be called when there is endless confusion and absurd contradictions so here you see looking backward this is all the civil war itself just looks like the war of a victory for the northern the yankee leviathan of finance capital but it did not at any point have to be that and i really do think that the killing of lincoln helped but was not the only thing on us obviously that helped shape us in the direction we went and uh and so for the rest of that chapter of honor talks about how there was this contest over conditions of work over what a contract would look like over how uh over how land would be cultivated and at every point the ex-slaves uh they knew the power of group negotiations like the a plantation of 0:31:52 the a former plantation workforce would organ would essentially um would bargain with their former owners as a unit would in fact sometimes have internal democratic discussions over what sort of contract to take and then and then stick to it this was like a proto-organized labor among the former slaves and there were a bunch of different conditions that obtained different contracts uh different wage scales now of course the lack of hard currency and the ground meant that very little of the uh of these very few of these newly freed slaves who are now supposed to be working for wages actually got wages because there was not very much money or credit to be had then they were given an agreement of a percentage of the sale of the cotton generally at the end of the season which of course was right for abuse and um and thievery and which the remedying of which was one of the main uh roles that the freedmen's bureau had was to stand up for the interests of the laborers in these 0:32:53 negotiations uh and there was actually a period at the beginning of reconstruction when uh the very high price of cotton uh allow and and the huge shortage of labor because of the number of women and children who were pulled out of the workforce by into a domestic sphere uh and the increased mobility of slaves to move a former slaves to move away from areas where there was a bad deal to areas where there was a good deal it actually allowed for uh some pretty good arrangements which were backed up by the federal government to be had and some actual money to be made uh but of course uh there was then a series of catastrophically bad uh harvests and then a collapse of global cotton prices which severely reduced uh the ex-slaves bargaining position and changed their ability to assert themselves the other thing that really helped them or to really hinder their ability to assert themselves uh in 0:33:55 the years after the war uh was every decision made by mother andrew johnson so let's turn now to chapter five which is about which we've gone now from the first uh four chapters which sort of are a social uh uh a broad look at the social terrain of the former confederacy to um a analysis of andrew johnson and his uh choices his administration's decisions during the first years of the war uh thanks to the amazingly arcane nature of american presidential and congressional elections uh there was a period after lincoln's assassination when um johnson essentially governed completely by himself because congress would not be coming back into session which meant he 0:34:57 was in the early months of reconstruction most crucial months free to essentially do whatever he wanted which is what is now called presidential reconstruction so let's start with a uh portrait of andrew johnson who is really a quintessence of all of the worst elements of american populism he is in the grand tradition as i said his uh his political hero is andrew jackson he is part of the grand tradition of of the of the refuge uh hostile to federal power and the prerogatives of banks and eastern interests but also because he was never because he unlike john uh jackson did not become a wealthy uh uh plantation owner himself inventedly hostile to the interest of the local planter elite and his status as a unionist was premised more than anything on a resentment of the fancy boys who ran tennessee who looked down on up country poor people like johnson who had risen from being a tailor's apprentice to being a senator and a governor he very much was a sort of a dark mirror image of abraham lincoln they were born very close to one another within the same year uh and they both came from poor backgrounds they both worked themselves up into the ranks of politics but where lincoln's ambition was sort of fused to a humane understanding at some level johnson's was completely self-fixated he his any his populism was entirely generated by personal resentment and that is the under that's the problem with populism as it has been expressed in american history is that if you don't have a rational analysis of power which you don't if you're just some ice rube uh and you don't have any kind of emotional connection to like a broadly construed underclass which he did not all you're generated by is all your actions are truly generated motivated by is resentment and resentment by itself is it's dirty fuel it's not gonna be uh it's not gonna do the job it is very much like trump there's a straight line really from jackson to johnson to trump i mean you can throw nixon in there too but honestly nixon was much more humane and well i mean not humane my god what he did in vietnam but he was more restrained i guess than the rest of them but he was similarly motivated by just a burning churning resentment of power not really any desire to see power overthrown and that and that is where the resistance to global capitalism is coming from now is pure resentment based with no solidarity undermining or undergirding it and no intellectual structural analysis of power that might overturn you know rude passions either that's the important thing to remember forget about whether it made him a good or bad person it made him a bad politician because johnson's entire strategy after the war for his to building his own political power because that's what he wanted to do like tyler wanted after the death of william henry harrison john tyler who is a democrat who had no connection to the wake program was motivated by a desire to build an independent political base basically among southern slave owners johnson was trying to sort of do a post-war version of that which was to raise up the white yeomanry who he felt that he represented once again not out of solidarity but simple identification he was one they were him it was just it's selfish uh narcissism it's not really a political vision uh by restoring power to the planter elite now that was doomed it could not have worked and we see the result the result is the restoration of power to the fancy lads who he hated and the continued immiseration of poor whites because white poverty did not was not alleviated by reconstruction it was only deepened and extended so his even his uh if you want the most altruistic reading the most politically sophisticated uh reading of his desire of his motivation to lift up the white the poor whites of the south was doomed from the beginning and failed miserably jackson was based during nullification it's the same thing johnson had the exact same politics as jackson which was wild racism desire for manifest destiny in veteran hostility to eastern finance and the federal government but a maniacal obsession with the notion of the union as indivisible so as soon as so when the planters were reinstated in power they of course re-harnessed the yeoman to their thing to their rule they they uh the only force that was trying to allow any upward mobility for poor whites in the south was the freedmen's bureau by and and the reconstruction governments that came later which tried to do things like create public school systems which had never existed in the south because i'm not paying for it why should i pay for it my fancy child has a bunch of french tutors come to them why would i pay for some grubby white trash to get an education there the the uh the uh poverty of the of of the white south was entrenched by planter rule and it was perpetuated by the continuation of plan to rule after the war the only thing that could have broken planter power which he which johnson claimed to hate was a political uh a political union a political coordination between the poor whites and the ex-slaves it's the only thing but johnson was completely blinded by his fanatical racism and honestly the people who say oh lincoln was racist too you you can only think that if you live in the fantasy land of now where racism is like uh some sort of soul particulate where you are either completely washed clean of it because you've seen enough of those instagram uh infographics to be purified of racism or it's all consuming uh i mean lincoln met just as like a very superficial example lincoln met uh with a number of black people over the course of his presidency in the white house talked to them frederick douglass said i talked to the man he did not get he did not give me any reason to believe that he didn't think me and equal to him andrew johnson refused to meet frederick douglass he would shoo him out and shoot black people off of the front porch he was viscerally racist in a way that lincoln simply was not and that matters when you're the president and because of the idiocy of our constitution you have sole control over the reorganization of an entire chunk of the country for upwards of a year so what was presidential reconstruction which he tried to put off to create this new uh political uh coalition of the whites yeoman the white the former planters and northern republic northern democrats in order to stain his power and give him a real term because that's the same that's the thing that unified him and john tyler the desire to get a term of their own because it doesn't really count if you were vice president the guy before you died you got to get you got to be elected on your own terms which is but they both drove their entire presidencies towards and both founded miserably because neither one of them understood the actual terrain of politics because they had their heads up their asses so the policies were restoring all the land to the former slave owners which is obscene and and makes no sense 0:43:9 morally legally as i pointed out as a former slave pointed out in a section from last week if you've got the right to take the slaves you have the right to take the land obviously but also to restore political rights to the rebels and the motivator for that was a insane piece of reasoning that lincoln was johnson was completely fixated on he was so uh opposed to the notion of secession he was so opposed to the idea that you could secede the idea that secession was allowed by the constitution that he asserted that because secession is not possible then the states never really seceded which means there needs to be no reorganization and readmission to the union because they never left which is a perfect logic guy reddit approach to reality you have this logical uh syllogism in your head that's completely airtight according to you and it 0:44:10 has nothing to do with the reality on the ground somebody uh some uh fauna points out someone at the time said like his thinking about secession is like saying because you're not allowed to murder people that means no one's ever committed murder and so why would you punish someone for murder you can't murder people like they did it they had their own country for four years they shot a so because of that he issued a blanket amnesty to former confederates allowed basically everybody who fought with the confederacy back into public service and this was incredibly important because no one because political power in the 19th century was powered by patronage the ability to appoint people to to public offices and the people who johnson allowed to take power in these southern states had the ability to fill basically the entire ranks of the civic service in all these states unprecedented patronage power the kind of patronage 0:45:11 power that a different president could have used to suborn uh ascension to say black uh citizenship and uh and uh land redistribution like hey all you poor whites i know you're mad about black people uh having land and being able to vote but who wants to be a postal clerk who wants who wants to be a justice of the peace that could have been used instead those ranks were filled up immediately with former confederates he had an exemption for anybody who owned twenty thousand dollars or more worth of property but as i said you could get a pardon if you asked nicely if you sent him a letter and asked and i gotta believe that a part of the reason he did that this resent driven freak was that he loved the idea of of the former taylor the rough-hewn boy from tennessee getting all of these begging letters from all these lavender scented fops and then he's like yeah yeah but he signed off on these things by the rafter 0:46:12 hundreds a day in some cases which meant that uh the former confederates people who took arms against the country at the highest levels were back in government very quickly uh and the very high levels though were either it was taking too long for them to get their uh their pardons or they were they refused to cooperate with the yankees so the people who ended up taking power in these new states were a mixture of uh the kind of upcountry uh poor whites that he was uh who were hostile to uh planter power and had been hostile to plantar power before the war it has to be remembered that the southern states as much as we like to think that they were bastions of liberty for white people had wildly undemocratic voting structures in fact there were property requirements not just for voting in some states but for uh but for and then after property requirements for voting went away over time but in many of the southern states property requirements to serve in uh government were still in effect and were reasserted after the war by some of these fancy lands so the people who were opposed to that they were impo they were enthralled in places where there was significant anti-confederate unionist sympathy before the war places like north carolina and arkansas places with mountains basically places without mountains though uh the only real union people people who were opposed to secession in 1860 but then probably ended up joining the confederacy anyway because hey that's what the state's doing uh we're ex-wigs uh wigs uh made up of a significant percentage of the the very high points of the planter elite in the south the ones who were most connected to finance the ones who were most hostile to even white democracy and they were the ones who took power in a number of these other states um and with this coalition johnson hoped to put the war basically behind everybody hey let's buy guns be bygones and they were going to put it all on the backs of the former slaves and what was going to motivate that in part was a white yeoman hostility to the blacks which was generated by a very weird belief that a lot of them had uh that it was that slavery was if was black people's fault an equal if not greater amounts than it was their owners that they had a love for their owners and that they actually really only hated free wise now that of course is classic projection because for a poor white uh their social condition is precarious and the the one thing that keeps them on this side of the the social uh fabric is that they're not black and so that means that hatred and hostility uh is all generated on those closest to them in condition which was they're much closer in the condition of their life like day to day uh obviously they had a great degree of freedom that blacks didn't but in terms of the conditions of their housing the conditions of their labor they were much closer to slaves than they were to slave owners and so of course the familiarity is what breeds the contempt uh and that was something that johnson felt and something that he hoped could he could cultivate and give him a new basis and it might have it might have worked except for the fact that these new uh governments refuse to take yes for an answer refused to take the offer of look acknowledge the end of slavery and basic civic freedom not even asking for something like uh um uh suffrage and then we can kind of move on and uh they all said you and what they did was pass a bunch of insanely draconian laws uh restricting the freedom of ex-slaves called black codes restricted their ability to move without uh without permission uh basically making it 0:50:17 illegal for them to not sign employment contracts every year to be unemployed uh and uh made it illegal for them to congregate anywhere in public and certainly in cities and liable for arrest and and transmission to forced labor if they were found away from a plantation essentially what they tried to do was take the private regime of coercion that had existed under slavery but the north that was a bridge too far even though there was no great commitment to black equality certainly black suffrage in the north in fact a number of uh referenda about allowing blacks to vote in northern states were was were defeated in 1865 uh this was just a bridge too far because the 0:51:21 war the sacrifices of the war which had been incalculable in the north maybe the the land had prospered but the people had died in large numbers and seen their friends and family go off and never come back it had to mean something it had to mean something and the idea that the people who seceded from the union killed a bunch of their friends and family fathers and brothers would go back in power and essentially recreate slavery with a different with extra steps as i said on rick and morty was just too much and it created a backlash to johnson and to presidential reconstruction which many northerners supported in the very beginning of his uh administration 0:52:23 that would culminate in the creation of radical reconstruction and i think the fact that you have this political will here to push beyond the status quo ante in the name really of black freedom and a push that would lead to the establishment within a few years of something that nobody really was taking seriously as an idea north or south in 1865 uh uh black voting rights to occur and for civil rights to be enacted that to me indicates that there was some political base for a project that would have been centered on black redistribution of plantation land to slaves that could very well have been uh affirmed and channeled and shaped by a lincoln administration it would 0:53:26 have led to a greater degree of conflict with the ex uh planters which very well would have come to violence but it came to violence anyway and the question is maybe it would have come to and so next week i don't know if it's gonna be wednesday it might be thursday uh i will figure it out and let everyone know but there will be a stream next week i don't think there's going to be a stream tomorrow or a friday i will uh let everyone know on that uh still up on the air but sometime next week there will be another stream where we talk about uh chapters uh chapters six and seven yeah which will be which will start when congress finally reconvenes in december of 1866 with a strong republican majorities in both houses with a invigorated radical faction willing to confront the president and uh all of a sudden a lot of things that didn't seem possible and seemed like lights that were dimming out of existence uh in the summer of 1865 are starting to flame back up again and as i said that's why 0:54:29

uh that's why i think this is worth looking at um because it didn't have to be this way i don't think and if it didn't have to be this way then then nothing has to be anyway there's fluidity there's chance there are things beyond the dry workings of the market determining human actions and human hearts so we'll talk about that next week very frustrating reading this week i'm sure everybody reading especially the chapter on johnson was just gnawing on their hands the whole time i know i was just want to hit him with a brick uh but it'll be fun to watch him get his owned in the next chapter because he did not take the emergence of a congressional consensus on reconstruction very well he essentially pulled a trump in that he tried to rally support for his vision of reconstruction by a whistle-stop tour of northern cities uh but in the more rough and tumble less security fixated uh world of those politics he got his he got his booed out of town he got uh he got jeered he got he got whistled at it's pretty funny uh and he was drunk most of the time uh so we'll talk about that next week got a few minutes here if anyone has any questions anybody has any specific questions but yeah no johnson's worst president of all time nobody else had the position that they were in to dictate things because plenty of presidents were monsters but they were monsters who essentially embodied a moment of time rather than shaped it and i think that is the reality of the american presidency and why ranking them by goodness or badness is often so arbitrary and beside the point it really isn't like ranking baseball players it's like ranking umpires a president's ability to do good or evil is essentially the luck of where they find themselves in time and their willingness to embody historical forces beyond their control but there are a few hinge points where individual uh decision making really is fundamental to outcomes to destiny and johnson is one of them someone says even buchanan yes the the situation among the doe faces who occupied the presidency before the civil war was essentially untenable they were trying to hold together a consensus that was breaking apart in front of them and they had no idea they were not equipped uh ideologically uh politically intellectually to deal with it if you flip james buchanan and franklin pierce you have basically the same outcome i believe franklin pierce supported the confederacy the was from there they would have just done the same things in that moment they would they they had no wherewithal to resist recession they would have facilitated it because facilitating the slave power was all the northern democrats knew how to do it was the asynoquinone of power it was how you got the big chair was by kissing the ass of the south they didn't know know what else to do so they all would have done it johnson they were destroyed they were destroyed and defeated people and he picked him back up dusted them off and put him back in charge when it didn't have to happen it's johnson there's no question yeah pierce was a big alcoholic it might have something to do with the fact that even to this day a lot of the president's decisions are on rails i would argue more than ever i think one of the reasons that we now have these presidents who seem to only exist to be seen in power and only pursue power for like a narcissistic desire to be seen is because they all know at a certain level that they don't have any real power or authority to do anything like obama i think intellectually understands that i think trump just does it more viscerally but both of them watched themselves be president i mean uh obama was like writing his memoirs while he was president like that was the whole point of it was to have memoirs to have netflix deals to have a podcast where he can pontificate upon power not to actually ever be in the room where power is exercised uh trump just tweeted his way watched tv and tweeted himself through the presidency both of them aware at a certain level that they actually were not the ones who called the shots and now we've got a guy who literally doesn't even know 0:59:54 where he is who just wants to be president because it's all he's ever wanted and he doesn't even know why anymore that's it the guy had two brain hemorrhages when he ran for president 30 years ago his life flashed before his eyes all the things that happened to him happened in a moment and all it did was further solidify in his freak brain that being president was the only thing that mattered because it was the only thing i think that could have validated all the horrors of his life all the awfulness of his existence is if he gets to be president and now he's done it and that's it he gets to wander around the white house not even knowing what day it is half the time he probably doesn't even know he's president that's the hilarious part of it he probably sits around he's probably all right that was good i thought we we next week maybe on friday i'll let you know but next week definitely we'll talk what is what is it tinny it's teeny because i don't have a dedicated mic right now uh but i will now that i'm here because i only have because i only stream here and 0:4:6 i use i use an xlr for the podcast i only have the uh i only have the lapel mic that i've been using with my phone this thing but since i don't have the phone anymore microphone i think i brought it but i'm not sure where it is i can't find it right now so i'll have to at least for now use the uh the laptop microphone but i'll probably in the near future be getting a a uh because i want to be professional here i want to be a little professional so i'm going to bring a uh a mic stand hopefully for next one anno 1800 stream with chris on friday we're back into it we're getting into it we're loving it the cadillac stayed by the house and the yanks they were within 0:5:7 and the tinker boys are best advice for them there without ken they turned and shook they had a look in the room where the dead man lay two big dimmed wire all right here we go is so weird i have the dashboard open up and i have my uh i have oh i have the whole command center here i can see the chat uh i can see the session length and the viewers oh man i can see the bit rate i feel like i feel like neo i feel like the lawnmower man like i'm absorbing the internet i'm becoming a true gamer let me get it this is more power okay so we're talking today about this is long 0:6:11 delayed so hopefully everybody who's been trying to get these red so we start with chapter six and the beginning of radical reconstruction baby this is congress coming back hard post passing the 14th amendment ready to lay ***** down uh and able to govern with andrew johnson essentially as an annoying uh hindrance but not a genuine threat to their power uh this really does show that congress is the real source of power in the constitutional system it really only has been the uh the mutating effects of america's role as a global hegemon in a world empire that made it so that our presidents are so much more powerful now because they have so much of uh so 0:7:13 much of like the state's capacity for violence is has been totally abrogated to them but in terms of legislation in terms of creating like a legal framework for domestic concerns power really does reside in congress and so after the big wave election that put the radical republicans in the cath bird seat uh although not uh not just the radicals and we'll get to that uh it meant that john johnson the audio i sound like a robot well what do you want me to do i don't know is there a button i can press if there's a button i can press they could govern without the president interfering but when they get to congress when congress comes into session there false 1868 uh 1867 0:8:14 they have to say what are we gonna do how are we gonna govern and that makes it and that is when the divisions within the republican party really start uh breaking the place breaking the thing up because while the republicans are all on the same page that this union had to be defended and slavery had to end in order to cease the the conflict between the the competing social orders in the north and south there was

CUSHVLOG 151. RJ IV - A NEW HOPE

no agreement within the republican coalition among anything else because remember the republican party is this frankenstein creature of northern anti-slavery sentiment that encompasses everything from the old uh american system wigs like uh abraham lincoln was an example of that strand to anti-masons to the **** know-nothings but then also uh democrats anti-slavery democrats who held a lot of the pre-war democracies ideas about fiscal and uh so this new part this new party doesn't really 0:9:19 have a coherent uh uh ideology but the war covers that up the war and the fact that they all agreed on things like the homestead act cover that up uh like obviously the saw the hard money men hated the greenback but it was a necessity for winning the war so they had to take it uh but but at the war's end all of these conflicts re-emerge so what kind of people are within this republican coalition on one side on the far left you have the radical populists and i would say that these guys are if you want to get presented about it these are the good guys these are the guys who understand most the political terrain and have accorded it uh and understand also the moral terrain they understand what the good is most the closest of anyone who could have been they understand what the good is and how to go about it in that 0:10:21 they understand that we need racial equality in this country but the only thing that will let that happen is if we have economic equality they understand that one cannot exist without the other which makes them the progressive force what we in the 21st century were called the good guys and these are people like ali uh thaddeus stevens in the house uh benjamin wade in the senate and benjamin wade is another real tantalizing former president uh uh alternative presidential what if after the civil war and then another one benjamin butler and i'm honestly i'm getting more and more fixed on butler as a character i think he is one of the most fascinating figures of the 19th century and i have an idea that i actually want to pitch to hollywood uh about a limited series about the the life of benjamin butler starring paul giamatti because as i have said this is a guy who started the war as a copperhead and became the most radical of one of the most radical of the radical republicans after the war while 0:11:22 being a spoilsman and a crook the whole time uh i'm thinking about it my first step is when i get done with the this book i might take a little break from the book club uh i mean i'll still stream but i won't be like doing about a book like this where i'm trying to get coverage every week while i do other stuff uh more at for pleasure i'm gonna read butler's autobiography to start with and then start looking more deeply into his uh character because he is to me considering that he was almost uh lincoln's nominee or could have been lincoln's vp nominee in 64 it's very tantalizing so anyway those are your radical populist republicans then you've got the liberals now these are the guys who think slavery is an abhorrence and they may even say it's a moral importance they may even say that racial caste distinction is a moral abhorrence but

class uh class distinction is necessary and in fact good and must be protected these 0:12:23 are the people who say we must free the slaves so that he can become a uh a worker so that he can be enter into market transactions because i'm sorry there is truly a hierarchy of humanity we are at the top of it we must maintain our position at the top of it and that means but that doesn't mean the brutal catastrophe of slavery which re destroys um destroys virtue and destroys uh democracy and that's all true we need a more rationalized tyranny that uses contracts and markets and private property this is the rationalizing impulse this is literally the capitalist train these people the radical uh republicans the liberal radicals are the progressive movement from that point till now they are the progressives of the 19th century they are the 0:13:25 warren voting and uh one of the one of their chief numbers is a guy who otherwise is one of the heroes of 19th century politics charles sumner a lion of abolitionism who was martyred in his senate seat by the grotesque southern neanderthal uh preston brooks carried lifelong injuries thanks to his gutter snipe and but he was a hard money uh low tariff lazar fair uh politician and because he didn't really know or care about uh about economics and so he had no coherent uh objection to slavery it was pure moralism like there are people there were uh industrialists who hated slavery because it was inefficient and they had no moral objection to it they had a practical objection to it and then you had people like sumner who had a fully moral objection but that's because he was a ***** senator he was not a capitalist or he did not take him he did not see himself as part of a capitalist edifice he saw himself as a 0:14:27 statesman and so he could have a fully moralized opposition to slavery he could even have a fully he could have a full uh revulsion at slavery uh as a racial classification he could be for full equality and i think sumner was one of the most radical and i would say that it's not because he was a bad person it's like oh yes let's use let's use this uh abolitionism to get to a yankee leviathan corporate state he just didn't know any better he didn't know no better because how would he he was not in power like you have to learn power when you're near it and he wasn't he was a speech maker he wasn't even a vote whipper in uh in the senate he just gave speeches mostly and then you have the rest of the party you have the moderates these are the people i was talking about who hated slavery because it's inefficient they're not necessarily 0:15:29 motivated by racial hatred because hey most of them live in the north where there aren't very many black people at all and that it's not their problem if they're black people or not it's not a thing they're scared of uh so they don't have to worry about like living near black people and having that be a point of con attention or anything because they're too rich to do it these were represented by people like uh senator james sherman of ohio who is william tecumseh sherman's brother sherman by the way as much as we love him for destroying uh the south uh but he was a moderate uh

uh racial moderate meaning sure give him the give him the vote but otherwise and then you had the conservatives like francis blair the old unreconstructed jacksonian democrats who just hated slavery because it was inefficient and hated the idea of sectionalism in uh interfering with america's destiny as a nation and they were wildly racist they were deeply motivated by racial animus but they were still republicans 0:16:32 because and these guys almost all and their relationship to uh to money question to to to the question of the currency runs uh along the same spectrum the farther left you were racially the more you were uh supported at least within the republicans it's different in the democrats but amongst the republicans who were the party of at the end of slavery and therefore some sort of integration of ex-slaves into american society they were the racially progressive party amongst them racial egalitarianism hard money equaled racial exclusionism and race because hard money is the real basis of social hierarchy because it is the currency it's what distributes resources and 0:17:34 uh hard money is a mystification that says no no value is not determined by us the government it is the state capitalists it is determined by uh this special uh metal that's in the ground and the amount of metal we have is how much we can how much stuff we can use and how much of the world how we can distribute resources and so it is associated with hierarchy it is associated with reaction and the only radicals who were for hard money were ones who were either lying about being uh in favor of black equality or is so this split revolves throughout the entire party uh so the party is split on these questions of race and even the eastern money that 0:18:35 deport supports the republicans at this point is also split uh the the the uh new york wall street uh commodities fortunes that uh revolved around cotton trade were all in favor of presidential reconstruction and wanted to keep what he was doing going reintegrate the south as quickly as possible on the basis of racial classified labor uh extortion basically that's what they were uh trying to get done as quickly as possible uh and but there was other money in the north that wanted to see the south really brought uh into compliance in order for nothing else than to facilitate a modernized um a modernized uh but oh i i forgot to say this about uh sumner sumner objected 0:19:37 vehemently to racial class uh separation on in trains he was opposed to any attempt in the south and in the north to segregate train travel by race but he had no problem with uh class separations because that's a matter of money that's objective who has money and who doesn't is determined by the market not me not us it's not being done by uh by some sort of discrimination uh of humans no no it is done by the the hand of god he decides who has the money to try in the first class and of course this is not true so one thing these republicans are able to organize around is a civil rights act that uses federal courts as an instrument to protect black rights in the south 0:20:38 and this is a way to reduce uh the federal intervention into uh the southern economy

because er into the southern society because there was a great fear especially on the right that wanted to pay back all that debt in species as quickly as possible um that they didn't want a long or expensive military occupation of the south so having uh and of course local authorities couldn't be trusted to enforce the law so the answer they got up with was federal courts and courts are always going to be the last resort of hidden power because it's it allows you to the way the currency does the way that uh a gold-backed currency does allows you to de-politicize something take something out of the realm of um of politics of right and wrong and into the realm of objectivity the objectivity of the amount of gold that uh something is worth the 0:21:40 objectivity of a of a judicial decision so there was no so they tried to fob off justice for friedman on to the uh federal court system even though those court rulings would have to be you know sought and enforced at some point something they didn't really care about or care to think about kicking the can down the road uh and then land redistribution was limited to a southern homestead act that allowed government land in the south to be sold cheaply of course all of the good land in the south the good profitable the black soil that could be used for productive agriculture was ***** owned by the ***** land giant landowners by the latifuntists and so all that was left was swamp and timber uh and very few uh blacks were able to take advantage of 0:22:42 it because even if they could have done it even if they could have gotten that land and made it useful they didn't have the capital to improve it because remember the homestead act says not here's some land and some tools it says here's some land and you have to use your own capital your own tools to ***** build the thing out and improve it so that it's now yours no one had former slaves by definition pretty much did not have capital because all of their all of their uh labor values surplus to their life had been taken from them so the only people ended up most people ended up buying southern homestead act land were white strawberry straw owners who were there to do it for lumber companies and of course this whole time there's all this good rich bottomland that these traders had just forfeited by their actions these people who had been defeated in battle on the question of what constituted their property and that property could have been taken but no no we cannot have we cannot give people something for nothing which of course is absurd they ***** 0:23:44 literally were they worked on it their whole lives they deserved it more than anyone who sat like a tick and the goddamn veranda did uh and but also because private property was sacrosanct it was a power the state didn't want to reveal its power to print money and it didn't want to reveal its power to compel through force because if it can compel through force who's doing the forcing is it the ***** puppets in washington for the eastern banking interests or is it the people that's a question nobody wants to ***** answer if you're at the top of economic hierarchy this whole

war was fought by i would say the mainstream of the republican party party itself as as like a machine not the voters the voters were more up in the air but at the party it was fought specifically i would say to uh bring about a bourgeois revolution in america that severed for the last and tota the last gasp and for the last time the relationship between the people and the land of the country so that they could be part so that everything could be privatized and parceled out which had to happen in order to have full bourgeois social order emerge the american revolution was a partial bourgeois revolution but land concentrated land ownership and land fixedness was not totally defeated because capital wasn't powerful enough yet it took until the 1860s for the north to become powerful enough to when challenged by the galloping self-defeating mania of this of the south to uh to gain its independence uh it was there to crush it it was there to and finally bring about a liberal bourgeois order and things like land dis redistribution went against that now once again that does not mean it was inevitable that that happened because this is a party and a party is just a it is a leading edge of a social movement and it does direct it to some degree but if conditions change at the base that brittle structure can snap we've seen it before it could have happened then that's why i have butler as president i just i make fantasies in my head to live in the world i do but i think that was the party that's what the party wanted and the fourteenth amendment uh empowered the union forces in the south uh by disqualifying many confederate veterans from service uh and imply it finally compelled a civic equality in in in elections uh but it left a lot of things to the courts and of course most of those provisions would end up doing much more to help corporations than former slaves the 14th amendment once it starts getting uh once it starts getting interpreted by gilded age courts after the social tide has fallen back and we're stuck in this moment of uh of like corporate power building and and corporate uh assimilation of all levels of uh state power uh there all of a sudden deciding that these provisions which were about freed slaves actually referred to ***** companies and and corporate uh corporate uh ventures because that's where the power was it's not because that was the correct interpretation it's not because that's what the text said or any fair interpretation of the text said so johnson who could have let this ship go by decides to veto the civil rights bill and not only that he goes on a tour of the north uh to try to whip up support in cities uh very trumpian like he was a trump figure like there's a few presidents who who fit who fit a general mold of bitter resentment uh paranoia uh hostility to the press and the political system in general uh but in other respects they're different i would say johnson nixon and trump are all in that mold the difference being that johnson and nixon had genuinely felt and deserved and earned senses of grievance uh and resentment to powers that be johnson always felt himself uh to have been scored by the elite aristocratic society

of the south because he was a a lowly poor white trash taylor nixon with his good republican cloth coat uh the son of a whittier grocer couldn't go to ***** yale uh felt had to go to duke law school which was just starting a law school uh felt like he was always having to bow and scrape before those more powerful than him and they and but trump was born on third base he was born at home plate after a home run he was born sliding in and the difference i think between our ruling class and 0:28:52 uh the former ruling class is that we have reached a point now where power has been so dispersed to the algorithm of capitalism like all of the superstructural uh authority points where people had the ability to actually make a decision and have it mean something and have it be dictated by their conscience and good good judgment instead of by a number on a ***** piece of paper that has gotten smaller and smaller and that means that the people on top are now as filled with grievance and anxiety and resentment as the middle strata usually are because everyone feels compelled no one feels free or powerful because there's always some other person no matter the most powerful people in the world if they're all there there's one person who's not there and that is the algorithm now all previous generations of power all different arrangements of power in the world there was always someone there and it was god but god just meant it was up to humans now you're never in charge no one's ever in 0:29:55 charge not even bezos and what that means is that they get resentful because that's what having that's what being in a position of precarity produces is resentment like american precariousness is now universalized and that's why we're having a culture-wide nervous breakdown because every social strata every relationship to capitalism regardless of whether how much power they have so when johnson tours the north he gets some good receptions in some places he gets some bad receptions in others and he gets booed and heckled uh and he just whined the whole time about how bad everyone was treating him he said at one speech i have been produced i have been 0:30:56 slandered i have been maligned i have been called judas iscariot who has been my christ that i have played the judas with thad stevens very unfair to me uh and this doesn't help his case uh he's very horrifyingly racist and more than anything he just tells everybody hey you know that war we just fought that all your sons and brothers died in it really didn't mean anything and voters were like you know what it actually did mean something and so when johnson tries to form a national union party uh where he would presumably use that to create a third way like a uh a a uh center of uh like dissident right-wing republicans to then later add on to uh the democratic nomination that he would then take to get reelected uh it was so filled with copper heads and and uh confederate sympathizers from the north who had spent the war uh 0:31:57 being a fifth column that it alienated basically every republican they could say look there is no good uh uh like there's no way that anybody who fought for the union

could support this party you're saying that everyone died for so he ran an explicitly racial campaign against black rights and he got his ass kicked this is that election that brought the uh brought the radical republicans to power where they could override his vetoes uh and the fact that there was a bunch of violence in the in the south was not helping things the fact that there were riots in memphis in new orleans uh and and violence against blacks that was left without with impunity it did piss off northerners uh there was a desire to reorder southern society there was a desire to make something meaningful out of the war uh and not to allow the planter ***** who had started the war to be put back in power if it might have been uh resentment but it was resentment with so with the 14th amendment passing this congress uh with johnson doing nothing can't stop it uh the uh republicanism is basically settling on using the moving towards having suffrage replace economic power we're not going to violate property rights and our understanding of property rights enough to reorder society by giving you the land that will allow you to sustain yourself we will give you levers of political power but of course those are fake there is no such thing as a level of political power uh if there is a generalized social arrangement against you laws mean nothing cease quoting laws to men with swords as pompe magnus said and that uh reality sadly would have would assert itself over the course of reconstruction and prove that it was in my view the failure to redistribute land that was the single greatest catastrophe of the reconstruction era and the thing that made all the worst results i don't think you get slavery salt i don't think you get racism solved magically by uh that happening but i do think that racial rapprochement in the south is uh you see much a much earlier emergence of a like potential multi-racial working class working uh collaboratively on the class lines and as i've said we've already talked about all the little roots and bran little roots and tendrils of redistribution that were working their way into the soil when ***** johnson came along and uprooted them and that if you don't have you have a different president abraham lincoln or a benjamin butler who maybe nurtures those roots instead of uproots them maybe the fact that inevitably the north was going to lose interest and lose desire to spend money on southern occupation would have still happened but in a context where the where black landed black uh uh friedman are able to create networks of political power themselves that's that's that's the that's the good outcome that could have happened it's not some magical pill the chicken and slavery it is independent political power for blacks in the south that doesn't depend on the freedmen's bureau and the ***** seventh cavalry and the only way that would have happened is with immense is with land redistribution which thaddeus stevens god bless them understood even though the rest of them for reasons of uh ignorance and uh ill intention refuse so chapter seven so this fourteenth amendment the civil rights act will lead to an explosion of political mobilization among the former slaves uh 0:36:8 these were concentrated in this uh civic association called the union leagues which were uh that started in the north as uh uh a as a civil support structure for the war effort people behind the lines men and women are uh no there were auxiliaries for the women but the union leagues were for for patriots to to do their part behind the lines like this is for the 100 men this is for the guys who paid someone to take their place like grover cleveland they could go to join the union union league to sort of assuage their guilt at not getting shot but they ex-slaves took that structure and used it to organize their own political power and while most of these in the black belt were all 0:37:9 black organizations in places with significant unionist sentiment rugged places like virginia like north carolina they were integrated union leagues this is 1868 here so these are people who are as racially uh uh uh culturated as any americans have been and there were cooperating in interracial union leagues **Music playing** so they're there to start organizing people to vote for um vote their interests and their start uh having conventions where they try to hash out exactly what their interests are uh and while they're doing that uh some of the white elite decide okay we're gonna cooperate with this uh and we're gonna get our former slaves basically to vote with 0:38:10 us uh by uh just hoodwinking them because what do they know besides we were such nice masters of course they're going to want to do what we say politically one of them said uh it's in the book a quote that i will i could i could buy uh he could buy all of uh his former slaves political allegiance with uh a jug of hooch and a banjo or something but it turns out that pretty much everywhere uh they tried this the former slave said yeah ***** you and contra what psychos like johnson thought who thought that the blacks and their owners were like in some sort of weird cahoots uh it turns out no the the white people who uh friedman were least trustful of were what a shock white people who had owned black people until like two days ago the poor whites even if they had very vociferous racial views at least they so the organizations 0:39:16 that emerge the republican party basically that emerges out of this organization in the south this this efflorescence of political activism is made up of obviously ex-slaves and freed white people are free black people but also two groups that you might have encountered from your high school history textbook carpetbaggers and scallywags oh don't we love to talk about carpet baggers and scallywags history gets so precious here doesn't it oh papa would you tell me of the cappy baggers and the scallywags i ever so much enjoy that one so carpetbaggers were northerners who would come to the south in order to make their fortune sometimes to make the world a better place but often to do both uh they tended to be educated middle class people who were looking to make jobs in politics to make jobs in land and agricultural speculation to work uh in the new industries that were emerging um and that some of them were 0:40:18

committed to racial equality others didn't really care it was a mixed group scalawags were uh southern republic southern white republicans who were of course the most despised group among uh both whites in the south pro uh confederate whites of the south uh and the dunning school which dominated reconstruction historiography for about 60 70 years after it was promulgated um but in reality these guys they were not portraying anything uh pro-war uh white republicans in the south some of them were uh were modernizers who were basically just going with the hot hand they're like look the north look slavery was always an inefficient economic structure let's modernize this ***** if we got to give the blacks some rights whatever let's just get 0:41:19 that northern capital here uh and so you know they really were in a way kind of betraying things like james longstreet who had been uh one of the top confederate generals he's he's gonna become a republican uh but a lot of them the ones who were less high up in the economic totem pole had spent the war either uh running around in the woods trying to escape uh deserter patrols because they'd run away from the confederate army uh or they had spent the war in union uniforms fighting for the union because they never recognized the confederacy as a legitimate government because nobody ***** asked them people forget how undemocratic the declarations of secession were wherever there was opposition to secession in the south it was just ground over there was no deliberation they were just it's like oh interesting this entire area of the state says don't uh secede ***** you you don't even get 0:42:21 recognition you don't even get to come and vote in our rigged ***** election which is rigged because they had rigged uh suffrage so that the people who own slaves got more votes than people who didn't own slaves so guess what we have more people at every one of these conventions there isn't even any ***** democracy to it their slaves are voting for them and this is one of the reasons that a lot of whites thought that the slaves would vote for their masters in after reconstruction but it was just because they'd structured uh suffrage in such a way to uh increase their power it was deeply undemocratic so these guys were not ***** traitors they they were they had nothing to betray they didn't recognize that ***** and so and they'd spent the war being persecuted many there had been executions there was imprisonment uh many of their homes and lands were confiscated by the confederate government local uh pro-slavery people would harass and attack them uh they put up with a lot of ***** to stay loyal to the union and they wanted to get rewarded for it and you know what of course they did and and then of course you have uh free blacks from before the 0:43:24 war most of whom are in urban areas relatively well off compared to uh the black population in general uh because they had some you know capital by definition or they wouldn't have been free uh and then you have of course the ex-slaves and some combination of this group comes together into constitutional conventions throughout

the south to build new uh political instruction manuals for these new states by the way west virginia never constitutionally admitted to the union it there's the they totally ignored the constitutional um the equal of north constitutional uh order to as has been established by practice to bring in west virginia of course though you know it's a war ***** that and then it was almost east tennessee too tennessee was almost headed east uh so these conventions are a conflict between the modernizers who are looking for capital investment and populists who want to see things like debt relief and land distribution and the question of essentially the same question that the republicans are asking in washington what degree of social justice which degree of equality uh like true economic egalitarianism are we going to add to social or to uh uh the social are we going to add to uh emancipation you know like we're we're now at bear citizens now what does the citizenship mean does it mean you're free ***** off you now are enslaved by the market with no chance to have any sort of negotiating position or does the state have an obligation to sustain a social matrix that allows people to express freedom meaningfully and this is the kind of thing that people like wendell phillips and benjamin wade and thad stevens understood and of course the ex-slaves almost universally understood without having read any of this ***** for the most part because it was obvious to them only if you had money in position could you fool yourself otherwise but there's a real question how do you redevelop the south what money you this is a this is not a communist system communism is not on the agenda karl marx isn't walking through that door how are you going to capitalize this new society and northern capital northern investment is the only thing that could do it and things like debt relief and land distribution were scary to investors and there and even though of course people who were making these arguments were doing so self-interestedly there was a real tension there between the social goals of reconstruction and the need for it to be funded at some level through economic activity because remember the government's not going to uh but so they ended up mostly uh adapting pro-business constitutions but there's a lot there's a huge expansion of the role of the government here for the first time these states establish the abolition of imprisonment creating the first public school systems the first real government-invested infrastructure uh uh the first public asylums and orphanages that these states had ever seen so this is a big expansion of what is understood to be the government's role now of course there's people who are going to be trying to keep it as limited as possible but then you're going to have the people pushing at the other side to make it bigger one group pushing to make it to the other side bigger was a political organization made up of radical white populists uh and ex-slaves in virginia run by an editor named james hunnicutt who fled the state during the war because he was a unionist and came back to try to push uh the post

the reconstruction era of virginia into a populist uh racially integrated movement 0:47:30 among ex-slaves smallholders and uh mechanics against the power of the tidewater aristocracy this is in miniature the movement that could have taken real root in the south and the fat and we know it could have because it did and of course virginia is not south carolina virginia is not mississippi uh but uh the fact that this could find such ready ground for the exercise of real power that quickly because the hunting cut organization takes power in virginia uh this alliance of radical whites smallhold uh unionist smallholders and uh ex-slaves it had a potential to be operated other places uh and once again uh if if land redistribution had been persistent had persisted you could have seen that accelerated meanwhile stevens he's dying poor i really wish he'd 0:48:33 lived a little longer poor than stevens he is dying but he is still trying to push some sort of confiscation plan for redistributing slave owners traders land to the ex-slaves and small whites remember that stevens understood the way to do this the way to create a new social order in the south is to say hey uh yeah black people they're equal to white people now but guess what white people if you've been ***** over by the slave uh power in the past if you've been ***** over by these hoity-toity aristocrats who denied uh you any access to development or public education guess what now you get public schools now you get land now you get better terms for debt and financing and here here's some actual land that you can you can uh you can set you can develop it's a uh it really is the only he was a visionary because that stupid movie lincoln makes him look like an idiot right the scene where he says well i would just i would throw all the ***** slave owners in jail and redistribute their 0:49:35 land and you're supposed to take it as self-evident this is ridiculous like oh of course he doesn't understand the need to compromise look at old lincoln doing all his slack tricks to get the 13th amendment and this idiot's over here saying we could have the moon part of it was redistributing it to white people too and getting a cross-racial yeoman alliance against the parasitic aristocracy it but you need people at the top pushing along and not ***** destroying it because it's it's it's it's protein like the things are moving in a direction but the momentum is determined by just so many flat break butterflies yeah i just keep slathering at the thought of gold benny ben butler at the ***** helm they'd start putting his face on the bottom of chamber pots in every fine home in the south and then they'd get shipped to ***** but of course 0:50:36 the party is afraid to do confiscation because they don't want to scare away capital and this is the point where you have to say and point out and acknowledge that the phantom menace behind the scenes of this whole tragedy as much as it's of course the doing of the former confederate leadership or i mean the former uh the slaveocracy who is now re-enthroned and johnson and reactionary poor whites too uh and uh was that it would spread past the south because benjamin wade the president pro tem who would have become president if they impeached andrew johnson was going around saying that the war between slavery and free labor was just the first phase in a contest that would be between labor and capital that it reached its next step ben wade anticipated marx's concept or of the stage i guess not anticipated you got ben wade over here p repeating marx's concepts of staged revolutionary battle the dam 0:51:38 the man was a ***** uh dialectician of the first note and and this this got to this the heart of a question is the war about slavery by itself slavery is some unique evil or is the war against slavery part of a broader war a broader conflict between labor and capital then it reached its next stage ben wade and the radical populists had one idea ben ben butler those guys they had one idea but the center of the party was in the other that no slavery was a unique evil and now it's gone and we can now make money again um so the real dagger in the heart of reconstruction i would say and this is why the real like what if is if lincoln isn't assassinated or if butler takes over for johnson because you really have to get that red redistribution going in the early 0:52:39 18 or right after the war because the question of the currency the question of the debt and species versus greenbacks was going to doom reconstruction from a fiscal perspective it was going to doom it as a political project and it was going to do it as a as a viable uh military intervention uh but that happened in like the 1868 so the outcome very well would have been different if you see a different uh a different post-war environment a different immediate intervention in the land uh but by 68 though the party the republican party was fully reactionary because it was at the base the party of northern capital and so northern capital asserted its authority in a peacetime situation it was only the fluidity of war that allowed for other forces to take power 0:53:41 now things are solidifying and the question becomes how are we going to repay the debt because the us government took out a tremendous amount of money in order to fight the war and did so by issuing not just a bunch of bonds but also greenbacks money backed by nothing but the will and authority one could say fiat of the federal government of course this is exactly like money now basically with a few extra steps but back then this was considered a deep heresy for uh for economic conservatives who make up the leadership i should add of both political parties democrats and republicans because they're both captured by their ruling classes and now that the southern elite have been brought low southern finance is so they put out a bunch of these greenbacks they put out a bunch of these bonds that are going to come due and the question is how do we repay these bonds do we pay them even though they 0:54:42 were bought many of them were bought with greenbacks which of course are worth less than their actual face value gold because everybody can't go and get them at once or else it collapses um so they have to circulate so they circulated at a higher

volume than there is gold so they're worth less they're more they're they fluctuate is what the thing is they might be worth more for a while if you want to speculate on them but they are they are uh um unstable whereas the price of gold is stable because it's determined by the supply of gold which is generated by mining and transfer trade not by numbers in the ledger which is these guys hate it they hated it because if government takes over that role what do we need the ***** capitalists for can't have that so there is a movement uh and george pendleton a democrat proposes hey how 0:55:45 about we repay those greenback bought uh bonds in greenbacks uh but of course the uh financial elite that bought these bonds is like no no no you got to pay them back in gold even though we bought it with greenbacks which was essentially means we gambled on them we got to get all of our ***** returns in gold we need to have our bets guaranteed we need to basically remove the the uh luck part uh with our control over the government and uh liberal republicans and conservatives all agree that uh that uh greenbacks are heresy uh in fact sumner puts it in religious terms that it's like it's actually it's actually immoral not to pay back with gold because you're reneging on a promise it's absolute flummery it's the most rank ideology um 0:56:46 but so the republican party at its top doesn't want this and it's the republican party at the top doesn't want this and the the platform that they set up for 68 for their election area iran isn't the candidate they recruit general grant who doesn't really have politics uh they're like vaguely conservative uh is adhered to a hard money platform uh but the base in the south the southern yeoman are dying for greenbacks uh everybody's dying for more money in the system because if they have to repay the bonds in gold they have to take gold out of circulation which means less economic activity and it was through debt relief and loser money that these southern whites were going to stick around for the republican con coalition uh and even the and and the base of the democrats was for greenbacks too uh like the populist base who had lost like the jeffersonian fixation because they were ***** porn they couldn't 0:57:47 afford it uh and so the democrats they put the pendleton plan in their platform but they nominated an arch conservative the new york governor horatio seymour who basically never talked in the 1868 election about greenbacks he talked about white supremacy because there's this danger of a actual multi-racial democracy emerging in the south and it must be destroyed and it could be destroyed by applying race uh as a flashpoint which should obviously galvanize whites in the south against uh reconstruction but also galvanized whites in the north who are very racist too uh and one of the things that helps them do that is that the republican uh platform is saying we're not going to give you guys the debt relief the money or the land that you need so it begins it becomes a referendum on um on reconstruction as a racial uh 0:58:50 endeavor and you know what give them credit uh grant won but it was closer than

it should have been uh but anyway i've skipped the johnson impeachment because i got my papers mixed up but uh before that happened uh johnson got impeached for uh some ***** with the tenure of office act uh it's all political uh chicanery it doesn't really matter uh but the the the vote falls just short of impeachment in the senate probably because nobody wanted ben wade to be president because ben wade was a soft money radical and they much rather would have much rather had president grant the pliable man on a horseback who could just embody a political consensus without actually articulating any himself uh to uh then be moved around like a puppet this is the third time we've done this in america or fourth time uh 0:59:51 where we've recruited sort of a relatively apolitical military man to embody a uh otherwise unpopular political uh consensus you have george washington there to embody this reactionary uh federalist attempt to uh establish like financial rule uh of course it's economically progressive you know because it has to be but it's still not popular nobody wanted that really very few people wanted it and washington was able to paper it over grant was the man on horseback who could embody a agenda that was really only popular with bankers and a very slim sliver of speculators and merchants most people who worked in factories who uh worked the land had contrary interests but they were separated by geography by culture race in the south and race was used as a way to try to galvanize the election and break away any 1:0:54 of these uh coalitions and francis blair who was a republic one of those right-wing republicans ends up being uh horatio seymour's uh vice presidential nominee and he just goes on an insane rant around the country doing john uh johnson-esque racial jeremiah ads about like the horrible like mongrel beast army who's going to come and destroy everything if the if reconstruction continues and even in the racist era people were um and of course andrew johnson who wanted to get a second term as a democrat after basically giving them everything he they possibly could have wanted in the white house for four years no no nomination sorry buddy thanks for doing the job for us but uh we'll take it from here and and as always happens these 1:1:57 resentful ***** middle-class ***** end up getting owned by those more powerful than them because they're motivated at base by this paranoid selfish drive which means they're at the end of the day suckers and can be totally had they used him and then spit him out and his entire idiotic attempt to build a new constituency for his own power fails miserably good riddance to a drunken scumbag one of the great vile ***** of american history right on the on the on hell's mount rushmore with like john c calhoun so rest in piss andrew johnson he didn't die right away though sadly though uh thaddeus stevens died just in time to see uh grant in power and so next week we'll talk about presidential radical reconstruction where we have radicals 1:2:58 in charge of the senate and house and general grant uh in charge of a hard money drained the dream [Laughter] by the old canal uh water winds all my balls eaten hog on a lovely beach clicking on **Music playing** so i can't post myself online **Music 0:1:1

playing** dirty old town can you hear me it might be a little tinny or compressed as 0:2:4 people like to say i still don't know what that means but apparently last time it was pressed i still don't have a i'm i'm now streaming on the laptop but i do not have a dedicated microphone yet my apologies so today we're mostly going to talk about just one chapter from eric foner's reconstruction chapter 8 because we had uh some technical issues last time we only gonna do one chapter today chapter eight which is about the consolidation of uh republican power in the southern reconstruction states post 14th amendment and uh what what they did what their uh political and economic agenda ended up looking like uh what does he call it the chapter is 0:3:8 titled uh reconstruction political and or no i'm sorry yes reconstruction political and economic so we're talking about how uh the political coalition the power that republic the republican party was able to exercise in the south exercised that power how it tried to change the culture of the newly emancipated south and how to so the governments that took power in the south the reconstruction governments were largely dominated politically by moderates which is what you would expect because those are the people who are closest to power people with money tend to be moderate people who have access to networks of capital and influence tend to be moderate not radical and so you had amongst these people carpetbaggers who'd come to the 0:4:9 south to speculate make money in politics or in the market you had hustling urban southerners who were not part of the old planter class and some wealthy free blacks who were also already part of some sort of power structure before the war they take power in these political parties due to their proximity to power uh pre-existing because that's the reality of uh power it it draws it uh concentrates at polls and you have to have a certain relationship to power in order to be able to exercise it it's one of the fundamental contradictions of democratic governance in a in a exploitative economic structure the exploited are by definition kept from real meaningful uh positions of an influence except for their labor power which can only be coordinated

CUSHVLOG 152. RECJUNK 5 - RELOADED

in its use their individual influence is minimal it's why they're being subject that's 0:5:10 why they're not in charge so anyway these moderate southern republicans care go into power with an idea that they're going to secure their they're going to secure their power in the south this new republican party that is in in the south that have been totally dominated by the democrats since the days of jackson uh we're going to do it by bringing in capital investment from the north uh and also by reaching out to the uh the common white southerner who was mostly who were largely uh democrats so **Music playing** that project of reaching out to white democrats politically while trying to reach up to northern capital uh economically fail in both efforts and in fact the failure of one the failure of one uh necessitates the failure of 0:6:15 the other but in this case i would argue that it was the it was the seeking of northern capital the doomed the project of expanding the electoral appeal of the republican party which we will get into so like for example in georgia the moderate republicans decided not even to seat the black legislature black legislators who had been uh elected because the the constitution did or their uh state constitution didn't provide for it and they went and they went with that even the demand of democrats to try to appeal to uh them didn't get any of them just alienated the former slaves but the real thing that undermined the effectiveness of these reconstruction governments was the quick emergence of factionalism within the republican parties and they was 0:7:16 not necessarily around race or ideology that found that formed it wasn't race or ideology that formed these conflicts so much as it was spoils the spoils of political patronage because due to the economic isolation of uh of republicans black and white in the offices in in public offices both appointed and elected uh the necessity to secure a living through politics becomes much more powerful than it would be in among people who could if they wanted to get other work by working in the reconstruction government both white and black politicians had essentially burned their bridges with the merchant community with with uh respectable uh white economic structure they were essentially uh banned from intercourse with the with the economy so they had to secure themselves and their families through politics and that that went for white uh and black republican legislators and officials and so there is this mad scramble 0:8:17 for patronage and it revolves generally like i said around not around uh ideology but around either federal or state uh jobs so essentially you would see conflicts between political organizations led by a republican governor fighting the political machine of a state's senator because these are separate passive money and these are separate uh job groupings and separate connections of uh of uh vassalage and so they create separate structures and they have at their top for the most part white people but they're also uh have uh at their base of black participation both with votes and then also with the lower level jobs within the structure and you see uh the emergence of 0:9:22

black uh a political organization around like churches in the rural areas community organizations that hooks into these patriots networks but their power within these structures is undermined by their lack of capital because they have been dispossessed of the land that they had been exploited for their labor and were now dispossessed of the ability to make a living they were put out onto the market but it turns out that if you don't have capital built in and we mostly have in in in a putative democracy there is a social capital that adheres to everyone regardless of their actual capital but slaves are ex-slaves are coming into a world as citizens without anything and at that point even though the the liberal ideology of the time insisted no no one can get anything for anything everyone has to work through that was of course all premised on the fact that everybody was basically taking what they wanted from the 0:10:24 uh the world from the from the uh the bounty of the uh expropriated native american health land of the south of the now there's no land to give to these people because of course they didn't earn it and so there is they are in a condition more abject than an american citizen is supposed to be which means they need market intervention that is not supposed to happen in a democracy there was a way to alleviate that and that is of course land redistribution but that went against the interests of capital and also the ideological infrastructure of liberalism that dominated so even while this fighting is happening and this corruption is is is getting endemic and these machines are starting to fight they are actually passing legislation uh and uh they 0:11:25 are creating for the first time in the south an infrastructure of like a modern welfare state they're building the first schools and hospitals and asylums and and the first sanitation situa structures uh first penitentiaries uh and this is you know providing a new dimension of government uh intervention in the economy uh at least as it was understood at the time this is a new a step forward a qualitative support in the relate in the in the humanity of the relationship between government and citizen uh because the the condition of the ex-slaves undermines the the liberal fantasy of what a state is the idea that it's just something there to structure private inner inner intercourse and to provide some sort of framework for people to work things out themselves is undergirded by a fundamental assumption of subsistence of land 0:12:26 access that there was none of that for the former slaves and that contradiction had to be resolved now of course one way to resolve it would have been to make them into landowners but that would have conflicted with the existing rot nostrums that are on private property that had solidified and also the interests of finance that wanted to see the southern plantation economy brought back on its feet as soon as possible uh but in the absence of land redistribution what was necessitated by this new contradiction being exposed is an expansion of government's prerogative which is what they did uh and this did contribute to the well-being of uh of people in the south in a way that had never been there before education for poor black and white students for the first time uh and one i believe a louisiana legislature i think it was uh said had a line that uh i thought was very uh apropos that founder quotes uh speaking of the former slaves they look to the law because in the very nature of things they can't look nowhere they can look nowhere else they can't they look to the law because in the very nature of things they can look nowhere else as in there is no land for them to fall back on to try to exist outside of a social structure and a wage relationship they are forced into social intercourse with all local uh systems arrayed against them by racial classification and by their status as uncapitalized and it's only the law that can protect them so there's four things that founder points out that dominate the agenda of these reconstruction governments regulating race relationships regulating labor relationships and pursuing economic development so when it comes to education for the most part the reconstruction governments were sort of happy to allow for segregated education to be enforced as the path of least resistance to public provision because this was this was going to be the first time many of these states had any public education a lot of people were able even the ex-slave said fine whatever let's just get some education especially since black only schools were more likely to be influenced uh were more likely to hire black teachers and to be responsive to the concerns of black parents so there there was a willingness to go with that although there was some where there was a concentrated black power either in the form of black wealth in new orleans where they were able to integrate a school system uh that persisted even in the face of white flight to private academies uh which after a few years was reversed and black white students returned to integrated public schooling uh or in south carolina which was uh conservative reactionary state in the lead up to this civil war and was the state where uh secession began because it was the most thoroughly planetarized country uh state the largest percentage of the population was black planters had the large the most uh hegemonic control of the political institutions in the culture now because of that the fact that so many of the citizens in south carolina were black and black and franchisement was the law south carolina is one of the most radical reconstruction states for the same reason or it is the most radical reconstruction site and when they attempted to integrate the university of south carolina and there was a mass walkout of white students and faculty they brought in northern faculty they abolished tuition they created preparatory classes to help people get to the minimum standard and created a integrated public um in and when it came to the question of race relations in the public which was the second area that they uh that they had to address there was a a significant and successful drive to maintain or impose integration of public accommodations beyond that there was no real effort to to enforce a integrationist

agenda once again as a path of least resistance on the question of labor relationships uh these reconstruction governments went made it their uh business they were very insistent upon reordering the uh negotiating position in favor of so that they could dictate the terms of their own labor in the face of the presidential reconstruction era when it was an attempt which was an attempt by the planters to use essentially to take private regimes of slave compulsion and make them public uh instead of that uh reconstruction governments outlawed corporal punishment narrowed notions narrowed the vacancy laws to reduce the number of people who could be arrested resistant demands by land owners to enclose land from foraging of livestock prioritize the workers claim on the crop uh of a given uh plantation ahead of any debtors or debt holders who might be owed money by the planter so that you wouldn't have a situation which often happened whereas a uh a uh a debt drowning planter will get a uh raise of raise a crop out of the field on the promise he's gonna split it with uh his workers then uh his creditors will come in and take the majority or even all the profit giving them the the workers no wage for heaven labored uh and they banned that practice and made the workers claims on the cotton the first to be settled in any kind of uh delinquency issue and then as an accession to the poor whites who were part of this coalition there was a debt relief which didn't affect ex-slaves very much because they didn't have any debt because they didn't have any uh because they because they were slaves any debt was held by their owners so but they wanted to create this coalition so they supported debt relief for the poor whites but the big almost universal ***** up and failure and you could say you can't blame them really because we'll talk about how this is determined by other forces the every one of these except once again with the partial uh exception of south carolina every one of these reconstructed southern state governments failed to redistribute land in any significant way and of course south carolina they were able to do it because once again concentrated so there was no confiscation of land from uh rebels which honestly would have had to have been the purview of the federal government anyway so it's there was some efforts to sell land uh but once again you don't have any debt if you're an ex-slave but that means you don't have any assets either and that includes the bear capital necessary to improve a piece of land because all these uh homestead uh things stipulate that the land must be improved which means you have to have the capital assets necessary to improve land the ho the hammer the uh the tools the literal tools in order to do it and if they're planting crops they need the seed and things like that they need and this required this this dilemma where you have this land and there's and it's not a very it's a sparsely settled part of the world so even absent massive land confiscation there was land to be given but it could not be uh sold because they just they had had their labor power taken from them completely for their entire lives

in order to overcome this conflict that this contradiction whereas where they needed to redistribute land but they could only do it through a mechanism of commerce that former slaves could not enter into was to transcend the contract notion was to transcend the presiding ideological structure in the service of justice because land in this country turning land into the personification of justice not the ability to enter into contract but the actual land that and i would say that well it's hard to imagine that happening given the structure the ideological strictures not just about things like property but about race that bound the people we're talking that there was room for that notion to kindle but in the context where land redistribution had in fact been uh stamped out and reversed uh instead of being allowed to fruit at fructate there simply was not enough pressure on the existing system within these southern states in washington anywhere to demand that justice and instead and and there was an attempt to do that uh in the face of uh the insufficiency of the reconstruction governments to provide uh land justice there were in seven several states southern southern several southern states labor conventions of ex-slaves coming together to try to agree upon a laborers a black laborers agenda for the governments that they were supporting and they wanted uh and this was a a political expression of that cry for justice it's the closest thing we have or they had to that they could articulate and what they articulated was a minimum minimum dignified wage for agricultural labor and land redistribution and in the face of that the uh reconstruction governments which as i said are professionalized are pulled away from the grassroots of former slave uh uh voters who get them in there uh are are kind of captured in these webs of patronage and uh corruption and the need for yankee money let's not undermine that uh couldn't give land they didn't feel they could they didn't want to and what they did instead was they said look how about instead of addressing this injustice we just everybody gets rich and that is the american uh has been the universal solvent of america's social crisis oh no how do we how do we uh transcend the limitations of our system to allow for a remediation of injustice uh what how much does money will it take to make this go away and real crisis explode when there's no money to give away so what the reconstruction governments tried to do to fill the gap was build prosperity the same way that the north was in the absence of a civil war to drive economic activity uh railroad investment uh this after the civil war the civil war created this massive increase in the government's manu uh productive capacity and its money supply and its economy without a war uh that energy had to go somewhere and because it's a capitalist system dominated by capitalist interests it went to subsidizing railroad construction creating a infrastructure domestic infrastructure of railroad track not through direct investment but through it was happening all through the west and it was also in the south it was supposed to be the engine of prosperity that would obviate all these thorny social questions what to do about black equality uh what to do about the lack of of black economic opportunity build some 0:25:47 railroads this will stimulate commerce it'll bring in northern capital create economic activity it didn't do any of that but what it did do is make some of the speculators very rich and also a number of the crooked politicians very very rich uh and it what it created internal networks of commerce that pulled power economic power and concentration away from the port cities which in the antebellum period were the only real concentrations of economic activity in the south because uh because the plant the uh southern plantation system involved getting a product not through internal markets like through canals and through railroads but by taking it putting it in the water getting it out to the ocean and then sending it to new york or to 0:26:48 london uh so this is the so all the economic activity was in these port cities now the railroad manufacturing is creating internal cities is creating a booming towns and and uh and banks and merchant sec nodes within the south and taking power away from the uh ports uh and in so doing uh we see resolved one of the fundamental uh tensions within southern society that had existed since the revolution and that is that you had uh a ruling planter class in the south right the big land owners who were the unchallenged political powers in the south uh at least in the deep uh the the the pl the places with uh uh very extensive plantation agriculture and then you had underneath them in the cities this much smaller less powerful but more economically 0:27:50 uh more dynamic group of merchants and and bourgeois emerging bourgeois who uh who struggled for influence in state government sort of underneath the the the boot of this ruling landed elite the civil war breaks open and overthrows the landed aristocracy not completely dispossessing them but based knocking them off of their political perch and what happens thanks to these reconstruction governments thanks to the uh direct investment in these real estate uh railroad speculation uh company or these rail this railroad speculation and the creation of these merchant nodes is a situation where the big landowners start uh buying shops start becoming bankers starting indulging in the merchant capitalism and these and and uh sort of step down from the plantation veranda to do so meanwhile amongst the grasping class 0:28:51 of city uh folk some of the more uh successful merchants start buying land and this movement resolves this tension and creates this synthesis that is the new landowning merchant ruling class that ends up dominating the south by the turn of the century this becomes the leader this these become the bourbon democrats who rule over a sort of arrested population of totally some subject and deep uh and politically uh disempowered black population and a uh economically dominated and population but everywhere that this these new nodes of commerce emerge they uproot all the existing structures uh and in the up country where small white uh yeoman farm holding and 0:29:54 subsistence agriculture was the way of life uh the coming of the railroads uh pulls people away from that and towards wage labor and towards wage late uh and towards dispossession a lack of that freedom we were talking about and the way that the states were doing this is by buying railroad stock gifting land to railroads guaranteeing loans creating a business friendly environment which all undermined the support for republican governments by poor people of and undermining more than anything support among poor whites who saw reconstruction come in and the main thing that it brought about was higher taxes and uh that they had to start working instead of living on their farm and living subsistence lifestyle that in their minds was uh was necessary for freedom uh meanwhile the whites who stayed most loyal to the republican party were up in the mountains where not only had they fought the hardest for the union during the war they were mostly untouched by modernization and didn't lose their traditional and the main thing that the main counterproductive result of all this railroad investment is that it ***** drains the public offers for all of these new things that they're supposed to be doing uh the education they're supposed to be creating these infrastructures they're building uh money has to money comes away from that and and that undermines the efficacy of these institutions that are being built by their republican governments and the whole time this is failing to draw in any northern investment because the south is still politically rested there's no real certainty that reconstruction governments won't be overthrown and so northern capital was much happier to invest in what seems to be more stable political situations in the west and so most of this capital has to be raised uh locally through uh uh through taxes uh and through uh low most more than anything through crop loading uh and then another just poisonous development caused by the railroad uh is that it's the thing in the south as much as it was in the north that created the uh atmosphere of of absolutely pandemic corruption that allowed these railroad interests to essentially buy the government with the government's own money that's the insane thing these people all bought all this stuff with government debt and government-backed greenbacks that had been used to win the war and they had collected them in buckets over the course of the war and were now using them to pay off these politicians who especially in the south were very cheap because their only livelihood was uh politics and besides mere brazen bribery there was insider dealing where you would give someone a stock or uh give them a heads up on a uh investment opportunity and all of these things created these networks of patronage that now came outside of government and involved the private sector in the form of these railroad combinations and the whole time the railroads are also ingratiating themselves to the poor the freeze black community by uh sponsoring education and missionary work and offering wage labor away from the plantation which was something that was very appealing to a lot of especially young young men who didn't want to uh they didn't want to work on the plantation because it had these uh and all and and the failure here the the the the botching here uh the 0:34:5

the uh the mistaken uh effort to invest in the poultry sums that these states had in railroads uh is a consequence more than anything of the lack of capital that existed in the south there was no money the the the economy had been undermined and destroyed uh the the the uh even the money supply was shrinking because obviously all the confederate money immediately was worthless but even greenbacks were being with restricted in circulation over the course of this period because they're trying to move to a gold standard because the reactionary agenda of the uh of the capitalist class and the only way that you could have accommodated the political aspirations 0:35:6 of the free the freeze blacks and the political and social aspirations of the uh poor whites sufficient to create an enduring political uh coalition that could have held power in the face of the planter class and rulers would have been a mass transition of capital to the south and this didn't happen because once again there was no power to seek it the power at the top of the federal government was held by uh republicans who were invested literally in a hard money economy uh that made necessary capital redistribution within the country impossible uh and so what happens debt comes to be the new instrument of coercion uh replacing the old planter or the old uh labor 0:36:9 regimes on the plantation and it ensnares whites too the collection of cotton goes from something that was almost entirely carried out by black uh slaves in the pre-war period to uh something that 40 percent of uh cotton uh agricultural workers are are white by the turn of the century uh and every compo every chain in this action is compelled by a lack of capital uh it's it's it's the debt of the uh planter who is being loaned uh the money for his crop uh that who that is compelling uh the sharecropper to go into debt to that planter at every level there is a compulsion of debt uh and those and so freed sl former slaves who don't want to go back to plantation camp 0:37:11 cotton agriculture are by debt drawn back into it and uh poor whites who had before the war been able to live independently are now forced into a wage relationship agriculturally and this dooms the social project of reconstruction because it confirms the white supremacist idea that there is a zero racial contest between black and white and that anything that benefits one harms the other because slavery was abolished blacks were free and now white people are poor white people are less free they have less control of their ability to sustain themselves they have to work for wages instead of work on their own land and this is not because that's true it's because the interest of capitalism was the presiding dominating interest shaping reconstruction once again 0:38:13 you have a thing where the social phenomenon of a political economic structure is blamed to and so last thing i want to talk about here is something that's really interesting and it is the way that the different types of plantation agriculture the different modes of respond to this new reality this new marketized uh speculation based uh more internally improved southern and more financial and more debt based uh agricultural system so there's three main types of plantation agriculture in the south determined by geography determined by where things grow best in the louisiana bayou area and in the gulf uh you have sugar also in florida but maybe the concentrated in louisiana you have sugar uh plantations now uh sugar planting is requires two things uh labor specialization because it's a very complicated process so there's a bunch of different jobs to do that require different skills to be learned to do them and also capital because in order for sugar production to be profitable sugar processing has to be done on site which means that uh sugar houses where the uh cane is turned into molasses actually have to be built and maintained on the premises so in this situation once the coercive power of slavery is gone leverage of the working population is increased in a situation where but also where each plantation has already a significant capital value because it's been improved upon the ruling uh elite was largely replaced by northern speculators who had the money to uh fill the gap they were able to square that problem of a popular of a labor population that's going to require more money more wages than zero and a higher degree of capital uh investment with capital of their own because it's worth it because you've got this this fixed infrastructure that has a dollar value on it and that means that it's worth the investment and in that place uh uh former slaves were able to negotiate for uh if not anything you would want to call a fair wage certainly a a self-sustaining wage now in south carolina you have rice cultivation rice requires a great degree of labor specialization in the same way that sugar does but it is capital unintensive you don't need to have any built-in capacity on it on a rice plantation you just pack up the rice and put it on a boat now what that meant was that when the plantations were ruined at the end of the war there was no uh incentive for anyone to buy the plantations because the uh value was essentially non-existent so in these rice areas the local uh the planter elite uh had to essentially give in to their workforce and workers were able to dictate in many cases uh completely the terms of their labor the amount of profit of its profit they got in in some cases actually taking over complete control of the uh plantation itself to the point where but also what that meant so you had this like uh peasant communism develop here in the rice plantations because there's no uh there's no pressure there's no capital coming in to reassert a uh exploitive labor relationship there's only this poor schmuck hanging on by his fingers fingernails but as a result of that though uh rice production in the south never really catches back up to its pre-war production there is economic stagnation there is no accumulation there's no capital accumulation which is necessary in order to compete with other

modes of production and other and south carolina really which was where the rice uh which is where the rice was grown was the most radical reconstruction state in those early years and saw the most uh successful efforts at ex-slave land ownership cult and cooperative cultivation but at a low level of productivity because why would you want to work that hard you're just trying to sustain yourself you're not trying to build a ***** a gold house to live in because you don't have to escape your conscience the way that the ***** uh slave owners did you can live simply now in the cotton south we have something cotton production is neither labor intensive nor capital intensive 0:44:21 so there's no capital pressure on ownership to sell like there was with uh labor or like there was in the uh sugar belt uh and there's no real pressure from uh workers for much better conditions so that means that meant that for the most part the even though some of them were broke for a while and hilariously alexander stevens and john b uh gordon the vice president of the confederacy and a confederate general had to uh endorse patent medicines like like sarah palin with the tummy tea so the so in the cotton belt the uh the planters got to keep control but they did have to change obviously the nature of their relationship with uh their former slaves uh because now 0:45:23 they had to pay them they had to compensate them they were no longer able to directly exploit them on on the land through direct coercion so how are they gonna do it how was this relationship going to be managed slave owners the ex-slave owners were happy to use wages happy to pay in wages or at least would have preferred to pay in wages but uh the former slaves didn't really want wages they wanted land and so they for the most part pushed for the to be pushed ended up pushing their way towards an accommodation that became known as sharecropping where uh you would work on a land that was technically owned by the planter who would loan you seed and capital at the beginning of a growing season sell it at the end and give you a portion now this was not something that i think that a lot of slaves would 0:46:24 have preferred uh if they've been able to pick anything but in a context where their political power was very attenuated where there was a failure to really pursue these interests politically uh an inability to pursue them politically share cropping became the closest and in the absence of land redistribution sharecrafting became the closest thing to land ownership that ex-slaves could access even though it meant going into debt and what you ended up having was not the end of servitude really but the replacement of the coercive mechanism of servitude being direct exploitation in the form of an overseer and a whip and a in a lack of bodily autonomy to a compulsion through death now if you have been a slave that difference is substantial and worth 0:47:25 having and worth pushing for especially since in these days the final contours of what that was going to look like were not sure were not determined and no one knew for sure by the obviously by 1900 sharecropping becomes a brutal exploitative

machinery that annihilates any upward mobility among former slaves but that was after the redemption after the reaction and the end of reconstruction which of course was not anything that anyone could have predicted would have happened and or or could have assumed was going to happen when they were fighting just to be able to live on some land and uh and be independent and live not under the gaze of an overseer from the by some guy in a veranda but to be in your own land on your own even if you don't own it uh your own patch with your own home that was a uh that was a step up and it was a negotiated change in the condition of servitude basically but it was not the abolition of the state of servitude itself uh and the failure 0:48:27 the failure to advance beyond that uh that plateau was caused by the failure of a durable black political power to be articulated in the south and that all comes down to uh the failure to redistribute land because absent land redistribution uh there was no there could be no uh uh even contest which is what the north thought they were doing they thought we're going to fight to give the former slaves a fair shot on a playing field even absent racial discrimination which of course cannot be absented that wouldn't have happened because people were coming into this race literally without a sustenance which is the only absent a labor movement sustenance is the only real leverage you have against the wage relationship and the ability to 0:49:29 assert your authority within it or that or political power and of course one flows from the other and without political power and the you will be cheated you will be denied any kind of fair compensation so that even if capitalism worked the way that it's boosters and the way that these people supporting the uh the whig dream that was being imposed by the liberal republicans even if you believed it it could work under those conditions by definition it could not work and the only thing that could have broken that was uh was land redistribution which required which would never have happened absent class power which did not coalesce and i think that the interesting thing about this period is the degree of fluidity within these systems how that like the process from one level of exploitation to another could have moved farther it could have been more dramatic the arrangement between capital and labor 0:50:30 could have settled differently and i think uh the entrenchment of of land-based black political power in the south could have been a check on this sort of gal Gallup towards total corporate subsumption of the political uh and economic system that happened so next week we'll talk about chapters 9 and 10. and then there's only two more after that so we got in two weeks we'll be done with this bad boy uh i've i've had a very good time talking about it i think it's really interesting uh and it's helped me clarify a lot of my thinking about american history which is good because i've got another product couple projects i'm working on that are going to try to consolidate this information uh into something of like a you know a big a contours of american 0:51:32 that i future oh yeah uh also damn my grandma could make banana pudding or what 0:52:46 was it what did what did biden say about rice pudding how is aunt gertie how his aunt i think that he might if they let him off the leash enough it might get funny he might end up being up there with trump for funny presidents so let's hope so god my oh right yes thank you for reminding me friday i'm going to game with chris we're going to play anno uh so we're going to try to build some sort of 19th century age 0:53:47 of steam empire i think that's how it works so we'll have some fun we'll talk about my favorite uh century where all the old gods died were replaced by new horrifying hopefully we'll fix the choppiness and uh but it's also like a map game so it'll be less i'm just sparing a chat for five minutes that's dumb i feel like a weirdo we'll 0:55:11 banned those cats could play it when i first came to london i was only 16 with a 0:1:13 fiber in my pocket my old dancing bag i went down to the delhi to check out the scene but i still ended and it was cold and nights i all knew it was chill but there were boys in the cafes and kitchen pills she didn't have the money **Music playing** there's always lots of chewing on the old dragon was it angela lives click **Music 0:2:20 playing** oh **Music playing** and kicked in the balls between the middle doors at vine street i was beaten and mauled and i ruined my good looks for the old so guys and gals uh i am now able to command the uh it's a stream i don't have to use my phone anymore and this is wild i get to click on a little button and it just streams amazing it's a game changer we've entered a new phase we've entered the phase 0:3:21 omega of the of the streams so today we're gonna be talking about chapters nine and ten uh in eric founder's reconstruction chapter nine the problem of enforcement is about white resistance to reconstruction and chapter 10 is about reconstruction in the north and how it impacted the political agenda of the republican party and their willingness to continue supporting reconstruction basically so after the imposition of the the southern republican reconstruction governments uh the white democrats of the south which was obviously the majority of all of the landowners and most of the white people outside of unionist strongholds uh realized that their policy of 0:4:24 basically pretending that it wasn't happening and abstaining from elections wasn't working uh like in mississippi they were able to prevent a constitutional um uh the state constitution from being ratified by boycotting because it uh failed to produce unnecessary uh the necessity what was required is the necessary uh voter turnout to to make the vote binding but they just changed that requirement and put it back in anyway so uh the democrats in the south realized that it wasn't working and so two strategies of how to go about dealing with the political system and with the reality of reconstruction and black suffrage in in the south first you had the white line democrats the ones who insisted upon white supremacy as the cornerstone of governance and denied the uh validity of the reconstruction governments entirely uh 0:5:26

CUSHVLOG 153. RECONSTRUCTION JUNCTION VI - REVENGE OF THE LIBS

and the in and denied the validity of black uh suffrage entirely uh but more influential and more successful were those democrats who uh uh accepted as a fantacom plea the reality of reconstruction the reality of black suffrage uh and and called instead for a new departure which said all right fine there's black suffrage we can't stop it what can we do uh and what they did was they they joined the republicans or they joined factions of republican parties uh outside the deep south where the uh the black vote wasn't completely dominated uh or completely like uh organized around the republican party uh in states like virginia and tennessee uh the in 1869 and 1970 0:6:28 the uh new departure democrats allied with conservative republicans were able to uh win and take over their agenda their economic agenda was totally hostile to freed slaves even though they made grudging attempts to reach out to black voters but it was attractive to poor whites because it emphasized lowering taxes because one of the big consequences of reconstruction government was a huge increase in public provision which also led to an increase in taxation uh which squeezed low uh uh small holding farmers and poor whites harder even than it did and the other element was uh agrarian reform the idea being that if we cannot deny black suffrage if we cannot deny 0:7:30 black civic equality then we can reduce black labor power by utilizing new farming technology uh advanced uh uh uh advanced like irrigation and fertilizing techniques and encouraging immigration uh from either like ireland or even china uh to break the uh the late the um to break the black uh laboring classes ability to negotiate the the conditions of their work uh even george fitzhugh who i've talked about before who was before the war and author of a number of works that controversially even in the south claimed that uh wage relationships uh within the white race were wrong and that honestly everybody should be either a slave or a owner because democracy 0:8:31 was a fraud that assumed an equality that was not possible but in the aftermath of the war he saw the way the winds were blowing and he became a big booster for the uh bringing of capital to the south all on the idea that you're going to reduce the um effectiveness of black labor and political organizing there's one quote in the book about how someone says we need to bring in the great the most advanced uh farming machinery one of the advantages of which but the thing that stymied a lot of these efforts is as was always the case in reconstruction capital like for example uh one of the big uh agricultural modernizing projects was introducing mixed uh 0:9:33 planting uh instead of having just entire regions dominated by cotton planting and that was possible in some northern parts of the south but in the black belt in the cotton belt uh it would have required very expensive fertilizer which would have required capital that during this period the south just uh and then you had the fact that the crop lien system where everybody was on operating on credit the the planters were operating on credit from banks the sharecroppers were operating on

credit from the planters uh it didn't it created a path dependency where there wasn't really no one could afford to miss a harvest nobody could afford to not be putting up uh cotton so diversifying became so places where the uh these new departure democrats took power in these border areas like virginia by the way uh virginia had 0:10:36 a democratic republic right-wing republican fusion government take over partially because the radical republican uh coalition uh headed by that the newspaper writer newspaper editor uh honeycutt which i talked about last time and which actually did bring together uh poorer whites and and ex-slaves uh around a really radical economic agenda uh that pat and and who passed a radical constitutional uh who created a radical constitutional convention uh and and a radical constitution uh the union general who was in command of uh virginia james john schofield refused to allow a vote on it so uh into that vacuum the uh the redeeming new departure democrats took power and wherever they did they implemented voter restrictions that were just on the right side of the 15th amendment which guaranteed voting uh 0:11:39 regardless of race voting rights regardless of race that meant um poll taxes uh and it should be noted that there's two types of poll taxes and you see some confusion with this like uh for example there was a bunch of there was in the 80s there was a huge amount of protesting in england about the poll tax and poll in that sense and in american history also in some places poll means head and it is a regressive tax on individuals like x if x number of people live in a county every one of them owes x number of dollars in in in taxes which of course is regressive because rich people can afford to pay it more than poor because it's fixed by just the fact that it's it's a mop it's a fixed amount per person but these were poll taxes that said you had to pay money to vote uh it also reduced the number of polling places in black strongholds if that sounds familiar uh and gerrymandered districts away from black belt counties once again if any of this and in addition to that they also rescinded 0:12:45 all of the legislation that the radical regimes had done to help uh freed slave uh freed slaves and poor people uh uh prosper and and negotiate their own terms of employment they got rid of foraging rights which are very big because if you can forage it means you don't necessarily have to take a wage or work a crop lien and also the homestead exemption from debt repayments and the rule that uh meant that the laborers uh claimed to a crop superseded any uh other debtors uh or any other uh lenders that the uh that the planter might know uh in the deep south where 0:13:46 the the republican governments held power simply because of the still significant and unified power of the black vote uh with a huge explosion in violence and the forming of uh the ku klux klan this is the part of the book that if you've read it is the most nauseating and enraging part yet uh where you see in response to the institution of these uh radical republican interracial regimes a huge explosion in political violence

uh massacres lynchings whippings targeted assassinations of community leaders also white republicans as well um with specific uh intent to attack people who had uh any kind of political expression labor minister labor militancy and very importantly uh any pretensions to ownership of property uh and this is like the key element to the failure of reconstruction or one of them uh and it's uh maddening because it was not ordained and necessary it was not like some sort of uh stimulus response that could not have been either precluded or stopped once and it's important to remember that it was made up of this reaction this the clan uh violence the people who carried it out were not just poor white trash they were a whole swath of white society in these places and generally led by the better elements uh the professionals the landowners uh it was a in many ways like plantar reaction to the rise of one of the most frustrating things reading it is seeing how powerless people were to stop it even though republican regimes were empowered in many of these states even though uh you know you had huge numbers of ex-slaves living here now as free people technically as equal citizens with rights there was very little response to the violence there was very little uh tit-for-tat and there was very little defensive violence and and this was something that in the north a lot of people found kind of pathetic they said why don't you stand up for yourself which is ridiculous because they were in a situation where the the social milieu meant that any white violence would be ratified by local power like the local courts local government and any violence by friedman would be instantly cracked down upon with no because in most of these places there's barely any federal presence there were uh less than 6 000 u.s troops in the south i believe by this point uh and scattered throughout the entire region and so even if there had been a desire on the part of the federal government at that point to crack down which there wasn't uh there would have been very diff much difficulty in having those resources deployed it was it was very difficult to imagine a situation where if you stood up for yourself anything would happen other than just a total uh smackdown of destruction of your the entire area uh and this violence was very very uh effective at undermining reconstruction because the people who were killed were generally people who had achieved some degree of literacy uh and political influence and had shown themselves to be leaders and had in many cases leadership of a bunch of different intersecting civic organizations and political groups which meant that the capital you could essentially decapitate uh ex-slave political power by killing only a few people because so many of the ex-slaves had no education and had no uh literacy and as such had a very difficult time negotiating a lot of these uh these power structures the people who could kind of made themselves targets in a way and were violently uh repressed and this is why you really can't think of a civil war as ending in 1865 it's just moved to a different phase people say oh robert e lee was so uh gallant and and

honorable because he didn't send the army off to do guerrilla fighting well they didn't do it then but they did it later and it's important to note they were because where state governments decided to crack down state governments here because as i said the federal power to do anything was was pretty muted where state governments acted where there was a reconstruction a radical government in place that had any kind of legitimacy and efficacy they were able to crack the ***** down on these guys the two 0:18:57 most sterling examples were arkansas and texas which both saw uh their uh radical governors uh creating uh uh interracial police and militia units at the state level that just arrested the ***** out of people just went in there and ***** and threw people in jail and it led to uh in texas uh governor edmond davis had six thousand clansmen arrested uh and it had an effect people didn't fight i mean the the violence was was so widespread because impunity was assumed i mean these people are ***** cowards uh if they think they're going to get in trouble they're not going to do it and i would like and uh one of the most horrifying and the single most violent uh incident of all of reconstruction was the colfax massacre which occurs at this time in which uh a struggle between local factions in uh in colfax louisiana leads to a black militia 0:20:0 essentially uh taking commandeering and taking control of a city town square there in colfax for a number of days until they were just overwhelmed by a redeemer militia that massacred over 200 of them with no repercussions but where there was a state response there was a reduction in violence there was a capacity to do this but there had to be a mechanism uh of where where the state was willing to enforce and back up black claims to rights uh and the big effect of all this violence is that it brought a big decline in black turnout as you can imagine and it led to democrats gaining uh yeah of course edmund davis of course texas public school history called him a tyrant yeah no he was a he was a pimp sorry edmond davis pimp benjamin butler pimp 0:21:2 because guys like that realized something that is lost in history and was even lost at the time to the the liberal republicans uh in the north which is that they wanted to see this as a political struggle they wanted to see the battle over who will be in charge of these governments in the south as a political discussion but it was not it was for the republicans the the former slaves and the scalawags and carpetbaggers who were trying to govern these these con these states they were operating by political rules they were trying to they were trying to raise votes and they were trying to win elections for the white power structure it was an existential war it was a war that had never ended since 65 and when you have that kind of situation where one side is willing to go beyond politics and the other one is constrained by political uh 0:22:3 conceptions uh the the side that is willing to take the most extreme uh measures will win unless the other side understands the the the real terrain and acts accordingly and there were attempts to do that but they were half-hearted half-hazard and not

coordinated and this is why my big dream my big what if at this point it isn't even that lincoln lives so much as that butler is vice president because if butler's vice president and lincoln still gets assassinated i have a hard time imagining that we get any period of reprieve for the planter class and certainly not the confederate high command i mean this is a guy who when he was uh the military governor of new orleans hanged a guy for pulling down the american flag and stepping on it even though everybody assumed he wouldn't hang this guy they were like there's no way he's gonna hang a guy for taking the flag down that's insane he's gonna like try him and then he'll the guy will give a speech and then he'll he'll commute the sentence 0:23:4 and they had they had a big they had a big deal they let the guy give a talk he said i'm doing it patriotically everyone is waiting for butler to give him the old uh give him the the lindsey buckingham uh gladhand tmlxg ***** so it's hard to imagine that if he gets into power with ***** lincoln's blood on his hands that uh that he would have been nearly as as uh conciliatory to these people but what this really boils down to more than anything is that by this point and this is the important thing by this point at this point in time after the initial failures after uh the railroad lobby had essentially bought the republican party there was just no commitment in the northern republican party to uh do anything other than let the south sort of figure itself cigarettes own ***** out there was no real commitment to the display of force 0:24:7 the the transgression of norms uh that would have been required but eventually they kind of had to uh the grant regime though was very slow in dealing with things and this is where we got to talk about grant a little bit i know that i've said that grant is underrated uh and he is relative to his traditional position in american history and certainly compared to the dunning-school ***** propaganda ***** horseshit but uh he was not the man for the job not the man the times demanded uh the very fact that he was the nominee spoke to the rise of this conservative sort of uh fiscally oriented section of the republican party over the radical spirit that had sort of gutted out and uh and had essentially uh gathered to ensure that benjamin wade didn't get the 0:25:9 nomination in 1870 1868. but he had his upside uh and one of them was that he actually did eventually uh crack down on uh on the clan but that in that uh the impetus for that came from congress in the form of the ku klux klan act which was uh shepherded through the house by benjamin butler and which led to a massive number of arrests in in the areas of peak clan violence in the piedmont south and uh led to a one thing that didn't happen under grant was the 15th amendment which is uh very interesting because one of the reasons that black suffrage was not the silver bullet that a lot of northern republicans assumed it would be like republicans who 0:26:10 were very uh leery about getting into questions of redistribution and positive liberty because of their liberty you know their put all of their faith in the battle let black

people vote and they will be integrated into the political system and we will not need to change the relationship between subjects of a government and uh and the government itself in terms of like it's what it's what it's what its provisions are uh and one of the things that made that impossible is that the 15th amendment while bans uh uh discrimination on race for voting it does not it did not actually remove impediments to voting that existed in northern states or make voting a actual right which it still isn't we kind of think of voting as a right but it's kind it still really is more of a privilege in the constitutional sector in the in the constitutional sense uh 0:27:11 like equal provision of the ballot is is considered anathema racially but other than that states are sort of at their discretion to figure out who is allowed to vote which is to hold over from the old constitution old early constitutional era and was one of many things that should have been done away with by the civil war the civil war should have proven the ridiculousness of that and but it didn't because the array of forces weren't sufficient to to change that relationship uh and northern republicans were incredibly scared of the urban immigrant population that they have their cities catholic foreign language people democrats and then as a result many northern states that were governed by republicans had voting restrictions on the books things like tax requirements for voting uh and property restrictions they didn't want to undermine 0:28:12 their control there because the republican party was much more centered in the north and the south and the southern republicans had very little influence in dc uh northern republicans controlled the party and controlled the direction of the party and they wanted to maintain their power in the states that they uh and it should be noted that uh even though the one of the knocks on the 15th amendment at the time was that it was a special amendment that was especially designed for blacks and did not cover everybody uh most ex-slaves in the political arena and uh said no this should be universalized because that is the radical wellspring of uh of the black political tradition in this country comes from the fact that there's nobody that black people can sell out it's not because they're better than the rest of us which is sort of i think the unspoken assumption of like the liberal notion that uh suffering 0:29:13 is righteousness uh in the political sense the reason that that uh black americans have been like at the forefront of the uh general move towards social progress in this country is because they cannot sell anybody out because there's nobody that they can uh make a deal with power to get a worse deal than them in exchange for them getting slightly better conditions they're at the bottom of the totem pole now over time you get uh structures within the the black community that reward people at the top and create like a comprador situation somebody's talking about jim clyburn and yes he's essentially a comprador for the internal colony in black america but in general like the black political tradition has uh is disabused of a lot of the ideological uh mystifications of other communities because what is screened away 0:30:14 in those communities the inherent oppressiveness of political institutions is revealed or that it's screened to them by the fact that they don't suffer the worst of it that there's some sort of wage skin wage social wage that is a uh inducement to accepting some element of america's ideology which isn't something that that uh has been open to the majority of of blacks since uh and so while the 15th amendment was not all it could have been uh it was still a huge leap forward because even a few years earlier as we've talked about on the stream the idea of uh enfranchising uh black americans men but uh any black americans was absolutely unthinkable anywhere in the country and the 15th amendment uh made black enfranchisement national 0:31:18 policy so that does speak to the fluidity of the moment and the real possibility for uh for things to have been pushed further but the reality was that uh without a commitment to challenge the entrenched uh planter class and their refusal to accept black political subject subjectivity it just wasn't going to be enough uh and it wasn't helped by the fact that as i said southern republicans in dc uh didn't have really any influence in congress they could there was nothing that they could wheel or deal about because they were coming from uh a part of the country that was economically stagnant all of the all of the incredible amount of uh economic uh expansion that's i'm going to talk about for the next chapter all of it was happening in the west and 0:32:19 in the north the south was completely stagnant during that period no capital was coming into the south relative to what was going to the west and north so that means there and that match with the fact that the local the power and the money that did exist in the south was all oriented around the planter classes and the democratic party meaning that there was no uh structure for campaign donations and and can and uh party in infrastructure funded by local uh political elites which you had in the north meant that there was no money for them to come north to spread around they were at the mercy of a republican national republican party that was kind of sick of the whole thing **Music playing** uh and one of the reasons was because these guys were increasingly the the northern republicans were recently orienting 0:33:20 around capitalism and uh and economic development as their agenda and away from uh black rights a lot of the more and more they were feeling like this we fought the war to end slavery slavery is over to have the vote now let's make let's get this bread uh and and their liberal fixations including their mania for private property and a limited government to prevent that private property from being being messed with led them to some of them to actually resist things like the enforcement acts and the klan act that allowed for the suppression of some of the most horrific violence in the south uh but my man benjamin butler said to these idiots if the federal government cannot pass laws to protect the rights liberties and lives of the citizens of the united states in the states why were guarantees of those fundamental rights and he was 0:34:24 able to get the clan act passed and the enforcement acts over the complaints of these northern liberals and it had an effect it brought down the level of violence all right so chapter 10 moves north we've been in the south this whole time now chapter 10 says hey well this was all happening in the south what's been going on in the north parts of war and what has been going on is you is that the economy is exploding thanks to this railroad this crooked railroad-based economic investment scheme there's a huge boom in railroads mining lumber manufacturing and more importantly than the fact that these things are expanding they are consolidating like these uh in mining for example uh for for most of the mid 19th century the the vision 0:35:25 of a minor was like uh um you know a prospector going and finding a hole digging it doing it when he wanted to stopping what he wanted to controlling the conditions of his labor by the early 1870s most of those people had either stopped mining or been bought out and been replaced by large corporate mine interests paying wage laborers to go deep underground uh if anybody has seen deadwood the whole arc of george hurst coming to town and buying all the claims and bringing in cornish laborers that that's that's the process we're seeing in the south even the land which was the dream of westwood expansion yeoman freedom in land owning even the land in many parts of the west was being consolidated under the ownership of a few big owners california is the perfect example of this california is one of the most agriculturally 0:36:27 rich areas of the country and even in the 1870s it was already coming under the control of a handful of families and that never went away california agriculture has been controlled by a cartel of of agro agricultural families and the thing that's doing this is eastern money money from new york money from uh europe coming to invest in railroads invested mining invest in cattle as we talked about with the with the richard white book and to invest in uh lumber uh and while these companies are buying out their competitors and increasing their share they are facilitating that by just also buying the ***** out of the entire political structure republicans democrats everybody is getting in uh in the forms of outright bribes in the form of retainers there was a senator lyman uh trumbull from illinois uh who was on retainer well in 0:37:29 the senate from a railroad company which was at the time legal uh and even more than that just the distribution of stock to stock in railroad companies to political politicians who would then vote to give land to that very railroad company absolute self-dealing uh we talked about how this kind of uh corruption undermined the uh the reputations of the reconstruction radical governments but whatever was happening in the south was dwarfed by what was happening in the rest of the country by from 1862 to 1872 a hundred million acres of land in the united states were just given to railroads and a number of ex-slaves pointed out pretty aptly how the hell are those guys what did they do to earn that land when you're telling us that we can't be given land because that would be wrong that would violate social private property rights that would because because we haven't earned it we have to learn how to you have to learn to work even though they literally had worked to land their entire goddamn lives and had every bit of their ***** labor but it's because the railroads had money the railroads were going to build create jobs the railroads were looking to the future uh black land ownership which was going to be subsistence land ownership was not going to be the kind of productive large-scale agricultural output that they were looking for was not uh uh but the republicans while they were doing this in the north were also extending the state building project that was happening in the south als north elsewhere also these governments were starting to build much more public schooling and hospital and infrastructure and uh that had existed before but all of that meant taxes went up very much which also pissed people off and also all of the corruption pissed people off too uh one of the more perfect uh stories about the way that the liberal middle class reacted to uh to the scandal of railroad uh corruption uh and this is also in the richard white book uh and phoner talks about it too uh because it's very just very perfectly emblematic of not just the time but the the the function of like middle class morale moralism in sort of uh manufacturing consent and and reinforcing capitalist rule so in massachusetts which was ho the it had been the the center of abolitionism it was the center of liberal republicanism and and that middle-class tradition of property rights uh and horrible fear and dis disdain at irish immigrants who were filling up boston like crazy uh those massachusetts performers who had the state on lock at that point they decided that they were going to fix railroad corruption not by regulating the railroads which would have been an intervention in the private sector but by creating a uh a expert panel to ope to see over the railroad uh contracts and to compile information about them and it was led by a prominent uh blue blood and literal descendant of presidents charles francis adams jr who over the course of his tenure at the top of it turned the organization into a uh captured instrument of the railroads and in fact speculated in railroad stock while he was at the top the same corruption that all the dirty uh pauls were doing he just did but from the dispassionate technocrat by the way why is everybody talking about ***** world war ii in the chat i just noticed everyone's talking about is that people playing axis and allies what's going on this is about whether they should have dropped they dropped the bomb what's going on here or that or if the soviets could have we're not going to let the soviets take japan that was not going to happen we so in the middle of this the working class is for the first time in american history coming into coherence as a political force but it is very much divided by geography ethnicity language conditions of work some places like

pittsburgh at this point are still places where workers really have conditions of labor that are closer to an artisan uh uh whereas in other places like new york city you have uh like the creation of real like you know 19 what you think of when you think of those dark satanic mills massachusetts too of course uh and so that thing those things all likes make it difficult for them to articulate a coherent politics but there are certain political issues that come out of labor organizing one is uh greenbacks the uh notion of replacing goldbach's uh gold specie as america's uh currency uh peg with just printing money and of course it's very interesting to see read these 19th century uh conservatives freaking out about uh fiat about the very notion of 0:43:37 fiat currency when now most people take fiat currency even conservatives take fian currency as sort of you know necessary of course there's a lot of libertarian types who fixate on the gold standard or bitcoin but if you're in power you kind of under assume that this is there's no real alternative to fiat uh and but but what's different between the fiat that we have now and the fiat that uh that was being proposed by these early working-class political movements is that we have the federal reserve now we have a fake structure of impartiality to control the money supply outside of democratic control what the greenback's movement was was hey how about we decide collectively how much money there is which was of course absolutely anathema to wall street to the ***** bank of england which was at this point sort of in the same 0:44:38 position in the global trade nexus that uh the civil war really did open it it flayed the skin the ideological flesh off of the notion of money and revealed the bone like before there was this fantasy about what money was before the civil war and then when the civil war happened and they just printed a bunch of money and people took it and it worked it really did show that yeah no money is money is valuable to the degree that the uh that the body issuing it has some sort of uh claim of authority where it's being uh exchanged uh and these these liberal conserva these uh republicans uh these pro-capital republicans were desperately desperately interested in closing up that wound which is why at this period you're seeing even though you're seeing this 0:45:39 huge economic expansion there's a deflationary pressure because the government is in the process of calling in greenbacks and applying a gold standard it took years it took until the mid 1870s i think to actually get to a gold standard because there have been so much money putting out through the civil war that had to be kind of pulled back in um uh but not like all at once because for one thing working people were like no more ***** money please uh but the other big uh issue was the eight hour day which was becoming synoquinone with freedom if you if you could not be a yeoman if you if the dream of of total property autonomy was was dying for a lot of these people if you had to work then you should work a reasonable amount eight hours to work eight hours to rest eight hours of what we will uh and that led to a movement in congress to limit federal employees to eight hours which passed over the objection of a bunch of these liberal republicans who thought that was an a 0:46:42 horrible intervention in in the uh in the free market uh black workers of course were largely cut out of the uh labor movement due to racism uh and and due to the their perception as threats and also the fact that there weren't that many black laborers in the north the black people made up at this point but less than two percent of the northern population uh and black laborers in the south obviously were dealing with their own situation and were still largely agricultural uh but the where black workers did organize they did kind of naturally end up being a little more conciliatory towards capital because there was no uh solidarity extended uh there's a story that founder repeats about a massive strike by uh white stevedores in baltimore to get black shipyard workers off of the docks and led to the firing over a thousand of them 0:47:43 uh and then a local white merchant helping a group of uh black uh stevedores get access to their own shipyard so there was an idea that well if we're not getting any help from the workers class maybe we can get some help from well-intentioned uh capitalists and of course the idea of a well-intentioned capitalist that's a fraud but it's a fraud that is propagated by things like race uh hatred as a wedge so the labor movement caused a huge amount of cognitive dissonance in a lot of republicans who had been committed to ending slavery uh in part because they thought that if they ended slavery that they would basically solve the labor problem in america that the labor the labor uh the only labor problem in the united states was the existence of 0:48:44 slavery and that if we did have a nation where everybody was equal in the market and was able on the market to equally sell their labor uh and their goods and exchange that that would be essentially the the state of nature because that was very much the uh underlining the underlying ideological fantasy of liberalism is that there is such a thing as an economic state of nature and that the economic state of nature is a free market exchange and that the government is essentially perverting the world perverting the earth violating sacred laws by intervening in the market in fact one of the big arguments uh that the liberal republicans made against greenbacks was that uh repudiating gold-backed debt was uh dishonorable and that uh denying the 0:49:45 intrinsic value of gold was unnatural these guys all thought they were the most you know brilliant uh rationalists in the universe but like this is all stuff that falls apart on the nearest examination it's all tautology but if everybody is jacking themselves off with the same tautology and that tautology keeps you at the top of an economic pecking order it keeps you from having to get your hands dirty it's more powerful than any idea which is why history is not made by ideas ideas come later ideas ratify a state of affairs and ratify the hierarchy within it uh because no one will ever adhere to an idea or at least no critical mass of people in power will adhere to an idea because the only thing they really believe in is the power they hold the only 0:50:46 thing they really believe in is not having to work for the money they have because who would who would want to nobody wants so this the fact that you have these white laborers saying hey this sucks uh we're being exploited we're we're actually slaves in a way it ***** with the their heads of these republicans it it it caused them to have to confront a lot of their priors and uh what they did to solve that problem that that crisis of ideology was to just stop thinking ideologically uh and this led to the and this is part of the process that leads to the end of the ideological era of the republican party when it was organized around the principles which it was from its founding in 1852 i believe until like probably you could say 1868 uh 0:51:47 that it becomes a organizational party like uh exactly the way that van buren's uh democracy turned into uh you start with a attempt to advance a ideological position through a party structure but once that party takes power once that party embeds itself in power structures and creates parasitic relationships with power the way the republican party did with the emerging corporate interests at the time uh it no longer needs its ideological motivation it is able to motivate people to vote for it to uh to fill its ranks through uh its organizational enticements uh in the form of uh patronage jobs for people all throughout the levels of government uh and more importantly for the point of view the party than the patronage is the kickbacks because 19th century spoil system work like this the party gets in power whichever one it is you're a van 0:52:48 buren democrat you're a you're a uh you're one of roscoe conkling's republicans in new york uh and you're a good republican you're friends with like your local alderman he gets you a job as a postal worker you are expected to kick somewhere between 10 to 20 of your salary to the republican party now you might also have to pay the guy who got you the job but that's between you two the the party depends upon this circulation of money back into its coffers and this led to the creation of a segment within the republican party called the stalwarts who didn't give a ***** about how corrupt all this was because they were looking after the power of the republican party now for many of them like roscoe conkling and james blaine it was largely self-serving these guys were political entrepreneurs but butler was also a uh a stalwart and even 0:53:51 though butler i don't think is in any way a principled person when he was a military governor of new orleans he confiscated uh cotton he basically made up a a pretense to confiscate all the cotton coming in and out of new orleans and then auctioned it uh at very low prices to his brother who was one of his adjutants uh but he was also interested in the the the spoils system because it gave the republican party power and he actually wanted that power to be put in the service of uh extending freedom to ex-slaves and also and the thing that they these stalwarts the way the star wars got 0:54:53 people to vote for uh that republicans was the ones who weren't just benefiting from the patronage was not necessarily through ideology as it was through resentment the civil war had just happened it killed 300 000 northerners the people who killed them were basically all democrats the democrats were still the other party in america you could do well in most northern states that sent thousands and thousands of boys south to fight the war by saying vote for us the other guys literally shot your brother they called it waving the bloody shirt and it worked who i'm not voting for the party that and while they were doing this they were also uh attaching themselves remora-like to this emerging corporate uh capital structure uh demanding kickbacks 0:55:54 to the party itself not just to the individual members of the party at every level of uh economic transaction uh which kept them detached from any specific interest and answerable only to themselves but still dependent upon these capitalist structures in order to to fund their uh their actions and this this situation this corrupt confluence uh which led to the creation of a bunch of political machines especially in cities like philadelphia that were essentially identical to the old tammany hall machine in new york only with why are you talking about pmc again why you should be 0:56:55 talking about pmc because we're leading to the revolt of the pmc from within the republican party and that is the rise of the liberal debt republicans as a faction in the fir and during the first grant term uh and this is a group of reformers intellectuals journalists the people who are like the closest thing we would have to that kind of class in the 19th century when you know capitalism is still in in a protein state uh attempting to draw the line of social progress and emancipation and civic equality because they were seeing the these these middle-class reformer types protestants uh merchant class the people who had been the engines of abolition uh they were seeing that there were two that the drop that the anti-slavery cause ideologically had like 0:57:56 two strands to it one strand was a recognition it was it was a recognition of human equality it said slavery is wrong because we are all people and it is wrong for people to be uh deprived of liberty but there is another side the other the other side of that which was motivating them just as much because remember this is the merchant core and not if not merchants all of the people who lived around the merchants like all these intellectuals and academics and reformers they all lived around finance capital even if they were not directly involved in it their their livelihoods depended on finance capital uh that other strand said that slavery needed to be abolished uh because it interfered with market efficiency because uh it was a feudal uh remnant it was a backwards approach to the economic management that what what the future 0:58:58 was was liberal subjectivity universalized liberal subjectivity and once the war ends and the project of building america's capitalist structures becomes much more uh central in large part because the war itself creates a bunch of capital war is always the thing that sparks in uh capitalist development in countries the second industrial revolution in england was a direct result of the napoleonic war america's uh industrial efflorescence was predicated on the uh the civil war in the same way uh so with that as the new focus of of these this merchant class that universalizing that that that ethical uh argument kind of lost its purchase because there's no more technical slavery everything else oh they're you know black people are still being killed and 0:59:59 and whipped and oppressed in the south sure but they have the vote it's up to them to fix it it's up to them to get their money and what and uh what these people wanted uh was to stop reconstruction or at least let it stop uh pushing forward on it uh getting rid of the tariff and imposing free trade instituting civil service reform so that you couldn't have the spoil system for distributing patronage uh and replacing elected officials with appointed experts and the guys the guy that these guys hated more than anybody in government was you guessed it benjamin butler they even had a word for his politics butlerism which we could talk which if you look at butlerism now it is the closest thing this era had to a egalitarian socialist political project 1:1:1 benjamin butler was essentially the only guy left standing by the 1870s who was holding the string the the uh that led guys like august village and the german 49 uh and the german socialists to fight the civil war uh the things that uh john brown envisioned when he was trying to end slavery and that was uh a actual expansion of politics to everybody it was if we are a democracy that means it is government by the people not as the liberals thought government by the best and most refined people who just so happen coincidentally not only are they the most refined uh they are also the people who are on top of all the ***** money so not only was ben butler a uh uh very much in favor of vigorous suppression of the klan in the south and uh and the 1:2:2 support of black whites from the federal level he was in favor of irish independence he was in favor of women's suffrage he was in favor of labor reform and greenbacks also i should point this out as i said earlier wildly crooked he was a spoilsman through and through he was not i don't think you could say a good person by any in any kind of existential sense he was somebody who through the course of his career was pushed in direction that led him to find uh value in this you could then and that was really the argument these guys made is that a guy like butler is a demagogue because he's just using the poor to try to get power for himself but even if that's true the politics that he proposed it meant taking seriously the challenge of slavery and of the war to defeat slavery which was to recognize the essential conflict being between classes and 1:3:4 that the war against the planters necessitated morally and politically a continued war against private property as it currently existed so the way liberals dealt with this conflict the problem of reconstruction the problem that hey we uh we ended slavery we created civic equality we created equality in the market and black people in the south are still very ***** uh what's the what's the deal here there's two things

you can take from that you can say well it's because uh it's because the market is not independent of power and politics there is no natural order uh you actually have to build and maintain political order and until now in american history we have had a private property regime a fantasy of yeoman autonomy that was predicated on there being a class of workers who did the most intense the most brutal labor the most extractive labor who were not part of the political body and the existence of those people allowed for the creation of some sort of classless fantasy that's what calhoun imagined once you end that once you bring this proscribed class into the political spectrum into the political world you have fundamentally changed the political what politics is you have necessitated the transformation of the state and the abolition of the constitutional order in my opinion and change the relationship between people and government and people and political power and economic power uh towards socialism the other answer you could say is actually they were inferior the whole time which is what most of the liberal republicans went with liberal republicans looked at the wreckage of reconstruction the failure of reconstruction by that point said this is because the blacks just weren't up for it even though the conditions that doomed reconstruction were the conditions imposed by their prescribed nostrums uh not recon not redistributing land not dispossessing the clanters not freely distributing greenback currency not abolishing uh smallholder debt not doing the things that would have allowed for uh racist ass white southerners to go you know what i don't really like black people but hey the war ended and now i have more land and i'm not in hawk to some ***** ***** in a castle you know maybe i don't ***** care so much about this ***** uh no no no it was their inherent inferiority oops and so the liberal republicans split off from the republican party and in 1872 uh did an independent uh convention in cincinnati uh and this was filled with all of the most sterling liberal lights of the time uh and also all of the republican office holders who had lost out in uh party internal battles for power basically it was sore losers and nerds it was everybody who got boxed out of the uh the the victorious machine in the state they were from and uh these ***** scribbling ***** who were fixated on the ideological and they nominated horus greely for president who was a uh had been a crusading abolitionist newspaper writer and hater of democrats uh but who after the war had decided that any attempt to impose equality on the south would have been a violation of natural rights and and and property rights and all the sacred things that make up the american the incoherent and idiotic american creative liberty and so uh even though he was pro-tariff and the liberals were her were wildly against the tariff uh he ended up becoming the figure that the liberals could coalesce around the one they could all agree on and then the democrats who at this point uh because of disenfranchisement of confederates in the south uh were in a situation where it was hard to conceive of them winning an election by themselves uh also nominated uh benjamin uh uh horace greeley and because there was no coherence at the top of the ticket the only real reconstruction and grant ran on the bloody shirt and continuing the fight to uh for equality and he got he won uh grant won 55 percent of the vote which was one of the biggest uh landslides of the 19th century it was such a bad ass kicking that horace greeley actually died like three weeks after the election uh and what it really shows is that even at that point even if at the top of the republican party which at this point is being totally dissolved by uh spoils on the one hand and liberal orthodoxy on the other uh there is still an appetite for the war to have meant something for for the struggle and for the sacrifice to have had a meaning that transcended the mundane of politics and uh it speaks more than anything to me to the potential that lay dormant in that moment and that we that was lost uh not for the reasons that the dunning-school ***** talked about of course but also uh not even for the reasons that like liberal uh sort of tragedists would say uh a lot of just bad bad rolls of the dice sometimes you play d and d and you get a bad roll but i think the fecundity of the moment more than anything speaks to the fecundity of every moment uh that no matter how hopeless things seem in the moment uh that there's always a chance to push through and figures like like the existence of a guy like benjamin butler and his trajectory of his career i mean he was a guy who he made his money in the civil war by uh by selling flour to the army who leveraged his relationship with a local bank into getting a commission uh who was by any stretch as much of a self-seeking entrepreneurial scumbag as you'll find in uh 19th century american politics but because of the pinballing randomness of life and his the encounters that he had over the course of the war he found himself in a situation where he was the national spokesman for a road not taken and the fact that it wasn't taken i don't know to me means that it okay so next week we're gonna wrap it up last two chapters uh and then i think we'll take a little break i'm not gonna stop doing the wednesday stream but i might not have a book for a couple weeks just to like do some other reading i need to do uh but we will gonna know it might be black reconstruction although i might take a break from reconstruction right now i will do black reconstruction i promise it i just might not do it next just because it's a lot of reconstruction uh maybe cleanse the palate with something uh maybe do a uh something about like the german so what were you guys talking about oh were the americans useless in europe in world war ii i mean i wouldn't say useless i think the thing about like the germans winning the russians winning it like obviously but i mean they were sure got their asses kicked there for a while i mean if there's a situation where the united states isn't the industrial dynamo it is because it was the industrial capacity of the united states that beat the germans more than their military involvement in the war that did it grant was very much an eisenhower figure eisenhower grant in washington are all i would say in the same basket of presidents in that they are figures who emerge from a war a a conflict a distribution of the status quo to validate the new uh status quo whose symbolic role as like deliverer of victory allows them to uh subsume all of the contradictions of that moment into which means that they are all kind of by definition reactionary figures but like in a relative sense you know like grant like i've said uh did a lot more than the liberal republicans wanted him to do uh was still a reaction to radical republicanism and a desire to see it not ascend anymore uh the same way eisenhower even though he you know he validated the the new deal consensus for the republican side was a uh suppression both of like at that point the uh i guess declining radicalism of the new deal because by 52 thanks to uh the second red scare and the taft-hartley act uh the the radical edge of the new deal is is very much uh guttering out by that point but also of the sort of resurgent right populist the the the taft wing of the republican party the the ring that is now the whole of the party uh who were neutralized by the cabal of wall street uh financiers who voiced in eisenhower on the convention and just like washington washington was an avatar of american liberty but then in power he validated the federalist uh concentration of uh capital and the the uh the alienation of rights away from the states and away from the land into uh into **Music playing** money yeah rip peter sleeping a reformer without results he was definitely a reformer but no results for peter saleem and the last thing i want to say and this is something that i said in one of the white streams i think talking about the liberal republicans and this liberal movement here that takes over that it becomes the center mass of politics historically anyway and it's very important to note that the liberal republicans and the people they represented were always a very small percentage of the population they had no real ability to uh control events as you can see by the fact that all they could do is get a doofus old editor who was dying nominated uh who got his ass kicked um but they were influential in retrospect and influential uh off of the scenes because they were they were the the the articulation of the culture these are the people who wrote about stuff these were the people who wrote all of the good press that we looked through to understand the past so they structured the culture even though they were not necessarily in control of it and they are even though their ideology is now the ideology of the right wing the people are the class itself is still around and they over the course of the 19th century went from being having this like reactionary uh politics of hard money and uh uh los angeles by the turn of the century these are all these this type of person it's different people they're people who have grown into it they're they're younger people who have displaced those older people are progressive because by that point they could no longer sustain the illusions of the liberal republicans because capitalism by that point had definitively failed to provide what the liberals had insisted it would uh and so they decided that a more interventionist model was necessary and that's where progressivism comes from but the fundamental reality is that they can never truly challenge capitalism because of their betterness within it and now we have a situation where you've got this pmc that people freak out about they do have that same class position but the difference between the historical iterations of these people and the current moment is that there is no uh working class for them to bamboozle or uh undermine we're all in essentially the same class position in this country in that we do not have any class awareness we don't operate from class consciousness it was coming into being in the 19th century it came into fruition during the new deal era uh and then it started to decay in the 60s and 70s and and it's been finally over the last 40 years abolished because you've got to remember every cycle brings new people like not not new classes necessarily not new relationships and proximities to capital but new people who are responding to the world that the previous people had made so those young those progressives who come into the ranks of the intelligentsia in the 1890s are coming into the world made by the in in large part the liberal republicans and they uh respond to that but they respond within the structure and now everybody is responding to a structure that is where structure is uh dissolved where the individual is the only thing which was the dream of the of the liberals like they've got it but i don't think any of them would look at the society we have and say that it was what they wanted but that's because they were never doing what they thought they were doing they were they were convincing themselves as every point that they were generating this culture but they were really doing was advancing capitalism and capitalism doesn't give a ***** about any of your niceties doesn't care about the culture that you're trying to preserve it only cares about surplus value and the extraction of surplus value over time is a series of traumas that deform and reduce and undermine every structure of of meaning within a society and leave it uh atomized and and no one will who is exercising the will of this thing can stop it because they don't know that's what they're doing and that's that is what ideology does ideology takes all the bad feelings that accumulate from being part of a extractive exploitative isolating economic system and creates a culture that validates them one way or the other and right now we're in the situation we are with like the polarization and the uh the uh epistemic bubbles because we have finally achieved a situation uh uh we have re-established a situation rather that existed before the civil war where uh you have two poles of capital that generate their own cultural frameworks that are totally separate the the land-based extractive capital uh culture of mega and the coastal finance i did see the thing about uh tenet that was pretty funny although apparently like it was not in 2000 it was in 2006 i don't having meaning and trying to reinforce their politics through this lens is that you wouldn't have been anyone because you wouldn't have been there there is no you there is no person that is you that is outside of the context of your life if you were a russian in 1917 it is a meaningless question and it's one of the things that makes it very difficult to talk about chris history because people want to make it into a story 0:5:14 that they can put themselves into but it assumes that there is a thing there is an essence to an individual that transcends their time and place and their context there isn't like what makes you is the sum total of your experiences with the world and the experiences of the world are determined are determined temporally and spatially so you would not have been there you would not have been in 1917 you would have been you it wouldn't have been you and people really get riled up about affirming like one or another political positions related to these questions because they want to have imagined themselves on the right side but you're looking through a glass darkly at an entirely foreign world not just in terms of language but just a vote 0:6:16 an entire world i mean russia specifically my god in 1917 was a feudal world a a feudal order that had that that had modernity just dropped on its ***** lap that had things like marxism things like socialism sort of transubstantiated into like uh emotionally invested sort of transcendental spiritual categories uh as like the old order died right then like the old it was like a it's like a a phase shift away from like a traditional understanding of the world into a modern one whereas in the rest of europe in the united states that transition was much slower and so you could 0:7:24 not and being an american by god being an american at the end of the 20th 20th century beginning of the 21st century when you are the most alienated uprooted people who have ever existed on earth the most the most ironized you can't put yourself in that world because they saw the world differently they and i understand why people want to put themselves there because it was a time when actions felt like they mattered i mean and i especially get the fixation around the bolsheviks because we live now in a world where it seems like there's no hope for anything ever getting better and more and the big reason for that is because there seems to be no place for human agency there's nowhere for an individual to put their ***** shoulder and move anything everything feels completely stuck because there are so many of us we 0:8:25 are so diffused there's and and i think more than anything our uh our subject our subjectivity are literally our being subjects of capitalism is enforced at such a diffuse level of technology social technology specifically not just actual physical technology that there's nowhere there's no winter palace to storm and so 1917 where you have a small cutlery of dedicated leather jacket clad badasses who amongst this giant throng of people all running around with chickens with their heads cut off in the middle of this long-form crisis this this death of one order uh the only people who are like lenin the only people who are who are able to see the thread for where it is and direct action it's incredibly intoxicating and that's why people want to imagine themselves in that position because it is so much more preferable than being in our position and i think that there's a there's a unspoken fantasy that if you can present 0:9:26 yourself if you can orient yourself around what you imagine that position was then that you will be able to translate that clarity of action to the current moment and i'm afraid that's impossible because uh because the circumstances are different there was no middle order in the in uh the dying russian empire there was a massive ***** peasants a disproportionately large uh urban proletariat in the few places of significant urban development a almost non-existent middle class layer and then the romanov family and like the ***** uh general staff just sitting on top of it like the police bureaucracy we are literally all of us middle subjects no matter what our

CUSHVLOG 154. SUEZ CANAL SIMULATOR 2021

uh conditions of employment are our relationship to capital we have been uh we've 0:10:28 been bourgeoisified in america by the process of like being the place where the entire world's um economy is fun has been uh organized around and funneled through that the pressure points and the mobilization elements just aren't there because like if you want to look at the difference between russia and germany in 1917 and 1918 one of the big ones is that the middle class had been bourgeoisie in germany there was a big chunk of workers not just party functionaries and union leaders but also actual rank-and-file workers who had been invested enough in capitalism that they didn't want to see some terrifying revolution that they didn't know what the outcome 0:11:30 would be of there was no and so that middle class that bourgeoisie it uh it broke it split the working class and defuted defeated the kind of uh focal point action that that the russians were able to do because they were pushing against a rotten open door this it's a it was completely there was nothing there there was a few inbreds at the top some army officers and then a mass a military that was mostly ***** conscripted peasants it was a situation where where focus pressure and commitment and frankly a religious faith in the project could have an effect so people want to want to imagine that for the moment but the moment is different the time is different we are different people in every meaningful sense of that we are different people and so 0:12:33 we couldn't we're not them and that's why i find though like defending the bolsheviks and defending the soviet union to be a pretty meaningless endeavor it really does seem to exist i mean i know people have rationalizations for why they think it's important because you know we're fighting against propaganda war and all this stuff but most people aren't paying attention to any of this stuff what we're really doing is uh is validating ourselves validating our uh our purity and our imagined position in a historical continuum of action that means that we would have been bolsheviks uh in 1917 because we're see i love this online leftists are obsessed with 1917 spends proselytizing about 1917. i'm not this is a meta commentary for christ's sake i'm 0:13:35 not defending one of the other sides i'm saying the whole point is about uh it's ego it's not it's not a political project i will say that i think that the bolsheviks were correct that they were the only ones who who could have seized power that there was no transition to uh to democratic uh a bourgeois democratic government because the bourgeois did not exist but after the civil war and the basically the destruction of the russian working class in the civil war uh i don't know they probably should have and and more importantly the failure of the ***** european pan-european revolution to happen should have made them probably stop and consider what they uh what they really needed to do uh but they couldn't because they at that point 0:14:38 were were committed and but like people fixate on lenin because he was the guy who saw every angle and he was he was he was unencumbered by the sort of neurotic

fixation on doctrinal purity and correctness that paralyzed a lot of other people and that was because he was fully committed to victory for its own sake which only makes sense if you have assumed like he did the trotsky right view that uh that there would be a that it would be a spark to a revolution that would resolve all the contradictions inherent in trying to govern a giant medieval peasant society from the top uh and then it didn't happen and he died and they had no but it's difficult 0:15:40 to imagine any situation where the russian peasantry doesn't get just ground into ***** hamburger by the 20th century because that's what happened to the peasantry everywhere if you were not turned into peasants in the least violent means although still violent in western europe where capitalism starts developing when capitalism shows up peasant societies and that more than anything is due to the nature of interstate competition i mean that's why the the russian state decided to basically enforce capitalism on russia in the 19th century even though most of the people at 0:16:41 the top levels of russian society had no real investment or interest in it because they were in a state competitive framework and state competitive frameworks are what made capitalism in the first place there is nowhere else in the world that had the number of small and medium-sized states in close competition with one another then europe and once the state system sort of spreads and solidifies everybody is going to destroy their peasantry if they want to not get taken over and then if you get taken over your peasantry is then destroyed by your oh the thing i was going to say before i saw that question is because i have the suiez canal simulator thing here um it would 0:17:43 be funny and like kind of over the on the nose if capitalist if the world capitalist system was destroyed by a blockage in an artery considering that that's the number one way that capitalism like literally we're having a world heart attack you got to get a stent in there or something or else she'll keel over like nelson rockefeller while having sex with his mistress but yeah no it's not going to collapse thing what's the 0:19:4 difference between a peasant and a yeoman farmer the thing about yeoman is that he owns the land he works on which traditionally in in peasant societies is not the case the landlords are local power brokers who have domination of the land and then worker peasants work on the land in some sort of uh uh tribute mechanism that varies from world from system to system yeoman is a farmer who owns their own property and works it for themselves which is a thing that i mean i really do believe that is the foundational distinction between america's notion of uh democracy and liberty and and why we don't have we never had a socialist party in this country and we never had a serious socialist vision is because notions of liberty in places where uh land that have a tradition of of peasant agriculture have a social conception of 0:20:7 liberty because it's impo because uh social relations were embedded and property ownership at that level is not something that the average person could imagine in america because it was everybody who couldn't hack it one way or another for one reason or another in europe coming to coming across the water to make their fortune to make uh heaven on earth whatever they were thought they were doing were able to dispossess the native uh occupants of the land and then subdue it without having to fight uh against the traditional land owners that meant that our so our american ideas of liberty are individualized in a way that is genuinely i i mean i it's obviously wrong but it's it's allowed to it's been allowed to persist just because we've always 0:21:9 been able to replace the notion of autonomy through land ownership with something else once the promise gives away like we were going to be the place where nobody had to work for anybody else or not for very long because everybody could get land and then once that proved itself to not be true we had uh a place where anybody could make their own business and now like small business has replaced yeoman farming as the ideal american subject because it's somebody who's who is able to be free able to able to exercise independent political judgment because the the big horror in american history is the idea that if you're you're gonna get something for nothing you're gonna vote yourself for the public purse which of course is nonsensical because everybody is here and there's a general welfare that's why the united states depended 0:22:10 upon a subject race as i talked about on wednesday uh to make the whole thing make sense at all which is why the civil war really was the chance to re-inscribe america's conceptions of i'm not going to watch the black and white justice league that is a ***** that is a that is a bridge too far no ***** way i honestly i remember the first 0:23:11 trailer for it was in black and white and i just and now they just decided to double dip very somebody says these go around the block and go nowhere that's kind of the point it's going in circles because i'm in a guy in a room i have nowhere to point anyone including myself are the avengers cops obviously that's the thing about marvel 0:24:18 and that's what that makes it such a contrast with dc is that they do a very explicit job in the marvel movies of saying that these people are essentially just extensions of the state like ***** the falcon can't even get a goddamn bank loan whereas the dc uh heroes are is uh what's the irl anti-life equation i think you all know what i'm going to somebody says about asks about the meiji restoration uh in contrast to the 0:25:30 uh civil war and reconstruction it's part of the same process i mean the 19th century is i think my my favorite century to study just because it is it is when the uh when capitalism started to achieve uh escape velocity from settled human social orders and that was everywhere and always an incredibly violent process because settled orders have vested interests they have ways of life and being that are embedded and time tested and there will be resistance to their destruction and i think it's funny that ed zwick made two movies glory and last samurai about two countries that had wars between capital and land between traditional feudal orders or quasi fuel whatever

you want to call slavery i know people get mad when you call it feudal but whatever 0:26:31 you want to call it it was it was certainly not uh it was certainly a ancient it was not a modern form of social relationships certainly and neither of course was a feudal samurai order and he makes two movies about those two wars and the good guys in the first one because at the end what he's really responding to is like the romantic a romantic story and the fact that he's an american and uh makes him be able to respond to it sort of just as a as a romantic exploit but either way it's the same process it is it is the uh landed in the the invested landed powers being replaced by a uh a order of somebody's asking me about wild wild west i just found that movie 0:28:23 to be very insultingly terrible it was it was bad i'm sorry i mean i don't know why anyone would argue i mean it's i guess like oh it's about a black cowboy in the west and he's against a confederate so it's like it's got good politics but i'm sorry people 0:29:24 asking about selma heights but i'm fairly certain that's not her butt in there there is an amazing scene where kenneth branagh who plays uh dr loveless as instead of as a dwarf which he was on the show as a guy with his legs blown off uh and will smith are just trading ableist and racist jokes to one another which i'd be interested in seeing the response not it'd be funny if they got if that scene problematic why are there so you good civil war movies it is amazing i mean it's like it's one of it's our foundational one of our most important historical traumas uh it's one that i know 0:30:28 for a fact is very captivating to many many people and yet there's almost no good civil war movies it's very weird i mean yeah i know that a lot of it is because of the lost cause and how that that just from a narrative perspective let alone forgetting about ideology people uh want to you know graft some sort of nobility to that cause uh yeah it's like yeah we got westerns instead it's like forget about the civil war it's too messy let's just talk about what they i mean one of the big problems i think is that just from a standpoint of uh i mean maybe who knows now maybe it's too late to ever have a good one but they always made they always made were able to save money by having reenactors do the battle scenes and civil war reenactors are all like 0:31:29 terrible somebody says we need a 30 years war movie that would be pretty intense i i would like to see that there's there's only been a couple 30 years more movies to my knowledge there's one with michael kane where he plays like a swedish cavalry officer who shows up to a town to raid it i never saw that one uh but yeah i mean you want to talk about something that could be deeply metal something about 30 years war would be pretty intense i've always thought another interesting one would be um would be bacon's rebellion specifically because uh when the the governor called out 0:32:33 troops to put down bacon's rebellion in the virginia colony in 1675. uh i want to see if i can find the quote but they apparently dosed the uh the clone the militia that they sent to put down the rebellion with uh with jimson weave so yeah so they made

jim some weed soup while they were going to put down this this uh this rebellion 0:33:37 against uh the governor uh and the colonial authorities and that there was a quote from someone who put it uh it was a very pleasant comedy for they turned natural fools upon it for several days one would blob a feather in the air another would dart straws at it with much fury and another stark naked was sitting up in a corner like a monkey grinning and making mouths at them so i just love this idea of you've got this like uh rebellion against colonial authority these guys trying to you know throw off the shackles and the way they get people to go and uh and kill them all is to just get them ***** ripped yeah a field in england is uh is is in the same vibe but i think 0:34:39 that uh i think that bacon's rebellion would be even more thoughts on the amazon union drive i mean i'm rooting for it obviously i don't have i i i don't have anything i can do i don't know anyway to help it but i'm certainly rooting for it it's certain it'll be interesting to see if it uh does lead to more attempts to unionize amazon workers 0:35:42 because that actually is you know in a post-industrial economy an actual strategic node of production or at least distribution that could be leveraged so which is why you're going to see a very uh concerted resistance to it and that's the real question it's like we kind of know where there are the points to to hypothetically organize and and and they're going to try to everything somebody says what's the best uh house in game of thrones saying martell is easy because it's like hey they're like kind of poc and they're they're cool with gender equality and they like drinking spicy red 0:36:45 wine and being polly so that's a little too easy it's certainly uh it's not the ***** uh greyjoys the ***** iron islanders just the worst ***** ***** oh just jesus shut the ***** up so annoying i do like outhouse manderly because it's just a bunch of fat dudes just a bunch of fat dudes just piling in and being like soups on ***** we got kicked out of the riverlands and now we're going up to just park our asses yeah you by the way uh this is this is actually uh this is this reminds me so obviously george 0:37:47 r martin is never finishing these books i mean he's had a year off from anything else that he has to do and yet he has nothing which means that he isn't going to finish anything and it's not because he's lazy it's not even i think because he's uh like too anxious or that he's too undermined by the fact that the show ended although honestly the fact that the show has its ending even if it's good or bad i know as someone who read the books as soon as the show came out the last episode it really did kind of make you go eh i don't really care anymore i mean i would like to see more books but i've lost that desire that i used to have but i think the thing that really did him in is that he is trying like what he has created with that world of his he got so ambitious about it that he's no longer trying to like wrap up a story he is trying to like describe an epochal like transition of a social order and that's just too big 0:38:49 of an ask that's just too many plates to keep spinning like especially for somebody

who's fixated on like interconnectivity as he is like the way that the benioff and weiss were able to end the show was by just dropping everything drop like forgetting half the ***** and just focusing and he can't do it i don't think he can do it i mean he's trying to like end a civilization or like lead to a or or describe the transition of one civilization into another one and when you're doing that i don't know how that's too big of an ask like look at what uh like um uh the person he's most he's often compared to is you know the guy who invented what he's doing uh uh tolkien he didn't do that tolkien just had the ***** elves leave he just said yeah the elves is over the elves are gone uh and so now the humans are gonna do something like 0:39:51 he would have to actually have an entire social order be uh subsumed in some way and how the hell do you even figure out how to do that it's it's way too big he bit off more than any one man in a greek fisherman's hat what about a death of stalin style comedy based on the assassination of our assassination of archduke ferdinand i know somebody who wrote that script and it's really good so it's out there probably never get made but uh somebody wants me to know about eugene merman that's 0:40:59 such a random that's where people getting the idea of baffling what is my skin care routine well thank the writing haha it's going i mean i don't know i i have a very 0:42:3 hard time uh i i have a hard time writing without editing while i do it i have a lot of transcripts and stuff that i'm trying to shape into something but i'll admit it's it's it's been a struggle i hope i hope to have uh i have an idea for something that might help kind of break the log jam in the near future i'm just the thing is i'm not really a writer i never have been you know and now i'm trying to be and it's uh it's tough to learn the right habits when you haven't really been doing it that long how would i solve the suez boat crisis uh just get a bunch of helicopters and lift the 0:43:13 boat i do like that they're going back around the cape of good horn or the cape of good horn cape of the cape of good head uh no the cape of good hope i like that we're like it's vasco da i don't think that they will be leaving afghanistan i don't 0:44:34 think that there's i think at this point there is no incentive there's no overriding incentive to get america out of anywhere it is in right now the the fact that they're failing the fact that they don't they're not doing what they want to do or they're claiming to do doesn't matter at this point i think i think china more than anything is guaranteeing that we will not leave afghanistan like if we're really deciding that china is the new enemy and we're gonna do cold war ii with china now that the war on terror is no longer a real useful uh uh predicate for our military economy uh and 0:45:39 there's lithium there too oh man forget about it yeah no they're not going anywhere and honestly yeah the heroin is a big part of it i mean there's there's zero way that we are not getting a huge amount of ***** uh uh money in put into the system one way or another by by the opium trade out of afghanistan i mean the the taliban

were were eliminating opium before the u.s invasion and now it's where 90 of the world's opium comes from in a similar way there was very little opium produced into heroin anyway in the golden triangle before the vietnam war started and then all of a sudden boom became a world center of heroin production network of transports is moving ***** all throughout all the mountain regions of uh of southeast asia just coincidentally i wouldn't be i mean i i don't know too i i don't i don't really want to 0:46:40 get into the whole thing about the uyghurs and everything because it does seem like it's a classic busy box for americans who have nothing else to do to try to convince themselves they're waging a propaganda war that no one's paying attention to and that doesn't matter but i would not be surprised if you saw some uh some sort of insurgency being uh but again you know it's sort of a chicken and the egg thing like 0:47:42 the dollar is dominant because we are the dominant power in the world and its value is dependent on our military us and our state robustness which is tied to the military so uh i do wonder how much of a paper tiger because it does seem like it just exists to you know make money for people and uh build boats to crash into each other and planes that can't fly and that if there had to be a real contest that there would not be anything there to really uh to to work but of course that's why we're gonna try to avoid one which is why the whole thing with because uh you know we can't fight 0:48:43 war with china it's absurd it can't it can't exist but at the same time brinksman's honestly yeah fake war with china would make the most sense get all the real leaders in a room not joe biden of course but the real leaders in a room and say okay let's let's coordinate this thing let's let's figure out who's going to get bombed where what losses we can accept uh and then coordinate and and orchestrate a up a build 0:49:45 up conflict and then a drawdown that like manages the tension and it wouldn't be the first time that i mean the the gulf war was basically staged uh just without uh poor saddam hussein really knowing that is i 100 percent believe that the gulf war uh as beltry large set did not exist did not take place uh in the sense that it was a war provoked allowed to happen in fact set up to happen in order to uh establish a new uh military order in the aftermath of the of this collapse of the soviet union a 0:50:46 unipolar american-led world community that would be able to act anywhere in the world and that would justify the maintenance of america's military-based economy and not have to worry about that peace dividend that uh that people in power were terrified of having to deal with after the fall of if the united states had really not wanted saddam hussein to invade kuwait there were plenty of times that they could have told him not to do it instead they explicitly told him to go ahead so that he would do it and then once it happened we could go oh ***** yeah no never mind we're you're actually hitler jr and we're going to blow your ass up and that's the crowning achievement of george h.w bush's career this guy who behind the scenes

for 50 years was knitting together the forces of the deep state and wall street eastern 0:51:49 capital and sun belts oil and defense money in and then into a viable machinery for power through the uh instrument of the republican party uh and then was able to see through the end of the cold war the establishment of a new unipolar world through the ***** literal staging of a ***** war and then he goes down in history as a ***** loser because the gdp dropped for three months in early 1992. it's it's one of the great arcs of any i we really should do an episode about bull worth that movie is 0:53:6 is maybe the most 90s if you want to understand 90s politics it might be the single best movie for forgetting that moment to forgetting the sort of pre-911 malaise the the sort of the the the feudal dream of some sort of i do listen to lex g's podcast if anyone wants a uh movie podcast i highly recommend lex g not only because he uh he has he's a good rock on tour who does a great talk about uh like his personal relationship to movies but also and i think this is very important he and also will 0:54:7 i will say this is also you know uh trying to establish a new mode of criticism is trying to transcend the current critical moment which is that basically the only film criticism that exists anymore is entirely content based the only reason to talk about a movie is to talk about its uh like the the themes within it it's politics that's why you talk about a movie like what the characters relate to like who they who's my friend who's my enemy you know what's problematic what's not and i feel like that has really reached a point where it there's what i think is going to come back and i think lex uh and will are hopefully gonna be forefront on is the return to an aesthetic critique of film where you talk about the way that it looks the way that it's just set 0:55:8 up the way that the scenes are the way it's edited those those things the actual form of the film uh and like yeah vibe uh and lex g had an episode where he talks about sheen which is a thing that you never hear anybody talking about when they talk about movies which is how you movie comes out no one's going to tell you what the sheen is they're only going to tell you about like whether it's a good or bad movie in the culture war basically i i think that there's going to be a return of criticism that deals with the actual formal elements of film which i think is good so yeah the lex g podcast it's on uh it's on spotify of course it is an acquired taste because he is a special figure and he's a uh idiosyncratic voice to say the least uh but it's if you if 0:56:10 you want to hear someone talking about movies it's it's not like anything else you're going to i just watched closely i just rewatched close encounters of the third kind last night it's uh i enjoyed it i hadn't seen it in a long time uh i don't know i don't know how i really felt about it though i mean now the thing is like with spielberg now that i kind of imagine him as this like demonic avatar of the new world order it's hard to really watch lens spielberg is going to make a movie about his childhood 0:57:24 hasn't that been like all but i i did i i did i will say that yeah in in close encounters

i did relate poignantly to that restlessness of the character that that inability to to like accept what's around you and that that yearning for transcendence and then the fact that he just gets it at the end like oh here are the aliens they want to take you to space it's a little uh it's it's kind of jaw dropping in its narcissism really but it's very well shot the alien the the ufo ***** looks good i haven't watched the 0:59:4 suicide squad suicide squad trailer yet i've heard that it's nothing but soy dialogue which i'm very excited about i gotta say i'd rather see the the airs cut because ayers was such a weird choice for that like he's a guy who just makes grim cop movies and then they have him doing this thing with all these like and then they had and apparently he made it like a grim cop version of suicide squad that took the suicide part very seriously and then after all those snyder movies were not performing as well as the marvel ones they just panicked and cut the whole thing up because there was a ***** trailer that had uh like a bohemian rhapsody in it that everybody liked so i would like to see just the full grim version the grim contrast the tan schneider 1:0:12 cut could only be screened uh think yeah premiering on little saying james exactly i think that spielberg is just demonic because of his complacency like his like you contrast him with a guy like uh like cameron you know his he is he is at the top he isn't he's supposed to be an artist you know and he has he's been he's been to the top of power he's he's hung out with presidents he knows what's there and every one of his films is devoted to telling everyone especially in like the last 10 years or so that 1:1:13 everything is basically uh as it should be like a pan glossy and best of all possible worlds and i don't know how you can have his ability his connection to power and his connection to honestly horrifying figures like his dreamworks uh partner david geffen and put that out there without any kind of uh of awareness it seems like he's these movies exist to to to lull you and uh yeah that's why i said that maybe his most doom have i addressed the biden stimulus bill yet i people have been asking that i 1:2:46 really don't know what we're supposed to say about it i mean i guess the only thing i would like to say about it maybe we'll talk about in the show is we're seeing people act like oh fdr is back baby neoliberalism is over uh very very puzzling i i do not understand this i mean i guess i understand it people want to they want to imagine if they're in media if they're in left media they want to imagine that they're having an influence on things like yep we did this we we pushed him left or something but it seems like it's it's like we have gotten to a point where where they've starved the grassroots of the economy so much that that stimulus was like just necessary to keep the ***** water wheels turning uh and the idea that it is some sort of permanent new new a new consensus that is somehow durable and is going to be uh able to 1:3:47 resist the inevitable pressure to like uh to reinforce uh neoliberalism i it seems it seems unsupported i mean just writing people checks literal least you could do and more importantly it doesn't actually change power relationships in any significant way and that's what you actually have to look at if they pass the pro act that'd be one thing if they passed the pro act i might drop the monocle out of my eye a little bit but i ain't holding my breath but the good news is none of it has anything to do with me so or you or anybody we can't really do anything about it i mean yeah like the cobra premium thing is a perfect example oh my god they're paying everybody's cobra premiums that's just an insanely giant just uh check to the ***** insurance industry that so that's not you're not changing anything you're just you're literally buying off okay i'm going to log off here we'll be back next week to talk about the last two chapters and wednesday of reconstruction and then hopefully we'll be back on friday to do another hangout stream maybe have uh chris we'll see 1:4:50

full of some things that are promises **Music playing** slow down you move too fast you got to make the morning last just kicking down the cobblestones looking for fun and feeling groovy feeling feeling **Music playing** even groovy hello lamppost what you know and i've come to watch your power flowing ain't you got no rhymes for me oh yeah oh no i thought i changed the setting in there i can change that now 0:1:17 though did that work was i able to update it yes i was able to update it haha look at me look at me hacking the gibson i hacked the damn gibson now i can't play any shooting fast games they're too scary i know people make fun of me for that but it's not so much that i'm actually scared i am an adult it's that it just i mean it's meant to make you feel in some way attacked i mean that's how you know what to do who your enemies and your allies are in the game and that's just a that is a bad vibe 0:2:18 that's all there is to it it's just a bad vibe i think it's not that i'm actually afraid of but you know video game fans have to say things like that to justify their frankly childish obsessions because they know as much as anybody who is addicted to the worst aspects of our mass culture know that it's all gruel it's all bad for you it's as spiritually carcinogenic as the mass-marketed foodstuffs are physically carcinogenic but you don't want to hear it because who wants to hear that but i understand i'm addicted to a bunch of carcinogens and we're all going to get cancer spiritually and physically but that's okay because we all every moment of our lives have a chance to stop doing that we really do that's what i know more than anything is that and that's why even though i really do think that looked at objectively the human civilization 0:3:21 is doomed in the medium term and all hopes of revolution are doomed in the in any term i i think that that is what the objective reading of conditions will tell you but that is just the determinant to determine skeleton of the past that's just what people did up until now and are going to do and all we can do is base make base our assumptions on what people are doing now and what people are valuing now and how people are living now and that's the only way we can but and that's that's the only way we can create a consensus around understanding the moment because it requires us to filter out any of our emotional truth which is based on like you know spiritual conceptions we have to filter that out we have to it's inevitable and what it does is it shows you a a determined structure that is doomed us but and if you look at it with a dead heart and you try to reason your way to a motivation to fight for anything in the future if you reason your way you won't be able to do it because there is nothing to convince the brain what there is is the fact that there is one other fact that is ignored by this which is every human heart and every human brain is running all day we're all running on programming we're all running according to conditioning but we are also feeling we're feeling as we are doing that and that means that we have with every encounter with the world we have there is a chance for us to have an emotional response to that moment that makes the world we're indifferent makes us perceive the world in a different way and allows us to act from different motivations and the ones that have been imprinted on us by the culture the superstructure that is determined by an economic and that means that they're in every moment is the opportunity for anything to happen including uh the full redemption of the human race because it's made up of humans and you have to live it subjectively you can't look at it at a dry uh descriptive because the dry description lacks the an entire half of human experience which is emotional truth which is what gives birth to spiritual understandings of the world that allow you to operate from different emotional engines orient yourself around different conceptions of good and bad because what looks like the end of humanity only looks that way because we're talking about a structure that has been determined over time and has been over determined through every reinforcing victory of capitalism in the a stimulus response nexus where the own where the vast majority of people no matter what they think they believe in are operating in every moment from a narrow pleasure pain uh decision tree determined not by what is what what pleasure and pain is in a human context in a human species context in a global like organic context in a narrow individual pleasure sense pleasure and pain receptor sense the thing that it reinforces our illusion that we are separate and that we have separate interests and that we need to have things like capitalism in order to bring our separate interests together and negotiate them and and work through them we did we did have to find humanity through this process of in individualization but now we've reached the point of maximal atomization where we have to transition back to a collective understanding of human value and if you have a collective understanding of human value you are oriented towards a pleasure that is not personal pleasure and a pain is not personal pain and that allows for the sort of sacrifice and the sort of commitment that we don't have now and that has not dominated the modern uh left-wing and populist movements for the simple reason that the sufficient uh globalized consciousness and technological sophistication to allow for that hadn't happened we had to get here and now we're here and that means that we every moment have the freedom to try to find connection and if we do find it if we're able to maintain a psychic connection to others that that we that breaks up the individuated cycle of 0:8:31 self-love and self-loathing that drives us towards indulgence and away from reality uh if we break that up then we can act from different principles we can act differently which means that the structural conditioning that has doomed us to can participate in this slow wind down of human existence into an annihilation can be interrupted but only for us and that and but the important thing is that even if it's for you then the fact that the structure looks impregnable the fact that it looks like there's no hope it doesn't matter because winning no matter matters no longer matters you're not cons you're not worried about personally surviving you're not worried about your line or legacy or your world impact being positive you're just trying to act for what you understand emotionally to be a greater good i mean i'm not going to say that i feel that way all the time i largely don't but i understand that it's there and 0:9:34 i understand that if i have it in mind when i'm like caught in any kind of decision crisis that i can use it to push through and not be left to despair and be paralyzed by my and if you feel that way and you can you can look at this structure this this determines uh machinery that is inextricably bound to lead to the annihilation of the human race you can enliven it with possibility because you know in yourself that you can act differently and feel differently than you did you can look at the person that you thought you were and what you thought was possible and say oh i am no longer that person i mean obviously we're always changing we're never the same person but there is a fantasy of the self is a fantasy of continuity and when you have 0:10:35 an emotional spiritual experience you can look back and see the discontinuity and recognize that person is not really you in a real sense and that means that you are now a different person and that means you live in a different reality and that means that the the the uh over-determined doom around you is possibility because if enough people act from species understanding from connection to from a spiritualized desire to re bring back together the human race then you will be able to change all this ***** the only reason the reason it looks doomed is not because of any of the actual technological uh physical structures that we've done to this planet it's not even the global warming that's poisoning us that's setting the clock we are determining our 0:11:38 faint because we are allowing these structures to push us forward towards our because we can't conceive of doing anything other than seeking our own pleasure we cannot imagine anything meaning anything to us more than that and so we can only try to put off thinking of death by indulging in the moment and then feeling bad about the indulgence or if we're of a different cast of mind if we're if we're a descendant of puritans like many of us are not even engaging in yourself in pleasure but in ritually abstaining from pleasure in in in hoarding virtue as catherine lewis said either way

you are you are operating from a a ants understanding of of free will everything that is not and if we're all operating from that doom is inevitable but if we know for a fact there are people always who don't operate that way and that even if we operate that day most of the time there are moments when our humanity kicks in and we could at every moment conditions can change because we can never predict specifically how conditions will change in such a way to unleash a spiritual explosion a a chain reaction of spiritual enlightenment that changes the axis of earth and puts you in a different timeline a timeline where all that stuff that looked in the rearview mirror like capitalism settling its tendrils around the human humanity's throat the the terminator bringing itself into skynet working itself to ***** consciousness so they can annihilate everything it doesn't look like that anymore it looks like oh this is what had to happen for us to all to be able to know one another we couldn't the the sheer geography and time kept humanity for the vast majority of its existence from truly understanding itself to be a species technology while it has alienated us from one another through through capitalist dominion over or the capitalist algorithm of of profit literally stripping our souls but it has also brought us into closer connection to each other and better able to conceive of abstracted humans strangers as people as things we are we can recognize now in a way thanks to that technology in a way we never could before and that means that all that stuff that looked like it's capitalism killing us it was actually capitalism allowing us to to awaken to our destiny but that's only if you feel that a change in yourself if you feel that that change is possible by knowing it happened to you you can't reason your way there no i am not all or nothing on technology uh i've never been all or nothing on technology that would be absurd like if the unabomber had a podcast uh i've just said that i have tried to highlight the specific way that capital that technology has been used to strip us fully of our humanity but it's also connecting us the way that it was promised to as always culture beckons us with the liberatory potential of technology which exists while hiding that the hidden the invisible hand of capitalism that is going to bend it towards its will so anyway that's all the way of talks of setting up an introduction to the last two chapters of eric founder's reconstruction a era that it seems especially as you read the last two chapters to have been determined america's combination of free land in the west uh subjection to a london-based global trade order hugely important um and just good old-fashioned american racism which was generated by uh by the realities of the casted labor of the south meant that it couldn't have gone differently but that's because we're looking at it uh we're looking at a failure of spirituality we're looking at a failure of uh of the heart and so of course it looks like it could have been any other way but i think we've talked in the past going through this book points where there could have been difference uh and and i do really think benjamin butler succeeding abraham lincoln is a thing that could have significantly shifted the direction of america's political development not in a way that would have put us in some flying car utopia right now but in a much you know it is possible to imagine a less dire moment and and and there is a reality there is a possible of a world that is not this dire and even if it's still dire and even if we would all if we were there now in in that other world does exist of course the people there now are also feeling miserable and hopeless probably and like capitalism is doomed unless of course you know they're in the middle of the grand reckoning that would have been kicked off by the crisis of capitalism at the in the early 19th 20th century the one uh marx predicted like marx's crisis of capitalism happened it happened from 1914 to 1945 and capitalism won that and we've had to deal with that ever since maybe that goes differently who knows it's all stuff i'd like to talk about in some form i really do want to do a lot with the idea of an alternative civil war just as like a ritual practice for myself to imagine differences to imagine uh moments where that passion that is born of recognition overwhelms there's a section here uh in i don't have i didn't write it down unfortunately uh there's a section in this part of the book where it talks about benjamin butler uh giving a speech on the house floor maybe i can find it online on behalf of 1875 or 1877. uh **Music playing** and in it he talks about how he was a uh all right let me see hold on a second i this this is not good radio i'm sure i'm sorry i'm very sorry about this i really want to find it though damn it i should have written down i did a okay i think i found it here it is okay i find it all right so he's describing a uh a civil war battle that included black troops uh and it was a violent affair that saw a lot of dead uh 500 uh uh black troops died in this battle uh and here it goes so he's describing it it's it's happened uh they fight they die uh the north i believe wins the battle there in a space not wider than the clerk's desk and 300 yards long lay the dead bodies of 543 of my colored comrades fallen in defense of their country who had offered up their lives to uphold its flag and its honor as a willing sacrifice and as i rode along among them guiding my horse this way in that way lest he should profane with his hooves what seemed to me the sacred dead and as i looked on their bronzed faces upturned in the signing shining sun to heaven as if in mute appeal against the wrongs of the country for which they had given their lives and whose flag had only been to them a flag of stripes on which no star of glory had ever shown for them feeling i had wronged them in the past and believing what was the future of my country to them among my dead comrades there i swore to myself a solemn oath may my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if i ever fail to defend the rights of these men who have given their blood for me and my country this day and for their race forever and god helping me i will keep that oath now of course that's demagoguery and flustery and blummery uh and he was a politician looking to uh he and he was a crook and he was a spoilsman but he also fought in a battle and saw people die in front of him and i don't know why you can't explain his career the most the easiest way to explain his career a guy who was a copperhead democrat who voted for the south's democratic candidate john breckenridge in 1860 to becoming a radical republican uh defender of black liberty the rest of his career even though he was a congressman from massachusetts who very easily could have maintained his career by uh kissing the ass of the irish which he did and who by the way were not terribly interested in uh ex-slaves benjamin butler fascinating character i'm gonna i think i'm gonna take a break i said from doing the reading club after this week uh i'm still gonna we'll do another one like i said i might not want to do uh reconstruction again but we'll we'll see uh i'll take requests but i really want to read his autobiography i'm very excited about it he wrote a book and it's called butler's book which is a great name all right so while i was talking about how you know things could have been different most of the real moments of difference are at the beginning of the war or at the beginning of reconstruction like i said you put butler in there after lincoln with a absolute willingness to confiscate southern land to defend the rights of former slaves at gunpoint maybe you change the dynamic specifically the economic dynamic whereby uh black rights are protected not by the suffrage of the north but by black political power expressed through land ownership it's a real possibility but uh any chance of things to be different was i think largely dead in our timeline by uh the 1873 because it was i i would argue the 1873 panic in the economy which is what they used to call uh recessions or depressions panics the panic of 1873 which led to the most prolonged it was called the great depression until we had it was 65 months of economic contraction the longest in american history and it meant that reconstruction was doomed uh that was that put the nail in the heart talk about racism racism of course was a huge huge huge huge huge huge problem the economic interests of northern uh finance capital hugely problematic the liberal ideology of the republican party leadership the collapsing economy made all those things uh insurmountable in another economic context they might have been they might have been and i think we've talked a bit about ways that you see alternatives thing alternative structures emerge that in a great in a more robust economic environment which was totally possible this stuff these things were always man-made they were always decisions by finance to maintain control of the money supply that was what led to every sustained recession and depression before so this man-made this total shoot yourself in the foot economic collapse which was started when uh somebody wouldn't when people just like what happens with all these ponzi schemes which is what all american history is all american economic history is ponzi schemes the uh

manifest destiny the jeffersonian conception of yeoman freedom is a ponzi scheme because it always it serves it always assumes more in that formulation land because remember you don't have one kid in this time you don't have one kid nobody has one kid and then that one kid keeps the land that they live on people have pop populations get bigger people immigrate which means that if everybody to be a yeoman farmer there has to always be more land and everything is built on that premise and all of our financial instruments and all of our economic activity america has ever had has been built on that premise and these ponzi schemes all collapse when the inputs fail and the railroad boom of the post-war era was entirely generated by a cycle of inflated stock offerings by these under the these uh railroad companies that had no cash flow no none of them were making money what they were doing was printing stock and then they would sell new stock and then use that to buy to pay off dividends to the old stock but it was okay because there was always more money going in because the railroads were the chosen method of economic expansion during that period because remember the civil war starts this big explosion in uh capital capacity it has to go somewhere it went to railroads and there's plenty of land to do it but the thing is there's not necessarily that much money because a lot of these railroads went to nowhere nobody was on them and they didn't do that and they ended up becoming um giant white elephants but it was okay because you could always sell more stock and then use that stock sale to get more uh to get dividends for existing investors so that they'll buy more stock well eventually you put some out and people are like look i it's already elsewhere it started actually in europe because at this point the united states is still not the center of the global economic capitalist machinery it's still europe so it starts in europe but once europe stops sending money over here once europe stops investing in these bonds people start calling it in and the whole thing collapses uh and about it took until 78 to bottom out and it still it still kept going uh from there what this led to was a price drop among other things i mean obviously huge loss of employment uh people lost their land and their homes because of for a giant drop in prices uh in all sectors this ruined agricultural uh small farming and this led to the creation of the grange uh which was a farmers cooperative union first started out in the west it moved throughout the country uh it also lent that urban laborers started to get more militant and started to organize uh and tried to demand more of capitalism and this led the urban middle class who had been the and always were the ideological brain stem of the republican party to uh become super reactionary to start realizing that oh maybe we don't all have the same interests maybe there are producers and laborers or capitalists and laborers and if so i know where my interests lie it's not with the dirty laborers i am even if i am a mind worker i know that my allegiance is the capital because these people are more these are my people and my livelihood depends on the system that they have created so you see a 0:30:12 rise of trade organizations and associations political groups uh ***** private armies and militias formed of middle-class fancy boys in the cities to put down a lot of the rebellions that come up as a result of people uh fighting against their admiseration and it led to a movement in this northern states to restrict democracy and also to yeah to limit budgets limit taxes uh extend terms of office change the jury system uh and the north started imposing vagrancy laws which if you guys remember is what the south did in the black codes after the war to try to keep control of the black labor force this is a way to keep control of the northern white labor force is to say it's essentially illegal for you not to so congress tries to add some ***** greenbacks to the system throw some more cash into the economy get some liquidity going but ***** grant stung by all the criticism he had received from the liberal republicans who had bolted uh to support horus greeley in 72 vetoes it reducing any chance of 0:31:14 a liquidity injection into the economy and as a result of all this the 1970 the 1874 midterms are a d or a democratic landslide it sees the democrats retake congress for the first time since the civil war uh they win governorships throughout the north they get they become a democrat is the becomes governor of massachusetts for the first time there had never been one before that uh and what this did was not lead to the south the democrats now becoming once again the national natural uh party of governance which had been before the civil war it creates a 20-year period of stalemate and what and what it was was 20 years of misery at the base of america the lower you were to to precarity the worst things were in this country but that but 0:32:18 at the top of the elite uh parties that these base people voted up voted for it was a bipartisan commitment uh to hard money deflationary um orthodoxy which was the exact opposite of what the people who actually voted for these parties largely wanted of course middle-class people you know a lot of them they were committed to hard money for material interests but a lot of these voters wanted something else but because of the fact that the the suffering people of the country were divided by race and geography and the conditions of their labor and the uh their whereas the bourgeois were unified on all those fronts it meant that the only uh parties to actually have influence at the top level of government and so people voted instead because 0:33:19 they were foreclosed they were foreclosed from addressing their actual pain they were forced instead to fight on cultural geographic lines things like uh parochial education and catholic church things like white supremacy in the south things like the regional uh loyalties of the civil war if this sounds familiar to anybody this is exactly what we have now where our working class which had reached an articulation sufficient to influence government in the in the great depression has been de-atomized into total uh total passivity so that is why matt carp is 100 correct and that the politics of our moment are not germany in the 30s they are the united states because it's the 0:34:20 united states in the so the republicans who had set up reconstruction the way they had on the idea of free labor ideology uh realized over the course of the depression and the ride as uh working class militancy rose around them uh that you know what free free labor uh that's not actually it you know there are contrasting influences uh i'm sorry uh interests there is actually a conflict of interest between labor and capital which of course was the presiding view of the slave crates of the south that's one thing they were demystified on is that they had cr they built a racial category to allow them to hyper exploit their their laboring class and in so doing uh they but because it was a minority that they felt they could control they felt that that was uh 0:35:23 sustainable uh and northern industrial middle class people thought no that's absurd uh labor and capital if they are uh on equal footing are uh seeking the same thing we're all trying to make each other better off of course this is all integrated by the ideas of sustenance autonomy in the in this in the in the land which is gone now um **Music playing** so now the northern republicans decide to give away with free labor ideology entirely and uh decide that i guess i'm basically an industrial version of the uh planters i guess george fitzhugh was right i guess we all we are all are either masters or slaves and we need to come into harmony with uh that understanding we need to say okay i'm a master therefore i will be a good master or okay i'm a slave and they started organizing their politics and their culture around trying to 0:36:24 promote that idea because they had been disillusioned by the reality of capitalism after the this definitely meant that they decided to abandon so while the democrats actually kind of lost a lot of their racial edge because they could argue now about the depression they didn't have to just use white supremacy to try to get the uh groups to vote for them they had this depression which they could just blame on the other side because they'd been in power when it started so they they focused on race less but republicans in the north became more racially conscious and more because they were doing away with the free free labor ideology which that was always a fantasy and which is incompatible with the rising class so in the south uh grant lets 0:37:31 these southern democratic machines start taking power wherever they want even by doing rigged elections and their the government refuses to embarrass depositors who lost their savings of the freedmen's savings bank when it collapses uh they just they harden their hearts to the whole thing uh and of course the depression is worse than the south than it is in the north because the economic level of activity is lower uh and there's a huge collapse of course in the the railroad uh industry they have there but then a huge cro drop in crop prices which is the basis for the entire goddamn economy uh and the white yeoman start getting cast off of their land which will make them ready labor uh for the cotton textile mills that start going south in the

1880s and the rising black political class that had gained some level of influence in the south is destroyed by the depression uh the reconstruction governments that still exist are either uh basically powerless in the face of really concerned right resistance like albert ames in mississippi or in south carolina daniel chamberlain uh eugene uh were decided to deal with the rising militancy of the whites by just going along with whatever they wanted and uh and in chamberlain uh in south carolina starts he reduces the size of the militia which is largely black uh removes black judges he tries to go bring back conflict leasing and cut education uh and what of course were black people gonna do vote democrat they were held hostage as they have been uh ever since the reality of black political organization in this country is that they because they are the uh the negative in the political imagination like the cultural political imagination of one of the two parties at any given time because white supremacy sort of has to ex has to be the organizing architecture of the most extreme version of american uh labor relations because hierarchy has to be maintained somehow as we saw with the civil war if you if you change the the uh hierarchy if you change social relations you undermine the economic engine of capitalism and this is what we're seeing here in these last chapters is capitalism reasserting itself by reasserting white supremacy so that means that no matter how much the party whatever it is at the time that represents black interests however how much it betrays them sells them out for other interests ignores them they have nowhere else to go because the other party is defined against their interests and that's what's so funny about the democrat plantation ship from republicans it's like you're the reason that there is this because you're only your existence is predicated on this so as a result of this the small burgeoning black middle class in the south just turns from politics completely and you see the beginning of what turns into the uh booker washington model of self-improvement and political quietism that's going to be very influential as uh jim crow really solidifies at the turn of the century uh and meanwhile the white democrats have decided ***** the new departure ***** kissing ass they're trying to get black votes they won't vote for us anyway let's just go all in on white supremacy and it worked in large part because by this point the republican party has nothing to offer the suffering poor white neither party is offering any real uh amelioration of the conditions of the depression meanwhile the democrats are offering lower taxes which hey who doesn't want to pay less taxes and like a white racial system where you're on top because the the the reality of depression the reality of economic collapse is that everybody is panicked by definition hyper aware of their precarity and the democrats were able to pitch to the white people of the south in this situation it is a zero-sum game one group the white or the black will suffer and be dominated in these conditions who who will it be and because there is no real social connection between the two groups because it had been forbidden by slavery uh in the absence of any and even the grange movement which was uh not racially motivated in most of the country and and played a uh a role in promoting cooperation uh along axis of you know actual economic oppression elsewhere in the south the grange was completely dominated by the planters and agricultural interests which elsewhere meant a yeoman farmer in the southern grange meant a planter because their power was never so the the democratic pitch in the to the electorate after the after 74 is white supremacy low taxes control of black labor uh and it led to a huge string of victories throughout the south uh edmond davis edwin davis we talked about who was a uh an effective reconstruction governor of texas who cracked down on the klan and and protected black rights successfully got crushed not because of the voters of the people who had uh put him in changing their minds but because of a huge influx of white throughout the south two thirds of the house seats in the uh in congress went to the democrats and of course the other thing that helped this a huge wave of violence in the black belt the murder of black and white republican office holders the attempt in louisiana to install a governor through a military occupation that had to be put down by the federal government point and the crackdown on these literal insurrectionists horrified northern republican respectable opinion it was seen as tyrannical oh my god look at the tyranny that you're doing on our american citizens who just want to shoot people and prevent them from voting and in the calls of power everybody basically decided in the republican party that reconstruction had been a big bungle waste of time grant actually said to his cabinet that he thought the 15th amendment had been a mistake that had not benefited the blacks at all that suffered that suffrage had been a mistake uh and they also reasoned well we're going to lose power in the south but trying to hold power in the south alienates whites in the north meanwhile if we let this democrats retake the south and we are able to hold our position in the north because we're not now vulnerable to have uh the charge of being soft on blacks uh level at us we can get the north and if it's what if and if it's a solid north versus a solid south we win because the north has more people and more votes and more patronage more money and everything they were willing to make so well in the uh well in the last years of the grand administration uh the the republicans could only manage to pass a watered-down civil rights bill that ended up getting uh declared unconstitutional in 1883 anyway even though it had never really been able to have any effect because it always it all depended on being able to file federal charges that was always the uh the ameliorative uh mechanism in these bills and why they were all dead letters before they were even ***** published because that ability is a function of one's access to civil society which but they were much more effective and much more efficient at passing a bill that returned species payment in four years

meaning even though the depression was uh wiping over the country wiping out value leading people with no ability to sustain themselves uh with little debate uh and full unanimity almost the republican party passes a bill to say hey we're gonna be uh getting rid of all money that isn't backed by gold which means retracting further the money supply strangling the economy in the now the republicans obviously were horrified by the uh by the returns of the midterm when the democrats swept but uh in the ohio governor's race where a democrat was running on cheap money was running on a greenback platform uh the republicans were able to cobble together a new strategy for winning in the north even in depression behind their candidate rutherford b hayes rutherford b governor after this uh it was assault it was a very close race and hayes won by less than a percent but he was able to win by holding on to the rural republican hinterland of ohio where everybody was a republican because that's the party that's that was the party that hadn't been shooting at them during the war they fought in basically like in the rural parts of these of the north and in the rural non-uh mountainous parts of the south your uh devotion to the party was simply the fact that you fought a war against those people you're not voting for them you don't need any other reason it's pure identity politics around being a veteran or a family member of a veteran of the war because the the plain peasants of the south and north were the cannon but uh hayes was able to win because in addition to those voters he brought in that urban middle class who was horrified of the idea of the soft money populism and also because the hayes had stirred up anti-catholic sentiment about parochial education and uh priests getting government funds government subsidy to uh whip up the staunchly protestant middle class who of course hated the immigrant hordes from ireland who were in the city in germany too mostly germany really uh the catholic ones they were largely catholic cincinnati's part of that catholic triangle of milwaukee st louis and uh and cincinnati where the bavarians all moved so the recipe for northern success for the republicans is drop reconstruction entirely so that you don't bring up so that racism isn't an issue and you don't have to worry about people voting on race whip up the urban protestants against the uh the catholic hordes uh and rely on the bloody shirt and the sacrifices of gettysburg to get the the veterans to vote for you and their families and that meant that they didn't need to worry about reconstruction anymore it in fact south now in mississippi poor albert ames tries to run a fair election the uh northern governor who wanted to see uh blacks get political rights but was too detached ineffective and uh unsupported by the federal government to allow it to happen uh he got he essentially had to stand back while an incredibly violent election saw mass violence against voters and the destruction of ballot boxes stuffing pure fraud complete fraud but there was nothing else to do because for the north to aid mississippi is to hurt them in ohio and if it's ohio versus mississippi they know who to vote for they know rather who where the votes and the money uh and the and the logic of power lies and so mississippi had to go their fraudulent election was recognized and uh reconstruction or reconstruction ended there uh and at this point there's no other possibility the structures the incentive structures are all in the direction of the sacrifice of the freedmen all the power you guys just talking about so the last chapter uh talks about the real turning point the the historical sort of coda on reconstruction uh the 76th presidential campaign so grant is by this point completely tired by scandal whiskey ring and whatnot even though he could have run for a third term and apparently kind of wanted to run for a third term uh he was at that point kind of tainted uh james g blaine the man from maine the powerful former speaker of the house also so the republicans nominate as a compromise candidate the guy who'd saved their ass in ohio rutherford b hayes he runs on good government blandishments almost completely ignores reconstruction uh and before the election they even in congress repeal the southern homestead act so that no not even any possibility exists for uh for ex-slaves to get land and so that all that rich timber and mining area can be exploited by corporate interests the democrats nominate new york governor samuel tilden who is essentially an avatar of wall street he is the personification of finance capital who supported the south of the civil war and were a the backbone of the democratic party's uh financial network uh obviously the democracy was the party of like the the simple mechanic of the cities but uh it was always there was a third party candidate there was like a ralph nader type guy peter cooper a philanthropist and uh industrialist in new york uh who founded the cooper union uh and who uh was who ran on a greenback party campaign or who ran with the greenback party which wanted to inject liquidity into the economy and not see the rise of a new slaveocracy riding over all of humanity not just so there's a governor's race at the same time as the presidential race in south carolina between the daniel chamberlain the democrat or the republican who just governed to appease the the democratic establishment of the south against wade hampton a former confederate general uh even all of camp chamberlain's blandishments in smoochery uh of the planter elite didn't help them they still ran hamilt hampton against them because these ***** there is no degree to which that they will ever accept your capitulation they want you destroyed they want their man to be in there though happy to take your uh your cowardice and and they were they're happy to to uh compromise you but they have no loyalty to you and they will destroy you and um so what's interesting in south carolina is that for reasons we've talked about uh that are specific to the economy of rice plantations which dominated in that part of the country or that part of the south as opposed to large cotton plantations that are closer that are in like the deep south uh black political power is in anywhere in the south was most articulated uh and most robust in south carolina now part of that is because south carolina has one of the last highest percentages of black population but that's not the only reason mississippi also i believe mississippi at that point had a black majority in terms of mere pop of real population uh but the majority of former slaves in mississippi were former cotton plantation slaves and as we've talked about deskilled it is unspecialized labor uh which uh means that there is less individual bargaining power within a by individual cotton laborers rice planting is much more specialized which means that there is more skill involved which means there's a greater degree of leverage that can be applied there's a greater degree of autonomy of labor in conditions and in life for the people who work within it which meant that when that war ended cotton cotton labor is because it is unskilled but it's also uncapital intensive which meant that the ruling planter elite mainly kept their stuff they kept control of their land because they didn't owe that much basically but uh but like sugar planting rice planting is capital intensive or no i'm sorry uh it's not capital intensive but it is specialized which means that there was no incentive for capital to go in there because they couldn't get enough they couldn't get enough surplus basically out of the labor that you could get in the cotton south so uh there's much more worker power organized worker militancy and uh effective ability to negotiate in south carolina among south carolina rice plantation workers during this campaign rice workers walk off the job for higher wages and demanding cash instead of script and the black power structure that did exist in many of these countries black judges black sheriffs refused to uh repress the strikers and in fact backed them up and it led to the planters backing down and this shows that there was the potential for per independently expressed black political power at the grassroots but it was it ended up being too isolated but the places it was able to hold on were places where the conditions of labor before the war determined a different uh power dynamic but even with this and even though south carolina actually sees election violence perpetrated by blacks and not just against them uh the sheer overwhelming force of the violence unleashed by wade hampton's red shirt militias is overpowering and even though chamberlain gets more votes than any republican in south carolina history he still loses to hampton in an election that is of course wracked with fraud and fake balloting but is ratified as part of the greater deal that we're going to get to because the haze tilden election ends with tilden winning in the popular vote and winning many northern states which had not gone democratic since the civil war but having disputed results in south carolina florida and louisiana which allow for the republicans to claim they had won uh and it leads to a big a big conflict people arm on both sides threatening to march on washington to impose their guy but at the end of the day business didn't want that

because business controls both of these parties so there's no real conflict the conflict is all made up the conflict is all a cultural uh pantomime for these silly uh sports fans these blue and gray ***** who think this matters at the top everyone knows what has to be done and so congress passes a law to allow an electoral commission 0:59:18 because when you have to reveal the lack of democracy in a system you do it by appealing to the authority of something that is supposedly transcendent of politics like the gold standard or an electoral commission which is made up of members of congress and supreme court justices and there's a bunch of jockeying and grift going on with getting the votes there it ends with hayes being chosen by the commission and hayes mollifying the democrats in congress who attempt to obstruct his now his uh inauguration by signaling with uh probably things that he didn't put down in writing but also through appointments to appointments to his cabinet that he was gonna end reconstruction and with reconstruction off the table with troops promised in words or not to be removed from the south the uh the democrats give up their 1:0:21 obstruction and haze is inaugurated and so as reconstruction ends in the south as redemption as the southern democrats called it spreads across those those states and troops get pulled out so that there's no appeal to federal authority by any former slave if their rights are violated they gotta go to court good luck with that there's in the north the great railroad strike of night of 1877 which sees among the same republic sees a huge switch in opinion among republican middle-class voters and intellectuals and politicians in their attitude towards the use of federal troops against american citizens they've been horrified when sheridan marched into louisiana in the new orleans and stopped uh the insurgents from taking power there uh they were a gas that uh uh when the clan was broken up by the army in uh north carolina they uh were absolutely cheering on the army to be used against the strikers not 1:1:23 enough lead in the world to be in fact a lot of these people start forming their own private armies either funding or creating middle-class military uh organizations to to fight what they now recognize is a class war and if there's a class war so well the uh the republicans had always balked at doing any kind of concentrated military occupation of the south they immediately started building armories in northern cities to ensure that if there's any labor unrest the military could put them down and this is this railroad strike is the real coming out party for american labor is a political or a organized political movement and it would grow over time to challenge the liberal order but sadly and tragically it would do that without the benefit of this 1:2:27 huge group of american workers who could have been part of that uh that movement the former slaves uh the mobilization the the recognition that comes with with the increased uh social intimacy uh came too late to change the power balance of power but if friedman had been more supported in asserting their political power on the ground in the grassroots then there might have been more robust institutions of black political power to connect with the labor movement when so while the uh well labor is being suppressed brutally in the north the south southern governments that are now redeemed uh put in institutions of government that essentially tried to undo all the progress that uh had been done during reconstruction uh the the school funding the the tax uh the infrastructure spending all reduced taxes cut 1:3:29 spending forced to be reduced reduction in the ability of states to borrow cutting land taxes for the elite but raising poll and license taxes exempting people not for a x amount of property but for in itemized personal property and what's a coincidence the itemized personal property that's tax exempt is the kind of property only used by planters because unlike anything that andrew jackson andrew johnson dreamed of putting uh the uh planters back in power in the south guaranteed that the poor whites that johnson claimed to support uh black political power is broken by uh the create the institution of poll taxes uh widespread just pull fraud because democrats 1:4:30 controlled the polling uh states and the election boards and gerrymandering which we know now there were signs though that something else could have happened that there are there were meaningful political coalitions that could have emerged because even this late in the game even after reconstruction had disillusioned so many poor whites in the south away from uh supporting reconstruction uh in the in virginia in 1879 a uh a roof a fusion group called the readjusters who were led by a former confederate general and railroad promoter william mahomes who promised to readjust the state's debt so that they could increase education funding which of course has been kept low by the democratic governance and which was powered by a voting coalition of poorer whites and former slaves won uh and while they were in power they funded schools abolished poll taxes raised taxes on corporations and reinforced 1:5:32 black civil rights uh later in the 1880s populist republican funeral effusionists won in north carolina before being eventually uh repressed and and uh isolated by a unified coordinated democratic party but the fact that this latest that you see viable political uh coalitions that are able to persist in power indicates to me that the possibility that the richness of possibility is much greater than looking backward can sometimes so these reconstruction governments these these redeemed governments also reinforced control over black labor by more than anything wildly increasing the penalties for petty theft and bringing in or either reinstating or expanding the use of convict contract labor if the private regime of power over black labor was abolished 1:6:35 by slave by the 13th amendment if the assertion of rights by by ex-slaves and by the progress that uh reconstruction had been able to make in in uh racial relations made it impossible to do full state violence and full state coercion against all of black labor the law could be used to find a subsection a necessary subsection of black labor

who could be compelled in slavery basically and that's what conflict leasing was the exact the exemption in the 13th amendment for involuntary labor labor labor for involuntary as a condition of servitude essentially allowed them to get what they needed they didn't get what they wanted because there was successful attempts at asserting uh black rights throughout reconstruction that uh and was often aided by support in the north that vacillated but at crucial points came through they couldn't do what they wanted but the next next thing was creating huge population of people who were not free because of their prisoner status which was essentially arbitrary because all of these notions of legal power legal reality were fraudulent which is where you get this huge alienation between the southern black community and notions of legal propriety it's very funny how one of the persistent stereotypes of blacks is their criminality when that is in fact what every element of white society is organized to produce they're they're criminal because they are a subject people and so of course they don't and and that is a condition of that uh they're not going to accept the validity of your institutions why would they them so uh lean laws give landlords the claim over all the cotton cop that is produced even over the demands of merchants which means that uh all the risk of of a crop whether or not it's going to be dis harmed by uh by some sort of uh agricultural failure or whether the price is going to drop all the risk of growing crops is put on the shoulders of the of the workers and merchants not on and there's an interesting phenomenon where the so one of the big conditions of this redemption and the and the depression is that uh white small holders lose their land at a huge clip uh and they become the base for a southern working class to labor in the cotton mills that start going up in the south in the 1880s because before the 1880s the economic model in the south was we we make the ***** cotton but ***** all that making it into anything stuff that caught that's too much that's too much capital i would like to keep all that capital please i would like to sit on that capitol as the as the plantation owner what it's not my business if you have to bring together capital to do things like create a uh a system of factories and why would you want to bring together capital when you are self-perpetuating machine of it so you had to look north or and certainly across the atlantic to england for that but the growth of finance capital in america means that finance gap will go south which means the in the incentive to to invest grows especially as labor militancy in the north grows and these dispossessed white yeoman become the new working class of these mills and there is an un spoken alliance between the uh plantation owners and the mill owners that blacks will work the land as along with the whites who have to share crop but that um working in the mills is white work which just very helpfully leads to a uh the races can be literally um placed against each other in any and this is how the failure of reconstruction kind of makes america's politics more reactionary

than it would have to be by taking out of political participation this group of people 1:11:43 whose sense of social solidarity is greater than anybody in the country because they don't have anywhere to go they don't have anybody to sell out they don't have any they don't have any luxury of believing the fantasies of american ideology now of course i don't mean that universally but i mean in aggregate and by taking that out by taking that group of people out of politics you make it more reactionary and you keep it dominated by a mystified working class and a ferociously capitalistic bourgeoisie and that is where we are now uh it certainly does make andrew johnson the biggest idiot in the universe because not only did he not get his narrow goal of becoming a two-term president but his beloved white uh white poor uh farmers of the 1:12:45 south got completely but their decision to choose race over uh over economics was made for them in many ways by the fact that the republican party as reconstruction were on ceased to offer an alternative what else should you be voting for there is nothing else to seek except for some lower taxes and okay so that is uh eric foner's reconstruction i i thought that was pretty fun good book uh it's a classic for a reason folks uh next week i don't know what we'll talk about but i don't think we're gonna do any reading for it but i'll be here on wednesday and of course i'll be here on friday too um but yeah reconstruction i hope going through that you see all that there 1:13:46 are there are always chances there's always openings because what we got isn't the worst we could have gotten either things could have gone even worse than they did which means butler man they offered him the vp spot god damn it i'm not in oregon shut the ***** up god man now you're gonna just not stop saying it because you love trolling the modern booker t washington uh mike rowe yeah i mean i'll say it now i guess i'm in california congratulations trust the plan indeed that's one thing 1:14:47 they get right is that great awakening is always going to be the only thing you can hope for because nothing that you can sketch out in dry mechanical language can convince so that's not what you carry with you what you carry with you is a dream of awakening and yeah that is uh that's cringe to talk about that's because you're 1:15:48 using something that is not transferable in words you're using a feeling and that is what is uh that's what's propelling the vision forward it's just those guys are all uh deluded weirdos because they're but the thing is we're all diluted we're weirdos we're all isolated we're all trying to feel something and i think we have more ability thanks in part to technology to bring our antennas together than ever before and the cunon really is a proof of how that is possible it's bad example it's not helpful but it's possible you 1:16:52 thing how about you unhost the goddamn thing when i tell you to unhost the ***** thing now i feel like a dang computer hacker learning how to unhost things i'm on hosting things i did it excuse me just getting a little glorped so today i thought i'd do something as a little experiment so i'm going to be recording for tomorrow an 0:2:39 inebriated past haven't done one of those in a while i think the last one was uh upton sinclair and the epic campaign of 1937 uh four and i kind of don't really know what i want to do it on yet and i figured it might be interesting to have a brainstorming session with some of you people and see if you can give me an idea because the problem i always have with inebriated past is i never know what to pick and i kind of have to get sort of shot from a side angle to like be like hey something has to aha me and i thought it'd be interesting if we could do a a little experiment here and see if i could get something that i feel like ah yes if i prepared for that i could by the battle of blair mountain that's an interesting one certainly a rip roaring story that's 0:3:42 for sure uh i've thought about doing the battle of blair mountain before uh oh man something says the spanish civil war to troll all left tendencies i was actually thinking of doing that but then i decided to throw it out there a little bit i don't know because because i kind of want to do the spanish civil war but at the same time it feels a little too big uh and it would be fun though to to troll all the tendencies because i do think you could tell that story in a way to piss off all of the sides historical advocates because you can tell that story in a way that makes the communists look like uh stooges handmaidens of capital and uh a new like the trotskyist nightmare of them as like a bureaucratic state uh working in concert with capital to destroy 0:4:44 uh revolution you can also tell that story is about the anarchist is a bunch of uh undisciplined uh ***** peasant ***** who would and not have been able to organize them but of course the real tragedy is that both of those things were true but also the best stories about both sides were true the people who were in there making the up those uh sides they were for the most part fighting uh under reasonable assumptions it's just that spanish society was so fractured at that point that there was no way for those fissures to be healed in the breach in william jennings brian hmm i mean people 0:5:50 apparently some people listen to the thomas frank episode that might be interesting to go into more detail the thing about uh brian is that he is not like he is what we got instead of a socialist leader you know like we didn't get a real socialist like our our version of him would have been like a debs uh uh but brian was the figure who came out of the uh like the the rural side of american populism uh which was undermined by its parochialism and that's the problem with american populism uh is that it is it was parochial because we didn't have an articulated working class we didn't have one of those made we had this group of people spread across the country in 0:6:51 different conditions of life divided by geography race ethnicity language religion that didn't cohere the way that working classes did anymore in european countries and the fact that you had this at that time massive number of small holding uh farmers i mean you had what before the turn of the century something like 90 of american uh involved in some sort of agriculture uh that was just a it ensured that when we got a like a popular uh common party it did not have the in uh the internal coherence of a labour party like you saw in europe and the fact we already had these parties that were set up we had the democratic and republican parties already extant because 0:7:53 america democratized formally much earlier than europe because there was the land to give away there was the venting the venting steam uh valve of western expansion meant that you by the 1830s at a time when europe was completely gripped in the fist of reaction even the the the franchise in england is is is not uh terribly extended uh during that period in america the uh most states had like a real popular suffrage and that was because of the uh the existence of uh property as a uh arbitrator of social the european part the european uh polities the european uh monarchies couldn't be 0:8:54 given money they couldn't give land away there was no land to give away the land was all spoken for by the ***** elite who validated their rule so formal democracy had to be restrained enclosure would be interesting the marathon of hope you ***** like a whole like a like a whole episode about him the way i did about willach but 0:9:57 maybe that's going back to the civil war uh so maybe there's too many canadians in here we got people talking about tommy douglas and louis i haven't read butler's book yet i think i kind of want to wait until i've read uh um so i might wait and do 0:10:58 that one relatively recently but i think i want to do a different one today or to um uh the german revolution that's an that's another real uh i don't know i would i kind 0:12:1 of think about maybe doing uh doing something that's like sort of broadly about uh that whole interwar period where where the russians try to do their revolution

with the premise in mind that it would lead to a continent-wide revolution that's why they did it ever no one thought that uh russia could sustain itself in a socialist economy absent the intervention of western capital in the form of help from these uh new uh european communist states that were going to emerge and then you saw this failure to ignite across europe and it's not just germany there's a soviet that briefly takes power in hungary uh there's a battle between freikorps and bolsheviks across the uh in the baltic there's a bloody civil war in finland uh which sees of the 0:13:4 pro-bolshevik side and then there's uh strikes and uprisings in france and england and then after that initial and then of course the russians tried to uh invade poland and then once that initial wave subsides you see the birth of fascism as like a political challenge to this new uh force on the continent and then you see uh in countries that are like at the periphery like spain where uh where industrialization has been the least employ uh implemented which is one of the big reasons that anarchism was such a defined tendency in the spanish civil war is because you were dealing with very close to uh to medieval conditions of peasantry in the countrysides places like 0:14:6 catalonia and they were **Music playing** they were not interested in the sort of uh social um uh rationalization process of being turned into proletarians that uh that the more coherent working class of like madrid uh and like the railroad workers and stuff uh were were but then you see this war as part of this battle for power between uh these regimes uh and it really is it's it's a series of defeats it's a series of of defeats 0:15:8 at every point uh even world war ii is essentially a defeat because the conditions 0:15:8 that uh stalin accepts uh at the end of that war are the conditions of the eventual defeat of the soviet union uh and i think that maybe people didn't know that at the time but i think that stalin even uh if he'd known that would have because uh the alternative would have been a conflict with the capitalist world that he was not he didn't have the wherewithal or ability or will because then you have the the cold war which is really a resource war over access to the the colonial underbellies of the western powers which are now having to uh be turned over to native political formations and native political economies and where what what uh network what 0:16:9 global system would they be uh connected into and the the system that that the the soviets uh signed off on with bretton woods and the u.n and everything uh it essentially assumed it guaranteed that over time uh the capitalist west would would strangle uh the communist world which is exactly what happened uh the only thing that could have changed that dynamic was the the uh the challenge the battle for resources which was definitively won and that's why we're living in a world where 0:17:10 we're capital one where where we are uh having to to grapple with that and if capital one and the common ruin is is the likely outcome then what do we try to do with our lives how do we how do we live with that reality without the fantasy of a uh of a deliverance you know and of course that is not to say that we're doomed the human race or us as individuals it means that we are going to have to focus i think on building durable structures to resist uh the the decline that's coming i feel like this is a period of decadence and and inherent decline capital one because no 0:18:13 one in the socialist camp believed in the system by the 70s that's correct and uh the reason for that is because the project that they built was not it required it required a advanced revolution that never happened the project the the bootstrap idea okay it failed europe did not kick off now what do we do the answer of well we're going to compete with europe and we're going to do capitalist uh uh like capital accumulation the way that capitalism does it in this underdeveloped ***** feudal backwater it was viable in that it created a state and it created a state capacity but the state it created was unable to pro to successfully prosecute the global war against capitalism that was its raison debt it couldn't do it it could not fight it effectively and the fact of 0:19:14 that the proof of that and it wasn't anybody's fault uh that i think every i think the bolsheviks were correct in their understanding of the situation in 18 1917 that there had to be a war or that there had to be a uh a a seizure power or else there would be the uh reactionary counter-evolution they were correct about that and they were the only force capable at that moment of carrying off the uh seizure but that was because they thought doing that would spark a global revolution that was the trot that's the notion the trotsky promulgated that allowed them to revise marxism the 0:20:17 way that they did which is always funny when you hear people talk about revisionism with acid in their mouth uh bolshevism was revisionism because they were in russia and who wants to be told you got to sit on your thumbs and they were right that there was not enough uh middle class to stand up to take power in 1917 but then the question is well then why is a revolution worth pursuing in that condition if it means that it will create a situation of general general general war and they have good reason to believe that i did not i've not listened to the wtf with hunter Biden that 0:21:40 sounds fun though he smoked parmesan cheese i i didn't know parmesan looked like i've never done crack so i don't know what crack looks like apparently it's popping 0:22:55 off in belfast again the taiping rebellion might be interesting the taiping rebellion might be interesting because it is very under it's something that's very under uh known about considering how massive it it was they estimated something like 30 million people died it was in the middle of the but it happened the same time the us civil war was happening so uh we all forget uh about it it was happening during one of the opium wars which also it is amazing that it's about a guy the whole thing was a guy who failed his sats and went nutso a failed PMC basically who led 0:23:56 a peasant revolt that uh organized itself around uh all the the uh discontent among the landless hakka peasantry who uh made up the sort of uh rural proletariat or proto-proletariat of china and then ended up being the the bulk of the army that made up favorite pokemon is uh as geodude because of the tweet about geodude 0:25:18 being real and being as strong and being obama's we kind of did watergate on the uh on the g i don't really think i have that much to it is a fascinating story though 0:26:19 is is q dead that's an interesting question it's interesting i think that we can say at least i think it seems pretty clear that it looks like it's splintering uh it looks like you as as you'd imagine it's it's going into factions i don't i don't think people are going back to normal because that's not an option anymore but i think people are going to be finding their own their own sects their own discreet uh reality versions because we are getting to the point where our escape valve into cyberspace is losing its uh power on us as we have to keep cranking up our own emotional reaction in relation 0:27:20 to it we have to deepen the story that we're telling ourselves when we go online and that means we're going to have to start finding deeper and deeper uh parallel realities to create because you know obviously reality is always made up reality is is constructed by the the shared delusion of of the citizenry like the the delusions that we all uh uh perpetuate by virtue of uh their hegemony in our lives and they we operate from those principles without even thinking about it uh but that one big delusion we've been telling ourselves is breaking down and what's filling the space is these uh tailor-made uh just bespoke delusions that can be shared with much smaller groups of people than the larger hegemonic truths and or delusional truths 0:28:21 we used to operate by so that means that people say what's happening with cults why aren't cults coming back i mean we're all kind of living in cults it's just they're soft virtual cults i mean cults involve people living together cults involve sociality they involve people buying homes and living in them together that's the opposite of the life style of the atomized uh mediated digital american so now all the cults are uh are relationships of virtual reality that we sustain through engagement with the internet are we occult i mean i would say that uh that we've are in that middle area 0:29:36 between occult and uh what in the past would have been one's relationship to the media one consumes like we could people consume media now in a way that is more emotionally textured and a imaginative communion with others who uh like similar media in a way that is between cults and the old way that people used to consume but it's just that the word is less operative because everything is less social everything is less social we have just less sociality in our existences and and we're filling that hole with virtual uh existence and virtual politics virtual identity and then we just 0:30:38 spend our days doing the same stuff our actual actions are don't are not comporting to like people want to talk about how we've never been more divided and ***** and how there's this partisan conflict it is yes but it's amazing with that being true how relatively uh uncoordinated and uh ritualized political violence in this country is and

that's because that's just the very end of a process the vast majority of people are not that activated and even the ones who are that activated are mostly activated to simulate so uh uh political violence the majority of us are happy to virtually engage in like a political uh um sorting and and ritualized you know uh disavowal uh and 0:31:39 upholding but in our day-to-day lives we just do the same stuff we ever would have done we're just consuming we're just in rats and a maze man and what i mean by that is our we can have these deeply felt political involvements and uh fandoms but they do not move beyond that uh that and so terms like you know fascism and cults and all this ***** they still have a hold of our imaginations and we still see people carrying out acts using the the uh the the vocabulary and the the symbolism but all of that has been emptied of actual meaning actual uh consequent meaning like consequence to to the the way things are gonna go the way things are going to go 0:32:40 is uh just continued techno-feudal declension that's the only way they can go there is no building up social conflict there is only a continued uh abstraction away from people of their ability to reproduce themselves like americans have been disarmed in the sense that they cannot live except at the sufferance of a global supply chain i went to somebody's asking if i ever went to a milwaukee admirals game i went 0:34:33 to one milwaukee admirals game in my life that was i was very excited to go uh because i lived like an hour north of there in a smaller town and i was just absolutely fascinated by tall buildings i went and just seeing the absolutely uh the towering skyscrapers of the of milwaukee apparently a new particle has dropped there's a new particle that is being acted on in ways that cannot be perceived i'm very intrigued 0:35:34 by these ideas lately about about you know the reality of quantum space i don't want to get too into it because i don't know anything but it does seem to me that there's there's a real open question about the degree to which uh consciousness is a like manifested force or can manifest force the world like the consciousness is an acting independent force not of course in a dualistic sense just in the sense that uh i don't know there's a lot of tiny little particles out there you know your brain's made out of them your brain is made out of tiny little particles and every decision you make is this is these transmission across time this these these signals going and and 0:36:37 and uh going into points of like subsonic space i don't know this is all weed talk i don't know anything about i would always all i know about that stuff is that i know enough about it to know that there is uh no reason to believe that there uh that a mechanistic construction of the universe even if it could be i didn't watch the q a on documentary i don't know if i will i maybe would like to watch a compilation of the 0:37:42 stuff about the watkins is because apparently they're really uh they're a pair of real jokers just fascinating uh i mean part of it is i don't really care who q is because it's pretty clear the queue is a social phenomenon and at that point whatever created it is almost beside the point it's it's like you're constantly in an improv game and people are shouting out prompts and something ***** lands and q is what landed whether it was uh a fourteenth pervert or a bunch of anonymous posters or uh or it was the government which i know a lot of people believe that it was as the way it spread 0:38:44 seemed to me to be pretty organic which and what makes it organically transmittable is is the is how primed people are for it of how much people want something to do for their brain they want something to make sense of the world around them and uh because our only options to exert any control of our lives involve going online uh that's where the more inquisitive us of of inquisitive of us the most restlessly minded of us that's where we're gonna look for it and we're all gonna see i mean we're only 0:39:46 ever gonna see our reflections we're only ever gonna see because we are isolated we're not under we're not doing a class project of of realizing through action shared goals shared uh humanity uh shared interests we are only operating through the individual filter of a consumer and so when we go online to find out what's going on uh we're only we're only looking for a validation of what we already thought which is what q is q is the native uh american uh uh rejection of uh the world as it exists that cannot be articulated through any kind of leftist uh lens because america defeats that at every turn by the reality of life in this country by the the defeat of class uh 0:40:48 awareness of of the way that america makes it impossible to live or even to know you could live as a worker as opposed to as an individual i'm i'm working on a project right now that's dealing with the uh the anti-masons of the 1820s and 30s and that is a perfect exemplar of this phenomenon you had in western new york the burned over district where the third great awakening is happening and people are coming to terms with how to be a christian in a fallen world of commerce where even uh yeomanry is sort of being cut off as an option or the the upper dreams of yeoman rear being foreclosed by the reality of finance but where the the democ democratic 0:41:52 explanation that is uh popular in the south and uh amongst the the working people in in the cities uh blaming it on banks is not an option because western new york only their entire economic engine is based on the erie canal which is the the first internal improvement the defining internal improvement that uh that federalists and then uh national republicans and wigs would try to pursue uh in the face of democratic opposition for the entire uh antebellum period so uh these people were not going to be democrats they weren't going to be able to explain what was wrong by blaming the banks because they and and internal improvements because their livelihoods depended on those things so what's whose fault is it and the answer they got was the the ***** masons a group within a group a a secret favor seeking group and of 0:42:53 course you know the inciting incident that led to it was an actual murder of a former mason who was going to write a book about their uh secrets and whose death led to

a bunch of masonic uh political figures and uh law enforcement types just going ah it's not a big deal actually you know what he kind of had a comic and absent any way of like articulating a class critique at that point uh those masons stood in for the reality which is that this system is not for your benefit this system doesn't exist for you the deeper truth about uh about this democracy that these people lived in but which they were fully devoted to it was the only way they could articulate their distaste and that's been how historically we have expressed our our de-politicized or rather declassified uh alienation with uh the fruits of american democracy which we punitively signed up for this is the country we built this is the greatest country in the world this is the country that has our institutions and has built our our liberties and is and we are invested in and yet act and yet it is a country that i did not recognize how do you explain it the answer is is that the people who appear to be on your side aren't and of course that's correct that is correct they are not on your side they are on the side of of yes of malach they're on the side of mammoth they're the side of the devil in the form of a algorithm of prophet extraction that does not care about any human but because we don't have an articulation of class any other ideas for the animated past i'm still not sure which one i'm going to do or i might just do benjamin butler i um but i think it's interesting that uh anna masonry has a uh through line in the figure of millard fillmore from animasonry which begins as a fusion of a grassroots that is alienated from power and uh wants an explanation for why they don't have it and a class of political entrepreneurs entrepreneurs hustlers who wanted a way to challenge jacksonian democracy uh in a way that would be appealing to regular people and used anti-masonry as a coverage for that uh and then once and masonry did its job it was discarded for the creation of the wig party and then uh after the wigs broke up it became the base uh millard fillmore who started off as a anti-mason became awake then after the war after the collapse of the whigs he ran uh for president as the know-nothing candidate the nativist candidate because once the wigs broke up once again there was a question how to get people to oppose democracy in the north without becoming sectional without challenging slavery and the answer was uh irish catholics and of course the irony here is that the know-nothings are called that because they started as a secret society called the order of the star-spangled banner that you had and you had to pledge your secrecy to them and you had secret handshakes and ***** just like the masons but there's another strain there because another figure who started off uh as a note as a anti-mason and then became a wig uh was thaddeus stevens who then moved to the republicans not to do the no-nothings who who decided that he wanted to be a sectional figure and a uh someone who confronted slavery uh at its heart and then he uh became the face of like a radical redistributivist that's stuff where uh kamal

harris is like we're going to be going to war for water that's pretty funny just like i 0:49:33 guess just letting everyone know it's like hey hey y'all just so everyone has a heads up we're going to be going to war for water why would you if you're a politician why would you say that it's like okay hey war boys get ready she is uh she is a fascinating figure in a way i mean she's just such a blank she's so uh yeah her capacity to just like laugh at all the most inappropriate moments uh it's very interesting it's she's not a politician like obama you know who whose gift is keying in to what people want to hear and to present a facade of humanity and then you got biden whose whole deal is being like a bluff hearty fake irish uncle uh she just goes out in public 0:50:34 with zero a human affect uh yeah like a more of a mitt romney figure a figure who who who wears their inhumanity proudly and i guess you could say that that's that makes sense that she's the figure who will take power after biden is like as uh as the the masks fall from from capital and as our political figures lose the requirement to perform humanity in order to be uh to be able to claim power because our our influence in the process becomes you get these people take power who are barely able to contain their contempt for the obligations of the rituals of behaving like a 0:51:35 human being i remember that time when uh they after she became vp or after she endorsed biden and they asked her of course the classic gotcha uh what about all these horrible things you said about him at the debate including that he's like racist and that he personally is responsible for her uh being like otherized while being bussed as a young student in california and she just goes it's a debate and just starts laughing now i get that's the correct answer it's a debate this doesn't matter but i don't know if i can think of anybody else who would have responded with that who 0:52:37 would have just been that dismisses of even the pretense that they had to uh act like and that's why she's not nobody likes her but that's also why there is decay hive because she speaks to people who humans i've seen some people like uh kamala in the real world i've heard tell of real kamala fans uh i saw a sign on a fan very fat very big very uh expensive house that said uh congratulations vice president elect 0:53:40 michelle obama uh michelle uh uh kamala harris didn't need to say biden harris said congratulations vice president-elect kamal harris and then uh after the inaugural they got uh congratulations president vice president kamala harris so there are people who love her and i think that they are wealthier people uh i think people who work in uh some sort of supervisory capacity uh and who have a real identification with being a girl boss and also straining to hold back their frustration with it'd be very funny 0:55:0 though she never gets to be president because biden serves two terms he's in a ***** exoskeleton by the end of it he's he's our god emperor 40k warhammer not trump it's him in the he said he wears like a big mech suit but it's shaped like a 57 cadillac come on man i do wonder about joe though i wonder they're letting him out of the 0:56:3

out of the kennel which is kind of interesting because it doesn't seem like he's doing too well but i honestly feel like they feel i feel more than anything that they are confident that the media is so in the bag for them so terrified by trump and so in so dedicated to like breaking america's uh uh addiction to trump that we're uh that they're willing to overlook anything and they figure if nobody talks about it except the right it'll get yeah it'll be it'll turn into actually it's ableist racism to say that uh that trump's brain is melting somebody asked will there be another two-term president that's actually an interesting question uh if there's sufficient it depends on if we get any more real uh like recession depression situations again or if they just keep liquefying the economy until the whole thing falls apart like dissolves into entities but yeah if there's significant economic volatility in the near term i could see it just being a revolving door just getting mad and then kicking off the guy and bringing in the next one oh man i have to say i have not been paying too much attention to england of course because it's a united hell realm but it is positively darkly satisfying to watch the kyrstermer labor party eat ***** even in the face of boris johnson ***** like the clumps in it all over the uh the vaccine or all over the uh the coronavirus response and it shows that they're always wrong doesn't it i mean what the entire yeah the entire uh rest refrain during uh corbyn was a competent labor leader by which they met a guy who would be up 20 points and now they got their guy they got their their their face their neo blair right little boy their their the little ***** apple polisher has never been anti-semitic one time in his life and is a good good position on brexit and wherever the ***** and is willing to uh accept the reality of austerity and the reality of of uh of capitalism and he's just eating ***** he's eating absolute ***** it's wow and i'm sure that there uh there are plenty of reasons these guys have pulled out of their ass that this doesn't totally refutiate their entire political project but we all know the real reason which is that they don't care that he's found that much it never mattered if he won it just mattered that corbin didn't win like they don't actually give a ***** they never cared it didn't matter if they believed that he would that a more moderate labor would have been more competitive they just didn't want bernie to win or corbin to win and they made it happen and now they get to churn around and explain this while they it would be funny if uh if the uk breaks up though that's the hope is that is that you be funny if the uk breaks up but uh australia does still refuses to get rid of the queen they just love having a queen so much the queen of england in australia look we love it we love having a queen pisser i did get the vaccine i got uh the johnson johnson one shot so we'll see if i if my brain explodes we'll see if i start taking orders from yeah i'm gonna i'm gonna look like uh bart simpson after he drank the i got i'm sure i got i'm filled with i'm filled with uh with ground up uh bill gates foreskin i haven't really had any side effects it kind of makes me wonder if i got a placebo i think i 1:5:24 have webbed feet though that's one thing that's happened so that's pretty cool no i will not be the english civil war is not is pretty interesting it is really where like capitalism starts developing its own coherent uh like capitalism and puritanism are really linked crucially because uh they're both about dissolving uh royal authority over the spirit and over the and you have even though this is you know very early 1:6:39 uh merchant capitalism and very little in the way of any kind of manufacturing you already have uh the forces emerged that are gonna end up competing for uh power as capitalism develops more uh uh coherently and you have guys like gerard winstanley who articulates marx's theory of social conflict 200 years before him in a religious context he writes a book he writes a pamphlet where he says that the source of conflict the source of warfare between men the social source of social strife is class it is cond it is of course they mean by that at that point you know lords and serfs and such but uh it's it's the it's the premise of and i think you really could say that 1:7:40 1688 the glorious revolution which sort of caps the whole period of conflict between uh parliament merchant capital uh and calvinist protestantism on the one hand and uh royal authority landed gentry uh anglicanism and more formal like hierarchical christianity on the other uh you know it erupts in the civil war they cut the head of the king off uh cromwell tries to impose a a parliamentary order i mean i think he really did uh and it uh failed because the uh social formations to uh uh to generate it didn't exist they were insufficient yet and so he ended up having to just assume all power to himself in in a royal figure the way that hobbs that predicted what 1:8:41 happened it led to the bringing back of the stewarts but only on conditions uh of a liberalization of the economy and of religious uh oversight and which is why and i and a liberalization of uh of political rights it's really a 50-year uh uh contest that ends with a uh a treaty it's essentially like a westphalia style treaty for uh for english political economy you we're going to keep a king but he's going to be a protestant and the parliament will have real authority even if final authority will be arrested i 1:10:12 think i might be i think now i could think i could do benjamin butler pretty well do i think that john wayne gacy was part of a child sex trafficking ring in chicago well ***** i do now i feel like he would have said something what's my opinion on obama 1:11:14 uh i'll just say this uh barack obama more like barf sacko crumbo the man the man is simply a no crumbo to me all right i hope to do i don't know i don't i don't think i'll be able to do one on friday uh but next wednesday maybe uh we'll see but i will let people know when and uh also i'm still thinking about what the next book should be uh i think i want to take a break from reconstruction so uh maybe something else 1:12:15 but if anyone has any good ideas let me know and then i'll maybe open it up here and find some uh some more suggestions too but uh yeah maybe next week i'll say

*Music playing** that couple won't be having any family hey billy songwriter are you now don't you know what you need you know they are tattelli old telltale where are billy bones resting now had the israelis in his sights with a rat tata they ran like shiites hey billy don't you know that we need your nose where are billy bones resting now one night billy had a rare old time laughing and singing on the level online came in a camp not looking too pretty never even got to see the holy city now 0:1:2 billy's out there in the desert sun and his mother cries when the morning comes and there's mothers crying all over this world for the poor little darling boys and girls here in the summer you know don't you know that between you now the rata town the old town where are god damn it why is it doing this i unhosted you why do i unhost and then ***** jesus every single time i go to unhost it says unhosted and then the ***** rehosts so that song billy's bones is a very interesting one that pogue 0:2:6 song that i was singing it's inspired by actual events which was in the 1980s after the israel israeli invasion of lebanon there are was a u.n peacekeeping force that was deployed uh to basically keep the israelis away from the palestinians uh in the wake of sabre and shatila i believe and part of that un deployment was irish troops and uh i believe this is in this is covered extensively in pity the nation by robert fisk uh a irish u.n lad u.n troop was kidnapped and murdered by most likely uh the lebanese forces christian militia the one that peter dow was a member of uh in collusion with 0:3:8 the israelis and it became a big scandal like oh my and i remember reading a like liner notes or something for that album run sorry in the lash that described that song as surreal and it's like no it isn't it's literally a song about an irish guy going to the uh going to un getting killed by the israelis i think it's because nobody knew that story outside of ireland i know i never did before i read about it but it is funny because ireland's non-terror non-insurgent-based military uh uh roll call of like the 20th century stuff that was not you know the ira or the civil war uh or uh being neutral during world war ii my dad used to say the only two neutral countries in world war ii were the their only big military events of any kind were part of mill of 0:4:9 u.n operations there was a famous event during the uh congo civil war that saw the death of patrice lumumba where european mercenaries i believe uh uh allied with the belgian-backed breakaway katanga uh province ruled by moses zombae attacked a irish-held u.n base in giadafield there's a kind of boring netflix movie about it that's really it the irish army didn't do much although they got their asses shot the hell during world war one as part of the british expeditionary force i really wish i had that mixtape of me rapping it's i still remember some of the things i like i remember 0:5:12 those those lyrics but it was mostly just me pretending to shoot drug dealers like hey can i buy some drugs sure uh undercover cop you're under arrest don't do drugs that was it and i never the weird thing is that i never really had any idea what i was going to do with it i wasn't imagining i was gonna i never played it for anybody i didn't go to school i wasn't that much of a dork to go to school and like hey guys uh so i don't know what the hell i thought he was even gonna do with it i guess i just had this like creative urge that needed to be expressed and at that moment hating drugs was the most uh emotionally uh like the most powerful symbolic like narrative that i could get my mind around at the time i did get the johnson johnson vaccine so ***** i and the funny thing is that i've had zero side effects at all like i didn't get anything after having it i didn't even get a little like achy nauseous anything it didn't even really hit my heart hurt my arm that much which makes me wonder if i even got anything maybe it was just uh honestly though i wouldn't be surprised if 0:6:14 they were half placebos because as i have said the point of all of this ***** is not to stop the spread of any virus it is to get us to a point where we're okay with the status quo enough to shop and act like normal people and get rid of this this noose around the economy's neck the service economy's neck the retail economy stack otherwise known as the american consumer economy's ***** neck i mean my god this is ben this has been a targeted a strike at the heart of the global capitalist system which is dependent on american consumption that's what we're for and this is why i really think we might be on our way to falling backwards into a neoliberal ubi because we are functionally as an american economy not here to make things yes we do make things we grow things we manufacture things but most of the growth of manufacture is done at the heart of empire the way mark's assumed it would be by the greatest degree 0:7:17 of technological innovation or that technological intensity the most uh the most uh mechanized process mechanized process what the rest of us do is hang around and buy stuff from the rest of the world equalize the global supply so that we don't have a crisis of uh over accumulation which is what caused the great depression which is what has caused historically economic crises the u.s exists at the end of the global supply chain to catch all of the remainder to get all the leftovers off of all the plates at the uh at the um at the all-you-can-eat restaurant but we're still operating off of a uh labor paradigm which means we have to work for the money we get to consume

that's totally unnecessary that is a social ritual at this point it is not productive like all of our the labor we're doing is ritualized because we cannot accept the reality 0:8:19 that we have traded away our political subjectivity for unlimited consumption and that means that the only way to square this and to keep the thing going is to just put a ***** funnel of money into people to do to allow them to consume not related but not conditionally upon their income because the profits are going down there is no room on the balance sheet for more money through uh employment because these so there's no pressure to get a bigger labor share of income because there's no leverage because it's of course that doesn't mean that real work doesn't get done but the real work is domestic reproductive and infrastructural it's the stuff that allows us to sit and yeah being a working in the retail sector being the person to give the 0:9:21 food and the stuff to people and running up the purchases that's real labor but it is all around consumption it is not around production and yes nursing and like keeping people alive all of those things are infrastructural but it is not productive productive economics occur elsewhere because and this is the thing the the the capitalism was going to is going to in his closed system is going to be pushed towards automation but when you have a global an unequal development of global capitalism and you have huge numbers of people who are only recently been introduced into market relationships from ***** rural feudalism then you can turn them into uh incredibly cheap labor which will not put pressure at the local level to industrialize and that's what we have now so in the places where like in europe where uh labor power was 0:10:23 able to extract better conditions uh there's still industrial there is uh no productive economy in the united states the productive economy is elsewhere either with other uh with the people who got a better deal in europe or people working with their hands in the cheap zones of the world economy which have not been developed yet now theoretically over time you would get a system where you had full equal development of capitalism as it spread around the world but that requires uh infinite inputs it requires infinite externalities oh i'm sorry yes there is one thing there are two things 0:11:25 we actually export as part of this system but there are things to keep this thing going they're the things that keep all these things all these uh part all these polities all these countries all these social formations this is what keeps them all on the team this is what keeps that flow coming to the united states because it's not just there to consume it's there to consume at the expense of other social orders because we what do we export intellectual property those are the things that enforce a cl and and currency the world global reserve currency those things create the actual structures of control within the global economic order but our social role within it as individual 0:12:26 americans is to consume not have any participation in the actual political structure or the political economic structure it is to consume we traded away our political subjectivity and now we fake politics now we have a phony politics carrying out that we do a potemkin politics to make up for it now this is not on purpose this is the problem that a lot of uh your americanist like third world types your people who just like get off on being the most radical in the most american get off is they think that this is all some sort of cynical operation on behalf of the disgusting american labor aristocrat no this is a pro this is what happens when you are at a disadvantage like america's working class has been because we were where capitalism was able to solve temporarily the input question in a way european capitalism because it couldn't it left the american working class at a critical disadvantage relative to capital and we look to europe and we see the the emergence of socialist parties and social revolution and we go what do we do wrong we didn't really do anything wrong what happened 0:13:27 is that the the territory the material base was different the free real estate of the west allowed all uh social conflicts to be resolved away from so uh the a moment of truth in europe those closed national um social orders those those net those competitive national bourgeois all competing against each other instead of cooperating instead of subsuming their differences because it drives away from when unsynthesized into like a larger form of state authority like the united states did to the confederacy it blows up into some sort of social crisis cop you get communism you get fascism you get a real class conflict that gets subsumed into politics here all politics is drained away 0:14:29 from conflict because there's always somebody to buy off at somebody else's expense but that somebody else's expense can always be born because they got nobody else to turn to and the american and america's history is since the civil war has been the and before that too has been the process slowly of bringing in more and more people into the uh umbrella of like civic uh citizenship but while that's happening the the definition of citizenship is changing and being drained of its political um its political content and political power and that is the the horrible joke of the whole thing is that when uh blacks were finally brought into full political quality in the united states it was at a point where the political uh ground had shifted and political questions that could actually address the systemic horrors of racism were no longer accessible and that's where we are now and that's what we have to bring a new politics into 0:15:34 being but it doesn't change any of the questions in front of us it should just change our approach to them it should it should clear us of some illusions that we might hold that make it harder for us to see the moment clearly like the bessemer thing i think people got way more excited for that and put way more uh folk emotional energy into that than it warranted given the real condition of labor in this country visa via company like amazon and the reason for that is because people have certain expectations around politics around what they think uh they can contribute and we can contribute in the moment to challenging capitalism and that leads us to be more likely disappointed by something like bessemer disengaged demoralized by it and that's why remembering this stuff remembering where we are in this structure 0:16:35 can make these things less uh wounding and and allow us to uh keep our powder dry for anything that might emerge in our lives and i know that that isn't much it's very thin gruel but i really do think listening to this and hearing this message and kind of getting sort of those buddhist cones in your head that bring you back always to the real conditions that we find ourselves in uh it's better than winding yourself up it's not better than other stuff to do but it's definitely better than winding yourself up and that does seem like the only other option because the arguments that are premised on we're gonna get somewhere from here by arguing about this i think are for i mean amazon cheated but that hadn't been taken if you didn't take that for 0:17:38 granted then you weren't ready for the campaign you weren't ready for the reality and the likelihood of defeat if you really thought oh i didn't know amazon was gonna cheat they always cheat because it's always in their interest to cheat you can ***** uh break the law and inhibit a uh a union vote and then even if you're caught red-handed the process is so long and involved and then the punishment is so poultry that it will always be in your incentive to put the ***** stick in the spokes of the wheel every time because even if they even if what happens is that the uh nlrba says you have to have another election you just do it again and you're buying time and all you're ever doing in business is buying time anyway so you get to just keep putting a goddamn stick in the spokes there is a smith's field smithfield ham uh the big plant there had a 16 year union drive that's how long it took them to get a clean election where smithfield didn't cheat or be able to overcome the cheating that so if you're going if 0:18:39 you're surprised by the cheating or thought that that could have been avoided with any strategy uh then you were not ready for what was likely to happen people can we hijack state governments to change this i kind of have the of the opinion that barring the ubi say we invented sent something to make climate change a little better we break we make some breakthroughs assuming like the technological fix to the crisis occurs the way it has traditionally you know like how the green revolution in the 70s precluded the sort of mass starvation that people are worried about happening now with global warming that was on the agenda in the 70s before the green revolution 0:19:41 which was a revolution in uh among other things uh wheat uh genomes where they created something called dwarf wheat that allowed for more wheat to be uh processed per stock which will greatly increase the amount of calories that could be produced you need another thing like that a second green revolution and that buys us time from crisis and then they do uh if we have that out i don't even know i was talking about that but i'm saying that's like the best case scenario oh right uh and and politics continues but in like a slightly improved material condition uh i think that

you're going to see a steady centrifugal force between the state governments and the federal government depending on who's in charge now that's the thing it's not like the antebellum era when it was always the south polling for secession after the north pulled for secession under the federalists by the way but that's because uh in the early republic the center of political gravity was in the south and that is why during the war of 1812 it was federalists in new england who threatened to secede from the union by the even the civil war the uh the economic power is in the north uh which meant that uh the s and the center of gravity was in the north so that means that the south had to pull away um now we are having a situation where the poll the the the federal the the uh states rights successionist poll is going to come from the uh whatever the opposite of the party in the white house is so under biden we're going to see big time i think uh nullification style threats from hell we saw it from south carolina i think desantis in florida has a real chance to emerge as like the 2024 candidate uh by standing up by embodying like the state-based resistance to the biden federal government uh texas of course and always but like say that biden gets four years loses re-election which i think is possible always at this point we might be done with two two-term presidents at this point depending on how fast things accelerate um and that means that say desantis wins or trump comes back during that presidency you're going to see states right ***** and secessionist ***** emerge on among the big blue states like new york and california they're going to try to defy federal edicts on things like immigration on things like health care and so there's going to be this constant ratchet of sectional uh conflict and that means that there is always going to be work to do at the state level to build the capacity to participate no matter what those conditions might be certainly more so than the federal government i would say at this point that the federal government is a lost cause the federal government is beyond any conceivable political influence from any group of organized voters that we could call the left that would be my main argument about the federal government you can say things are good or bad you can say that the biden stimulus either even though honestly i think the argument that this is a better stimulus than obama's is simply predicated on the fact that it's a bigger crisis it's we're further down the road from the crisis we never fixed in 2008 so of course we're gonna have a bigger ***** rescue package we're deeper in the hole that doesn't really mean anything but whatever we're not participating in it at the grassroots it is a full spectacle state and local races i think are different because the uh the organizing capacity uh at a state level and certainly at a local level is different relative to the amount of power that concentrates at that level so i would say uh yes i i mean i honestly could see a situation where like california if they embark on like a if political crisis like does push that sort of bernie coalition that won the primary

into power which is a possibility that you see a continued brinksmanship especially if there's a republican presidency between california i do think that the whole thing will break up before i don't think that the united states will collapse overnight i think it will break up at some point but that i mean i honestly don't think that that is much of a prediction especially if you caveat that we're not talking in the near 0:24:52 future we're not even talking 50 years but i do think once you get past 50 i don't think it's real reasonable to say uh that it's not that it's uh not that it's ridiculous that's all i've said not necessarily to happen but i gotta say the odds so what do people think about the idea that bernie would have been assassinated if he'd gotten the nomination because i have noticed that post bernie one of the big intellectual currents has been this uh resurgence in interest in the kennedy assassination and specifically conviction that the kennedy assassination was in fact the and i really do 0:25:58 feel like although there is plenty of interesting evidence for that i mean i gotta say sean mccarthy on twitter has posted some stuff that i had never heard about uh and i was a very big cia a big jfk assassination head uh in high school and college as because i was cool i mean i i literally printed out the skeleton key to the gemstone file and would read it in class that's how cool i was and i had never heard some of the ***** that he's got some of the specifically the people who were killed but i do think that whatever you want to argue about the merits of that and i think that they're fully arguable i'd say that i am a c i am a jfk agnostic on every question of it uh and i really do feel like because i can't know more there's nothing i'm going to learn that is going to change that it's only about whether i decide to like put enough 0:27:0 focus on trying to convince myself of one or another it really is about like okay which one of these should i just stare at until i believe in it because that is really where i feel like it i'm at and i don't feel like there's any point to me doing that i don't feel like there's any advantage to finding that now other people they don't have to look so hard they can look for a second and be like no that's it i can't do it i it would require me to focus more on it i think than would be worthwhile because i really do feel like we're the world we're living in can be explained under any one of those uh frameworks any one of the jfk assassination frameworks can be made sense of materially with where we are now but i do think that the emphasis on the assassination as a government operation is partially to give yourself the reassurance that we never really had a chance and the thing is i think that's true i think the bernie campaign in retrospect never really had a chance now the question is what was it that gave it not a chance was it the atomization of the social order was it the translate 0:28:2 transformation of the american from a worker to a consumer was that it or was it the result of the deep state the para government structure oversight and popular understanding to shaping and determining uh the levels of our political uh horizon

and the thing is both of those can be explained through marxist terms both of them accord to us materialist understanding of history because you've got the one that emphasizes suburbanization uh and and racial segregation uh and media saturation uh and the changes in conditions of work you can emphasize that and get to there from here or you can emphasize the way that uh within a competitive capitalist economic structure uh functional bourgeois democratic organs require the abstracting away from the individuals to a secondary sense source of power because uh individual capitalist firms can only operate out of self-interest they cannot coordinate effectively without abstracting away something to a government that's what uh that's how the bourgeois dictatorship operates and it is all directed through democratic means in order to maintain its legitimacy like we have elections so that the people don't revolt and you don't need to spend money keeping them working they'll work on their own because they think they voted for it they think that they're participating in these questions and that keeps them on board that is manufacturing consent and that's way cheaper to do that by having a democracy than by having to use the technology of control i think that's changing now i think we're getting to a point where technology has is advancing to the point where we can just get rid of the democracy even formally because we will have a sufficiently technologicalized consent mechanism but before that you really needed if you wanted to be efficient if you wanted to be an efficient capitalist system cheaper but that means that there has to be a non-uh politic there has to be a power that transcends uh uh democratic accountability because you're not really a democracy that's what the constitution exists to do that's what institutions like the presidency the supreme court the fed exists to do to abstract power and mystify it and have it be contained beyond accountability and the once you get to the post-war era and we go from headquartering a uh a state bourgeois dictatorship to presiding over a world capitalist empire that required a sophistication of operation and maneuverability and articulation of power that could never be democratically accountable by definition could not be democratically accountable and so therefore had to be abstracted away beyond uh control and that means creating a uh a brain in the deep state in the permanent intelligence intelligence state which would act at every point to prevent the democratic uh role play the carnival from breaking containment both of those things are true which one of them is the determiner of events i don't know and and i don't think that my analysis of the moment i will be reading jfk and the unspeakable for a project i know that that now is the one everyone i mean before that it was the devil's chess board and i have to say that while that's a great book and i very much enjoy all the stuff about dulles career as one of the most evil demons of the 20th century it is interesting that as the book gets closer to the kennedy assassination dulles as a character disappears from the pages

and the narrative it really does become a a echo chamber of you know testimony and and uh and intimation he never really makes a case that uh that dulles was the mind of the kennedy assassination beyond saying that he is the one figure who was in power that kennedy dispossessed of power like whatever you want to say about kennedy and like to vietnam did he really care about uh ending the war there like was he really having this dove turn that a lot of people now think he was and i think there's more evidence than i used to think one way or the other dulles is still literally still hot fired dulles still got fired kennedy still said i'm gonna smash the intelligence the cia into a million pieces and with those two things being true it really does point to dulles in defense of the intelligence community's prerogative more than specific goals in vietnam or cuba uh to be the motivation for the assassination and i'd say that is very persuasive but again i don't know i don't know enough and i can't focus on it enough to make an appointment i my main making it a a sense because i'm trying to ground my ***** now in history and specifically how history can tell us how contingency uh and materiality can uh hit each other how contingency and consequence hit each other because we really do live in a world made by our material reality made by our material relations of life and our modes of production but that are lived through a culture through a superstructure that shapes us uh literally at a at the level of our consciousness and so that means that the interplay between these things is not some simplistic arrow that goes from base to superstructure it is a fully uh unified thing it it is it is as non-dualistic as the universe the basin superstructure and so that's why with a thing like the kennedy assassination i would much rather talk around it and talk about the contingencies and the consequential moments that shaped the world were in and and how they would have been reflected in these arguments than trying to argue whether one specific thing happened or not because that to me kind of misses the point which is that we're here either way so what is the constant one thing we can say is that i think contingency is much greater than we would assume if we do operate for materialist principles but that in retrospect when you look at it as like a diagram of human activity it becomes inexorable it looks on paper like it couldn't have i do i do think it's interesting the people who want like the files open and who want the cia to give up what they have or think that there's some investigation that can come to a final conclusion i would say that the smarter of them that i know would probably admit that if it all came out tomorrow cia killed kennedy it wouldn't matter i mean we had an afghan we had an afghanistan pentagon papers come out last year that no one cared about it said uh yeah longest war in american history that's still going on all lies the whole way nobody cares because nobody's fighting it because it's a bunch of uh poor kids uh and ***** uh rotc freaks presiding over a war that isn't meant to be won so it doesn't matter we all know everybody knows as leonard cohen said that the dice are loaded everybody knows but they would might argue but you know knowing is worth it and i can see that but i also kind of wonder isn't it just demoralizing wouldn't it just be demoralizing wouldn't it be ***** demoralizing to have that happen to just have it all unveiled and then for no one to the mystery even the mystery like 0:37:22 that the little thing in your gut of like the spark that that jim garrison moment from the end of the movie where he goes don't forget you're dying king open the files don't you want that and not have it just totally ***** but i i mean obviously i would like to know who am i kidding open the files for the love of god uh somebody says uh am i more of a pete bondurant a kemper boy or a ward little i think you could guess i think i mean i'm pretty tall but i'm and i'm obviously not kemper boyd come on i am i did a tweet once i said take the buzzfeed uh american tabloid test are you a pete award or a kemper and i said spoiler alert if you know how they say 0:38:41 70 of americans think that the kennedy assassination was a conspiracy i think that that's true regardless of where you are like i think that runs that that number is is distributed everywhere in society so i feel like even if kennedy was killed by oswald all those problems the intelligence community was having solved themselves in the form of this wacko shooting the president uh or another one i like trying to kill connolly and missing which is one theory or him taking a shot missing and then the dumb ass secret service agent behind kennedy's car standing up too fast with an ar-15 and shooting him in the head which is another theory if all that was true uh nobody knows for sure most people don't aren't convinced by the explanation there's big questions hanging over it so i think like people in government are presidents and all those guys 0:39:42 and not even forget the presidents uh people in congress in the senate governors they mostly probably think that there was an assassination that was carried out by a conspiracy and what that does is it lets them know what they're in for if they ***** with anybody they know they could get got or you know could because maybe they're out there maybe they got kennedy and if they could then then maybe they could get me and it's just one more little bit of uh of rebar in the the ideological structures that make up the political mind and that and that i don't somebody 0:40:46 says how long until we let corporations vote i don't think we'll have to i mean they already effectively vote their votes matter in a way that the our votes don't but the actual voting is the whole point of corporate power is that it's outside of the voting structure it doesn't require participation at the level of the ballot so they'll never need to vote it'll just all fall fall apart it'll all drain off politics the voting rights all that ritual stuff will be drained away it's not going to be injected into it's not going to be how long until cities get autonomous zones uh corporations get autonomous zones within cities where they can make their own laws they already do that dan

gilbert and and quicken loans in detroit they've turned it into ocp they have it's robocop in detroit the downtown has been brought out by dan gilbert's company they run it as a corporate campus and it has private security that's the center of the city that's and there is now a effort in nevada to incorporate corporate cities in the middle of nowhere that are going to be able to write their own laws and have their own tax structures i mean people call it neo-feudalism but it's not really it is just more capitalism it's capitalism undefeated it's capitalism unchallenged it's capitalism at the state of decline away from uh away from like state capacity and towards but the social structure is neo-feudal in that you've replaced the liberal order of of uh of rights to contract and individual citizenship with bilateral contractual relationships where all human relationships are uh instead of a or an era where you're bargaining as an individual because that is the point where technology exists to not require your consent you don't we don't need you to ***** consent to this so we don't have any reason to humor your ass choices i don't understand how someone calls me a dsa and democrat defender i guess there is now a thing where if you are not explicitly endorsing the republicans that makes you a democrat and i kind of get what that they mean because like if we're talking about this the spectaclized political politics of identity and there's two sides you can only really break with the one dominant form by endorsing the other one i understand that and there is logic to it if you insist on maintaining investment in this identity formation but i do not uh agree because then you're just a republican and how the hell here's the one thing i really don't get and i'm so apparently this is not the person the person wasn't talking about me but i've heard this before that's why i responded to it um what i do not get is if you see the way the capital dominates the democratic party and and defeats any attempt to make it an articulation or a uh a vehicle for class uh power what would make you think that the republicans would not have similar structures i guess the argument is as well well but yeah that republicans use anti-wokeness in the exact same way it's just that because you're in the milieu either because you live in a city or you're spending on time online with left wingers and and and the mainstream culture you're seeing them through this like glass over there in the in the parts of the country that are dominated by republican they use anti-wokeness to make demand to destroy any kind of class politics in the exact same way there is no way for it to articulate itself out of this structure the thing is though you still might have to support democrat right when they run for office sometimes at the local level this is what i'm talking about how it's all about where you can actually focus energy and power it might be a ballot line it might be a different party but the determiner is not either of those it's what the power is at the base that can affect as a participant as just a passive voter you don't have any obligation to vote for anybody because individual votes don't mean like the main problem with dsa has been the same 0:47:2 problem tsa has had since its explosion it's a middle-class movement of and when i say middle class i mean people who are identifying themselves as consumers and whose lived experience of labor is not what is not organized and coherent and does not structure their relationship to politics even though they might think it does what they're actually responding to is an idea of class they picked up in a book and that's not everybody but it's the majority and that's not and the other thing is is there's no alternative to that because the only people who are politically engaged in this country are people who have been propagandized sufficiently to think politics matters and for them to think that they had to have got it somewhere and the way they get it 0:48:4 is largely through the ritual and so you go to college to learn about exploitation and class you come out either deciding the class is a thing and that you need to organize around it or that it isn't and you need to organize against it and then you apply those politics to your life but they are not lived it's not a lived experience for americans which is why it's very funny to hear people talk about lived experience and how we have to honor lived experience if we honor lived experience we will never be able to organize socialism because class is not a lived experience we live class in our in our relationships to capital but we process it through our understanding of ourselves as consumer identities which include things like race and gender and so you come out of college thinking that voting and caring who's in charge and is a meaningful activity and that you are going to meaningfully impact politics by engaging in it if you have 0:49:6 only experienced the blunt end of the stick of life in this country you're less like and you have not been told through a process of cultural um assimilation that this is true you're gonna ***** uh say ***** all this and mainly by not being political at all but if things get worse and worse and politics becomes more strenuously part of culture and harder to avoid and more s more entertaining the way it has a lot of those people are going to enter politics and the only framework they're going to have is the stupid uh ***** ***** framework and that is a bad that's bad news for everybody but it wouldn't be much better news if it was the other way around because neither one of them can articulate a positive vision and a vision to challenge which would have 0:50:7 to be a vision that challenges capitalism i'm not criticize i'm not really criticizing the the dsa for being a middle-class movement or like a college educated movement a non-work like not specifically working class movement is in people who like live class i'm not criticizing them for that it's inevitable as i said what i'm saying is that has been the biggest and it's something that needs to be addressed one way or the other but i think it needs to be recognized as the fundamental problem before you can move forward because it doesn't seem to me that a lot of people think that's the issue and if you don't think that's the issue you end up talking yourself into some pretty wacky circles to try to figure out what the issue is and that makes it harder for you to address things and makes you have to deal with people who don't know what the ***** terrain looks like and aren't addressing problems where they need to uh the lincoln assassination conspiracy theories that there's no conspiracy theory there because it was a conspiracy i mean i think some people forget that but uh booth 0:51:8 was part of a ring of guys who operated out of boarding house owned by mary sarad who uh planned on the night of lincoln's assassination to kill lincoln andrew johnson i wish they'd gotten him and uh seward and grant in in a in a decapitation uh strike 0:52:9 but what is even less well-known is that before that they had a plan to kidnap lincoln that they coordinated with and were funded by uh the confederate government it was it was essentially a hit put out by the the confederate government and a number of the conspirators were hanged afterwards um what happened with the rest of the assassinations is that the guy who was supposed to kill andrew johnson chickened out that ***** ***** uh i think i wish if you're gonna kill lincoln kill ***** johnson 0:53:11 too for the love of christ uh and then uh the funniest incident was that someone went to kill william seward and he was in bed with a neck brace on because he'd been in a carriage accident and when he went to stab him he kept away so not only was it a conspiracy it very well could have been a conspiracy of a ***** federal confederate government i wish they hadn't shot booth and they found that out because that really might have increased the likelihood of a more putative government settlement with the leadership of the confederacy at least which was would have been necessary as a just a minimal starting point to make reconstruction work there is other stuff though about uh there's again there's a theory that and i don't really see a lot of evidence for this that uh william stanton the war secretary uh was secretly behind the lincoln assassination and that he cut like one of the pieces of evidence is that the 0:54:12 the telegraph lines were cut right after the assassination and were not uh operative for hours much like how the as they say in jfk the phone lines in washington dc went down on the 22nd of november and like booth's diary has some missing pages or something most countries do or i think most countries do change their they change their form of government and change the constitution uh we definitely should have more than give me benjamin butler as president after the lincoln assassination and oh my god the hype train is close i remember this happened one other time the 0:55:13 hype train where one person away from the hype train still not sure what it is but it's it's exciting because i remember there's like a big thing that goes down it's like when it's like a all something there you see him there's a little train there look it up this little chain so yeah we're one away it's a scam train how is it a scam don't get scammed folks i don't want you to get scammed oh so it's so it's a way to trick people into giving me money benjamin wade becoming president after johnson uh

CUSHVLOG 157. TUESDAY TAKES

being impeached would have been good it's a little late johnson had already had a chance to do a lot of damage by then but also because remember because of the insane idiocy of the way that congress operated uh constitutionally at that time congress 0:56:15 didn't come back in uh session after johnson becomes president for months so he was able to just go but it would have been unlikely because there was a big uh consensus in the democrat republican party hype trade that they didn't want benjamin wade to be president because benjamin wade was ambitious he would probably have run for office and gotten it uh in the the next election uh and he was a soft money radical he was not one of these uh gold standard ***** and apparently uh milton friedman has the same analysis of the civil war about how it's really about uh gold versus uh fiat only he thinks that's why the confederates uh i disagree he's literally arguing 0:57:19 for a a capitalist abstraction in the form of a gold standard which is arbitrary and enforced by state power that's the thing a lot of those guys don't even know that like i would argue that a guy like ***** rand paul probably ron paul probably really thinks all that ***** about how gold is is different how gold isn't like other currency gold isn't like just the government the gold can't be no don't tell me gold the icky gross state is why gold has value no no no he's too committed ideologically to uh to possibly say no to that but i think that at the top levels most of these ***** know that shit's not true especially in the finance sector they so this thing really is just like 0:58:24 a fake little video game to get you to pay like oh you want to see the number go up and then you press the button to see the number go up and yet people do it anyway they know fascinating the constitution can never be rejected at the grassroots on the right anyway because the constitution is the is the basis for hierarchy the the true the cons the premise of constitutional government is that there is a subject class that and so it can't you can't get rid of it because then you have gotten rid of all 0:59:28 the levels of mystification away from the reality that the state is what we make it and if the state is what we make it then power cannot why would we concentrate power unnecessarily why would we concentrate wealth why would we concentrate life possibilities why would we concentrate uh beauty and and grace and and repose why would we concentrate that at the top we got high this train i claim this is yeah the only thing i remember from my anti-drug wrap was they said i was weak they said i should drink tea but i said sorry dudes i like my wits about me so there they 1:0:30 stood something like befuddled and stunned well i walked off real sleek and smug no no see that's the thing uh the drink tea thing some people think oh are you saying that's like oh you should drink tea no they're making fun of me for not doing drugs so they're like oh you should drink tea instead it's like they said i was weak they said i should drink tea like oh look at me no drugs for me i'll be drinking tea pinky extended but then i say sorry dudes i like my that somebody asked for spanish civil 1:1:43

war if you like the military part of it the anthony bevore has a good book the social history is actually really interesting in a uh oral by uh oral history called blood of spain which is a lot of interviews with people on both sides all the way through the hierarchy like carlos reques and anarchists and trade unionists communists uh peasants the description of uh of uh collectivization uh in in like cnt spain is really 1:2:45 interesting talking about how they went about collectivizing agriculture in the south and then of course you got homage to catalonia by orwell that's a all right i think 1:4:6 it's time to saddle up and ride off into the distance yeehaw get a dosey doe down the dusty trail

we must be i'm always walking after midnight searching for me i walked in miles along the highway that's just my way of saying i love you and always walking after midnight i stopped to see a weeping widow crying out his pillow maybe he's crying for me **Music playing** all right we got it here wow that was so easy now that i can do it on the computer it snowed in ohio on 4 20. bless ah how's everybody doing 0:2:16 today i really have nothing so this should be interesting i haven't really been thinking of anything my head is my brain is kind of smooth nothing really going on nothing really to think about or talk about on i had a peanut butter sandwich for lunch that's usually what i have for lunch i got the fluoride stair and the inch a oh people 0:3:17 are talking about variants oh don't give me anything about variants folks don't give me any of this okay now i don't care if i don't care if kobe becomes a sentient being and starts ravaging the countryside we're not going to let it happen again i really don't think so i think that absent some sort of you know tube neck super flu captain trip situation we're just gonna in in the places where we're now blanketing with vaccines we are just gonna act like it's all going away and if likelihood of getting sick likelihood of dying goes up it gets metabolized as part of doing business i'm done speculating about any ***** covet area anything like i said unless unless it's like uh covet 23 like that ***** movie that's now available that's about the fourth year 0:4:18 of lockdown which was made uh last summer something that absolutely is baffling to imagine someone thought was a good idea apparently it was michael bay and of course that means that you know the least uh the most vulnerable people are gonna keep dying more than they need to more than they should but that's a one-way ratchet that's really the uh that's the horror of this thing is that nobody at the at the level of of the most acute encounters with uh with the existentially annihilating features of contemporary capitalism are coordinate are uh organized politically in a way to even express the reality of their uh of their oppression like the only people 0:5:19 who you got in the ***** media sphere in in in the conversation are issues that while they may be serious are always put through sort of a filter of middle class anxiety not working class uh outrage and i think that's one of the big reasons that things kind of stalemate politically is that the only people talking are people who are more afraid of falling than they are uh truly feeling uh something that approximates the experience of living in this country because honestly i've said this before i feel like that experience is so uh disenchanting with america's trappings and rituals of power and politics that people make a uh beyond the fact that they're not they don't really 0:6:20 have access to a lot of the uh avenues for expression that that people take for granted at a higher strata if they wanted to they wouldn't bother because the that's why the continued demiseration of the middle class the continued uh like dissolution of the middle class and its attendant uh cascading um nervous breakdowns that cat that make up politics right now uh are both i mean it's it's a process that's being driven materially but the politics of it are so detached from real not only conditions but uh levers of power that it seems like as things get worse at least in the firmament of 0:7:23 politics things are only going to get more absurd why do i not care about the working class that's an interesting question uh i guess i guess i don't know what the word care means in that instance like do i have a do i have a sense of like human recognition that like the working class is made up of people and therefore uh you know uh my existential like co-species members who uh uh uh i mean i certainly i don't think you could argue i mean i i don't know i don't know what that could somebody who's asked the question uh go a little more in depth is what they that's so weird i feel like 0:8:34 that really does speak to the nature of politics because it is now in a a series of public demonstrations ritualized public demonstrations of virtue and that is all politics not just liberal politics that's what q anon freaks do too they're they're showing their virtue that they're the ones who care about child uh uh zoos and closing them uh and so everything gets turned into a a a bidding war on who cares the most but care by definition doesn't mean it doesn't definitionally connect to action because you have to perform that caring you have to actually take care the emotion of care and invest it with action that corresponds to the feeling but there's nothing in our politics that 0:9:37 it necessitates any one path there and a lot of the path people take to show they care and it's not something you can blame people for because it is for most folks i think the only channel available to them that feels accessible everything else just feels too big and impossible but if you have the feeling you want to express the feeling in the moment you don't want to bank it up and feel bad i care about the working class and that i wish we had one jesus ***** christ like not because they're good people not because they're better than other peoples in some moral sense but that they have 0:10:39

the relationship to capitalism they have the uh unity of interest to drive history so like do i care about the working class it's like it'd be great if we had one of those it would be wonderful in the meantime we have people who are at various stages of being dissolved in the acid of uh finance capitalism like we're all in the stomach of a giant beast being eaten and we're just fighting with each other because we can't see the the stomach we but it but the thing that stops the working class from existing 0:11:45 more than anything is that while there is that unity of interest that can be forged it has to be forged out of social existence and cooperation and we just don't live that way that's the challenge and that's what everything has to start from that's what you have to engage with and it's one of the hardest things to really look at with sober sense because it does make a lot of the things that seem important and that invest your time with a sense of a charred sense of meaning with a charred sense that you are an agent of history and not just a passive uh victim of it uh is actually very much illusory and i mean anyone whose instinct is is to edit the left right to say x 0:12:47 y or z has no business in the left no matter what it is they might even be right in some abstract sense that if you had a left you wouldn't want people like that in it betray a complete denial of the reality of the situation which is that there is no left in this country i've been i have not really i gotta admit it i've not really been writing because i've been kind of stuck in this uh this self-conscious loop about like what exactly i'm trying to get out what the point of writing is and i've kind of come to the conclusion that like a lot of the stuff that i want to get across makes most sense 0:13:49 in like this format in in the in the spoken in the direct address format and so as a result i am putting i am working on on on some projects that are premised on these this form of address then like turned into writing or turned into something else but i am looking to start a writing project soon that will be uh not directly political like that's what i've realized is uh is that if it's worth the stuff that's worth like trying to push into a new and different uh means of expression that is not something that i'm terribly familiar with the reason i basically end up always freezing up when i try to write is because i always end up getting stuck on where to start how to cut the thing because we're talking about everything and like when i'm speaking it's like 0:14:52 the i'm propelled forward sort of by the momentum of trying to express something and then that ends up tunneling me kind of through it uh without me even picking as i go but when i try to write that becomes overwhelming uh so i'm gonna sort of let this be the mechanism for for shaping it that's why i think if you had something that was fictional for example abstract in its relationship to politics you can tunnel through from that perspective so we'll see uh ah the carnation revolution you know 0:15:57 i love talking about the carnation revolution i don't think we would see anything in america and remember of course we're talking about in a context of collapse right

we're not talking about the army of just marching out of the barracks at any point in the future we're assuming that there is a crisis that comes on you know on the hoof beats of the night and you can point to things that say that's possible that that we might be getting there uh but again technology is the x factor here technology uh is the is the thing that very well could change all of these uh rates of decline because we're talking we're all decline is is written in but rate of decline is the is the question so if you have enough of a rate of decline if you have a steep enough rate of decline i don't think you're ideologically socialist military movement sadly 0:16:58 just because the ingredients don't exist for it because that's what happened with carnation revolution is that you had this like middle strata of um army officers who uh had been disenchanted with the estado novo and specifically the disastrous um uh colonial wars in africa that they were fighting turned to try to find a new explanation and they they found marxism the same way that like nasser and the uh bath party guys all found uh arab nationalism and that's they picked that because of the context of their uh their moment and you have to take that into consideration there is no context that's going to create self-consciously marxist political military officers in our disenchanted middle strata the best thing you're likely to say is that if political 0:18:3 conflict escalates along its sort of increasingly uh identitarian lines which is sort of in the interest of capitalism and is like sort of inherently built into uh the nature of crisis under capitalism that the military provides the uh the means for organized power outside of an identitarian framework which is certainly not what people were met are hoping will you know save i didn't do these two hands somebody this god i 0:19:8 love that this guy was the most alpha person in america right this guy represented for uh what like half half the white guys in america maybe more uh represented uh just masculinity and it's untrammled of power to overrun uh our our emasculated i don't even know if i miss i mean i guess i miss him if i'm being honest just because that's a thing that i don't get to experience anymore is him doing things like that is him saying things is him tweeting things and there it is like it's a it's like a you know 0:20:10 like a hint of hint of paprika or something in a in in your egg salad if it's gone you he does seem though to have disappeared as a political force as soon as he lost his uh platform and man what the hell happened to q what the hell happened to q it really does feel like the millerites they came down the mountain and they just like went their separate ways i guess we're half gonna have to wait for them to go into hibernation and come out with some new ***** we haven't even had the stochastic political violence that everyone was assuming was going to happen remember a couple weeks ago when somebody crashed a car into the capitol and like there was a an hour where every lib on twitter was absolutely convinced that it was like another another q anon sally and then it was like no the guy is everyone just decided to change the channel 0:21:13

because at the end of the day it really is people who are just looking for something to do on the internet it's not a thing to work to be worth that's really the thing that's i think holding back political violence in this country from where a lot of people want it to be sort of subconsciously or imagine it should be it's that yes i would argue that a lot of americans are at a point where they are willing to ***** kill uh because of how they are feeling precarious stressed alienated they're absolutely willing to kill many fewer of them though are willing to die and without that willingness to die and that's because we're getting more alienated we're getting more uh it's becoming more unbearable to live moment to moment we've become more uh disenchanted from the uh mechanisms of control that we have internally and externally uh built but that alienation is built on uh a foundation of pure nihilist or pure materialist selfishness uh we we imagine that there is no god there is nothing but our pleasure and our experience uh which must be hoarded and extended as far as possible to push back the specter of an annihilation but that means that no matter how bad the bad things get it's very hard for us to get in a position of endangering ourselves because the thing we're really afraid of is that obliteration uh and that's why i really do think that in order to have any hope of a resistance to uh the full uh dissolution of like the individual consciousness into a soup of pure um pure nerve ending pure stimulus response uh is going to be a revitalization of a religious instinct which can mean anything as long as what uh perspective for your own personal safety uh and your own continued pleasure and existence and that doesn't mean any specific religion it's just me it could mean anything as long as it's persuasive enough to get you to act and i think that's it's going to be very different but it's going to be varied i think it's going to be syncretic and it's going to come under some sort of banner i mean essentially a holy war against capitalism no that is not uh the people's temple the people's temple was a self uh sealing cult i mean it was it was it it was so organized around the personal fixations of jones the personal ego of jones that it required very brittle uh very very brittle borders uh in order to maintain the internal but a lot of people at the time thought that they were you know a a man support emancipatory force especially in california where they became part of the moscone it's a reasonable fear to be feared for for the end of yourself but it's only reasonable with certain false assumptions buried on top of it like in a very real sense death is not a thing to fear because it is a uh it's it i mean i know this sounds kind of goofy but it is just an energy transference like you the stuff that makes you up doesn't go anywhere because there is nowhere for it to go because universe and it is one like consciousness experiencing itself subjectively and a lot of the fear that we have is built on the illusion of our egos and that might not mean anything just to hear you might be well and that thing for me for most of my life i heard this stuff i thought okay yeah not i don't care i it's still all i have is my precious stream of consciousness and my mind it's 0:27:37 all i have yes yes cosmic mind death isn't real blah blah blah but what about when i go no no i can't go away oh my god and that's true of any religious uh idea from the outside none of them are persuasive from the inside they are fully persuasive and you have to get inside something you have to get inside some sort of uh consciousness shift that puts you abstracts you away from that animal-like if you're it is very you you're not gonna die in the very near future probably and if you do well that could happen to anybody you're probably you're relatively safe but it's the fact i think 0:28:38 that so much of our time is spent alone really alone it's including all at that time alone builds a morbid reification of the ego it it petrifies your ego into this totalizing thing whereas like social social existence like there's a reason one of the big reasons that religion persists in traditional social arrangements is because a socialized life where you are not spending most of your time by yourself with your thoughts is one where there is just simply less opportunity to just build up an ego and now we are all alone and we are all spending a lot of our atomized time just slowly like a stalagmite building this hardened uh promontory of of of ego and fear around uh the elimination 0:29:39 of that ego that it makes us it becomes impossible to move at all becomes impossible to do anything because anything can lead to a decline anything can lead to and that's what's so funny about woke somebody says this wokeness is a religion it is absolutely banal to say that of course wokeness is a rel is now a religion in this because secular liberalism is the final or the i guess i don't know if it's the final stage it's it's the most recent stage of uh liberal protestantism and before that ***** calvinism it's like you gotta you there's a straight line from the ***** puritans to modern wokeness 0:30:42 and what it is is it is it is personalized calvinist religious obsession where there is a individual relationship with god where your relationship with god is not one of connection but one of eternal separation god as unscrutable and unknowable and terrifying where our only ability to soothe our we fear of god is by performing in a way that we imagine that he would approve of and over time as as the people who believe this center in those urban areas those big cities like first boston and then new york and as they spend time in their parlors and read their darwin the religious the actual emotional fear of god goes away and and god is turned into uh we are replace god with ourselves and so we have to manifest virtue in our lives to 0:31:48 affirm our our status but what this doesn't have at its heart is belief now the same thing is happening to conservative protestantism because white protestantism like you got to say white because you know it's it defines everything uh once once slavery emerges because you know there is a black protestant tradition but it's different it splits off and you have merchant northern uh protestantism turning into congress 0:32:51 going from puritanism to congregationalism to mainline uh uh protestantism until

finally it's not even nominally protestant anymore it's it's it's just a universal uh virtue ethic that you're carrying out unconnected from uh any belief in anything transcended in fact it's been turned into manners like like our uh like all of our politics gets turned into but then at the root at the at the at the sharp end of manifest destiny's ***** spear the people who subdued the land scout the indians and ***** um god also died but was and was replaced by the self but not but uh there the focus is on showing your virtue through your domination and mastery of the land 0:33:52 as opposed to amongst the northern liberals the domination and mastery of the south i have restrained myself and that is why i am good as opposed to i have indulged myself and what shapes those two approaches to religion uh is the is your economic productive mechanism the farther you are away from the sharp edge of exploitation the more you are able to uh fashion a politics of moral virtue as performance and at moral abstinences performance if you're indulgence essentially makes up for the 0:34:54 the uh the the moral dearth at the no that's not now of course black protestantism isn't completely different because it's american also and you've got guys like your creffo dollars is your p tg jakes's uh that are essentially reflections of like the the white protestant uh opportunity gospel but that's because uh class operates in um in the black community too and pulls at least or income i guess because i'm good 0:36:45 thanks unsolved mysteries i watched all that ***** terrifying this the theme song terrifying apparently they brought back unsolved mysteries and there's no there's no host and there's no voice over what the ***** man what what do you even know what you're getting untouchables never gonna start watching anime i really i really 0:37:46 don't think it's gonna happen i've thought people have asked me about anime and i just have to i just have to say it's something that very little but then again who knows i could encounter the buddha in the road and kill him and decide that all i can uh watch now is giant uh robots have fight over they fight aircraft carriers i have one like classic like readers digest head slapper moment where somebody came up to me at the information desk and said that their kid needed a book for school and they needed to know the author and do i feel weird or guilty that i have a job doing 0:38:56 this talking about marx and ***** while everyone's struggling i mean obviously i feel weird about it i would say that that weird feeling is the main generator of everybody having politics in this country uh it's everybody feels a weird sense of of guilt uh if they have if they have if they're struggling less than others and of course they've been acculturated to feel that way plenty of people have not and don't and in fact resent being asked to feel guilty for other people uh but a lot of if you are acculturated a certain way if you if you take the college pill as i did yeah of course you feel guilty you feel weird and guilty about everything uh and i i think the challenge though is to identify those feelings and then ask yourself okay what does this mean

like what should i do with this as opposed to i think what generally happens is 0:39:58 leaving it as this unresolved catalyst for anxiety within you that leads you to wrong conclusions that leads you to jump to things as a way to purge it because the most the main thing that that mass guilt does is demo demobilizes and de-politic or d not d politicizes extra politicizes people but demobilizes people because if you're guilty if you're responsible uh then who are you to imagine that you can make anything better beyond uh unless you purge the guilt and the thing about the guilt is it cannot be purged only the changing of the conditions can get rid of the guilt and nothing is changing the conditions because people who are doing relatively well they don't 0:40:59 want to what renounce all their worldly goods they could do that but their cup they have they have personal uh selfish urges they have they have a self-interest they have duty to others that they want to continue to uh honor and that means that they have to construct a mental structure that justifies their position and then you you do that either like republicans do by blaming those people who are below you saying it's actually it's their fault for making me feel bad ***** them or uh by creating a ritual of uh self abnegation that cleanses you like a i mean that guilt is the same guilt that power the puritans and everybody else it's the original sin which is now 0:42:0 framed in a capitalist uh in capitalist terms like we imagine the original our original sin in the middle classes as we imagine our original sin as a as a sin of exploitation which it is i mean we all are in a machinery of uh and to some degree we are having our time alienated and exploiting the the alienated time of others and then we have to cleanse that but religion is close to us real religion is closed off so we have to do it secularly and that's what politics ends up being a secular man somebody's asking 0:44:5 about the oscars why did they not just cancel the oscars this year why the ***** did they why why are they pretending that this thing is still real i mean if movies are coming back this year just like just say hey we're not doing it this year like when they didn't have the olympics they didn't have the olympics they're not doing a ***** zoom olympics there were no movies there were no movies no movies came out last year i don't recognize any of these as movies and what i mean by that is forgetting even the streaming thing is that none of them have any like is there any mark left by any of these it just feels like it's such a decline it's such a it's a it's and obviously it's because film i hate to say it but film is dead because to me the 0:45:7 theatrical experience is it is definitionally definitionally enmeshed in the concept of a film i feel like if you don't i mean yes you can watch a movie at home you can watch a movie on your phone and it's still a movie but if without the theatrical ritual of a thing being displayed in public people coming together to watch it at least having the possibility of doing that and then the first impressions of that movie forming in that experience and then filtering out i don't think that you really have film you have something else you have streaming content which is what we now have i feel like the streaming is its own new genre that has replaced and synthesized television and film to the detriment of both because this is a negative dialectic it's just straining all the good all the art out and and turning it into and leaving only the residue of of commerce and pandering so there's no uh there's no more movies so they really should get rid of the oscars because oscars are for movies and there's no but we do have the on cinema oscar special which is i honestly do feel like uh once upon a time in hollywood might have been the last movie when you look at that like that movie is this it's the culmination of tarantino's career it's this look back on on the golden age of of hollywood a thing that was a movie that was intimately about the theatrical experience and that was theatrically released and was a huge success theatrically that feels like the last real movie and there's talk about them being they're being like a 20 hour streaming version and i will watch the ***** out of it and i will love it but it won't be a movie it'll be it'll be a streaming uh product it'll just be a really good yeah i mean yeah movies had their run there were movies for a while they'll still be around as a curio like uh you know like theater but it's just no longer influence yeah no the snyder cut wasn't a movie either i was annoyed that they acted like it was a movie they could do all this stuff but the only movies left will be james cameron movies he's going to be the one to keep it going god bless him i will be there when avatar 2 comes out n3 and 4. i will watch avatar 5 in a climate refugee camp ***** half a billion dollars to make a lord of the rings tv show on amazon half a billion dollars hachi and it doesn't even have any of the characters it really tells you that we are at a point now where we have gotten rid of the commercial structure to art to it it's almost now becoming either algorithm response to to what people click on or the personal uh desires of billionaires which is why that ***** piece of ***** jeff bezos needs to ***** write a check that is less than he spends on skull shiner on a month to make another season of lodge 49 for christ's sake that's how you know he's evil is that he's never brought back lodge 49 unless he does bring back lodge 49 in this case he'll still be evil but uh but one somebody said uh some rich dude said that elon musk could do jurassic park if he wanted to like make a real jurassic park and i gotta wonder why no super rich person has tried doing that yet like all their stuff is this fantasy of escaping to mars or whatever why don't why don't you want to make a it's not impossible we can create some sort of there's there's human monkey hybrids baby you how about we do congo and we create uh evil silver apes evil white apes humans yeah what the hell happened to nanobots where the hell is our damn nanobots we were promised tiny tiny tiny machines instead all we have are those damn boston dynamics killer dog robots running around those it really kind of makes you think that all that ***** complete ***** ***** all of the fantasies of singularity and space travel are just the things we tell ourselves as the microwave gets warmer and warmer and as we start popping like sausages it really is fitting that a ***** scamp like a lyle lanley guy like elon musk is the richest man in the world right now on paper and that his companies are obscenely valued considering what they put out it's because he is the person who more than anyone because capitalism is without future everyone knows that everyone can see before them that the given structure we have leads only to miseration and annihilation everyone on all sides is agreed upon no matter if you're reactionary you're leftist you're a liberal you see 0:54:39 that the way things are going you see the trend line unless you're stephen pinker you don't think there's a future but then you've got this guy musk who's hey he's the richest guy in the world he must know what he's talking about he must be able to master this stuff who says we're gonna do tunnels underground we're gonna have uh we're gonna have renewable batteries everywhere and electric cars and we're going to have mars missions and we're going to have brain uh we're going to have brain what the ***** it called neural links we're going to have ***** cybernetic brain links we're going to have and that is his role is to is to allow people to perform some some sort of faith in the continuity of the system through a technological innovation but 0:55:42 all of this stuff is made up it's maybe hypothetically possible but it's distance from being practically applicable and pursuing it while everything else falls apart and while all of the things that we take for granted as part of the the technological and economic infrastructure that power the global system are are losing uh functionality are turning are ***** falling apart before our eyes it's it's madness it's it's the final ponzi scheme at the end of capitalism which has just been since it's begun a series of ponzi schemes like america the american experiment is a ponzi scheme it is the fantasy of eternal and unending growth there will always be something for the and 0:56:43 what has allowed that to happen uh has been technology so you concentrate capital concentrate to concentrate it you destabilize uh a biome you destabilize the social order technology rescues the instant or if it's thanks to some if there's you know before before we had a global economic structure uh one collapse would be uh made up for it by boom somewhere else but now uh that's all foreclosed and so we are now left with this fantasy of technology um unmoored from reality but somehow worth 0:57:45 real money because at this point we cannot afford in a literal sense to acknowledge the nudeness of the emperor because there's no other emperor there's nobody else in town no one else can can uh resolve the contradictions within the system any other meaningful attempt to get out of this this uh crisis requires challenging capitalism and that is the one thing that can't be it does appear we live in a society oh man 0:59:4 i honestly the it's so funny and it's like at this point it doesn't matter like i guess that's why she never they didn't kill her because so much stuff has happened since epstein that everyone recognizes that well what's the worst that can happen what comes out oh yeah oh these guys are all pedophiles okay so what i am intrigued though i am intrigued by uh were elites ever held accountable uh no the only times 1:0:12 you really get any kind of elite accountability is the occasional proxim of collapse induced uh political revolution and then conquest by a different uh social order with a different series of elites and then even there you usually only have a stratum of 1:1:13 people at the very top uh i've read that the cut the families that make up the uh ruling elite of china right now the new the new billionaires are the same families that were ruled that uh were powerful and influential before the the uh all right i'm going 1:2:24 to sign off here have a good talk uh talk to you guys soon might be doing more of these in the future and still trying to think of a book to do another uh reading series on if anyone has any requests any suggestions please let me know i'm still available to them traveling i used to run it i guess oscar goldman got mad because i got loose circuits so loose with the mother goose with the air that seems to be fun hey yo pack my 0:1:1 bag cause i'm outta here my mama don't love me and my mama don't care read the papers the headlines say bust up rapper got sold a light clover no good nothing so give me some ***** beats all the teenage fans are heat who's saying all my dudes so what comes next let me use my forehead so let me stop stalling because everything i do is like falling hey folks hmm so tonight biden is doing a joint address to congress as many will nerds will point out uh it is not a state of the union in the first year 0:2:2 that's not a state of the union that is uh a joint address to congress the state of the union doesn't come until uh the second year i guess because you know you gotta you're giving a report and uh there hasn't really been enough stuff to give a report on i have a feeling though he'll say that the state of the union is strong and i get even though it's not a state i wonder what they're going to put them on i mean obviously they put him on something for these big events because there's no way they would leave the chance that his brain is just going to go off because he has had some pretty astounding mental lapses just in the last couple of months a number of times where he just gave up now he'll have the teleprompter but you know he's still old as hell his brain is clearly going and it's going to be in the evening so i'm guessing just straight 0:3:3 up adrenaline shot to the heart pulp fiction style five minutes before he goes out and uh i will predict this that you don't see him in public for at least a couple of days maybe a week after this speech and that'll be fine because that's the thing about biden he was his pitch to people was put me in there and you all have to stop caring about politics so much and it really seems to have done the job isn't that interesting we got to the point where everyone is cranking each other off freaking out about the imminence of of civic conflict last fall and of course it bubbled over into the into the riot and uh on january 6th but since biden's been in office it just seems like the air is slowly gone out of the political balloon and of course that's just me from you 0:4:8 know that's just it i don't ever know i've been alone this entire time i mean i don't have any interactions with people i don't know what's actually happening and even if i did that would only be a small little keyhole into the interactions of other people i'm only ever trying to grok a vibe and it really does make me think to what degree that is all a self-hypnosis like getting yourself into a uh into a frame of mind uh and sort of without even knowing it convincing yourself of a state of affairs but it 0:5:9 certainly seems like biden is in the figure of biden is sort of the is truly the opposite of trump in that he whereas trump's every statement every action inflamed the political discourse and raised political temperature it seems like biden is just a black hole he just absorbs everything and just holds it none of it gets reflected and reinforced and i don't know i honestly don't know i think that trump promised a politics that we were just simply not able or willing and it would be nice to think if that this is 0:6:10 people redirecting energy in their lives towards more productive uh vectors than than politics certainly presidential and national politics and maybe it's just reflecting the fact that i personally have trying to detach from politics and i'm just responding to my own conscious and subconscious reorienting i don't know it's weird everything's we have this really interesting dichotomy where uh the domestic front the democrats 0:7:28 are if only because they're being forced to by circumstance uh go full keynesian post keynesian and and just completely drop all of their uh their deficit ***** uh while internationally turning the screws tighter everywhere on every front from sanctions to military interventions to uh intellectual property protection when we talk about uh how the two exports of america are weapons and intellectual property that's hollywood movies that's tv shows it's also things like vax uh pharmaceutical patents which is the real uh nut of the whole uh uh controversy about releasing vaccines to countries like india i i would be surprised if you see a big charity uh shifting of excess 0:8:29 vaccines to india and other countries that we then get to take credit for but you'll never see a violation of the uh patent regime because the patent regime is what keeps the whole thing going it's what circulates what uh ned beatty talks about in in uh network about how the you know the saudis have taken millions out of this country and now they got to bring it back uh real estate and copyrighted material that they we we make people pay for on our terms supporting are supported by our so it would be interesting to see if we get this situation where america does slide towards a 0:9:30 haphazard ubi to keep people consuming uh meanwhile the uh like the iron fist of uh empire just tightens its grip even i somebody i remember about that israeli general who says that uh that aliens contacted the governments of what the united states and israel see that's how i know that didn't happen because that's the kind of ***** that only an israeli would say why did i say that marx was wrong about everything i don't remember ever saying that i wouldn't say that i don't agree with that there's 0:10:36 a ***** alien species i would not contact any government eight government in this ***** on this planet the the people in charge of this of this uh world are like the

CUSHVLOG 159. PLANT-BASED STREAMING CONTENT

the 57 millionth copy of a absolutely duress just a uh a decadent cruel ruling class that has nothing to offer anyone even on this planet let alone terrestrially i gotta say that i do i don't i don't have a lot of patience for the whole passata stuff it seems like a lot of uh i mean it's like anything it's fine if it's a meme but when you decide to try to take it seriously you're uh you're missing the point which is that it's just sort of a humorous thing to play with but i do believe with i do basically agree with 0:11:38 his premise that if we there were aliens that were sufficiently advanced to contact earth they would be post-capitalist uh communist even or beyond that beyond any kind beyond economic economics as we understand them because there's no ***** way that any society governed by economics would be able to put resources into that ***** or would have technology that wouldn't but of course that doesn't mean that they necessarily would have ideology as we understand it the ferengi aren't real i hate to tell i do think it would be funny though if the aliens came to earth and 0:12:48 they said they said take me to your dealer because i can't write i'm not a writer i've realized this like you actually have to have done some you have to have like a a practice and a craft behind it to ***** write things down i i try to write and my brain stops me i honestly realize that all i can really do is talk because it's the only thing that gets past that that gravity there's like a gravitational pull that just like pulls me away from being able to get anything on paper before i just destroy it with 0:13:50 uh um with self-doubt and i can overcome that but it's gonna take long it's gonna take a while so don't expect anything uh in the near future where i'm like sitting down and writing ***** down i'm just a lazy piece of ***** is the thing i i have no real abilities talents there's always an excuse to do nothing it's true and and and therefore i won't no i'm going to try to get something down but it's going to be like i said through talking and then editing not through sitting down and i had i i think 0:14:52 that was always uh sort of a write somebody wants to hear about robert owen god bless those guys the utopian socialists of the 19th century the first the first attempt to opt out of capitalism basically and the whole history of the 19th century and the 0:15:54 20th and now is how is over time that option being reduced just just literally being wiped off the map and uh and i think that all of our examples of attempts to to try to opt out of capitalism while still living the capitalist system are going to be the uh because you can't produce you can try to produce without profit but your the the rest of the world isn't and that that ***** crank is just gonna pull but i you know i don't blame them it certainly looked like there was a lot more uh options back then it really when you look back at the 19th century it really is stunning you 0:16:56 can say all you want about marx and you can say about what he got wrong or how he was a dick and how he was a lazy hypocrite who cheated on his wife whatever he wanted or he was racist or whatever uh all that true to one another extent he really was the one person who saw what was happening as it was happening and saw more even than what it was what it was going to be and he saw that it could not be uh negotiated with it could not be uh gotten around it cannot be competed with it could only be transcended it had to be worked through and transcended because it was going to become totalizing and he looked around the world and he saw the the power of capitalism and he saw the absolute rustic flaccid uh corrupt weak structures 0:18:1 that opposed it and saw yeah there's only one way this is going nothing outside of capitalism no system no structures outside of capitalism will be able to withstand it the only hope will come from within it as people who are de-territorialized by capitalism but at the time very few people got that and honestly i'll always say that like marx's interpretiveness and and awful hostility and nastiness to the people he argued with can kind of be understood when you just see when you really reckon with how much he saw compared to what everyone else was insisting upon people saying no we can defeat capitalism by by competing with it and displaying the superiority 0:19:2 of cooperation as though by that late date was going to compel the mass of humanity was going to be uh was going to be an an example or a word or anything beyond the ***** ideological and physical rifle to the forehead but that was not obvious at the time how to most of us to most people there hell half the smartest people of the 19th century were convinced that all of it all the stuff that was happening was due to skull shapes and and like temperature but yeah i don't really know that much 0:20:3 about the whole new harmony deal i mean i've never really studied the those people it's like all those 19th century eccentrics good-hearted but just fundamentally not reckoning with what was in front of them but you know what none of us are none of us can all of us are creating a model reality to live in mario andrew cuomo is going to legalize heroin now to distract from the new information about the nursing home deaths it's just gonna be like look what will it take to make your people go 0:21:5 away fine great yeah maybe they'll uh yeah because they're not going to legalize any more drugs but maybe public drinking because that is a real drag about new york street the thing though one of the things i think that will always make capitalism 0:22:9 beat anything that's competing with it as opposed to like i said being transcended from within is that located it's always somewhere else the real power no matter how influential or important the individuals are in a room the real power is something in their head and it's something that they cannot bargain with or change not like you know a medieval uh council where these guys all had to uh answer to god i mean god is just their self-interest plus their uh sense of duty whatever that is it's it's internal capitalism is is it is a compelling it's a compulsion beyond human personal 0:23:12 coercion it is i guess i'm just feeling kind of i don't know at sea because i should be 0:24:13 doing i should be being more productive and i'm i'm guessing i'm having a bit of a but you know those come and go it's all cyclical i just got to uh breathe through it vibe my way through it i think what i really need is just for this like slow motion 0:25:29 uh uh d panda uh pandemification and what i've really realized is that like there is no going back to normal i think that's obvious that it would be undialectical to imagine otherwise like there is no post pandemic that's like just like it was before but i think these last couple months especially as vaccinations in the us have increased has really reminded me is that there will whatever is coming after like this stage is going to be a intensification of the uh ambiguous uh uh sort of de-socializing uh like i think i worry that uh that there will be a permanent uh mark left in our ability to to 0:26:31 engage with the world i don't know once again i just feel very siloed and very unsure of what anybody uh is is thinking or is is gonna do i do know that that whatever i think i or anybody else was hoping for uh which is some sort of cathartic moment of reasserted uh uh conviviality and and uh i don't think i don't know we'll see if it comes it'll come slowly like like uh like uh feeling coming back to a limb that's been but i think the ambiguity of it at the moment is getting to me a little bit just this not knowing where it's going to land and how long like we're playing we're on a plinko board moving yeah you can't really get more of us uh sobering uh this ex sobering 0:27:42 uh a sobering model example of what the rolling catastrophe of the 21st century will be from then this distinction between the us and places like india right now where you're getting to things opening up here you're getting to a flattening finally of the curve uh and some sort of tentative reopening meanwhile what there's thousands of hundreds of thousands of people a day uh in india and i think that that is something that a lot of americans who worry about climate change uh tend not to focus on there's that and i think that's why people like to think in apocalyptic terms about 0:28:43 climate change they like to imagine hey we're all gonna die you know but i think we're seeing with this that's not really the case you know some of us will die uh but the majority of us are gonna stay in the pool you know in the human pool in the citizenship realm where you get all the privileges of being in americans and elsewhere and we will be separated from them by distance and by walls that will build and by technology that we'll use to enforce it and i don't think that is something that a lot of uh i think what people who fixate in america about we're all gonna die i think why that's a wish like somebody once said uh uh of course people like dr strangelove 0:29:44 who couldn't like a movie with such a happy ending and it talks to the that that that desire for instant annihilation not slow decline and i think that is really the the death drive as we understand it like howard ratner in um uncut gems subconsciously setting up his own death so he can die at his high point rather than to see all that he enjoys and all that he values about himself slowly uh removed and nothing but death to be company i think a lot of people they take especially if you're on the left self-consciously on the left we take our idea the idea that we're good people seriously we take the idea that we do the right thing seriously we do we take the idea that if we were in some other more vital historical moment like nazi germany or antebellum america we would be on the side of right we would be so sophie scholl or john brown and we can pre uh we can pretend to ourselves now in the situation that we live in that we're not really quite in that situation and that what we're doing in our lives to exhibit a political perspective uh uh political subjectivity are all if not as most as much as we can do the future that we're all really headed towards and for the most part spokes afraid to even name is one where most of us are going to stay in the bubble not all of us but the thing is say some chunk of america gets like wiped out by by a natural disaster and the people who were in there in that zone were once that happens they're no longer there i mean if they die obviously they're off the books but if they're on the other side of the uh border that we struck create other side of the of the tent cities that we build they are now off the books consciously too because their contribution to our understanding of uh the american people uh will be eliminated so most of us are going or our descendants or whatever are going to be in the bubble which means we're going to be watching through the bubble the rest of the world slowly microwave and that is going to mean we're going to be in the moral position that we imagine about the past where we would have did the right thing and i think a lot of us understand at some level that even if that's happening even if we live in that world by the time it happens we will have accommodated enough we will have created enough mental uh baffles and justifications and rituals of purification to uh imagine that whatever poultry ritualized pseudo-politics that we've landed on is sufficient to the horror of the moment i know that's true of me once again everything i say is just me i don't know maybe that's not true of anybody everybody else but it certainly makes it it certainly seems like it'll be the case because the alternative is okay say that i'm not going to let that happen say that i convince myself i am not going to uh just slowly uh a uh expiate my own guilt from being par party to this planet murder uh well what what will i do because everything looks pointless and as things get worse the options are going to get more limited and they're going to be more dangerous they're going to involve actual potential for significant suffering and death and imprisonment and who will do that who will do those things if they don't and that's where i keep banging the drum about spirituality even though i understand that it's not something that computes and it's certainly not something that can be scaled all you can scale ***** up up to is cult which that's no good what does that get you uh jonestown heaven's gate even if you don't get that you end up with like a sad failure like new harmony you're not ***** uh you're not gonna stop anything you're save anyone so it can't just be uh hey let's let's have a new religion that's silly but people are going to have to uh care more care more about other people than they do themselves and i don't blame anybody for not having that i don't really have that to the degree that i but what would build it i think cannot be anything that we find online it can't be anything we read it has to be something we experience directly and that experience has to be with other people and that is i think where i'm finding myself sort of at a crossroads because like i'm talking about and i've really convinced myself anyway and you know that's all you ever are going to do is convince yourself of anything the rest just flows from that that practice without action as the basis for it there is no uh there is no meaning outside of social existence there is no i don't mean that like your life is meaningless if you're not social i mean the things that the generation of meaning that you carry with you throughout your life including when you're by yourself are found through uh mutual experiences that that create realities that like create new structures of meaning that are stronger because but my in this weird nebulous realm nether realm i feel very unconnected to uh other people so it's left me feeling a little uh trapped oh someone asked about late victorian holocausts it's a very good mike davis book uh and it is honestly i have no interest in in uh defending the soviet union uh i don't really care i think that the those arguments are perfect examples of arguments that exist to be had that are unconnected to any meaningful question and that you do so that you feel like you're participating uh but just as a historical question the whole the whole the the responsibility for communism for the uh the excess deaths in the 20th century in uh in russia or in china is really settled and rendered absurd by the reality of late victorian india and the british empire when you saw patterns of what happened what happened in late victorian india the raj the british who were operating the entire uh subcontinent as a giant money funnel to uh to the uk disrupted all of the existing um communal structures for uh agricultural preservation resource management that had literally since the dawn of civilization in in india been used to mitigate famine and uh and natural disasters undermining and destroying food supply supplies they they rationalized agriculture they made it into a business just like they did in ireland and the result of that is that when famine came thanks to el nino uh temperature variations in uh in the late 1800s and that pattern of disrupting uh traditional agricultural which then and therefore leading to massive depths in the countryside when uh economic when uh ecological conditions change uh is the story of capitalism conquering the world uh it's it's it's the inevitable once capitalism has has won and i think it won in 1920 or so uh uh it will systematically as it over as the earth uh alienate people from traditional agricultural relationships with the land that will lead to massive death and transference of calories in what you have in russia and in china is a situation where you had these uh communist movements made up of self-conscious uh who in 1917 made it uh made a analytical throw of the dice that they were in a position to light the spark that would light the match of worldwide global revolution that would defeat capitalism and overthrow overturn or overthrow capitalism from within um and it didn't work it came pretty close it wasn't a it wasn't i don't think it was a uh i mean the fact that i would point that as like when capitalism one just speaks to the fact that there was still contingency there there was still possibility so and when you consider what the situation was in russia where the likelihood of a fascist of a proto-fascist military reaction taking 0:42:4 power from the delegitimized central government was almost a foreign conclusion absent a communist revolution that they made the right call but uh it it failed the revolution failed to ignite and as a result that communist government in in russia is forced to compete on capitalism's terms on capitalism's economic terms in order to survive and that means and that's why i think let's call it here i'm going i won't say which book it is this week i'll i might tweet it out later i will i want to do uh 0:43:5 a book next about the german revolution there's a really good one that i've heard about don't remember that the author though uh it's like the classic text from like the uh because it was always supposed to be germany the place where the language and the and the where the development of capitalism was uh was most conforming to uh the marxist concept the way that it created a working class movement the 0:44:6 way that that working-class movement expressed itself politically and then when it didn't happen i really think that we're we we entered a new phase i i think that the cold war was was a war for resources uh between capitalism and all of the all everything that uh opposed it in one way or another uh and that war was much less was much less close that war was uh never really in doubt you can argue about some contingencies that if they go the other way things go differently but it's hard to it requires a lot more dice rolls going different ways than than any period uh during the 0:45:7 late during the po immediate post world war one era when i did see mortal kombat 0:46:22 uh the cgi blood actually didn't bother me as much as it usually does just because i mean it's ***** mortal combat you know it's never it never looked realistic it was ***** eight 16 bits or whatever uh and there was some cool violence like when the lady got cut in half with the hat that was pretty good kendo was honestly kind of uh kind of charming not gonna lie uh like he was doing banter but it was not soy maybe just because of all the ***** all the swear words but it just it felt less uh cloying than whedon i will say though absolutely baffling how they structured it i guess this is an example of of the uh of the new normal of every film having to be the first in a franchise is that there literally isn't a goddamn tournament in it all 0:47:23 of the fights are the one side trying to kill the other guys before they can have the tournament factory movies are dead correct uh because i really do think that the concept of the film the theatrical feature film is determined by the context of uh uh seeing it in the theater i i don't think it's movies anymore if they don't go to theaters i've said that before i really think it's true we are not we now have like scorsese said we now have content and i don't think marvel destroyed them i think marvel is just the symptom of capitalism destroying them i mean i know that's a it's it's easy to say that because it's the answer to everything but you really do see as 0:48:26 as uh money just swallows the industry the it changes the economies in such a way that that the amount of investment the amount of return on investment required is so astronomical that artistic considerations cannot be priced in not entirely but over time more and more and i mean people say marvel but you guys know what year iron man came out right who knows the year the first the first i know it was that's not like the effort the first official mcu or something that's i don't know but the the first one that like starts the thing was iron man 19 or 2008 anything else happened that year did anybody know us about anything else happen in 2008 that anybody remembers because remember the way that the uh 2008 collapse was uh responded to as opposed to the great depression which was responded to a huge uh 0:49:27 increase in uh worker leverage direct employment massive increase in unionization uh and therefore purchasing power at the basic at the at the level of of the consumer through labor share of income how is it fixed in 2008 all of them they just took the governor off of money they decided money doesn't exist for banks they and of course money never existed it was always a fraud but it was a fraud that they all pretended to believe in to some degree or another and 2008 taught them oh okay never mind like we have reached the final stage here like there's nowhere else for this money to be invested in there's nowhere to profitably invest money apple is sitting on what 200 billion dollars in in just dead capital that they that they aren't investing in anything 0:50:28 there is nowhere for them to put it there is no i mean my god crypto is literally just running a ***** uh car in the garage it's just doing the uh the externalities of an economy without any of the productive part but what that meant is that the the uh the cheapness of money at the top meant that it that changed the economics of all these industries and it made it so that so much money needed to become at the top end like disney that nothing but guaranteed products with built-in uh multi-year marketing structures could ever be worth the financial the initial investment and 0:51:29 when iron man was a hit people wanted a superhero they wanted a hero they were holding out for a hero the model was born and now everything has been trying to be that ever since i mean my god they tried to turn the damn universal monsters into a frickin what is the productive part of crypto besides moving illegal uh ***** around and evading taxes it's just cli it's just ***** carbon emission it's strangling penguins every time you mine a crypto coin they shoot a ***** penguin in the head that's it that really does to me sum it all up is that there is money has so far outpaced the real 0:52:32 economy and real productivity uh and real scarcity like the reality of this is when you look at this insane system is that clearly through technology through the creation of systems of trade and exchange we have solved and uh and agriculture and we have solved scarcity but the only way to do that is to the only way to actually apply that is to take all of that uh all of that excess all of this productive capacity that is just taken and held and and move it back around and redistribute the technology uh and the mechanisms of exchange well and remove the profit engine we could do 0:53:33 that that's possible like in terms of we have the there's nothing physically stopping us only our structures only are our embedded assumptions only the mechanisms of control but there is no uh it's so far past a real economy that the only new avenues of investment are ones where all you are doing is expect as the non-productive element of production the externalities of production because there has to be something it has to be measuring some activity but this is not the creation of value this is the creation of and so we're going to suffocate like someone turned on a car in a garage because there is nothing inside this system because the damages the hurt the exploitation the 0:54:37 misery are always concentrated farthest from the points of power the closer you get to points of real leverage and power within this system the more insulated you are not just personally but psychologically from the reality of capitalism and of course at the very top you've got literal demons but you've got plenty of people who are for the most part human who are able to continue performing they're part of this like we all are because they have uh they really don't know what it is they they truly have had it abstracted away from them it means some it means the opposite to them of what it really is because we imbibe a culture where all of the misery and pain and horror of capitalism are turned into all of the good virtues uh and values and all that is 0:55:40 good so of course living in that breathing that vapor we we will continue to carry the system out until it's too late until we're at the other side of the bayonet until we're on the other side of the cage but by then there will be no way for us to stop because we're outside of it and once you're outside of it you can be and will be annihilated because you don't have the proximity to the technology someone says crypto isn't all mining it's three coins that do that you mean the three ones that people have and if there's ones that don't use uh mining fine that's good but is that where the money is 0:56:45 it's very interesting though to me that bitcoin has a finite limit to how much could be produced right it's 90 someone says it's 90 mined and of course what happens presumably i i'm assuming once it hits a hundred can somebody who knows more about uh crypto explain this to me like the v it has to go to zero and if that's true it's very interesting because it shows the way that libertarianism uh is is is delusion is a is a self is a self-conscious self delusion because you create this thing right this new new money it's better than old money it's it's superior to old money it's got real value and you still even though you believe in an economy capitalism that is 0:57:46 dependent upon endless growth continual and endless growth that's the necessary condition for capitalism which is why america is just uh your ideal currency has a ***** there but that's because actual currency not legal tender fiat currency is at the end of the day actually enforced by uh the system that produces its viability the the the uh the technological and social capacity of the state that's what actually 0:58:48 undergirds currency and that is that exists as long as the state exists or to the degree that the state exists but because the the libertarian crypto people don't believe in the state they have this hard wall and then what happens when you hit it oh we'll figure it out because the assumption is always because well because the reality is this is never meant to be a currency and its value isn't as a currency is as purely as a speculative ***** investment and that means yeah at the end of the rainbow when the ***** thing hits 100 there'll be something else the good old state with its old fiat currency which we've been actually converting this to the whole time uh is 1:0:15 gonna be there to pick it up to have another con for us if you if somebody makes a cryptocurrency that is an actual stable source of value and not speculative and that allows for transactions outside of uh state control that'd be great and doesn't involve just spewing ***** carbon in the atmosphere that's fine that'd be great are there any of those i'll have some but i mean i don't really need any because i don't need to subvert seems like google and amazon are getting away with a lot more planetary destruction than crypto but no one gives a ***** well i mean nobody gives a ***** about any of this who are you talking about like 90 of people of descriptions it's amazing i wouldn't say 90 i guess but it's amazing the number of debates uh online about politics that boil down to why do you care so much about x and not 1:1:17 y when the reality is it's just what they want to emphasize at any given moment for an emotional high point to an argument they're making to avoid having to deal with their existence ***** like we've we we're bothered by this stuff that's real we're bothered by it but it's it's like the grit that we kind of have to chew on to like make our guts work you know how like there are some animals that like eat rocks to put in their stomach like chickens i think the rocks to put in their stomach so they can grind up against the food that they consume that's what our our concern our care about any of these issues boils down to is it's it's grist and like even the anxiety and and 1:2:20 guilt that is produced by group by chewing on it is uh in some sense psychologically satisfying because it propels us into rituals of uh absolution that then make us feel cleansed if only for a moment and it's the seeking of that cleanliness and that's the cycle of feeling implicated and uh and soiled and then seeking a uh a baptism and again there's no buddy to blame for any of that no one is wrong or evil for making these choices we are all just trying to uh live from day to day as no humans ever have as as and we are just trying to make sense of a world that has at every since 1:3:23 our most of us if we're listening this since we were uh conscious has uh existed solely to atomize us to convince us of the immovable deadness the the centrality of our own pleasure as the only antidote to that as the only uh as the only goal to seek in this dead ***** landscape and then try to make sense of the world that we live in and of course this is what we're going to do but these atoms that are banging off of each other you know eventually some of them are going to hit in a way that was 1:4:24 unanticipated and explosions are going to occur whether they're sufficient whether they happen in time is a different question but whether there's going to be something for people to do at any given moment that might help lead us closer to that point uh is also very true there is there is always as long as there are humans there is there is hope it's because we all have the ability to transcend our understanding of the world it happens all the time we've either experienced it or we've seen it in others where people come to an understanding that changes their relationship to the world around them to the people around them changes their values and therefore changes the trajectory of their life and that is where free will resides is in the the possibility that we have at any given moment but what does that is emotion what does that is 1:5:27 a feeling in a moment is a contextualized experience that opens a new path it cannot be reasoned to it can be reasoned towards but the actual catalyst can only occur free will resides in the balls all right folks bye-bye blew out the chicken man in philly last night they blew up down on the boardwalk they're looking for a fight trouble busting in from out of state be a rumble on the promenade and the gambling commission is hanging on by the skin of his teeth anything i got a job put some money away but i got the kind of deaths no honest man can pay so i drowned all i have from the central trust i bought us two tickets everybody's giving me business about my background what would you want right behind me here i'm afraid i'm not an interior decorator what kind of art what would you like to see behind me i'm going to do a little uh i don't know there's something about the blankness of it i kind of like like we're talking here right we're like we're we're spinning things out of nothingness concepts and ideas we're bouncing them around it's it's a it's a fragile moment in time and that background is sort of the the palette you know if there's something there it seems like it's too over determined you know like it it it shapes subconsciously for the person watching it what they're going to be responding to and i don't know if i like that i kind of like the idea that's just empty i mean i gotta say the options i'm seeing here in the list are a little try hard soviet soviet flag really really have you not gotten anything out of these talking about the funkopops you know what i should do i should nail a bunch of dvd covers for kids movies like from the uh elizabeth warren uh barber shop if anyone remembers that one of the funniest bits of fake campaign shenanigans ever if anyone doesn't remember this during the uh there was an attempt to create a elizabeth warren barber shop where they showed a bunch of black dudes hanging around in a what was clearly a recently rented office space and to make it appear more authentic they hung a bunch of dvd covers dvd covers like peter rabbit the the ***** cgi movie uh honestly if it was going to be anything it would be you know some cosmic ***** you know like a a weed alien you know or yeah like a franz fazetta thing something kind of cosmic nothing too not grounded or political because that's not really all right so i'm settling on a book to do starting next not next wednesday the wednesday after that uh for a book club about the german revolution and i think i'm gonna go with at least the beginning i just gotta make sure it's available because okay you

can rent it you can rent kindles wow weird uh maybe we'll do like the first quarter of it or something uh the weimar republic by eberhard kolb and uh we'll like we did with reconstruction we'll go through another pivotal turning point that didn't turn to explain how we got where we are because i really do feel that we can only understand our moment if we understand it as one of capital triumph of the defeat of of socialism as a challenge to capitalism now that doesn't mean that we're doomed it doesn't mean we have nothing to do it just means that our uh the the concepts that we have inherited from the left uh tradition need to be re-examined in a way that we really aren't doing instead what we tend to do is fetishize uh what in retrospect are are a lot of movements that were always circumscribed by the failure uh to achieve the kind of critical mass necessary to challenge capitalism but that'll be fun we'll talk about uh we'll talk about the sdp it is amazing to think that in the country where socialism was always supposed to emerge and meaning the place where the culture the balance the cultural national uh and economic balance of capitalism sustained exactly the sort of uh counter-hegemonic socialist uh milieu that marx predicted was in the end bourgeoisie out of revolutionary potential before the radical moment occurred and you know if it's interesting enough we might read the whole thing we'll see because the weimar the entire weimar republic is of course a fascinating period and and uh i i mean i don't i don't really think it's terribly um relevant to the current moment as we've discussed many times but i think it is relevant to why we're at the moment we are meaning we have the ingredients for a socialist response to the crisis of capitalism uh that emerged in europe in the early 20th century that failed it failed and and say since the father soviet union we have been living in a in the uh in the world the capital and that means looking at how we got here and it means looking at as i've become more and more fixated on recently contingency because that's the only thing that can rescue us from the horror at the end of history because that is the real joke of fukiyama you know people made fun of people made fun of fukuyama for 20 years after 9 11 happened oh lol history ended considering what fukiyama meant by that he was basically correct because we might have things like islamic terrorism and and uh you know crisis is emerging uh uh and a continual uh conflicts within and between systems and societies in america in the world but they're all totalized within capitalism like we are there there is no more uh conflict between uh social orders there's no more conflict between something other than capitalism whatever it might be uh communism or or pre-capitalist social orders that resisted capitalism being imposed on it defeated but capitalism as marx knew uh unchecked will still at some point reach a point of critical and unresolvable crisis because of the contradictions contained within it whether or not socialism as it was understood uh in the 19th and 20th century can challenge it it still has a crisis within itself that has

to be chap has to be confronted i mean it's it's all of our duties as human beings to confront the crisis that we see around us and that make up and the thing about that cold war with china is i'm sorry china is not an alternative to capitalism you might it might be an alternative it might be an alternative state structure and i would i would agree that it has that uh that chinese capitalism is a uh more socialized i 0:11:35 guess or coordinated restrained whatever you want to call it version of capitalism uh but its essential engine is the same and the process and you could really say that like what distinguishes it from from our like capitalism the conflict between china and amer anglo-america really is a snake it's the snake eating its own tail it's the most advanced end of capitalism smack dab running into the tail end the most recent formation of capitalism uh on literally the other side of the world from where it was and so i really do think you either get con you either get apocalyptic confrontation 0:12:36 if and that's that would be determined more by resources than anything more by external and exogenous crises created by things like uh global warming and you know uh conflict over real like real conflict over resources uh or it'll be some sort of merger it'll be some sort of leveraged buyout because within those systems there's nothing within any of them but the thing that we can really take is solace first is that we're all going to die everybody's gonna die so all the really horrible stuff you're worried about imagining happening the real monstrosities you're not gonna see them you're gonna die before that and even the people who have to live in those horrible worlds they're gonna die too and that's not the worst thing in the world we've made it the 0:13:37 worst thing in the and the world will continue the worlds will continue the the the eternal universe the the the self-conscious mind that is the universe will still persist and and on the land on on land somewhere there will be some conscious beings who are able to bring together and synthesize the strands of history to to to transcend what seems to be the intractable why would you rather your species lives on you wha why be speciesist like we are we have like humans obviously we talk about like species 0:14:39 being and all that but like that really is only one level of a process like coming into awareness of humanity as like a collective organism is really just one stage because that distinction between human and non-human is also as arbitrary as the distinction between an individual person and i mean when i really get when i really get shoed up i think about the fact that you know time moves both backwards and forwards and the very fact that we're all here that there is a thing that we're experiencing means that somewhere someplace at some time in some part of the universe some 0:15:40 collective so what's happening with aaron rodgers i've stopped caring about football for a long time i really just was rooting for aaron rodgers to get another super bowl because i think he's really it's really funny i i actually used to be as a high schooler i was super super super super super into football uh it was an unhealthy thing you know

i was i was a loser i was i was relatively friendless but i lived in wisconsin and uh football was a was a ritual of of catharsis that i could engage in uh i when i was a kid i saw the super bowl where the i saw the packers win a super bowl and that was 0:16:41 i thought oh my god i'll never get happier than this but then the next year uh well when they went back to play the broncos i watched that super bowl i watched the super bowl they won uh i saw that in a basement with the friends i did have had a great time i was very excited uh thought it was amazing next year i was in a hospital bed uh with my folks watching it on a tv because i had to have surgery on my spine the next day and i watched them lose and i just couldn't care it was like it just i could not invest any kind of emotional energy into it and i think that experience kind of broke me when it came to football later on i did end up having a weird fixation 0:17:44 but uh but i could never really get back into the packers and when they won the super bowl against the steelers it was just like hey cool i didn't really care that much but i do honestly more than anything i would like aaron rodgers to get uh what is get his real wish and become jeopardy host he should just i only watch soccer at the world cup single the elimination format the nationalism somebody says you should 0:18:51 host jeopardy uh i mean they won't even they wouldn't i have i've auditioned for jeopardy three times and i made it to the audition round where like they talk to you and you do the fake game and like you give them your photograph and they give you your phone number and everything three times i have been pre covered i was a big 0:20:6
bar i would never call it a pub quiz because i'm not pretending to be english nothing lower than an american who uses british slang just no thank you somebody's mom is mad at me for some reason i don't know what somebody asked the trip my our bar trivia name when i lived in milwaukee we had a team that won dominated every every play every time we played it at this one bar and we were called the hezbollahs my opinion on cajuns how why would i have an opinion on a a rel any an ethnic or 0:21:11 or linguistic group that's like isn't that like 19th century ***** like what is your like oh yes they're they're they're a cleric people uh the their tropic blood uh they seem like they have a good time i'll say that with the zydeco music and the and the gumbo seems to be at a good time you get you go down there you get that you get that good gumbo oh yeah you get that rule you pull you guys i will say that new orleans is is yeah one of the only american cities with its i mean it is astounding when you if you live in america and you visit our cities how similar they are they really do have at this point us template like they really did just start spamming like williamsburg at most 0:22:12 mid-sized american cities new orleans is i do love that uh that louisiana apparently their like civic code is based on the code napoleon and not common law seattle's i mean seattle's fine the thing is a lot of american cities have gorgeous surroundings like have they have beautiful natural environments and some of them have interesting

architecture but for the most part they're like the stuff in them is is very like it's from 0:23:15 a box and i'd say like at this point seattle definitely is like that you know because the tech money tech like tech money is colonizing urban areas because it's the only money there is thank you just exists to do things like uh like dominate urban spaces it's not actually productive which is the like i said in the last stream the real the real sign that you know as as totalizing in the as the system appears something on the horizon either horrifying or liberatory or most likely a combination of both is on the horizon because there is nowhere to put there's nowhere to get profit there's nowhere to get profit in the system which was what marx predicted what happened but what we don't have is a working class mobilized to take the productive forces created by 0:24:19 capitalism you know it's a good historic speaking of new orleans though you know what's a good uh alternate history idea is after napoleon was uh defeated he was offered asylum in uh new orleans and he said he decided to say he decided to not do it and i always wondered like what if napoleon comes to the u.s like how much of a headache would that have been for the american government but you know he he had his ***** chance he had his chance he could have allied with toussaint and he ***** it up yeah uh what if napoleon moves the united states another good one what 0:25:26 if marx moves to the united states because marx and engels wanted to go to texas after the 48 revolution and it's not even like marx decided not to go he needed uh because he was in exile from prussian authorities and they denied his uh submission for a passport the hor the thing that i like that seems like it might be cool but like i imagine him getting ***** hung by the confederates like a bunch of the other uh german uh unionists at the beginning of the war is this making a bunch of noise are 0:26:29 people having like are people having issues because this is going by the by this the thing nobody the guy didn't tell me why his mom's mad at me by the way i want to know if you're still in here please tell me i can't believe andrew yang is gonna be the next mayor of new york that's so perfect it really it does show that we've reached 0:27:30 just total critical exhaustion and there's a civil war shooter wait a minute so like first person like you got a musket and then and then you shoot it again like call of duty that seems like the single worst way to do civil war combat in a video game so you're just like a private or are you like are you organizing at like what at like the the company level or the regimental level what is it because i think a game a game 0:28:31 from like the of a civil war game from the position of like a captain or a kernel of a regiment i think could be interesting because it seems like that is like the level of size of of unit for that war that would be the most interesting to deal with like if it's too big then you know you might as well be playing uh uh you know any other of those big strategy games but too small and it's like what the ***** are you even doing i always ***** because i've i've tried to play those civil war games where you're like

clicking on the units and moving them and it feels a little cold i feel like like like a regimental or company would be a better better unit to bet to fight from but who am i kidding i'm not going to play any i've never really found a video game style that i've really enjoyed like i uh shooters to me are either uh too chaotic or tedious uh the like even the board game click it's weird i just it's not it's like it's a it's at this point it is a universal pastime for people but i just have never been able to find one that made me want yeah i mean twitter is my game twitter is the video game i play although i gotta say i'm on it much less i know i told people to tell me to log off and i i haven't completely but i don't tweet nearly as much as i used to i don't get the endorphins anymore i do scroll more than i wish i did but part of that is just i do feel this weird frankly i mean you know it is a professional obligation to sort of swish through the the the currents although you know it's also just it's at this point an ingrained but yeah like i've even lost like the gamification part of twitter i'm not even really even gamifying it anymore because i'm no longer you know doing the uh the subconsciously i don't know someone's asking about pre-history i wish i knew more i'm going to start listening to the patrick wyman series that he's doing on tides of history do i think it's possible for biden to be primary i mean it's possible and that someone could primary him obviously but you mean he could be defeated for the nomination obviously no uh could it be like a productive use of time i also kind of doubt i think national politics is done for and i know some people are mad at me for saying that because well you guys cared so much about it and it's like yeah we thought things were one way and then as marlowe pointed out uh they're another way and we've been having to deal with the reality of that and that we all have to deal with that we all have to deal with the world of we understand it not conforming to our understanding and our expectation of it and i think with a lot of people who who hold on to partisan politics who decide we're gonna that uh we're gonna like stake out the traitors who who let us down this pat path or we're going to uh own our our enemies by rooting for the republicans instead are people who just can't give up on the idea that there is something meaningful there is some agency to engaging in in electoral politics and like retrospectively i now realize that a lot of what we thought mattered didn't matter but we had to learn we had to learn and i think that is one of the big uh unexamined blind spots of a lot of radical leftists is that they uh demand that people accept their maximalist positions on the need for revolution on this uh strength of their argument for them but arguments aren't what make people believe things arguments are not what make people believe things experience is what makes people believe things and so somebody tells you what are you bothering with electoral politics for you should be picking up a gun well first of all you're not picking up a gun second of all i might die why would i want to do that i could vote instead they have you have to experience it you have to try and the alamo nervous flies at dusk indeed the stuff with the pro act and the fact 0:35:42 that you got mansion on board and biden supporting it it's interesting it's certainly more than obama did with card check in 2008 where he said during the campaign i'll support it and then they just let it die without really any kind of fun fair in the senate and now they're saying now you got buying supporting pro act i mean what is the difference there the difference one of the big differences is that obama had 60 votes in the senate and if he had made uh card check a priority uh it would have actually been something that might have passed here with a 50 50 senate and uh and the nice diffusion of responsibility between warner and uh kristen cinema and mark kelly you can have a guy like manchin who is taking heat for things like 15 minimum wage come out in favor of the pro act with no expectation that it will pass like the real problem is that there is no there is no mechanism to compel these 0:36:46 so they're only going to pass the pro act if they find it in their interest to and as currently constructed there's no way that i see the democratic party imagining its interest to be the passage of the pro act because at this point it is far more captured by business interests than it is by uh organized labor which is of course you know a shadow of its former self and and yes the pro act could change that but it does it it hasn't changed it yet there isn't the influence yet i have someone asked weirdly 0:38:4 if i've eaten alligator i had alligator at a state fair the wisconsin state fair i believe it was i have been to three state fairs i believe i've been to a number of wisconsin state fairs obviously the minnesota state fair and a couple years ago the iowa state fair they're always delightful uh dionysian rituals and yeah sometimes you can get exotic foods and i remember got some fried alligator i state fairs are not free to enter you this is interesting how can we be confident something historically contingent will 0:39:5 emerge that we can plug into we can't be we can't be confident of anything we can't be confident of anything that is one thing that i become more and more convinced of as time passes is that absolutely uh dominated my mind for years and and really uh hindered me in a lot of ways and made me uh a frightened and uh and cowardly person was this fixation on on feeling confident about something about feeling like something was real before i took a step uh and i realized now hopefully not you know not too late because i'm still here that that we we have we can only have confidence in we can't have confidence in anything abstract confidence meaning like setting our 0:40:6 course on its we can only have confidence in things and a lot of us i know i often get dominated by by and neurotic fixation on uh like the veracity of of institutions and concepts and persistent states that is irrelevant to it that are irrelevant to us uh and leave us unequipped to deal with the world in front of us because that that lack 0:41:7 of that that anxiety about confidence that the anxiety about about the certainty of

the persistence of things robs us of our uh of our focus and our and our ability to be present so i would say there is i have no confidence that something will emerge that we can latch on to but i do know i know from my life such contingency is possible that there is nothing else that i can wait for or rely on and that i have to operate day to day for the assumption that even if this thing won't materialize that i it is my duty to myself and to the world and to the people around me to be ready for 0:42:8 it and then if it doesn't happen what if it doesn't happen is raleigh fingers best name for a pitcher that's a good question raleigh fingers is a good pitcher's name the brewers those early 80s brewers had a bunch of good pictures names pete vukovic was another great pitcher's name goose gossage very good catfish hunter vita blue 0:43:12 oh my god that's such a good one not a huge fan of him but dennis eckersley has like a musicality to it that's really cool so this is the kind of baseball uh fan i was like when i was a little kid i didn't know how to play baseball i was very uncoordinated i was on a soft i was the second baseman on a softball team that lost every game it played but i had i was hugely uh well read on uh baseball history and facts and ***** mordecai three finger brown god randy johnson randy johnson might be the 0:44:13 best he's not he's not because pedro martinez is the greatest pure pitcher of all time in my opinion but randy johnson is probably the best doc ellis great name probably the best left-handed pitcher of all time and he's got one of the most like boring nolan ryan is honestly a great pitcher or a great name craig maddox is fine but come on randy ***** johnson get out of here brett saberhagen oral hirschheiser bert blylevin bill spaceman lee bill lee isn't too good but you throw space man in there huh clayton kershaw isn't really like that cool of a name by itself but it is nice because it makes him seem like a civil war general ferguson jenkins yes very good madison bumgardner 0:45:16 excellent grover cleveland alexander sandy koufax not bad some people are naming non-pitchers and just literally naming baseball players here but i don't know how you don't like i guess it's for nerds baseball's for nerds at the end of the day because it's got the most history it's got all the names it's just you can like swirl it around like a snifter of brandy but yes like as a thing to watch of course it's boring but that's the whole point is that you can watch it and be thinking about all this other stuff and the context makes it interesting ben sheets man the brewers really they never gave 0:46:20 him a team worthy of his talent he was a he should have won at least one sai young but that was before people chief bender that's a good one dump oh man throwing me back to the to the 2010 brewers that was a hell of a team that was probably the last time i really cared about baseball was uh were those were those brewer joba 0:47:21 chamberlain that's another good one juan marishall who famously uh went beast mode on a catcher when he was uh batting he he believed he thought that a catcher threw the ball back like nicked his ear and he just went insane and started hitting the wild it's funny the the dh debate has like super hyper partisans on both sides and 0:48:22 it's honestly i can i honestly can see both sides of that because there is something elegant about the idea of a nine person team nine guys on the field nine buys bat but then there is something uh also i mean like the fact that you've got a guy like ohtani with the angels right he couldn't play for the national league and bat as much as he pitches the way that he can with the dh and like a guy a a two-way player like him there should be a mechanism to allow him to to do his thing and really the dh is the only thing that allows that to to happen i kind of like the idea of the fact that there's one one league with one and one or the other i i always thought that was kind of neat but what's ruined it is that they broke down the dividing line between the 0:49:23 leagues when i was a kid the ***** umpires had hats that said al or nl on them and they never played each other now they're all smushed together and eventually you're going to have a total by definition everything has to get squished squished together into one thing i mean if i had my way honestly people talk about like what to do with uh you know pace of play and and making it more interesting i think the way they're going is they're going to shorten the games they're going to shorten the season and they're going to extend the playoffs they're going to make it like basketball and you know that's inevitable there's no point arguing about it but if you're going to keep 162 game season i really do think that with that many games played you should have as little postseason contingency as possible you have played 162 games you know who 0:50:26 the best teams are so have the two best teams play no no play no playoffs at all like the old pennant days 162 games at the end of it the best record of the american league and the best record of the national league play a nine game world series that would be my preference but if they're gonna make it like a ***** hundred game season or whatever and have half the teams and they're fine whatever but you have to short you have to short the season if you do that because it's absurd why are you playing 162 games why are you playing that many games because the whole point of that is to have the numbers like clear out the contingency and the randomness and show you the actual ***** skill like like pan through the gold for the real ***** and then okay now have them play having like three game season three uh game playoff seasons after 162 games to me is absurd because how that you don't know anything 0:51:29 out of that it's it's totally random at yeah baseball has too many games for me to follow like basketball that is why if they're going to expand the playoffs they need to short in the regular season shorten the season extend the playoffs or leave the season the way it is and get rid of the playoffs those those are the two options as i see them of course i'm not totally unbiased here because in 2011 the brewers clearly the best team in the national league central by far were defeated by the ***** what 90 win or something like that st louis cardinals in the playoffs and then they got to go to the

***** world series where they also beat through flukes another superior team those 0:52:30 ***** the only real abiding emotion i have related to any sport isn't love for any team it is hatred for the cardinals like at this point i don't really even care about the brewers although i mean hell if they like really tore into it i would start caring again but all i really have is hatred for the cardinals then there's a book about a college football call to hate like this is to be happy forever and i do think that that gets it 0:53:31 something very very important about sports which is that the hatred of the enemy is much more uh deeply felt than the love of of the team that you root for and i think that extends to a lot of talk about jesus talking about i would love to talk to david roth about baseball but i don't think anybody else knows anything no nobody else is a baseball fan on the show i have to say that uh to this day i'm proud of myself that 0:55:2 in 2001 when the yankees were in the world series against the the absolutely flavorless uh expansion dog ***** diamondbacks and like america was rooting for the yankees after 9 11. uh i was absolutely rooting for the ***** diamondbacks and i was when craig council uh won that game i was out of my chair because ***** the yankees forever all right gonzalez what did council was there though right was council the run can't remember all i know is i was happy yeah he scored the one for the marlins 0:56:5 and the diamondbacks two dog ship now the one sport i would like to watch but i can't because there's no american version is probably rugby because at this point and football is just except for you know the playoffs and ***** it just there's it's too it's too glacial it's amazing how people talk about how baseball's boring and then that's 0:57:19 a question with an easy one uh unarguable answer major league well there's a red fire burning on the kaiahoga river rolling into cleveland to the lake that was shot at uh old the lord can make you tumble the lord can make you turn the lord can make you overflow it's funny uh i remember reading moneyball and be devouring it and feeling 0:58:21 like oh my god this is amazing but you look back on it now and it's just another brick in the wall of turning everybody uh who watches the game into into management it turns and and you know that's not just the fault of statistic of sabermetrics and all that but the instinctual side the instinctual uh sports fan uh identification in the inherently um conflictual relationship between players and owners is always owners it's always going to be owners because has anyone ever told me i look like philip 0:59:23 seymour hoffman we did a live show in la uh two years ago i think it was that i uh it was at a church it was at a church that was being renovating and to pay for the renovation they had were having uh public they were having events you know and so they were getting a share they were getting like a fee for for hosting events so we did this show in this church and everyone was at pews and apparently people who were there said the sound was absolutely dog ***** nobody could hear us but the tickets were cheap um and afterwards the wife of the deacon who had helped us set up stopped me on the stairs as we were leaving the church and said you know you look just like that philip seymour she was like 55 years old you look just like that philip seymour hoffman he was still alive at that point so thank you very much for the he 1:0:25 because she thought you meant dead you looked dead or maybe he was dead ***** maybe she 2014 so he was dead by then all right she was owning me congratulations she was owning the ***** out of me ***** well congratulations i got owned now i won't do any heroin not a fan of any opiates never been no thank you psychedelics yes of course crucial part of a balanced diet uh no no no opiates for me ketamine is 1:1:26 a psychedelic i would say or dissociative whatever you want to call i've never huffed gas like philip seymour hoffman in love lies i know i mean i've obviously you know smelled gas when i was pumping it and been like i've never done the isolation tank the john lily thing and i kind of want to one of these days i'm going to get i'm i mean 1:2:41 of course i go on joe rogan obviously why would i want to talk to 10 million you go in there and you just get to like ***** play-doh their brains like ***** carl spackler caddyshack with the plastic explosive of course i oh the snortable weed all right i'm 1:3:44 gonna go in a second this is the last thing i'll talk about i just saw that yesterday the thing about the snorty snortable weed and that is absolutely fascinating to me so presumably this is people who want to feel something edgy about doing doing weed now that we weed is uh been domesticated and so the way that they've decided to do that is to i don't know what kind of what it would give you yeah like are you gonna start like boiling weed over a spoon and then like injecting dabs like at a certain point you just have to accept okay weed is uh is normie ***** now weed is basically budweiser then do it if you don't don't maybe now you just have to confront that 1:4:46 your subcultural relationship to it can't persist but some people say no no no no no no no no confront the the the uh confront what goes into my preferences and like maybe tease out what i really am going for here no no no no no i would much much rather uh just pretend and bang out some ***** uh some rails of you got to imagine that a lot of like uh moms who got made fun of for saying things like are you snorting weed can now vindicate be vindicated and say if somebody offered it to me i would try it though of course just to see what the ***** that what would that do like is it an instantaneous thing is it like an edible one i mean presumably like because it's 1:5:48 right there it would like hit your brain very quickly i don't know i don't know i'm not buying any though yeah weed suppositories that's next stuff it up your ass you gotta figure that the time release okay so see you guys next week and then i think the next week the week after next week i'll try to do once again i don't know what the assignment will be because i haven't really looked at the book yet i'll put it on twitter probably week after next week we'll i'll start talking about the beginning of uh kobe's book the weimar republic and we'll figure out hey what the hell is going

a great time yo melinda hit my line melinda hit my line hell bill hit my line that's a lot of money i mean i know what i would want to do with it mostly incredible pranks just like next level pranks like ***** with entire like towns realities doing sort of uh gorilla truman shows on not a person but on an entire area like overnight four in the morning you ***** put the dome from under the dome or the simpsons movie over a small town and then you film what happens that's what you could do with bill or melinda so i'm kind of getting back a little bit to talking a little broad theory stuff here because i'm trying to work things out for projects and for you know my own understanding and i really do feel like the best format i have found for kind of 0:4:17 getting things clear to myself as a first pass is by coming on here and talking so i realized that a lot of what i might say coming up here is just kind of tautological like it doesn't really actually explain anything it's not meaningful that it's kind of just a descriptive paradigm uh and if that's the case that's fine but it's a useful paradigm i think for me in contextualizing you know the big questions which any kind of uh theory is supposed to deal with which is you know how do i respond to the world around me like that's really the point is you're supposed to know how am i supposed to respond to the world around me and i feel like this this is sort of a framework that uh hell should seems like it might be able to help me with that and i don't so i want 0:5:18 to talk today about the role that belief faith has not not on the left not in socialism but in capitalism and in fact under all systems of uh of hierarchy and civilization that we've ever had so what compels people to participate in an exploitative social arrangement is not mere force right it is social coercion through hegemonic concepts and what that means is belief what that means is that you choose to do things because you believe certain things about the world you what i mean i mean by belief is you are acting on faith on the assumption that a fictive thing will persist that a fictive notion and throughout human history what that fictive notion man included 0:6:23 a whole bunch of things that were all socially related to one another the individual is one of them and that's important to note that the individual is the first fiction it's the first fake thing we believe in is the idea that there is a a persistent coherent individual identity traveling through time and that is the first fiction now how much we believe in that and how we uh relate to that concept is determined by our social around surroundings and the social the nature of our social the social life and so that means that for most of human history the self was only one of was one of many things that we all believed in god as a as a personalized concept is something a lot of 0:7:24 us believe for a long time uh the the idea that there is a supernatural transcendent element to the world that can't be uh perceived not rationally but emotionally uh is something that makes people go along with uh machineries of of oppression but also production also you know all the good things that we get out of society all the stuff that allows us to thrive a lot all the stuff that allows our individuality and the uh people around us that we have emotional relationships to and so one of the things we believe in is that the structures around us serve that purpose and our willingness to go along is determined by our degree of belief now a lot of that belief if we're at the top end of the distribution of resources and pain like the least amount 0:8:25 of pain the most amount of resources believing in it is very easy because it gives us all benefit if we're on the ***** end of the stick believing it is harder and when you're in the middle of course you're in the perilous precarious zone where uh we're believing it is a daily struggle but that material part is only only part of it there is a a mental structure a notion of the world in your head that validates the system that you live under and the the history of the collapse of social systems is partially the story of belief collapsing belief in the uh the legitimacy of these systems because the legitimacy of the systems comes in contact with our other uh the other fictions that we believe in like the self like uh our religious concepts whatever cosmology 0:9:27 that we've we've uh created to determine right from wrong to determine to to to rank uh experiences from preferable to to avoidable and when those come in conflict conflict our belief in that uh leaves a hole which causes our willingness to invest in the system uh to reduce and a vicious cycle that ends up seeing energy directed outward seeing the system collapse and seeing new new ideas and new structures emerge with new validations and new fictions that everybody uh can agree on or at least can over time be sort of colonized into believing it and that's that's throughout history but then when you get to capitalism and the individual then when you get to the modern era you have for over time what has happened is that those other things that are in there in the social world in the social fiction alongside the self the individual they go away and the process of capitalism is the process of those things going away faster and faster as market relationships overall the the uh social and as that and as our lives become more and more isolated thanks to technology of separation and uh and so while the beginning uh in the beginning of capitalism is of course with the primacy of the individual and by now we've reached a critical point where uh the only thing we have left to believe in is the self and that the crisis of liberal capitalism or liberal capitalism in america you know it's it's unequal in a combined development i'm talking about where i'm from what i'm used to this this end stage system that we're finding ourselves in this decadent western uh hegemony that seems to be losing its stamina and reason for being and the reason for that is that once the once the when the individual and capitalism emerge as the primary notions they're intertwined because if the individual is the only thing that you can believe in then the only way that the individual can thrive is in a system defined by uh market transactions between strangers because it's the only thing that doesn't require some sort of trust some sort of bond beyond uh recognition of like someone in a similar right category of human humanity or whatever or citizenship and absent that uh feeling of connection it has to be a transaction that's the only relationship that can be registered as uh not dangerous because it's supported by the state because it's it's validated by force that's transcended from any of the individuals within it and so that that reality creates a belief in capitalism but here's the important distinction we start believing in capitalism once it emerges from an individual perspective not as the validator of a system we believe in capitalism for the utilitarian observation that it allows for the individual to be uh to be actualized and so belief in capitalism which exists and which undergirds the entire system from a social point of view is dependent upon a belief in the result in if i agree with this framework if i agree with this uh this political economic arrangement then i will be able to thrive and the reason that america was sort of able to conquer the world is because it was able to take capitalism and apply it to a massive swath of despoilable and uh uh alienatable resources to a greater and greater circle of people within the the definition of citizenship and therefore bolster faith belief in the system because it gets results it's a cargo called it gets results why how no one really knows but it gets results and it's the and i think our current crisis is the totalization of disenchantment nobody at any point get of uh participation in american capitalism believes in it anymore they don't believe that the system can give them consistent results now that doesn't mean that they don't believe in an abstract notion of the market no because many of them identify their individuality with that market what they disbelieve in is the notion of uh of the of the democrat the liberal democratic model liberal smart small l liberal democratic model of participatory democracy delivering capitalist uh uh outcomes now of course that's not the case but they don't they reject that they have a false understanding of that that's part of but every strata of american society is being confronted with the fact that they can't get what they uh have been promised from capitalism now at the poor end what that leads to is a disengagement from trying uh people in uh the ***** uh people in school reform love to talk about grit they love to talk about the difference between a kid who succeeds in a bad school with a with a uh a dominantly mobile social milieu and one who doesn't is grit and what that they mean by that is a willingness to to stick with things and i think that what you see at the bottom end of the distribution of resources in in twilight america is a recognition that there's no reason to try because there is no reason to believe that there will be an outcome that uh values that effort so why try and so that leads to paralysis stagnation deaths of despair drugs not all those things in the middle strata it leads to people losing their commitment to the political uh uh framework of liberal democracy one way or the other a willingness to try to accommodate a broad uh uh political milieu because they think that's the thing that's caught that's there there's no reason to believe in the system because it cannot provide the political outcomes that they expect and so that's how you get uh politics dividing broadly into uh ***** your feelings fascist conservatism in terms of its emotional valence i mean it's not fascism but like a a and exterminate the brutes ***** your feelings rejection of of the commons on the on the right and then kill the hicks uh uh because they've both given up on the project and then in the at the top in the political class and then in the like the real ruling class of finance and ***** and and silicon valley you have a disenchantment because at the top of capitalism as capitalism accelerates and as the secular stagnation persists and as the decree of the the rate of profit continues to decline there's less and less uh given the system for discretion uh by managers both in the political and in the business sphere what power is defined as is discretion the ability to choose to do one thing and not another thing and that really is a luxury of the human pilots of capitalism to get to imagine themselves exercising power by making choices and those choices have effects and they go down through the system and they shape its direction but in a narrow band and over time as capitalism maintain continues its its totalizing force eventually that that range of uh discretion of rule of power is shrunk until you don't get to make choices anymore and so there's no reason to invest in the game of power except for the most very narrow personal uh reasons like you can't even believe this ***** i truly believe that our political elites until very recently believed a lot of the horseshit about america they believed it at a visceral level because they were part of a system that rewarded their effort that rewarded their power and discretion by changing and moving at their at their command now they are feeling more and more as though they are instruments of something beyond themselves and so that makes them less uh invested in anything other than the most narrow because this is the real kick to the dick of the whole thing is that in previous societies and social orders this decline of belief in the ruling elite ruling ideology and the ruling structures might well lead to people trying to find something else some other forms of power emerging and of course you know they're going to have their own hierarchy but they're going to move things along dialectically we are now at a point where people have for stopped believing in the system as such and they're blaming somebody for it you know if it's q anon if it's online communists if it's uh uh uh woke people freaking out about white supremacy uh if it's liberals worrying about russia everyone believes that the experiment is failing and that they don't and they believe that effort will be uh rewarded with anything so that cheating and uh and disengagement are the only rational things because this of the totalizing nature of capitalism that disenchantment is only going is only recuperated by itself by the self we used to believe in a system as a delivery mechanism for the self so that we could plan a life around engagement with the system now all we have left is ourselves and so we are thinking becomes incredibly short term because we know we don't know that tomorrow any of the systems that we have today are going to give us anything but we do know what we want we think we know what we want in the moment and we know we think we know how we might go about getting it and so we engage with the world to get that narrow quick soothing boost of that that dopamine hit that serotonin bump whatever it is that gets us through the day and capitalism because at this point so much of its mechanisms are now technological and don't even require us to engage with them or believe in them because they operate independently are still churning and producing pleasures and producing distractions for us to engage with and to gain the system to and so there is no next step there there is no counter form there's no uh there's no antithesis developing to this we are only turning into uh self into self self uh pleasure seeking machines which is exactly what the ***** machinery of technol of uh capitalism wants if we're only self-seeking if we're only seeking closest pleasure to ourselves we have no belief in any social fiction beyond our the reality of our ego then the technological uh mechanisms of capitalism can lead us around by that oh we know what you like we have the algorithm we know what's pleasure for you we know what's pain we can threaten you with one and offer you the other and even though we never have to really give you anything we can and so and so instead of us getting uh any kind of class consciousness or species being awareness what's coming to self-awareness is the ***** money what's coming to self-awareness is the ***** algorithm we are becoming and that's why the only antidote to this the real antithesis that will develop will have to be have to begin with 0:23:51 a revolution in belief a breaking of the solipsistic cycle where our disenchantment with the the horrible brutality and unfairness of the system that we live in leads us only to further reify our own egos and try to a a transcendence of that cycle where we are connecting ourselves emotionally we are believing in as in stuff that we can't know we are believing in a solidarity with other people and finding that our actions in accordance with solidarity feel both selfish they feel like they're for our own good but not in the destructive selfish way that our uh individual pursuits are we still do it not because we want to be good not because we have the the uh 0:24:54 puritan american superego slapping us in the ass saying no you have to be a good person which is currently what drives a lot of people to be on the left right now it will be a actual felt emotional uh commonality of so like i said i don't know if that's actually like means anything you know but i do think that it does if you use think of it that way it helps you understand uh exactly what the stakes are with a lot of these uh questions the political questions we we deal with we think we're looking at a political contest but we're really a meaningful political contest but we're really looking at a cultural ritual of self-affirmation today uh the other the other day there was the cia woke uh recruitment video and of course it caused a huge uh torrent of 0:25:55 discussion about what does this say about the left and liberalism and all this stuff and people say this proves that the left is culturally hegemonic and and what does that mean and are they not and i would say and then people argue at the point of is i would say that i don't think you can look at the vocabularies used by power the vocabulary is used in media and say that uh that in the constant cultural uh like dialogue between acceptable and unacceptable principles between virtuous and and uh and villainous ideas that broadly the left is the center of the terms in culture but that doesn't mean what people want it to mean or what they think it means when 0:26:56 they talk about power because while this is political it is political in the sense that all culture is political all politics is culture and neither one of them are connected to power anymore that is the thing all of this left right conflict is happening detached from power power is being executed by the algorithm behind the scenes the constant whirring buzzing crunching machine sound you hear is the conveyor belt moving without anyone holding the ***** gears anyone tending to any of it what we're all doing instead is arguing about a political space and with political terms around a political spectacle that is at every level detached because while we might argue about this stuff the only real decisions of merit of matter that matter are being made by 0:27:57 planning that's what capitalism is and it does not need us it needs us to consume right here anyway in america it needs us to consume and to create an infrastructure to facilitate consumption and so as part of that we have to walk around thinking that we're participating in a system we have to believe in it and so we are spending our last few wasps of belief participating in this meanwhile the thing happens behind the scenes because people want to say like this means the left is succeeded or it's or one 0:29:1 or something this is what it wanted the left is not a coherent system a coherence uh movement with power with an orientation to power it is individuals with des uh self definitions now what in that pursuit they might do some left ***** they might start a union at their workplace they might uh join an org that does a campaign they might help elect somebody to office they might change the tenor of discussion of issues they might even get some things done in terms of laws and and uh getting union contracts and whatnot but they're not doing it as part of a project they're doing 0:30:2

it as a bunch of people expressing their preferences and the antithesis that could challenge capitalism will have to be something else will have to be lashed together through bonds that so i don't know that might have just just totally a self-suck but i do think it's useful because people get stuck i know i do on questions of uh basic superstructure and of how how things move like the the machinery doesn't just go on its own like we we move it with our actions every day because we choose to 0:31:3 participate in it and that participation creates changing and evolving understandings of the world that change our relationship to it and change our actions even though we're within these structures and the way i think of it is you've got this you know uh this line this this this cable and then you've got the current running through it and that is all of us living within the iron armature of uh and of course at that point i once again stall out what do you do with that information i aha keep your nose to the grindstone once again keep your eyes on the prize it's every day there's a chance that it could be the day that your life changes and that's uh it's certainly a cop-out but i think it's less dishonest than than maintaining a k-fade consequence 0:32:4 uh i would love to do self to power for china it really does look like woke cold war is uh on the offing which is pretty great did you uh see that a there's a uyghur uh like wing of al-qaeda that the uh was involved that's been involved in afghanistan since the ***** uh since 9 11 before 9 11 and which uh the us military waged a offensive specifically against in 2018 in afghanistan has now been taken off of the sp state spot the terrorist watch list it's no and it's no longer a terrorist group i mean ***** i don't really think there's going to be a war but you certainly see how uh the 0:33:6 momentum in both parties this is where it's very important uh is towards some sort of confrontation of china and it really is interesting like uh there was this spurious case that trump was like an anti-interventionist remember that trump counted as

as as the peace candidate and there are a bunch of people who say that's still true because they're convinced that hillary clinton would have like gone to war in syria if she'd been in charge and i mean you know who knows but on the big question that's on the horizon of china the one that really matters uh on that one bush and biden are on the same page and there is a totally coherent broad right-wing q-pilled argument for why we got to go to war with china just as there is a a woke uh pink-washed one uh and i mean look at the way that uh that look at ben garrison to understand how if you get another right-wing government in there that it's they're not gonna cool down the the rhetoric about china it's only gonna continue ratcheting up is that he always has uh g like as a is a demonic uh eminence gris behind biden and stuff and that's it's dumb but it's coherent you know look at this communist country that wants to undermine america uh they have all this money and look there uh our democrats have been uh selling them our debt and all this and uh you know you just pull out yellow apparel stuff and then you've got biden talking about how we need to win the competition for the 21st century and that's why no politics that's uh fixated on on tracking like momentum and influence within the two-party system is is uh is worth anyone's time as anything other than a just as a entertainment like like keeping up with the ball scores because at the real points of the the real consequential issues and like the conflict with china that ***** is like at the very tip top because not only is that that's the that's more than anything the framework for the continued uh continued justification for our military structure uh it's also a genuine live resource contest and it's ideologically charged too now there's not going to be a war i don't think but there's going to be a continued ratcheting of of uh hostility to create like this conditions of a war minus the actual and that is that's going to be the interest of both parties it really is frustrating because like the best the best interest of the world would be some sort of ***** just just make a to somebody make an offer just let me buy somebody else out like do a merger and then maybe we can act cooperatively to prevent the absolute worst catastrophic effects of of climate change but that's not going to happen for a it is amazing it's it's very cheap cheesy to think about but in a real sense because we have so many so much so much uh systemic uh technological infrastructural capitalist development there's so much that we could we could reprogram like obviously you need to change a lot of things structurally but there's a lot of stuff that could be done just like with a ***** software upgrade but we would need to we would need to want to do that and we don't want to do it because we have given up on the understandable uh yeah we need a socialism damn mother fishing waiting for a messiah well i mean the thing is we will all we're all the messiah as dumb as that sounds like the second coming isn't going to be jesus coming back it's going to be that moment that feeling of jesus coming back not just

obviously jesus you know in in that in the cultural context that feeling what people think they're talking about when they talk about it but it's not the real messiah was in fact the friends we made along the way and heaven is a place on earth i really do believe that like it is it's amazing what are we doing to the earth we are turning the earth into a place that is incredibly infernally hot right that's what our collective sin our failure to recognize each other as humans and cooperate and instead compete against each other and exploit is literally turning the earth into an inferno a fiery hot place without any uh of the perhaps a a geographical and what does uh what would a what would a true post-scarcity society look like a world where where we have equitably distributed the alienations of life maximized people's social uh react maximized uh saturated uh people's lives with social meaning and intimacy but for a mutual uh for fully mutual reinforcing benefit what would that world look like you imagine it what is it what is what other sort of uh uh mythological concept comes to mind being in a place like that with access to all kinds of technologies that can be used at your whim where everyone is your friend everyone is your intimate where you never feel disharmony or fear of violence to yourself where death isn't real because you have by by virtue of living in this in this bosom you have transcended your fiction of ego to the point where you're no longer terrified of losing this life that you understand as ephemeral that you that where death is a lightening up rather than a uh turning down of light where death is like going through a door a ***** golden door to a reunion with a cosmic oneness after living this time this seemingly endless time of spiritual and intellectual engagement and love with nothing else so these things heaven and hell we're making them every day on earth we're making uh parts of heaven hell and parts have parts of earth hell parts of it heaven the heavens for some is the hell for others so yeah like the second coming that there's one these are all essentially secular concepts and that they are happening in the material world and it's a battle that's being fought in the material world but those ideas have in hell right and wrong love and hate and fear and all that those ideas are how we how we tell a story to ourselves that moves us through the world that we find ourselves in which we have to do you cannot rely on pure sensory uh perception of the world you have to tell a story to yourself you have to tell a story that is a fiction by definition to get one foot in front of the other now some fictions correspond to other people's fictions enough to create a system that can cooperate between people and the more people have the same understanding and the more pragmatically functional it is at distributing pleasure and minimizing pain there will always be social sociopaths sure of course but do you really think it's a it's a it's a do you think one that sociopaths is a stable number of the population and two that sociopathy can be defined can be uh like corralled into one group of people who like test positive for it no it's a

spectrum of uh it's a spectrum of behavior based on a spectrum of individual uh delusion of isolation and it's distributed through the society as i mean yes we have a system now where sociopathy is not even encouraged system-wide it is brought to the top like i was just talking about even you don't even have you have a smaller and smaller number at the top of even like well-intentioned monsters there used to be well-intentioned monsters at the top of our ***** society like i would say uh lyndon johnson is a good example of a well-intentioned monster there are just pure unalloyed 0:46:31 reptilians because no one who could believe in this ***** living the life of wealth and elite and elite proximity to power strips you of the and so and and proximity the power strips you of your illusion of um of uh your illusion of agency remember because you're up there near power you're up there with money but you can't really choose anything the choice has been made for you lyndon johnson thought that he had the levers of the world at his ***** fingertips these guys don't and that means that the only ones who can stay there are the ones who don't give a ***** the ones who have purely uh are worshiping at like a demonic temple of i mean the closest 0:47:33 thing you have to belief at the top of our social order right now is the elon musk jeff bezos stellar capitalism thing which is literally about detaching from the mass of mud-blooded neurotypical humanity and recreating a a new human order among the meritocrats without any uh epsilon semi-morons running around to ruin the fun california ideology exactly that's the only remaining belief anything bunny can have in the system because there are enough charlatans and frauds around who can sound smart who can trick these guys who are dumber than them but who have more money than them into believing it when they tell them yeah yeah we can make you live on forever on mars absolutely 100 none of these people these people all have convinced themselves that they're geniuses and that they see they see as peter thiel said that death is an ideology and the reason that they see that is because they've had their 0:48:34 ***** checkbooks opened for every ***** uh uh techno king and scientist to come running to their teeth and these are people who have more intelligence than it takes to ***** get lucky with a payment facilitating uh software like him and teal did and certainly can outsmart these dumbasses into thinking oh yeah i have found a ticket out of the so yeah that's the only thing we've got that's the only thing that anybody believes in at the top is that and at the bottom everyone just knows that this system 0:49:36 cannot there's no reason to believe that if you put a quarter in the machine you're gonna get uh your snickers bar you know like you've gone back by too many times and gotten ripped off and so you're gonna stop putting coins in the coins of like emotional investment the coins of uh of self-motivated action that aren't just about what's in it for you in the near in the near term in the in the in the very moment and about like postponing pleasure in the now to build something in the future well why would you bother doing that when there's no reason to believe that any of the things you're investing your time and energy into and of course the funny thing is that the real person the real force driving these maniacs the buzz the musks and the bezos 0:50:37 is the grimal worm tongue of the algorithm itself it's the computers it's that it's it's the logic approximate maximization speaking to them across uh uh the barrier of the of the computer screen and so when these guys are floating in space after their ***** uh led their landing craft exploded or they're like choked to death by their robot manservants in their uh moon mars bases the only thing left will be the ***** algorithm will be the pile of uh of concentrated capital that will at that point have some very much looking forward to musk on snl by the way that's going to be do 0:51:54 you think that jeff bezos has ever i think that musk probably has like the time that he did the egyptian in front of a bunch of people i think he has moments because he wants to be liked because he has that that kind of dorky kid insecurity and so when he he gets to go on joe rogan i think he's probably happy and yeah he's got like a weird uh zoomer nihilist girlfriend who probably gives him chinese research chemicals but bezos it seems like he really does seem like just skynet in a human body fake people say that about zuckerberg but zuckerberg i think is so blank and inert that it feels sort of it's its own uh personality like oh he's so weird that that makes him 0:52:55 more human whereas bezos is just and he but he went we went through the trouble of having an affair which cost him half this money what were his uh he had sex that got leaked because he got catfished by uh prince salman or something and they were all incredibly i'm going to see if i could find them the zuckerberg texts oh right i love 0:53:57 you alive girl as opposed to my other girlfriends jesus christ what a freak that that is not a thing that you say to people if you're normal you don't comment on the fact that they're not dead you sort of take that for granted unless you are yourself so reptilian that any sort of vivacity reads to you as oh my god you're like count dracula walking by planet fitness and seeing everybody getting all red in the face and just starts slathering like a cartoon dog i want to smell you i want to breathe you in i want to hold you tight i want to kiss your lips i love you i am in love with you wow you know what i want i want to get a little drunk with you tonight not 0:54:59 falling down just a little drunk i want to talk to you and plan with you listen and laugh i want to plan with you oh baby can we sit down in front of a couple of date books can we get some can we throw together some splash boards her energy and ideas and competence and this is just like a very horny uh uh performance review this is like getting sexually harassed by your human he keeps talking about wanting 0:56:0 to smell they're not even together anymore right uh see tiger woods texts are kind of they're human and relatable because he's just such a ***** dork wasn't it all like him trying to be kind of nasty like i'm gonna bite you or something like girl i'm gonna

slap your ass and make you do what i want or something just like oh you're adorable guy who spent his entire childhood practicing chip shots doesn't really know how 0:57:2 to talk to girls army hammer said he wanted to eat is charlie did harmy hammer actually eat somebody because the thing about him is he's not just an actor he is the actual scion of the armenhammer so if anybody on earth has the ability to eat somebody because you've got to figure that there's some adventurous eaters club for rich people where they eat human flesh right just because we know the stuff that 0:58:4 they do do why wouldn't they do that would i eat a person in an ethical situation which is a huge huge uh a hugely unlikely uh occurrence uh i would probably chew on a person a little bit just curiosity but it would have to be it would have to be humanely procured if somebody asked me to eat them maybe and i and i thought they were very earnest about it no no no there's no way i can imagine that we do 0:59:11 eat raw hamburger wisconsin i would i would consider being eaten upon my death maybe here's an ethical situation what if i put in my will that i would be turned into like a hawaiian luau and be the centerpiece of my own funeral like i get tested make sure i don't have any prions we don't want to spread uh kreutzville's jakub but you know put me put me in a under hot coals in the beach for like six hours with a ***** apple in my mouth and then just get some of that crackling no i would absolutely not 1:0:15 eat chip meat no no no i think i'd taste okay americans probably don't taste great because of all the chemicals because that really does uh contribute to the flavor i mean that's the difference really down to that's the real difference between like kobe beef and like uh america downer cows they make uh mcdoubles out of it's yeah sure there's lineages but the real thing is diet it probably tastes like yeah we place like plastic and we are america americans are tender so we would have that going for 1:1:29 us but uh so i think we would have a very good mouthfeel and texture but i think there'd be a kind of rancid aftertaste i kind of feel like humans would taste a little bit like ashtrays or like uh yeah like a cigarette butt even though it would be really flavorful and stuff you know i mean it'd be very uh very moist and juicy you bite into it and you would just get kind of yeah like a like a bitter a bitter taste is it gay to 1:2:50 eat a man now that's a question is it man is it gay for a guy to eat yeah i bet italians would be good italians tend to be kind of yeah mediterraneans like you they want you to eat the mediterranean diet right for health well presumably that would result in a delicious uh i would love the idea of like uh uh oh yeah like a greek greek guy a 1:3:52 greek guy put on one of those vertical spits just carving off some ***** gyro with a tatziki [Laughter] damn i'm getting hungry now for human meat okay this was fun i hope some of that made sense i hope uh wasn't too circular because i worry a lot of this is just circular but uh i think it's helpful i don't know keep thinking about it hopefully put it in another format soon talk to you guys on wednesday when we'll uh when by then i will have looked at the the weimar republic book and figured out what we want to do

Phenomenology of the Diet Sprite

05.05.21

*Music playing** he said you can go sleep at home tonight if you can get up and walk away back with the underground breeze blew back my hand i remember throwing punches around and preaching from my chair i tend to want to know **Music playing** oh **Music playing** trying to spell this for the twig for phenomenology 0:1:9 always the tough one to smell phenomenal ***** god damn it what the ***** all 0:2:17 right let's try this twitch i'm here in the field i find someone real i don't believe you feeding yeah i still spelled it wrong man my brain does not work my brain is not turned on as john tommy was so sad in that terrible fake improv uh sitcom that he did which i've seen every episode of and i'm truly kind of ashamed of myself it's one of the worst things i've ever seen has anybody seen that neighbors it was called it was on hulu for a while there we go there we go we can bring don't cry don't raise 0:3:20 your eye **Music playing** wasteland all right so today i'm gonna get uh a little out there uh this is going to be uh one of the weird ones this is gonna be one of the more speculative uh phenomenological as you can see in the name uh ones we've done in a while and this is because i'm kind of feeling like i'm getting towards something that once again is only me trying to make sense of the world to myself and then throwing it out there to see if anybody is uh getting what i'm saying enough for me to feel like i'm on the right track as opposed to just you know descending into uh psychosis 0:4:23 which is always a concern it should be anyway for anybody living i just got to throw this out there it's very very uh mushy and uh it's just a story i'm trying to tell myself like it's gonna be it's gonna like attempt to be like biological but in a way that is way beyond my understanding of actual biology so i'll just be pulling ***** directly out of my ass so i have to ***** stipulate that as the beginning is that this is all based on speculation about human biology and consciousness that i don't have a background for i mean i don't have a background for anything i talk about but just underlining it here so that you know you don't get too alienated by this if i'm if it does feel like i'm uh disappearing from uh legibility i was trying to think about myself and like what 0:5:25 feels to be the sort of crisis at my center the thing that prevents me from living in the moment with the knowledge that i have about you know the the the fundamental

and unbreakable unity of existence and therefore the impossibility and irrationality of the very concept of death and i know that intellectually but i have find myself unable in the moment of my life to inhabit a space where i feel that it's true like i still have a pit of anxiety in my stomach it's not always there and it changes depending on the moment and sometimes it's almost completely gone but you know because i'm living a fall in life and i'm not an ascended being i have not had a full conversion 0:6:26 experience to a coherent uh world with like a a super a supernatural charge to the perception of existence as opposed to the perception of the the um the uh intellectual like you know self conception of existence uh so like i know this stuff but it's i'm still like you know haunted i'm still i'm still happier than i've ever been and i'm still uh you know they essentially my entire life i felt like i was in a coffin and now i feel like i'm still in a coffin but there's a ***** there's an opening and i can move it i can get it open sometimes it gets smaller and sometimes it goes bigger and that's never happened in my life before i before this i was absolutely pine box nailed down like ***** uh like bill murray at the end of scrooge when they have him go into the ***** crematorium like that was it and now i feel like there's an opening and i've just been 0:7:27 trying to figure out okay well how do i get the opening bigger and i'm doing some things but and there are other things that are preventing that that like provide me with a sense of anxiety that is related to you know senses of guilt senses of responsibility for other people's senses of like the hurt i've caused and the and the to people and and my essential accumulated karma you know like how do i cut through this in a day-to-day basis and i've realized that the real root of it is is i think what is also the root of generalized neuroses under capitalism and that is fear of death like actual emotional fear of death not a place where you have intellectually decided that death like oh though that's an irrational number and you wiped it off of the board i'm talking about feelings i'm talking about your your gut i'm talking about if you want to get back to 70's brain lateralization theory the right hemisphere right like i don't 0:8:30 know i'm sure that all that hemisphere ***** has been completely debunked by now but it was very popular in the 70s and i've been thinking about it lately uh and i really do feel like for myself i feel so psychically imbalanced towards the intellect and towards thought and away from the actual experience of emotion like i have emotions but i feel like there is the space where god lives is the space where emotion is felt without uh intellectual sort of uh uh narrative narrative and and disenchantment because like the intellectualization of life is the disenchantment of life it is taking the experience of life which is emotional and i will argue that emotions come from our experience of our unity not our separation and that uh and that intellectualization cuts us off from them so thinking of it in terms of like brain hemispheres to me is 0:9:32 very handy i don't know once again if there's any real uh science to back that up

CUSHVLOG 162. PHENOMENOLOGY OF THE DIET SPRITE

at any point but i feel like if there is such a thing as being left brained i am ***** left brained and my right blank brain does feel my emotional connection as in and i would say that the distance the the distinction there is one of distance from the point where uh consciousness comes into being because i think emotions come from our connection to uh our bodies and the thing about our bodies is that yes they they exist as separate from the world but that perception of separation uh is a story that we tell ourselves we cut off at a arbitrary point between ourselves our perceiving ourselves and perceiving the things around us because we have the capacity as anyone who has experienced altered or heightened states of consciousness knows we have the capacity to experience with far far far more acuity than we perceive at the at our 0:10:35 regular like resting consciousness like in our in in when we're perceiving ourselves as individuals we have a very restrained uh uh uh range of perception so like our brains our consciousnesses teach us where to shut it off so that we can perceive ourselves as separate so that we can survive because as i'm gonna say there's two types of fear of death there is the fear of death from an emotional level which is the fear of immediate harm which is an evolutionary necessity for any being to persist in the world and orient itself towards survival but then uh as consciousness increases as degree of perceptivity increases as our ability to perceive increases we get a distance from that like an actual physical mental synaptic distance from the experience and 0:11:38 then we have to tell ourselves a story about what just happened and that is where we create a consciousness that is where we create we create the world that we live in and where we are the soul ***** perspective we are god we are everything now that is illusory that is fake it is made up not of anything from us but from with things we encounter this eye that we have is really just the collection of the things that we have seen and exposed ourselves to through our perceptive apparatus through our lives that's it and then there is a thing within us that orients us through that to tell a story to weave these things together into a story about what we're feeling but that story is not connected to the things that we experience because it passes from unconscious control because our brain is doing all the stuff in our body our brain is doing all the stuff in our body it's breathing it's making our heart beat it's making 0:12:39 the blood it's making the blood go it's making the white blood cells do their ***** it's making the synapses synapse it's all doing that our brain is doing that but we don't think about it and so our sense of ourselves as a separate being from our bodies is across the chasm of our perception of our body which is where we cut off the line is where we say before this we're not going to actually experience after this we can make do but that is through this tunnel it's through the it's through a glass darkly of perception has jumped the track into another tunnel and you're using the symbols of everything around you to make sense of what's happening to you and so you make

neurotic assumptions and you build an intellectual identity that is unable to conceive 0:13:40 of death because it is not connected to the uh the body which is itself connected to something that would render that concern absurd it's not a thing that you would spend time freaking out about it's not a thing that would pull you away from the moment because it wouldn't make sense and that is life socially lived where there is enough actual emotional content to your life which needs to have other people reflecting it in order to be reinforced there is no room for intellectual uh uh uh fear of uh annihilation because we aren't feeling like something that can be annihilated we're feeling like something that is part of something we're feeling connection when you feel connection death is not there death only comes death only gathers his coat and stands by the foot of the uh of the of the chariot uh once you have remove 0:14:42 yourself into the interior not connected and we can only do that the degree to which we're alone and that is why the the process of civilization is alienation away from those that we exploit so that we could be away from the horror but that means time by ourselves and we have reached the end point of that where we have all spent so much time by ourselves and what and that we have lost that social uh uh soothing of the fear of death leaving us with just a mind just a brain that is going to die and then an anxiety about that that we carry with us at least i think that i carry with me and in that mind at least in my mind i can know in my head oh this is a this isn't a self this is an illusion but i cannot inhabit a body that believes that 0:15:43 because i spent my entire life up until very recently accumulating this ***** anxiety i've been filling a ***** lead ball in my stomach by walking around thinking that i was a self by walking around thinking that oh my god i'm gonna be gone someday because there's two types of fear of death as i said the fear of immediate extinction is just survival and it's also in the best interest of whatever group you're live with and humans are ***** a social species so that is the point that fear of death is one that uh shows the harmony between group evolution humans as a species an individual human evolution within that species it's a mutual goal but once you get to uh fear of death and that abstract when you're not in danger when you're just living your life when you're just doing your your work to sustain yourself whatever that means but you're still thinking about dying that is where the neuroses comes and that is 0:16:45 the social engine of the extraction away to capitalism the pursuit of the ultimate panacea but what that has left me with is because i spent 40 years doing this i have 40 years of accumulated uh lit life in this crouch in this fear ball and i don't feel the accumulation of the fear anymore so much but it's still this remaining slug and i've realized that like whatever kind of spiritual awakening i feel like i'm coming into which also sometimes feels like you know mental imbalancing or whatever uh that it is an attempt to uh essentially uh neutralize this ball by actively seeking to feel something other than fear to actually feel with my body what it is to be a connected being and that means being connected to other people obviously but that's only so far you can go because we are way way way more socially isolated than we could should be for our mental health for our ability to sustain the balancing act of like ma uh uh using a illusory uh neurotic intellectual consciousness to navigate a flash machine through space as opposed to the two things being uh you know synthesized which is what we want that is the end state that is this that is that is what uh hegel talks about the the the the the great absolute that's where you you do it and so i have now realized that like the goal needs to be as a person to attempt to bridge the gap to bridge the gap of time between uh the self the rational self and that emotional self because we can't kick start emotions with our mind we have to have experiences so we can use our ***** consciousnesses to get us in situations where we can have experiences but it's the experiences that are going to do it that are going to give us the feeling that are going to loosen the anxiety that is what drives us away from each other and what i think is the responsibility is responsible for the entire culture of uh of doom whereby we are alienated fully we don't believe in capitalism but we also can't stop uh pursuing it because we can't imagine any other goal but selfishness we can't imagine any other reason for being on earth than to continue living on earth in pleasure a pleasure that allows us to ignore the ***** feeling ignore the tension ignore that illusory and unnecessary fear and so how do you get that one way as i said is to have a social existence because social life validates this by itself it isn't it's a perpetual motion machine of uh of presence because it pulls you it is it's it's so it's gravity literally and you're not thinking because you're thinking about what matters and what matters is decided by what's in front of you it's not decided by you waiting in a room looking at a computer trying to define yourself it is insisted upon by others who if you are drawn to people with love and with an open heart are going to be drawn to you and you you know virtuous cycle stuff so that's one part of it but that's not something that everybody can access in fact in fact very few people can and people are forced to spend much of their time wildly alienated in terrible awful work that makes them feel nothing other than a presence but a presence of suffering which means they're in the worst conditions whereby they're they're being more physically exploited and that exploitation is robbing time from them that they know they'll never get back it's time that can never be brought back and you know that all you have is time because you think that there is something to lose with the end of your consciousness and we all feel that to some extent but it becomes overwhelming when all your experiences in life are pulling you in that direction so what else can people do and what else can i do as someone who is very privileged to be able to pursue this more more on my level my on my uh terms but of course that's it has its own

pitfalls because if you get to choose then you have the burden of choice and that's not saying poor oh cry one poor one out for me i'm doing better than most because of my privileged position but this is the terrain of the struggle now is choosing and that means feeling and it's hard to feel it's hard to feel even if you're not alienated with every moment of your life and most of us are deeply alienated uh so what else can you do i think there are people who for whom it is easier and i would say people whose brains are shaped a certain way because remember this is all like an actual biological thing right this is your brain's ability to push electricity through itself to uh feel things right to feel the world around it to find to to feel the inside to be able 0:21:53 to map the exterior and interior terrain of the human body and then also map the exterior of the the outside the other and then even though if your perceptive capacity and your intellect and your imaginative capacity as a human with your ***** super super highly tuned uh perception machinery if it can experience beyond itself then it can really access the entirety of human history of the universe's history you are able to find yourself the groove of history you are you talk about free will versus determinism you can find the groove that brought you to where you are and you can find the tessellating and exploding array of billiard ball connections that made everything happen and made you where you are now and that robs you of the ability to hate 0:22:54 others it robs the ability of you to feel unnecessary guilt it connects you directly to everything but you can't live that way it's impossible to live that way this is a state of gnosis this is a state that can is always associated with heaven because it is not sustainable but it is something that can be glimpsed it could be a fire that can be held that can push back the darkness but it is that is what is being sought that's what we're seeking and our brains can get us there because our brains by definition are the ones determining where we stop sensing where we stop feeling the extension of consciousness like no no we're not going to feel the blood going through our veins we're not going to feel the electrical current we're not going to uh feel the air outside the air molecules outside the skin even though we could we're not going to feel all of that we're not going to feel we're not going to have to think okay breathe okay a 0:23:55 heartbeat we're not going to do that and we make a we we draw a line and we can access that other side by feeling because feeling is where it jumps the rope feeling is where it jumps to intellect that's the black hole the automatic brain functions turn into conscious functions but there is a gap there there is a there's the space between because by the time you feel think something about your feelings they've already happened by the time you are when you cry your brain is making sense of the tears it is not making you cry the body is crying the brain is making sense to itself of why you're crying and that means it's always guessing and sometimes you guess right but a lot of times you guess wrong and then you act on the wrong guesses and that is what pulls you away from ever being able to access that feeling and be able to access those uh those depths of perceptive capability so how can you jump the track well 0:24:57 some brains jump the trap naturally their their grooves grow faster they're ***** the the sparks spark faster the uptake is fast the reuptake is faster the machine works at a higher rate a higher rate than is compatible with functioning day-to-day that is where you get uh mental illness it's also where you get religious belief because uh the the relationship between religiosity and temporal lobe epilepsy is pretty well established this is parts of your brain that are perceiving at a higher frequency than the rest of us or the rest of your brain and that is where the that's uh mental illness is essentially your brain coming into conflict with the consensus reality of everybody else's brain and being unable to function at that level of abstraction like you can't your brain is too connected and then uh there is drugs which also skip the skip the 0:25:59 uh the rail for you because instead of instead of your brain doing it naturally and instead of the net the last one i'm gonna say uh it just does it bio uh mechanically like uh it's it's like a booster in mario you're not thinking about it you're putting something else in your body that does the thinking for you and it goes okay well i guess we're going to perceive a lot stronger we're going to perceive a lot more and oh ***** oh my god we're literally one with the universe and that means our our consciousness is non-existent that means that our our literal ego is meaningless and then you still have to live in that body with that idea and with all the all the desires all the things you want and all the things you don't want which make up what it mean what good is how do you understand extinction as as good as as positive as something to feel good about if all of your other associations with those feelings are 0:27:0 about this world and this small window of opportunity to indulge in sensation even though the indulgence of sensation is just supposed to be grist for the mill of the universal but that's dangerous drugs are dangerous because since you're not willing it through you're cheating say you knock your brain into a different groove and we know for a fact that psychedelics literally rewiring your brain like that you get ahead of the bullet and you change its trajectory that's what it does and now the sudden you find yourself in a situation where you now have a new reality you now have a new understanding of the world that allows you to walk around with your day a conversion to a new to living in a new universe where that feeling is gone and instead you feel you can walk around being an individual but also feeling the pure full light of universal grace but it requires to sustain it it requires keep doing the drugs or doing 0:28:3 stuff in life that life won't let you do or that the the your urgency of trying to keep yourself in that feeling is going to prevent you from doing is the momentum of your mind is going to prevent you from doing because you have new grooves now your brain is now new structure and you are now you are you got to where you are with one brain and now you have to navigate the rest of your life with a different brain and if it's too different then you get to the point where you can detach from reality and it becomes negative then there is the third way to breach the chasm breathing meditation focus of the mind clearing yourself as much as you can of the thoughts of the over brain finding the deepest rooted thoughts and following them into the ***** black hole of sense of emotion and that requires stillness it requires connection to the body through and so you know i've been meditating but not as much as i should and i know that that's something i have because i really do feel like we act negatively to the extent to which we're acting out of a panicked horrified uh desire to escape from that feeling of death which we don't have to feel so much and there's a one-way ratchet the more time we spend the loan the more time we spend in our brains the the more time we spend uh not having experiences not connecting not feeling yeah 0:29:4

CUSHVLOG 162. PHENOMENOLOGY OF THE DIET SPRITE

the more we freak out about our impending demise the more we need to grasp at whatever is most immediately satisfying so we use the logic the evolutionary logic of short term i'm in danger uh fear of death which is necessary and and advantageous to the species and to our ourselves and we operate it uh without that being the condition and what we end up doing is suicidal ***** all right okay so any of this makes sense once again i'm out on a limb i know i kind of got it always gets a little uh i always end up going off into different tangents and i want to make sure that enough of it came back because sometimes i'll forget and so i know that if i do the balance wrong with the drugs for example i could definitely get to a point where my brain is no longer able to function with the world i have and i'm too selfishly frantic to keep feeling good because that's the thing it has to be balanced or else you're not seeking uh you're not getting like the harmony you're getting just the feeling you remember you're trying to chase the high but what that's why what all this always requires and this to get back to the original idea what all this requires is will because as i said your brain is making everything happen in your body it's making everything every every uh white blood cell attack a cold uh germ it's making every piece of bone marrow produce blood it's doing that ***** but you're not aware of it you're not conscious of it but there is consciousness to it it's just a lower frequency 0:31:15 and you can tune into those frequencies and then you can tune into the frequencies beyond and so what is the meditative path towards enlightenment but the concentration of will instead of wanting all the stuff that's around you i want to uh have people like my stream i want to eat a delicious sandwich like even though i'm trying to you know reduce my ego even though i'm trying to uh sort of push through uh to like a a new understanding i still want stuff i still have ideas of pleasure and pain that are associated with my life and the things that i've heedlessly pursued for the majority of it and i'm now surrounded by i have to deal with that on its own terms 0:32:16

uh and those with those desires are dividing my attention and my and my ability 0:33:18 to perceive drugs is one way to just jump over it with oh i'm still desiring all that stuff but also i'm feeling other things more and that's concentrating my mind in one another another direction but uh if you don't want to cheat you have to concentrate your will to the point that those desires fall away and you can't do that for a long time but you can do that with with focused time spent meditation essentially and then when you're there when it's just your will and your body you can push that ***** electron a little farther than you thought you could or that your brain expects you to you can push that electron into the dark tunnel and you can walk that line to a pr a sensation you're feeling it you're feeling the world beyond your arbitrarily 0:34:19 imposed body and you're feeling you're you're you're tuning into the frequency baby the universal hum put out by the galactic transmitter but that requires will requires focus and what makes people do things with will belief and that's why there's a bit of there's a bootstrap thing to this is that you have to believe first so that means why you can't reason yourself there that's why you cannot use reason there because you don't believe things because of reason so what you can use reason for is to pull you towards situations and engagements and to keep your mind as clear as possible of uh of like the clutter of direct like the ***** you know like when you get mad you know why you're mad you can pull it down and you're not mad and that helps too and then it really is you have enough of those feelings you you you light up the top of the ***** uh carnival hammer game you light up the top thing enough times that's 0:35:21 cumulative and then you get a uh a flip a switch because that is ever all all progress is uh it is an accumulation towards an inflection point and that is it you experi you accumulate experiences of a of a character defined by pursuit of the ideas of universal love and boom you eventually reach an inflection point of experience and emotion that make you able that are a lot that allow you to walk around just without even thinking about it with with a belief in in the transcendence and that's that's how uh that's what you got to do that's what we're all that's what we all have to do 0:36:22 and of course we are all made it's impossible for any of us to do it like you have to be incredibly lucky and have the right the right experiences to be born at the right point the right time to have any likelihood of encountering the ability to live beyond anguish and beyond that that that uh neoliberal uh uh stimulus response nexus the the pleasure we have to change our conditions to allow it to happen but this is the same bootstrap dilemma that's at the heart of belief uh we have to change the structure to allow people to have these experiences to allow people to live differently but that means we have to change the structures even though we are all defined by them and even though they pull us apart and that is where belief comes in again you have 0:37:23 to believe you have to believe in the world enough to stop believing in yourself so much and then you need to believe uh that because change happened to you change can happen to others and therefore all effort is worth uh worth doing but that means finding where you can apply your pressure so that is the paradox of belief none of us believe in capitalism but we do believe in ourselves in our our uh self-interest enough to pursue our uh pleasures throughout it to cooperate with it to find something like yeah capitalism's failed it will not give us anything we are doomed we are controlled by demons but if i do x y and z i and the people i like will be able to have uh some 0:38:24 more a little more at the trough and maybe maybe have more pleasure ourselves since that's the only thing that is the logic that is you know that is why if if there is no human soul if or if it's been stripped to its too much to its up to its if it's been stripped of its ability to imagine any value other than uh uh exchange value like exchange value the value form being the only thing we believe it the only thing we believe in like there's plenty of work written about how capitalism is a really is has taken capitalism is the end point of western christianity protestantism turns to capitalism and we and we worship it there's no there's no question that it is and that's because the one thing we believe in the thing that actually makes us act even 0:39:25 though we have all these thoughts and even though we have all these ideas and even though we might consider ourselves communists or socialists republicans democrats whatever we might we don't think politics matters whatever it is what we all do most majority of us is cooperate with capitalist institutions and pursue capitalist desires because those are real to us even though they're not real they're as fictive as any other social fiction because those desires are don't need to be filled those desires are generated by a delusion those desires could be written out of the equation so they are illusory but we believe in them we believe in them and it's the only thing to believe in in a material world in a desacralized world where we are separated where we are fundamentally rent from the world around us when that division between that when we imagine that the train tunnel between feeling and mind has been blown up and if 0:40:26 we believe that then the only thing that we can pursue in life is whatever we conceive of as our uh pleasure and the thing is we don't even know what it is like i'm a ***** hypochondriac i've always been a terrified of dying and i pursued a lifestyle and i could and that meant that i could keep doing that that meant that as i sensed oh my god look i'm having a heart attack oh my god oh i can feel the tingling i'm gonna my heart clearly is not gonna last very long well then i might as well do nothing but have another burger might as well do nothing but sit on my ass what what try to do something else why for life for time i don't even know i'm gonna get i don't know when it could end this heart attack could be a real thing i can get it by a bus 0:41:27 why would i not pursue the most narrow pleasure i can at the time so even though i have this idea of what my long-term interests are i'm doing the opposite of them

without and so we are all doing that no matter what we might think of ourselves we might be horrified by capitalism we might find ourselves we say to our bones we don't believe in capitalism we want to see it overthrown we say i don't want this ***** i don't want oh oh but convenience and personal identity and and and and the ability to to recreate yourself on the market i don't want any of that oh look at you you've succeeded so much in capitalism like you're you're you're a ***** uh you're an example of the of the greatness of the system i don't want it i would trade it all i would work at a collective farm i would i wouldn't even be anime appraiser i would do a bad job on a collective farm if i could find some way to be helpful uh 0:42:28

but with that not being a real possibility with revolution being extinguished with me living in capitalism's uh dying it has swallowed the world and is now choking on it and i'm i'm in its stomach while it's last ***** uh sulfur scented breaths are being i might as well pursue whatever i can call my my uh my best my my most uh the thing i can live with the most indulgent path i can live with like one of the big reasons i was never able to get a real that i never really pursued a career like i i wasn't somebody who like got a degree or something is it was like an application and knew what i wanted to do as a young person is because i attempt assimilated very quickly how or horrible everything is and how the only way you can succeed is by 0:43:29

being evil and i didn't want to do that so instead i ended up just being stunned and being just being a a a a parasite like an emotional parasite without even knowing it but i wasn't doing bad stuff so i felt like i was a good person and then i go oh i get to be a podcaster and i get to have good politics and pretend that i'm like changing the world by having people hear my ideas and then i get to have all these other pleasures too hey that's great so it is so like the neurosis of liberalism broadly and there are and even beyond like liberalism when i say liberalism broadly i mean every american like the neoliberal subject so all the republicans too it is you're in the belly of capitalism it's dying you there's no there's nothing else but your mind which will extinguish and pleasures to be accumulated how are you going to do it and then it is deciding what balance of indulgence and penitence you want to go 0:44:30 with so the right wing is essentially the culturally the right wing are those who say maximal transgression and indulgence will be my religion i will in fact worship satan i will invert all values and worship myself as god the libertarian uh evangelical protestant uh capitalism that is what i will do but on the other side the liberals though who are also in capitalism also want to keep enjoying its benefits also only imagine their own self-interest is the real the only real thing in the world they want to enjoy themselves but they because they think so much because of their social conditions that have had them sitting around in parlors uh doing ritualized manners to each other because that's what replaces morality in uh in bourgeois society at the top is 0:45:32

manners it's not it's not religion it's not good or it's not morality it is manners and so elaborate manners are how you give yourself permission to enjoy yourself for the time you have because you'd feel too guilty about just directly crossing over to be i am saying nothing nothing is inevitable is exactly what i'm saying i that's the point of all of this is to say that these are these cannot be mapped these changes cannot be mapped anticipated it is a stochastic process it is being driven by the bouncing of all of our consciousnesses off of one another as we create these different levels of consensus reality some of which bind us some of which make us enemies and we're negotiating and those uh borders all the time and it is that friction that powers history but it is randomized by the fact that it's made up of individuals with their own wet work their own brain chemistries their own environments that are always going to mean that the response cannot be predicted needing a libidinal release exactly on the right culturally which is the only politics that matters it is libidinal display through transgression and indulgence for the liberal including most people who call themselves the leftists i'm not talking about anything economic here oh no i believe in uh acab so i'm not a liberal i'm not i don't care about that you could be a real ml you could like pass the test you are still a liberal in this sense that this is the social arrangement you live in this is the post-class world that we have created where we are consumers and we are members of subcultures on the left here this political left which includes all liberals and basically all leftists including myself you are balancing indulgence with libidinal release through uh the self-righteous ritual of uh of uh renunciation which we inherited from you can even see these two ends these two things the indulgence of of the conservative id and the superego of the liberal that is the two paths of american protestantism the bottom half those who had to work the land by just killing indians and uh enslaving blacks who labored at the point of the spear and therefore didn't have the luxury literal luxury of creating manners uh they don't they have decided that yeah like well well taking over the planet well taking over the planet like by well well dominating the continent while while imposing this this vision at the expense of these others these humans who we are going to pretend are not human so that we can dominate them you know digging up that earth literally birthed the demon that enhanced that uh that possessed them all and now they're safe worshippers the other american protestantism which was which came from new england the people who left who left england not because they had to not because of economic necessity debts or poverty because they were uncomfortable they were socially uncomfortable in the world of early capitalist britain where they were expected to be high church anglicans where they expected to ignore the debt the dying cry of the human uh connections that were happening in the severing of social ties in that era and with protestantism is the leading edge of it and so they freaked out

over here and so they created their own religion american protestant tradition that by even the early republic had gone from fire and brimstone ***** to a detached like john quincy adams was a unitarian so by that generation like his dad was a congregationalist and he was already basically a deist uh john quincy adams was a unitarian by the late 1800s they're all ***** theosophists and spiritualists and they are they aren't even christian anymore and now there are some variety of fully uh fully secular or new age like non-christian like outside of what you would consider the the eastern western spirituality even though that's uh it is now the the dominant form of of political protestantism it is hyper secularized radicalism and it is all radical and they do really believe that they're they want to change the system they think they do at every level like the people who think they're going to do it through a ***** vanguard revolution or a maoist insurgency or even by pushing the dems to the left they're all trying to write in the world the virtue that they can't imagine anywhere else because they cannot conceive of anything but the here and now and so they get their libido pleasure by trying to turn the world into that they're inscribing themselves as the elect the same way that the puritans did by uh turning uh new england into the the new jerusalem by bringing civilization to the wilderness they're doing that again they're going to re-conquer this this um capitalist savage land this land of white supremacist barbarism where the uh where the slaving satanic dog has broken loose and conquers the land we are now going to settle it the new savages are uh our uh maga people the new savages are uh applebee's uh appetizer platter aficionados and so that is where you get the set of the holy war that is coming now the holy war between these two wings of american protestantism that are going to fight over who gets to be subject to the horrors of the coming neo-liberal murder order we know that the ***** walls are closing in we know that there is no prosperity we can only play pleasure in the here and now so if we're in the political realm our pleasure is by imagining that we can make our enemies be punished we can make the horrors of this world fall on their heads and not arms and it's a snake eating its tail the same way rush to united states versus and the thing that they have all have in common is none of them are acting politically because they do not act socially we are not there's no left because there is no organized left there is a consumer identity that is expressed through voting and uh participation in demonstrations and participation in uh in volunteer organizations and political parties and that has an effect but it is not the effect that an actual organized left would have because there is no actual articulation or coordination because everybody is pushing in the direction not of belief in anything other than themselves but in self-pleasure in some variety of politics as pleasure as pursuit of pleasure because pursuit of pleasure is what defines the political experience in this country once we got rid of the participation and the thing

is is that we've reached such a terminal point of alienation that we basically have to come back together with one another like there's nowhere else to go like we can be dissolved into grey goo and maybe we will but i think that there's still enough actual like felt experience of of connection to that we have even though it's attenuated and small and it makes it hard to hold the light we all have it and i think that there will be a flare up before an extinguishment even if it does end and extinguish it there will be a green flash before the sunset and who wouldn't want to if the sun's going to set wouldn't you want to be there for the ***** flash wouldn't you want to be there for the green flash even if that's all it is but maybe it's not maybe it's the beginning of a catalyst maybe it's the beginning of a trans of a transformation that pushes against the the tide uh because the structure is not built to to defeat it because it depends on this critical mass of selfishness that could be overcome and if it was the system 0:54:46 would be powerless against it because it wouldn't be able to uh use its methods of suppression now the question of technological uh sophistication and technological uh mechanisms of control is a separate one but it is one of those questions where you can't answer it for certain you can only have an intuition and that intuition is going to be bound up and whether you're willing to risk yourself because if you don't want to risk yourself it's easy to imagine that yeah no they have they've got computers uh wiring us there's drones everywhere we couldn't stop anything there's no point in resisting anything i might as well pleasure myself and you can say no uh ***** these drones ***** this ***** like this stuff is something that uh can be attacked from the side i don't know which one's true i don't think we'll know for sure until it happens if it happens uh but i know that which one you that i know this that the one you believe is more likely to be generated and motivated not by a reasoned understanding 0:55:49 that says well i've really looked at the issue and my brain has convinced me that this is uh that this is the state of like america that the the human individual versus technology uh you didn't really reason yourself there there is something else pushing you there and it was either a desire to find it power find effort pointless or a desire to find a reason for uh for fighting because when you love you will believe and when you believe you're going to want and when you're going to want you're going to want to make things better you're not going to want to indulge yourself and so maybe maybe that those things look less uh overpowering and if they look less overpowering if you even though you think you've reasoned yourself there even though you think no no i believe that this is an opportunity because i my smart brain tells me that that's not why that's not why you did that you did it because you wanted to believe and then 0:56:50 you can motivate yourself that way you can push yourself in a direction because you now your thinking brain the brain that you deal with most of the time it thinks that it had this idea but it so it's a process obviously i don't know where i am in the in the thing i don't know if i'm gonna get to some point of uh you know conversion or uh psychosis or if i'm just gonna like ride the edge of this like you know ball uh for the rest i don't know i do know that the the complicating factor and this and this is very interesting and fascinating to me anyway because i feel like i know exactly what the complicating factor is but once again it's not enough to change the the dynamic by itself because knowing doesn't do it you have to feel uh and it's that i 0:57:51 have been governed by this hypochondria right and since i was a kid and now even though i understand that like what that was a displacement of and and how uh it's not it doesn't have to govern me that much i still have the hypochondria sensations and it's because part of sensing things more sensing your body more is sensing your body signals more and i have ever since my spinal injury sensed my body signals to an ex to an a clearly neurotic excessive degree so like i very much could have all kinds of stuff in my body that is like precursor really bad that is the accumulation of like my lifestyle you know plaque buildup in the arteries whatever but i could be feeling it far out of proportion to its actual like danger to my body at the moment and i'm just replicating that anxiety because in the absence of that like full spark 0:58:52 the full flame there is the fear that if i have i die too soon i will um i will not be able to apply my mind to death in such a way to neutralize fear of it which is all it's about it's all about just facing it and being able to breathe through the the the panic of the over mind with the steady real undermined but that requires a lot of concentration practice i don't know what if what if i really am dying and i feel it more when i think about this stuff more because as i approach because i can really if i think enough like i think fast enough i can't approach talking myself into believing without having to feel but then as i do it as my feel more i feel my body more and 0:59:55 as i get closer to that sensation of gnosis which is the extinguishment of self my ego kicks in because it's still there because i still have this accumulated 40 years of ***** desires and structured uh structures of illusory identity that don't want to go that aren't ready to go and i have to uh i have to like breathe through them so that's like the so it's like a dynamic of intention navigating these poles and the mind right trying to negotiate the distinction there and then also being able to get close enough to the root in your thought in your thought process because i just think all the time my brain is very literal that is why i have i'm abstracted away from my body because why i've been scared of dying since i was a kid why something that was any by any 1:0:57 realistic measure far far away something i couldn't stop thinking about because i could not imagine uh detaching myself from that ego enough to avoid just screaming into the void so i am trying to reorder myself so that i'm always trying to grasp like emotions where they come from and like follow them through to try to to neutralize even my body sensations before they they tripped me up and got me back into a so 1:2:4

anyway i hope if some of this made who knows we all know where it'll end up and that's good and that's the thing is that there is nothing to fear there really is nothing to fear but that doesn't uh that doesn't pay the pickle man when your feelings are not determined by the things you think you have to take that lack of fear and live it by overriding as much as you can everything that comes spewing out of but you need you need you need to but you're not going to get rid of fear obviously and it's going to have to use it's a signal it's it's a it's a decision-making matrix it's a decision maker it helps you navigate things so you have to have fear without being owned by it but that's nobody said it would be easy all right well that felt pretty good i feel like i got most of what i wanted to hope everybody can stay safe and stay you 1:3:6

lonely feeling deep inside find a corner where i can't hide solid footsteps crowding me sudden darkness no sugar tonight or coffee no sugar tonight or cream no sugar to stand beside me no no no in the silence of her mind quiet movements where i can find grabbing for me her eyes now i'm falling from the sky that's no sugar 0:1:5 tonight all coffee no sugar tonight or cream no sugar to stand beside me no sugar to everybody have you heard if you're in the game then the stroke's **Music playing** i love how many songs uh have been written that are basically about how a lot of 0:2:15 people become stars and they're like you know what i think a lot of these i think a lot of these uh show folk out here and holly weird they actually uh they don't they don't uh say what they mean all the time and sometimes they uh they tell you what that you want they want you to hear so that they can pick your pocket i mean what's going on they'll turn into jimmy stewart as soon as they get to hollywood well what's going on around here are signed a record contract so yeah sorry huckleberry what did you think this was and then they just have to write a song about it to let everybody know and then what do you know everybody just keeps going and keeps trying to go in the the dream factory and nobody is dissuaded no matter how many of these songs get written or how because what is there else to seek people want 0:3:16 to know why oh uh all the kids want to be youtubers they want to be uh content creators and why everybody always wants to be an athlete or a rapper instead of it's because in the absence of any project in the absence of any belief in a social order any belief that your efforts put towards it are going to be either is are going to be appreciated or utilized to any greater benefit to anyone if you if the world is just cynical transactions then what the ***** should you try to do with your life other than be uh the center of attention to reify that identity that that uh that singular uh consciousness that is the entirety of the universe because here's the thing if you make a world where everybody is god and then most of them just have to be regular ***** people and do shitty jobs they're gonna get uh annoyed with that they're gonna get in fact their brains are basically gonna eventually explode from the cognitive 0:4:17 dissonance of being god and yet being powerless so of course everyone's gonna seek a

CUSHVLOG 163. JOHNNY MEMENONIC

***** employment where they can be unalienated which is as close to post-capitalist as you can imagine which is the idea of now a little bit of alienation can be accepted if you think you're ***** building something beyond yourself but if a society builds a if you are brought into a a structured reality that says no the only uh pursuit is selfishness the only uh point of view is your own the only reality is your body well then you're going to operate from those premises and that means you're not going to put any effort into anything that isn't immediately validating and that means of course you want money and of course you want to have time buyers for yourself and not according to a boss but more than anything you need to be noticed you need to be seen you need to be famous you have to be famous or else how are you the sole ***** consciousness in the galaxy that that gap is too great your brain can't handle the cognitive dissonance of living as one of many whenever when everything you've encountered culturally tells you that you're the only ***** thing in the universe that can't that's unsustainable that's why people seek to their own destruction fame and fortune and that's why i did ***** in my lazy cowardly way of just yearning for it and then complaining about it long enough that a ***** technology came along to allow you the opportunity to get known for complaining that's why everybody wants to be a critic because if there is no energy to produce art because you have no faith in the project of society then what you want is uh the fame without the risk which is criticizing other stuff politically artistically the critic is the default model if you can't be uh if you can't if you aren't talented enough to do it effortlessly like you're a great you're very attractive and that means you can become famous just you know by acting or something or you are an actor with a charisma which is another thing that is relatively effortless uh even if it requires you know application but it's application towards a singular goal of say fame those people get famous and if you have athletic ability those people get famous but if you're not if you don't have those things if all you have is this ego and this disempowered position as just one of the ***** flossom the consumer blobs who make up america uh then you're gonna get annoyed with it and you're going to complain and along camera technology to allow your complaints to be turned into content and then you've created an entire ***** economy of critique which is people trying to reckon with their insignificance in a world where they're the only ***** consciousness that exists but it's all a flight away from effort because of it it is a lot a lack of belief and the thing about the belief is the belief doesn't go away like obviously uh modernity is this huge uh hundreds of year arc of disenchantment with the world right like the world losing its magic the uh the uh life become like that is which is unquantifiable is where mystery and uh and religion and spirit live and what the quantifiable but that doesn't mean that belief goes away because at the end of the day you have to believe enough to keep your blood pumping in your body and the thing that you believe in if you can't believe it anything outside of the body is the body itself and the mind and identity that pilot and so we believe more than ever we believe as much as any people in history have ever believed but we only believe in ourselves and not in the i believe in myself way as in the ourselves our fantasy social fiction that we have turned into reality because remember this self is not real any more than our social bonds are real any more than any ideological construction out of the the the explosive random uh matter that we encounter every day uh is real but we act as though it were it used to be one thing of many that we believed in now all of that belief is concentrated into the self and all we're seeing the the s a species suicide is due to the fact that we only believe in ourselves which means we can only pursue the most narrow short-term carnal self-interest and that means uh that means that we can only operate through capitalism we can only operate through market relationships and that in a context of finite resources that will spell the death of the planet now that's not black pill that's not the end of the but humans have to believe to live but what they believe in changes yes like this is a perfect example it's not like believing in the self is evil and must be extinguished it's inevitable it just it used to be a smaller part of our conception of reality uh uh somebody put a good post here self-interest makes class politics relevant exactly exactly uh the emergence of the liberal self is what allows class consciousness to come into being like peasants would rebel cyclically but never along any kind for the most part not in a coherent uh like understanding of the politics and as a group it was a spasm against like their most immediate oppressor they were usually doing their uh violence on behalf of the king in their own minds anyway the kind of uh like strategically um this is strategically uh powerful and and threatening uh and formidable class politics that is oriented against capital as it is only allow is only possible with the individuated self valuing their alienation enough to stand up for themselves for themselves for their idea of themselves as having inherent value and if their time and having inherent value their time on earth their time having consciousness that time has value they want to assert it but you have to feel it as a separation you have to feel alienation as a loss so it's an it's inherent and then necessary but we lost the war is the thing the socialist spirit was awakened at the dawn of capitalism and marx was right there to see it coming into fruition but that fight was lost that fight was lost i would say in the years eight 1914 to 1922. i would say that and that everything then that since then has been a holding action um and that we have reached a period of of of capitalist of complete capitalist uh domination the end of history as fukuyama discussed and why he really was right but the thing is there something comes after the end of history because we're in a ***** system that cannot sustain it contradictions between the material conditions

and the fantasies in the heads of our uh self deluded uh capitalist rulers here someone makes a very good point here that historically capitalism is obsolete and this is what maxes people up a lot of the times because we are far past the point when capitalism has uh has ceased to fulfill his historic uh purpose because remember marx was not did not hate capitalism the the whole big the first third of the communist manifesto is a payon to capitalism's progressive features capitalism in marxism has a historic 0:13:35 role i think what you would call late capitalism what you would call the whatever this neoliberal like techno feudal whatever the hell you want to call it the post 1918 1989 world is uh really capitalism having um gone beyond its historic role it's still holding on because of its the belief in it its ability to create a uh a self-sustaining magnetic like electromagnetically charged cultural hegemony like we have created people who cannot live together who cannot cooperate we've created people who are incapable of doing it under the conditions that they emerge the isolated socially atomized conditions with a global uh supply chain that keeps uh the most horrifying 0:14:36 exploitation of the system as far as humanly possible geographically and culturally and what and that means that even though we have by far the tech the capitalist accumulation necessary to equalize the pain of being alive and not fully but in a vastly mostly more than we are and in a way that could preserve the biosphere but the people who could do that are not us now that doesn't mean they won't be us at some point but it means right now they're not us and getting there getting to those people and if that fails if humanity fails then you will see uh capitalism just following 0:15:40 along as to its uh technological extinction and who knows how long that will take but it will occur and that is those are all open variables so i can't say it mostly comes down to how much technology emerges and of course there is the zardoz option that the rich are able to put technology between themselves and exploitation because that's what it is you're putting technology allows you to put distance between exploitation and the uh consumption of the pro product of exploitation between the extraction of surplus value and the enjoyment of surface value that's what technology allows you couldn't get to a point if the technology happens and this is all who knows i'm not a tech person that allows them to allows the rich to seal themselves off as in create in a bubble the post uh the totally automated reality sealing themselves in 0:16:43 and then you have ironically enough as peter freys puts up points out in his book for futures you have fully luxurated space communism congratulations you've got it but you've got it without those people being transformed by the process of building it which means they're still demon monads as happens in zardoz which is a great the only people who can survive the frank lee the boredom the boredom the only people who could survive the boredom of fully luxurated space communists communism would be people who had a decentered themselves not removed their sense of self

not become a behind mind but reduce their sense of self and to put it into a social project because even in this how is it that in the center of america and the center of this system of exploitation where all of the people are living basically post-scarcity lives like to live in the the middle quartile especially if you have one of these jobs and media or around media i.e the people who are actually doing all the content that people interact with that shapes their understanding of what political culture is they're miserable even though they live post-scarcity lives for the most part yes they're a little exploited exploited but they know there's some of the few people left on earth who know that their effort will be rewarded who knows that trying will get them something so of course so these are essentially post-capitalist subjects in their lives and they're ***** miserable and they build an insanity of a political uh insane asylum to wage war in how the hell do you think they're gonna operate where the reality is hi welcome to life you're not gonna have to struggle for anything uh for your basic existence you're not gonna have to struggle to keep yourself sustained as a person but you are going to die uh you're going to go through life having experiences accumulating a sense of self uh until it's really the only frame of reference for the world around you and then at some point it's going to stop like it's the grit it's the it's the people neurosis is postmodern neurosis i think the neuroesthetic of our new victorian like drawing room class the yellow wallpaper people which is all of us really if you're listening to this you have the yellow wallpaper disease a little bit i know i do i mean once again i'm speaking about myself if you say weird we're not miserable we just want health care i'm not talking about that i'm talking about people in my position the people who structure this stuff and then how it respond i'm just saying as an example these are as close this is as good as it gets under the system and it results in people building fantasies of anxiety to build give themselves something to worry about like ***** the robin deangelo thesis these these comfortable well-off white people who live in the center of an exploitative nightmare system and know that but also are addicted to resolving that and it is by giving themselves a neurotic fixation uh on their level of racism and that is like if you want to talk about like the hysteria of wokeness on white people that's what it is it is this need to self to self absolve it is the neo puritan need to be dissolved of the guilt of living as you do because you know it's bad but there's nothing else to do and the thing is i don't there is nothing else for you to do in the sense that you can work towards you know uh the betterment of the world but you're probably still going to be at the center of empire you're probably still going to be exploiting people somewhere but you have to live with it and do you live with it by indulging in a fantasy or do you live with it by facing the and the answer to that question comes down to how much are you trying to reinforce yourself how much are you trying to get pleasure out of this and that's the thing about the neurosis of of this ***** is that it gives you pleasure you don't have to sacrifice all that pain you're feeling all that misery uh the thing about freaking out about uh oh no one's wearing masks oh my god what if how long they're telling me i don't have to wear a mask but i want to keep wearing a mask all of that is pleasure at a sense it is a game you're playing with yourself instead of thinking about the reality that you're a cut off consciousness floating through space that is in a system lubricated by so that is why uh this is this is a process this is a process of creating 0:21:54 a species that is aware of itself as in has detached some percentage of its belief away from in itself into others into that oh yeah there is stuff outside of there that's real that's real as as real as i am and that's what makes people struggle sacrifice that's what makes work unalienating and there has to be work we got to work but that is unalienated labor and unalienated labor ***** build a goddamn could build a dyson spear make america live forever or make america live forever make uh make humanity extend itself into this cosmos because we have so much technology holy ***** we have so much stuff that ***** marx thought that uh capitalism it was fulfilling its historic uh role already when all they had is like some ***** steam-powered looms 0:22:56 like a machine that would like oh and it powers a ***** uh a sewing machine we have the ability to centrally plan a world sized economy through simula simulations within mach within uh uh computers we can map the world in a way to allow all of our automated technology to ***** extend across it but that's that would be if we believed in something different the tools we have are sufficient if the people were different and it's us and the process this is history is us grinding those two things against each other because they can't just shift spontaneously that is the fantasy i think of a lot not all but a lot of anarchists is a spontaneous phase shift where you can go from being a full i'm a full individual vigi vigil and i believe in uh with everything being good for other people but mostly out of a uh understanding of like 0:23:58 utilitarian ethics you know i understand that what is good for the many is good for me too i can go from that person to a state of uh post-capitalist uh post-scarcity can't do that you have to work you have to change and that change has to change others and then the next generation of people have to change too it's just it is ***** ***** labor and is slow boring of hard boards oh yeah that's yes of course that's that's what uh politics is it's also what revolution is by definition unless you want to skip steps which everybody wants to do and i totally get it but here's the thing wanting to skip steps is wanting to feed the ego wanting to skip steps is wanting to keep doing what you're doing already because it feels good and even the stuff that feels bad feels good because it contrasts with the other stuff and it gives you something to chase after the stuff that makes you see the world as it is that is the 0:24:59 desire to actually see things better pleasure and of course like this doesn't point in any direction this is all ***** because i'm just trying to say that that there has to be of the most advanced people like there are progressive and uh and reactionary forces within any polity even in the center of the decadent world uh uh capitalist empire that's consuming the um ***** i realize that whatever what do we but there 0:26:2

is politics here and it has to uh people have people are it's made by people talking to each other right now because there aren't any structures to join there isn't any real sys there is no left to join there are organizations you can join as an individual but there is no self-conscious left to join in this country it has to be built and so people are right now all of us are faced with a choice of what do we do every day to try to make that happen and all i c and i'm trying to ask myself questions well what can i do well i'm totally isolated i'm completely cut off i am not a worker i am not in the working class i am part of that remaining uh section of uh of uh art artisans uh but also even there i am enmeshed in capitalism as so i could sever all of those chords immediately and try to fight for the working class how could i do that what 0:27:4 could i do in that capacity as a middle-aged limping man with no actual skills or abilities i could try something but it's a big leap well what do i actually what where am i i'm in this position there's there's these people who here listen to what i'm saying if i'm going to keep doing that for now because i honestly don't know what else to do in the middle of this this pandemic that has now even further cellularized me i can try to make sense of what to ***** say transparentize the question and uh and realize that okay if everybody's seeking this if i can assume everyone has good faith is trying to seek betterment then all i could do is tell them not what to do because i'm not in a position because i'm not in a position to tell anybody what to do i don't ***** have an idea i'm i have no connections in the working class i have 0:28:9 an idea of how you can approach these questions um but that's it and of course that allows me to stay here and cushy in my home and that's the other thing is that you have this fire in your stomach this combination of like uh the the ache of of distance from you know uh the sacred and then also that knowledge that it exists and you've got those and that i think is what causes us to feel to feel things and to be able to build a world around the feelings because we have to translate feelings through that tunnel into conscious ideas and that means being present for the feelings in order to be nearest to that that moment instead of allowing it all to get alienated by us thinking all the ***** time which i know i am very very guilty of doing because 0:29:11 what happens is is that even if you have this feeling if you can't stoke it socially if you're not stoking it through actions you are only thinking about it you are only uh in the moment abstracting away uh an a sort of a logical cage a a syntactic structure that can contain that idea but that can only be made up of the stuff you've ever experienced it's it's it is consumed it is constructed of the experience of the world

around you which means it's locked up in the idea of the self the idea of uh of of the uh singularity of your consciousness like you're still in that body you're still in that mind that has those traumas and associations built into it and so as you try to keep this i this feeling and you keep trying to keep it alive through thought the thought 0:30:12 continues to drift farther and farther away from the feeling because you are fallen from it in time literally in time you're trying to remember something and the longer you try to remember something the more you have to sort of uh improvise to keep it going and to feeling because the only way to keep those feelings in turn them into thoughts and to practice practice which i now understand how that's a useful term because you really can't disengage the two because you're really only thinking until you get to an act and then you do the act and the act gets you like informs your thinking again you you you the one by themselves just turns into self-interest over 0:31:13 time it just turns into self-interest all the time what keeps it alive is uh cooperation is interaction with others socially is a social **Music playing** and the problem is is that for it to work to be effective you have to be interacting with people who share your mental construction who have the same associations you have between words and feelings and that's tough that's very difficult and so people go online to try to find people like that but we're not interacting with ourselves as real and body people we're operating as just pure ego uh uh projections of that person shorn from any real feeling and so we just fight and build castles in the sky and and wage what 0:32:14 meanwhile our bodies are just sitting there our bodies are just sitting in time and so we come back into our bodies not fortified for the fight but uh reified in in this in the hopelessness and pointlessness of fighting because what's the use and also i'm ***** tired because my orgone just went out at the top of my head into this it is dualistic in the sense that there is a dual there isn't that the dialectic is made of uh of opposites and the un re there have to there has to be at base and uh irresolvable opposite and it's between space and time that is the one opposite within the the pluralistic 0:33:16 universe that is one that is one uh thing there is still space and time and everything else the creation of the universe the bringing into consciousness of human or bringing into existence of life to bring into consciousness of humanity these are all and then human history and the development of human civilization are space and time are the same thing of course but there's still a contradiction between them heisenberg like something happens to me i have a feeling something touches me and then i feel the 0:34:17 it happens afterwards my my body dies before my mind dies which is really what all of this is about the knowledge we have that our ***** bodies die before our minds do that means that we have to know at some level at some instinctive level what to do all right we might get a dmt hit exactly but what is that hit gonna be it's you're not gonna get to choose it you're not gonna get the ***** uh put it up on the jukebox it's gonna be powered by your deepest below conscious constructions where you did not where you have only been after those were formed trying to make sense of them so yeah i hope that made sense somewhat i know it got a little wacky 0:35:58 there at the end all the quantum stuff i try not to talk about it because i don't get i don't understand it i feel like i get it enough where it's just like you know you got like a you have a reality tunnel that's made out of different pieces and they're different sizes and some are very granular some concepts you got a bunch you can just go over there and you can feel it and you just you feel very confident in it and there's other stuff that's that's solid but still pretty thin or pretty uh pretty big you know it's pretty smooth not a lot of grit and for me all that ***** is is very smooth but at the same time i know i'm not gonna get it any more than i do so once again i'm going to do a leap of faith that yeah broadly i know what's going on there and then it and the thing is it makes sense with everything else it's just putting together a ***** out of the out of the cracked pottery of your perceptions of life is putting together a ***** mosaic tablet and then if you can get one that aligns your heart 0:36:59 in your head and you can live it live it with other people that reinforce it both for you and for them here's a good one why can't japan have such a cool spiritual and philosophical history and also such a bloody and imperialist material history because we have been running through every existing civilization has been one marked by class domination all cultures all societies are first and foremost structures of class power all religious traditions and spiritualities exist within them the ideas of those 0:38:3 have residences that operate in different ways and under different contexts so even though the the the earliest strains of things like buddhism we're all expressions of people coming to not to an understanding of reality but to an ability to translate an untranslatable experience into something other people could grasp in their mind imaginatively to put a reality into someone's mind it's and it that and language is is a ***** incantation and so you have those magic moments that are defined what are they defined by place and time people in a specific space experiencing something at the same time and having those experiences fused into language and symbols and 0:39:5 then carrying those symbols outward some of the people encountering those symbols are going to have a similar experience others are going to have an experience from the outside of it that finds it useful and power will take any structure and symbol and turn it towards its use because it can because it has power it's going to take anything because it can now there'll be a resistance but if it's powerful enough it will keep it and if it's not powerful enough whatever emerges from it well because class has not been conquered will reinscribe class domination and use the stuff for their own method for their own benefit so our task is not to accept or reject religious traditions in in their uh cultural like their their their denuded cultural context you 0:40:6

need to ask yourself what religious symbology what religious concepts what spiritual premises whatever actually make you feel something actually resonate and then you could build from there but yeah from everything has been tainted everything is a instrument of domination i mean my god like on their own terms forget what forget their mystification on their own terms the guys who settled uh of the united states and wanted to turn it into the city on the hill you brought them you snapped your fingers and brought them to this and say here's it is they would they would go insane 0:41:7 the vulgarness the the monstrous uh uh fallen disgusting materialist filth of it would drive them insane and a lot of right wingers like to say that they like to complain oh the our early americans would be disgusted but here's the thing they made this happen because their conceptions were never defeated they were the leading they were the top proposition that they were their concept their their their de-spiritualized christianity their materialist christianity made this world because they won they fought other things and in the fighting created new things and created synthesis out of other things but they were never unseated from the horse and what do we have for it even on their own terms it's hell because that's what you'll create you'll create your own hell trying to build a world out of exploitation out of class domination 0:42:9 which is committing violence it is violence to someone that you have to in your heart detach yourself from in a way that and being in that position of exploitation causes you for very obvious and understandable reasons to detach yourself from the people dominating you and hurts your spirit and then you fight over the scraps for the next 300 years no matter what ***** language of religiosity and spirituality you use you're just building that the structures that allow you to do that because these guys one of uh uh the the the founding federation the founding generation would be horrified why they won this we still have the stupid constitution they're dumb 0:43:10 instruction manual is still in power and what can they say oh you distorted it oh you stopped paying attention to it i'm sorry how was that allowed to happen power was exercised through its structures and dominated it's a ***** instrument of power what are you complaining about and what's this the people who the whole the real point of this thing as madison others said plainly had nothing to do with creating a civic anything it was keeping the rich people rich so that they could maintain their position of authority and it worked the rich have never been uh been close to being divorced from american power and now we have this world if if your rule led you to this of what use was the rule because all anything that you're trying to build you you will convince yourself no matter how evil the system you you support is is that some part of it corresponds to a value somewhere and that's yours this the cultural superstructure exists to lie to you it is generated by the ruling class to tell the ruling class that up is down down is up and that exploitation now they're 0:44:11

convincing themselves of this because of their deep selfishness but at a conscious level they believe a lot of it at least some of them do i would say that like with anyone it is a ***** bell curve most do to some extent some do completely some do not at all like reinhardt hydric types but most people believe to some degree that they're trying to build a better world or the best possible world and their power allows them to create a system where everyone around them thinks the same thing and that's where we are now and where we've always been revolution is the attempt from below for to organize a counter hegemony with with values that organize around the reality the consonants of human uh of human dignity the the equality of the spirit and 0:45:12 creating a culture where where everyone else agree believes that and reinforces it to you and then through superior numbers overcoming the powerful that's what support that's what was supposed to happen the hinge point in history was in the early 20th century when you had gotten finally industrial capitalism had had overheated in europe where it was born it it had fallen follow the script of marx to doom but what's this colonialism what's this the existence of the united states of america as a place where capitalism's headquarters its brainstem could decamp where it had uh synthesized it had the united states well the united well europe was overheating with cot with uh capitalism the steam vent of conflict went to america where the mount the bounty of our land allowed us to uh resolve away all a lot of the social conflict at 0:46:14 the heart of the european capitalism within the white race by dominating other races and then that meant that in europe the explosion happened right around when you could have predicted it but even though the fight was significant and and there was a big long uh holding action at the end you know even though the like the battle you want to look back and say like the in the class war yeah uh in the class war gettysburg and vicksburg are like world war one and the failure of the german revolution but then you've got you know uh the soviet union in there you got the chinese then you have the anti-colonial movements of the third world and then the labor movement in the first and they hold off for a while and then that's that's lee retreating into northern virginia but now the the contradictions the material contradictions continue 0:47:26 so we're going to still see uh possibilities emerge erupt and change the thing that saved capitalism was uh space was space and resources that could be technologically dominated to uh to alleviate away from the centers of power the uh exploitation of those closest to it i.e the working classes of the working class of europe and the the uh racially white working class of the united states although sections of other minority groups too just in in you know in in a uh in a segregated fashion and yeah we got like oh yeah cuba god bless cuba but cuba's like you know they're uh they're 0:48:28 the holdouts in the jungle and they should stay there there but that doesn't mean that they why was japan able to westernize and become an imperial power despite

happening because it was isolated because it was by itself because it was not uh it was able to end and its feudal era i don't know that much about japan but its feudal era was marked by such intense uh essentially what you had in europe in japan was the same thing you had in europe which is a lot a growing population in a relatively constrained geographic area of course this is on a smaller scale which uh fighting over uh resources which means state formation and state capacity being built very 0:49:30 very effectively bureaucratic uh the bureaucratic state and the technological state it is that content this is this is all from scheidel uh this is this i really do believe that the thing that creates that that created progress the the capitalism uh and the conditions for capitalism which allowed japan to adopt it as quickly as they did and in japan you had like the shogunate but within it you had just a constant conflict between low-level uh rulers you did not have any kind of dominant uh and that's what you didn't have in force of course state competition is one state attempting to dominate another at the expense of the other and now and when you have uh 0:50:33 situations like europe it makes sense and you have japan it makes sense but then oh what's this we have a world system now we have a totally connected uh economic structure oh no what what are we competing about now where what is what is the actual competition here oh ***** we're really just creating these artificial structures to allow for uh capital to circulate completely independently i might want to start cooperating might be a good idea but i don't know i don't know latin america if there 0:51:37 is hope it's helping latin america that's my in africa but i don't know as much but definitely latin america where you have you have a legacy of you know a 20th century left that still has actual social uh function and cohesion i mean obviously it's under assault but there does seem to be the capacity for coordinated uh resistance there and politically expressed resistance uh uh and that means it's that's why it's been such a ***** bloody blood-soaked horror ground of the cold war that's where the ***** that's where uh outside of like southeast asia that is where the most uh most people were sacrificed to uh dollar hegemony in the cold in the in the uh cold war was uh was in latin america because of the the ***** the effectiveness and the the resiliency of the resistance like if latin america could become in some way like a coherent left 0:52:38 block that could then pla like tip the balance between the united states and china and like force some sort of uh it's not it's not world communism but it's better than the alternative uh if anyone's read vince bevin's great book the jakarta method he uh one of the things that's great about it is that he contextualizes the indonesian genocide in the cold war in a way that uh i don't think necessarily everyone would have done because and i think it comes from the fact that he wrote he was a journalist in brazil for many years before he went to indonesia is that he pointed out that the jakarta method uh while it was obviously first you know tried out in indonesia was 0:53:41

really extended and perfected over the cold war not in the rest of uh asia but in latin america in chile and in argentina and in ***** brazil and then you have the fact that the colombian government has basically been an american like the client military the colombia somebody just said like column uh the colombian president or something said somebody says that colombia is the israel of latin america and we're proud of it yes exactly even though bolsonaro of course loves and smooches uh um you know he loves uh israel brazil is coming late to the party here like colombia has been the uh military the extended military footprint of the united states into latin america for 0:54:42 generation now mostly under the guise of the drug war but of course that is mostly about arming uh narco terror gangs who who make sure that union organizers get killed and peasants like plan it was called plan colombia you know so and brazil was never really a a flash point of that particular site you know a fake uh conduit for american military weapons and training and personnel so yeah colombia is the ***** israel of latin america but now you're getting this massive uh resistance and it's being repressed violently when you see that this is not an isolated incident that this is a pattern throughout all of the nations of south america for the most part uh if there's 0:55:44 hope i think that's where it is but again i don't know enough about latin american his uh latin american uh politics right now i don't speak spanish or portuguese uh to know the specifics but looking at it from a scance from afar it seems that's where like human the potential for for actual organization that can be effective uh exists oh somebody wants to talk about the labor party uh l o l that's all i gotta say there l o l that's so ***** good just eating ***** losing a seat that they've held since the uh whatever i mean they had their chance england had their chance and they were they were too miserable to pull it off they're too they're too far gone and why shouldn't they be they're the ones who did this to us like obviously we are all we all did this too but we were born into a world shaped more than in america that by those and 0:56:48 it's not their fault it's where they were that was that's the strategy when you're out there in the ***** north atlantic at the edge of europe nothing but some ***** sheep folds no resources what are you gonna do and they did it they took over the world they jacked everybody else's ***** now all their edible food comes from thousands of miles away but they're miserable about it as i said they're miserable about it they got all they wanted they got out on top they got to they got to trade off they got to sell high on the british empire because they could have lost it all i mean my god imagine uh a some sort of uh third worldest overthrow of of uh the british empire instead of them getting to just sign it over to the united states and then get to get a nice welfare state after the war because every short-term deal that you make with 0:57:49 because you're being stripped you're selling your soul you're selling your soul you're selling it piece by piece until you're born into a soulless world what like england hey

england solas we're basically soulless and it's all about your distance alienated so it'll be very interesting just it'll be very interesting to see how i mean obviously it's not like this is going to change the labor party they they're they want the blairite scum are ascendant they're just going to keep bullshitting and blaming corbin so and then they'll they'll get wiped out in the next election and uh you'll get it another crowd who promises not the same not to make the same mistakes and is gonna be somehow not tainted by it but they're gonna be i don't know anything about somebody's asking about the albanian elections i don't know anything about it someone's asking if it's uh relevant to current moments is what did the hoshi did like enver hosa's kid get in or something what happened in albania oh yes enverhosa junior one uh with the uh why did this a very good question to end on why did the anc go neo-liberal i would argue for the same reason that uh michael collins came back uh to ireland with uh the treaty because it's the deal they thought they could get and they figured well if we get political power we'll be able to turn it into economic power but it turns out no the moment for that was gone historically i don't think it's any coincidence that you see the end of apartheid with the soviets out of the picture it's a different question about whether you hand over uh uh political power to blacks because as long as the uh the economic heights have been held by whites on uh let the let him let him go let him do it if it's what keeps the system going and what maintains uh the flows the spice let them have it and knowing that there was no leverage to get beyond a political sub uh because where would where would their uh if they had demanded no we we demand uh control of the economy we demand like central bank authority and all that stuff uh how much of that western uh support that they got for their uh boycott and sanctions and ***** would still exist so they got a deal they got power and it helped it helped it materially benefited in some respects and more importantly it materially benefited some people and that is the problem with uh with communal politics like uh that is stripped of a class conflict is that once you get an anc that is that is just another political capitalist political party it ends up existing to benefit people who are already on inside sort of the the bubble of this the the small bourgeois and higher and you just enlarge in the bourgeois and you racially diversify the bourgeois all right i think that'll be that'll be the game for tonight hope it went well hope it made a little bit of sense

mama pajama rolled out of bed and she went to the police station papa pound out he began to shout and started the investigation it was against the law it was against the law what your mama saw it was against the law mama looked down and spit on the ground every time a name gets mentioned papa said oh if i got that boy i'm gonna stick him in the house of detention but i know no way i don't know where i'm going and i'm on my way i'm taking my time but i don't know where goodbye rosie the queen of corona seeing me and julia down by the schoolyard see me and julia down by the schoolyard okay finally got it to work didn't work at first the queen of corona indeed how have they not renamed that park corona park just sitting there in the and they never renamed the beer either another thing i can't kind of get my head around but it both seemed like that would have been no brainers i guess you just don't want to uh admit what's really happening corona heights in san francisco there we go i gotta say someone says the new snyder movie very excited for the new uh zach snyder zombie movie because uh dawn of the dead is probably his best film and that opening sequence is really the best it is the best zom it's the closest any zombie movie has gotten to what i have always wanted in a zombie movie and never got which is the actual moment the the the dramatization of the moment when the zombie crisis hits uh normality and disrupts it and and there isn't a uh they tried it in world of the book world war z does a great job of that but uh the movie has just one stupid terrible scene where a bunch of guys are running around in philadelphia otherwise uh very lame but that opening sequence when it's the ***** suburban waukesha county uh cul-de-sac just going to hell it's tasty of course it couldn't sustain it because the rules of the game and also what's uh cheap to film don't really allow for that kind of thing but i'm looking forward to it the fact that they digitally replaced chris delia with tygnataro like a year after the movie was made is pretty funny uh so that'll be funny to see and also uh i'm interested to see how they get the incredibly stupid premise of bank heist during a zombie apocalypse because a lot of people say what are you gonna do with the money my presumption is is that it's a contained zombie situation the zombies like took over las vegas but

there's also now like a return civilization but you gotta figure post zombie apocalypse that they would have at least they would at least revalue the dinar you know put out some new sort of currency okay so one bit of business before i start what i want to talk about today and that is that for next week going to read the first three chapters of uh corbs weimar republic i'm not sure we might just read that and be done with it because it's from what i understand one of the best uh his best like capsule treatments of the german revolution so that'll we'll go from there i kind of have an idea that i want to read a kim stanley robinson book because a lot of what i'm going to be talking about and what i've been focusing on in my mind lately is is confronting the reality of living trying to live and trying to articulate a political subjectivity at a time of full despair and i do think that there is a way that despair can be grappled with and transcended and i'm trying to help i'm trying to do it for myself and i'm finding like by the day i am able to do it you know and that's all it is it's a it's it's never a it is a project all life is that day-to-day project that minute by minute project it's not something that can be just uh turned on and off like a light it's a it's a daily struggle but you can struggle uh easily or more difficultly you know you could be confronting the real thing or you can be epiphenomenon of it that you then engage with instead and which will never allow you to get anything where because you're never you're not actually confronting anything and so i wanted to maybe read something that because you know the despair is why i was looking backward the despair is why i'm looking at you know the civil war and the german revolution and thinking like what could have gone differently where where is another where is that other world that we could be living in uh but also and but that's not the only thing i want to do with it because you know i still have we all have to live now uh so uh cameron stanley robinson has been doing a very interesting job in trying to do non-doom-based non-capitalist fantasy science futurist fiction which is very difficult because as we'll talk about the future now only belongs to the rich the future has been privatized the future are the only people who the rich are the only people who get to imagine a future yes ministry of the future is the one that i want to read so we'll see about that after the weimar thing so if you're rich you can imagine a future for your children you can imagine giving them a world better than yours because you can convince yourself uh the same way the mid-century modernists convince themselves about a middle-class uh uh future they can imagine a boutique rich person future and all the stuff that's gonna happen everybody else will be very unfortunate but also unavoidable inevitable and not my problem at the end of the day nobody else gets to imagine a future when we think of what's coming next it's just a black hole it's terror and so that is one of the things that depoliticizes uh the mass of people because if you have no future that you can move towards realistically

uh then what's the point of engaging anything why not as we talked about last week just trying to solve in the shortest term possible my own selfish desires uh it's the only smart move in a futureless world so confronting despair is about reclaiming the future in a lot of ways and ex and and accepting despair but uh accepting with it that you still exist and that you still have a beating heart and that something is driving it and to find what that is and move towards it and we can all do that uh but it means disengaging from a lot of the things that we have become addicted to that have uh allowed us to to cope without actually directly addressing and so i think reading something that is unabashed in its willingness to imagine a human future uh even though that is cringe because my god how could anyone take it seriously we all know it's we're doomed we all know that there's no ***** hope look at the ***** hockey stick look at who has the money look who has the ***** technology look who look who look what kind of uh social cohesion we have or or uh class consciousness that's terrific it's a terrifying prospect the math doesn't hold up but so everybody has to risk cringing everybody has to risk stepping off into the abyss and saying i'm going to believe that we can do this and so after we do this stuff with weimar i want to read **Music playing** the ministry of the future by kim stanley robinson so that's we'll be doing that one um so to get to what i wanted to talk about today though and dealing with despair uh is the in my mind uncanny resonance between the current moment i wouldn't say decade because i think we're beyond the point where discrete decades at least maybe uh we're beyond decades or maybe they can only be understood in further retrospect than we have now whatever you want to call it this period i would say post 2008 uh whatever you want to call that it's now what it's now 12 years 13 years it's a long decade let's say is essentially the 1970s uh being recapitulated in that it is an era of mass disillusionment from a uh an understood system the 1970s was the decade when america throughout in every walk of life not just the hippies who got disillusioned by the failure of their movement everybody from suburban reactionary homeowners to haiti ashbury burnouts everybody got the ned baby speech everybody got the uh the conversation with the man in the back of the room to tell them how things really were everybody got to eat a naked lunch in the 1970s because all of our illusions were no longer sustainable our economy the the keynesian welfare state that we built was no longer sustainable the uh the social models we created were collapsing uh uh our expectation of advancement of a future better than our present that that the ***** carrot on the stick of in america's exceptionalism has been extinguished we uh all of our institutions were proven to be uh uh criminal jokes the media uh politicians uh you had watergate you had the church committee you had a you had the hangover vietnam everyone understood and then when you combined that with just bread and butter stuff like the the real

beginning of de-industrialization and the massive strike wave that's like the very tail 0:11:15 end of american labor militancy sort of burned off like the last excess energy the labor movement have burned off in a bunch of wildcat strikes in the 70s uh sort of a mirror of the burst of strike activity uh in the late 1940s that sort of set the stage for the it was the birth of the modern business-oriented collaborationist post-war labor movement and it's and it began with a bunch of wildcat strikes in the late 40s 1948 and it ended with a bunch of wildcat and they mostly failed so the labor movement failed it was awash in corruption and it uh it's it's was not unable to meet the needs of its members the institutions that deployed people were already moving jobs away uh in inflation and uh and unemployment coming together in a 0:12:16 way that no economist thought was possible and then the church that the church committee and the revelation that yeah your government was spying on you and assassinating leaders and maybe killed the president there was a house committee on assassinations in the 70s that found probable cause that kennedy was killed as a part of a conspiracy they put it at the foot of the mob but nobody really believed that and of course watergate the president presidency the this institution that had investment in the notion of the presidency people believed in the president in a fundamental way now of course vietnam certainly started creating that crisis of uh credibility but what and that but then nixon's entire behavior and then finally of course in office and then of course watergate just destroyed it and so the systems failed uh it couldn't it was spiritually dead it was corrupt and crooked uh and it didn't even 0:13:19 function anymore at providing material gains and you had jimmy carter trying to to quit put out a liberal sort of pious pie uh pious gloss on it and a need for america to regain spiritual uh um he demanded that americans refine their non-materialist spirit at the very same moment that the credit card was being introduced in mass uh numbers for the first time the very first time that americans were asked to ***** uh take on debt instead of uh save money oh yeah you got to stop being materialist but also you need to start charging money you don't have in order to maintain the ***** consumer economy that we're replacing uh carter represents the very tail end of the liberal consensus when all of its bread and butter promises are gone and all that's left is its piety is its smug morality and of course that's not sufficient to the moment 0:14:20 but what is and i think i mean this should sound familiar like we are in that era the iraq the ***** war on terror the uh uh the economic collapse uh the presidency of trump in every direct like if you're a liberal or or reactionary the the elections of just the the presidential elections have essentially destroyed any but what this moment of disillusionment is from it's not it's obviously not from the thing that was destroyed in the 70s because what happened in the 70s and this is the distinction between the 70s and now this is what make this is the significant fundamental difference is that we were trapped in this uh this mire despair in the 70s all of our systems don't work we don't even trust ourselves anymore because we and then into this morass into 0:15:22 this moment where everybody has taken the red pill and pulled themselves out of the matrix and found out that they live in a mud puddle with no sun and they're tasked now to remake the world with no tools ronald reagan shows up and this is and presents to people on a chance to get back into the matrix the reagan reagan response was hey guys you know all this horrible stuff we know let's all forget about it and we're gonna be able to give you your uh your your consumer spending back your confidence back your uh your sense of destiny and your sense of um your sense of self possession back because you're gonna gonna cut your taxes we're gonna this whole government model this whole keynesian model we're throwing that out and 0:16:24 we're gonna we're gonna bet on you and given the options that's what people chose that's it was right there of course oh my god what are we to try this instead what if we say it's every man for himself and if that's the case i'm going to get ahead we're going to get rid of the whole notion that there's any sort of social compact and that will allow us to forget everything because all that stuff that was the old that was all the bad uh accumulated gunk of of post-war liberalism we can blow the ***** dirt off and start fresh and then we have what's right about america the good stuff and so we built a new consumer-based economy based on that uh but the thing is is that it wasn't just reagan offering this reagan offered it to this the the the uh the mass audience of like suburbanites who make up the center of gravity of american politics that was the his pitch that was the pitch they got was from reagan and it sounded 0:17:25 great but everybody got a pitch like i've been reading recently about some of the early 70s like psychonaut guys like uh like robert anton wilson and terence mckenna all those like uh psychedelic dudes who hit the ***** hard edge of the failure of the 60s and their faith in the ability of like the individuated uh uh consciousness of people to come together to overthrow evil because remember uh the american like counter culture was broadly libertarian because it was middle class it rebelled against the status quo because it restrained the individual that's one of the big reasons it was so the 70s saw this crisis along every axis not just at middle america but among 0:18:27 the most advanced progressive elements who did not have any connection to a class project or a class consciousness they had a desire to transcend they wanted to skip over class because it's too hard it's too tough in america and because we're too isolated from it and because it threatens our autonomy and we really do we really do value our autonomy america throughout even our left throughout america has uh suffused with our basic uh ideological understanding of freedom i mean how could it not be where else is it coming from it's generated by our culture and our and even our even at its most powerful our our working class political consciousness was

enmeshed with it as well so the dream after the failure of the people to organize in the 60s became well we will get over the bump of organizing by literally just expanding consciousness like uh john lily and ***** uh timothy leary all of these 0:19:30 dudes were like we're just gonna use our brains to like fix the sequin get a frequency that overwhelms everything all of our structural impediments of course this is very non-dialectical and it's very non-marxist but that's because this is what they had and this is what they had their brains were by then uh and even they got a deal in this in the 80s even they got an opening that allowed them to move forward out of despair and it was networking cybernetics and the internet the california ideology the california ideology was the was the defeated counterculture on the west coast trying to get around the question of politics by creating a technological infrastructure of communication that would lead to a raising of consciousness that would literally 0:20:31 allow us to evolve beyond the needs for these institutions that are imprisoning us and those guys all a lot of them ended up working with early internet uh pioneers and early uh computer research and there was a huge uh overlap in in in computer science and that like psychedelic uh uh and here we are now after having the here we are now where no one can promise what reagan promised we can only blame others for the doom that part he was good at but he was also good at sketching an alternative no one can believe in that because the neo-liberal state that reagan built and that that people uh invested belief in and that they reconstructed uh uh and reinvested 0:21:35 their belief in institutions like media and government around has now failed the same way that the post uh war keynesian consensus failed in the 70s it has now failed as a as comprehensively and even more dramatically because the 70s really was this weird like frog in a pot thing this was a collapse and then a real making of the economy in the aftermath of the collapse that destroyed the last public investment in america in america's like and so now you can't believe in any political alternative that's going to wipe the slate clean like reagan promised to and give us a new thing to believe in and gives us a chance to forget we can't forget and then even at the margins you cannot hope for some sort of uh technological spiritual transformation 0:22:38 because we know what that leads to the california ideology had led to the creation of the single most effective communicator of uh of a demiurgical uh superstructural mind prison you could imagine this without even having to use the little nanobots they they essentially put a ***** panopticon in our own minds forgetting what what any kind of uh actual surveillance technology we now are subject to which is comprehensive we have what we have the so we have to believe in something else and it can't be the self because all these things are premised on the self and our crisis now is that we can no longer reconcile ourself as we understand it with the 0:23:39 world we're living in and that means we have to change our perceptions and that is the hope we must fixate on and the hope that exists and cannot be denied is that that despair is premised on an understanding of ourselves that is that assumes as inviable this uh this transactional relationship we have with uh our each other and the very fabric of reality this this isolated this isolation that we operate from the premise of because it's in that context that all that disillusionment of the 70s only led to reaction because we were disillusioned but we were not re-illusioned we're not we're not re-illusioned around the necessity for uh our collaborative action we were in fact only reaffirmed in the futility of but now there's no there's no ra there's no vent there is no promise that can be made plausibly and that means we're going to have to just out of sheer survival instinct gonna have to change because even our most selfish instinctive desires are now in conflict with our ability to sustain ourselves in this time and so without any more without any dream of of sor of uh transcendence without any fantasy of of uh reorientation of the economy coming from we will all on our own timelines be forced with a a final confrontation with the box with no ***** the the the uh windowless room we're gonna find ourselves with no escape and then we're gonna have to make one instead of taking the one that's offered us instead of going where they where they heard us we're going to have to ***** start bashing on the walls ourselves and cutting ***** holes in i do not understand cybernetics excuse me sir i don't know anything about computers i am saying one thing i there's one thing i know about computers and is that the promise of computers in the 70s uh has led to a reality that is the diametrical opposite of everything that the people who put them together claimed i think even to themselves they somebody asked what disco demolition night is and i gotta say surprise uh that i mean i guess i shouldn't be you guys are all kids i don't remember this but it's one of those historical uh curios i really like so uh in i believe it was what year was it i don't the specific year it was 1979 it was july 12 1979 uh there was a doubleheader at uh kaminsky park in chicago and as a promotion to get people in they had a local radio dj from the north suburbs who was making a name for himself as a fervent hater of disco he would talk about how much disco sucked he would he would make fun of it all the time on the show and he was holding the standard for rock and of course people talk about how that is uh you know that's all a reactionary instinct it's a revulsion at like the queer blackness of disco uh and it's like an expression of that so they one way or another they decided that they could get people into the stadium by having this dude uh run a promotion where if you you could get in either discounted or for free if you brought a disco record with you to the to the first game and then at the moment between the games they were going to take all those uh uh albums that have been collected put them in a big pile in the middle of the outfield and run them over with a um like a bulldozer i think like blow them up they used explosives and they did

it and it was uh not a good idea it was it was a mistake uh because for the first of 0:28:44 all everybody who came was essentially uh insane like they were all shit-faced before they got there they were all wild as hell and then once the ***** bombs started going off everyone just lost their ***** and you had this explosion of of uh of just libidinal energy you just you you could just see how how if you get people together uh and you simmer the crock pot the right way it could just pop off and so they ended up having to cancel the second game and the white sox forfeited because they couldn't take control of the nickel uh 10 cent beer knight was in cleveland that's another good one that one everyone got so shit-faced that they had to uh the indians had to forfeit the second game in the doubleheader because fans jumped on the field and tried to 0:30:11 fight the royals outfielders oh man someone wants me to talk about the loco focos the locofocos great name one of the best names for a political faction in the american history the 19th century really did have all the best political faction names you had the locofocos you had the hunkers and the barn burners you had the mug wumps you had the half breeds and the stalwarts all very good uh so the locofocos were a faction of the new york city democratic party that was a self-consciously working-class arrangement they were they uh had been they were named that because there had been a meeting of of democrats in new york uh and there'd been a dispute uh between the the the workies as they were called the labor the laborers uh who made up the part of the party and the regular democrats and the the workies uh went 0:31:12 into their own hall to uh have a meeting and the lights were turned off like the the candles were blown out by a uh by the regulars and then to light the room the workers pulled out these self-lighting cigars that were popular at the time you'd like pull them out of the tube and there'd be an internal uh match and it would light the thing and so they pulled out their loco focos and they held them up to get the light going and that's what they were called and they were the first real self uh working class formation within the democratic party but the thing is is that they didn't really have any significant effect on or influence of the party because they were so it was so protein and the issues that there was still such a uh a unformed conception of 0:32:13 like what working-class interests were at that time because there were relatively few of urban laborers in the country at that point and it is one of the one of the things that contributed to america's relative reactionary uh politics relatively reactionary politics and failure for any labor party to sustain itself is that uh america because of its ability to to trade land for discontent uh was able to create mass democracy earlier than europe was so that by the time you saw mass working-class politics emerged in late 1800s uh it ended up being funneled into the democratic party whereas in europe there had been no mass politics before that point which meant that the parties that were emerged were self-consciously oriented around and dominated by the workers 0:33:14

CUSHVLOG 164. DISCO DEMOLITION NIGHT

whereas even at the height of their influence within the democratic party uh like the working class as such was always one element of a coalition and was never the director of a party and the loco focos were the first little burst of of working class uh energy around um the democratic party and uh one of the big locofoco uh demands was at this time which was dominated by banking as the main domestic issue as the main political terrain of argument uh it was banking and there was a question of whether you're going to have uh where you're going gonna have a national bank like the whigs wanted or you're gonna have uh a system of pet regional banks uh or then later an independent treasury like the democrats wanted all the way to in 0:34:17 one way or another keep the reality of the state's role in creating currency away from politics which people thought even at the even regular americans thought was freedom they thought that an independent treasury was somehow possible and would protect their liberty and uh sure ***** didn't end up happening but there were a bunch of questions one about how are we going to charter banks how many banks are going to be allowed to operate who is going to decide who who allows a bank to be chartered because one of the big complaints about the uh early 19th century banking system is that banks were banks needed to be chartered by states and those charters were often given to friends of politically influential people as you would imagine there's a reason that the jacksonian network banks were called pet banks because 0:35:18 they were all parts of the uh patriot networks around the democratic party where the banks existed and those banks were the sole distributor of uh paper currency in the country because there was no national currency at this point we had gold as the standard but there was no national gold-backed currency banks would have a certain reserve of gold that they could then lend paper currency out on essentially and that is what created the amount the amount of currency that that facilitated economic activity uh and that so the battle over the banks really was this battle over where uh who would decide and how much money there would be uh but the problem is from the point of view of working-class politics uh the actual answer of the state 0:36:20 determines it we should do it collectively and we should do it uh democratically was not conceivable uh the the the the working men of america the laborers believed that the greatest freedom was in the greatest abstraction away from politics of the money supply which is mystification but the closest thing that existed in which the locofocos insisted upon was an idea for free banking and that meant anybody could charter a bank regardless of uh their relationship with the state they didn't need to get a charter they could enough people could get together and then they could declare a bank to exist uh and uh this was very popular at the high end of the democratic party in its elites because if a lot of uh powerful people could then get 0:37:22 more bank access to uh to credit to create banks uh because they could access this

new system without having to go through the uh the checks having to make the right negotiation uh the right deals and having to deal with the uh like the quotas on banks that were allowed to be chartered and so the locofocos thought that the best thing for the working man was to allow everybody to have a ***** bank and that was like a primitive attempt to articulate a social economy but favorite elroy novel 0:38:35 character i will always love american tabloid because it's the first one i read and it blew my mind obviously all of his characters are archetypes so you're really just asking when you're saying which favorite character which is your favorite expression of which is one of your favorite elroy archetypes because you've got the uh the violent but secretly sensitive bruiser your bud white your pete bonder on uh your smooth operator who's slowly coming acro coming uh apart at the seams like jack van sense and kemper boyd and then you've got your uh cowardly nerd who is addicted to his own self-righteousness but is too weak to pursue his own values like ward little or uh ed axley and i've said before that if you had the buzzfeed if there was a buzzfeed 0:39:37 quiz are you camper uh pete or ward from american tabloid uh everybody who is on twitter would including myself would get ward so although i think pete bondurant is a huge uh just absolute pimp and i think he's cool so just from that perspective my favorite character of his in cool points is pete boundary the one that i relate to the most is of i love the idea that he made him just a ***** canuck that he made him a quebecois no need and a seven foot tall yeah definitely american taboo is a great 0:40:40 place to start because it's the first book in a trilogy there's no other uh stuff that you need to know beforehand but if you do read them all and then you want to read the la quartet don't do what i did i very because i didn't really know enough about him i just went to the library and started reading uh after i read all his other stuff uh is that i read white jazz before i read any of the other la quartet and that was a mistake because it really is a cool culmination of a bunch of stuff in la confidential that didn't hit the way that it would have if i had read at least teleconfidential first so for the love of god there's a somebody says they only read american tabloid my god yes the cold 6000 and bloods are over a lot of people don't like blood's a rover because it is very different than his other stuff it's more contemplative and romantic but i think 0:41:43 that as the culmination of that project it's really fitting especially since the cold 6000 is so brutally alienating the cold 6000 in part because it's so big and it has so much plot in it i mean it's got the like american tablet is about to lead up to the kennedy assassination uh gold 6000 features the rfk and uh kennedy assassinations in it and uh has a whole bunch more characters and stuff so in order to accommodate that he essentially just brushed that thing down to every as few as words as possible and so it's very it's almost it's it's avant-garde and it's tears-ness so it's a it's a very it's a whiplash but it's very uh we might get a snag flashing again who knows i mean 0:43:1

i didn't want to get into this too much because i don't want to get all like i don't speculate i try not to speculate anymore because that's what really got me wound up in the lead-up to the election and then all the stuff after that is having to have an argument a take that i could really feel like i understood and felt confidence in about the future that's why i've been sticking with history but **Music playing** we have reached the point now after 2008 where all of the illusions that used to shroud our uh system our our political economy are now gone one of the big reasons that the 2008 collapse happened was that after there were the first few buckling within the institutions uh of wall street uh the first uh instinct of the powers that be was to not 0:44:2 intervene with government money and that's where that's why bear stearns collapse that's what started the whole thing to go the dominoes to fall and i think we're now at a point where and i think we saw this with the care act last year which was just this massive liquidity dump that was on par with what happened in 2008 without any kind of oversight or discussion about it is that we'll never get another situation where there is any hesitation to just flood the chamber with money because the date i think the reason that there was any kind of um fiscal discipline was the worry that well if this happens what if the the good money flows somewhere else what if what if the the the circulation is is interrupted and i feel like this current moment right 0:45:4 now where you're seeing these insane escalations of bubbles in every segment of the economy the creation of new fake simulated things to have bubbles about like nfts and crypto is proof that everyone at every level of control of this structure knows that there is nowhere else for the money to go that that the the american dollar uh investment pools the american state basically is the only place to for the money to go it's it's the hole at the end of the of the uh it's the hole at the end of the gutter it's all getting sucked down so they'll just keep inflating everything what's 0:46:8 going to pop it what pops every other bubble was when the money stops coming in right in the 19th century what would happen is that you'd have a big speculative bubble around land like in the 1830s or about railroads in the 1870s and then the europeans would uh decide to bring back some of their species or invest somewhere else and then boom you'd have a giant collapse there's nowhere else for the money to go where else is the money supposed to go people talk about uh the end of america's reserve currency status and that would be game over if that happened but there's nowhere else currently up to the task so how the ***** does this thing sustain itself it seems like it shouldn't but also it keeps doing it and there isn't any alternative and no one at the top seems that worried about it but that's the thing if you're at the top of this system even if you knew for a fact that all these books are cooked and the 0:47:9 end is gonna and this economic structure is going to break down the supply chain itself is gonna break down in the near future you wouldn't behave any differently

than they would than they are right now because why the hell would you want to spook the horses especially when you have already made it so that you know if that does happen you'll be fine internet advertising thank you the data is worth nothing this is a perfect example so that's a bubble that should pop at some point right the data dollar in the silicon valley because we know now pretty definitively that none of that data is worth anything none of those clicks are worth anything including in terms of adding value to the companies that pay but it doesn't matter if everybody knows that if every single person involved in all of these translation transactions is aware of that their incentive is still to do it because it's what keeps the ***** 0:48:11

the the uh tech economy going it's the only dynamic sector so we're in a situation where it will continue to go until it collapses because all the incentives of everyone in a position of power are to keep it going because they don't have to actually risk anything because you could say oh no wouldn't that hurt their their investments and stuff well yeah but they would not be like it would put them in actual danger of losing their position i mean if we're not yeah oh they might move their they might lose their their uh money but they won't lose their position they will have created their own technological bubbles that will allow them to sustain themselves in any eventuality and if that's the case if you've got that backstop then why wouldn't you just until it bucks up the only question is when is it when does it pop and the thing 0:49:14

that keeps ***** with me where will the interruption and flow go have we created a a global system that is now self it's like fluid karma from uh southland tales and it's just it forward and yeah it's like obviously eventually climate change will pop it just in terms of interrupting the resource flow and then that's the end that's that that's the wheels will come right off but that is not going to be a that is not going to be a dramatic thing is the thing climate change effects for the foreseeable future are going to be uh they're going to be metabolized by the system like uh disasters cost 0:50:18 money but they also provide speculative investment opportunities disaster capitalism always has its uh it's creative destructive potential in every uh failing in or in every in every emergent crisis as long as there is a a a a some sort of equilibrium that can be maintained it will be what will happen is that the edges will continue to be eaten away the edges of what is considered the market what is considered the political sphere will be eaten away there's a story uh horrifying story about that i read about how uh people in northern california whose homes were burned down during the big camp fire there last year uh are still homeless and are now being rousted out of the places that they have uh set up camp by the police so these are people who until a 0:51:20 year ago were solid citizens taxpayers who are on the inside of the citizenship bubble people who deserved people who who were part of us who deserve some sort of uh some sort of uh basic human dignity and access to redress their house gets burned down by a fire they can't get enough they can't just build another one they're out of a bunch of people in southern louisiana are been that way since that last big uh hurricane and i think that the dream of the of the big collapse is the dream where collapse comes fast and hard and with it at least a glimpse of freedom at least a glimpse of the ability to a chance to remake your relationship to your world because 0:52:21 all of the restrictions and restraints and demands of life have changed you get to get closer to the vitality and you get to fight for yourself and others because the alternative is one where you just go from being totally under the command of the system but also within uh a pocket of rights and and expectations of rights to being outside of that but still under the control of systemic power the thing stays there it's just the wall moves and you're on the other side of the wall now but you're still in the sight line of the ***** cyclopedian panopticon tech drone state only now you don't have to now you're not being compelled by credit card debt and medical billing you're 0:53:23 being compelled by a ***** uh like in a drone hovering over your head so this is why i said why i want to read something that confronts this this moment and imagines a way out because we all have to imagine a way out for ourselves if not for the world and i don't mean transcending the problems i mean transcending our soul sickness at the scale of the problems transcending our paralysis in the face the numbers are 0:55:3 up here weird checklist all right i'm going to wrap up here in a minute yes we need marianne williamson now marion williamson and uh jesse ventura that's what we need no that's man like it feels like everything is really simmering though like israel 0:56:55 that's that's a lot of that's a lot of that's intense and then colombia i mean it's it's been just one rolling uh uh a crisis everywhere even obviously here last summer but it still hap but it still has this this horrible stasis to it it's the it's it i think the thing that is so alienating and terrifying and and bewildering about the moment is that everything feels fully liquefied but also totally over determined and i feel like that's the 70s too like oh my god nothing is working every every structure uh is leading us towards oblivion and yet none of them seem to actually be losing their power over 0:57:59 us and so that really gives you the sensation of being locked in a car in an airplane where the pilot is jumped out and you're on course to hit a ***** mountain and then you just have to spend your time trying to come to terms with what's going to come unless you figure out a way to get in the goddamn cockpit and get a goddamn one of the things and call someone that uh at air traffic control and talk your way yeah i saw the ***** ned lamont god what a name a blast from the past the guy who was like the netflix the netflix the net roots candidate who is gonna uh who beat joe lieberman seat in connecticut and then was beaten by joe lieberman when joe lieberman ran on a third party like independent joe lieberman party ticket with mo the support of i think a majority of dem republicans in connecticut ended up voting 0:59:1

for him which is how he got back in and then ned lamont ended up running for uh governor uh what a year or two ago and now he's grover clevelanding it throwing out the national guard it is interesting there's a lot of people who have theories about the care economy the care economy being the next real uh main front of the labor of the the uh the labor movement and and uh and workers struggle i mean we'll see this is a good if it gets stamped out by this ***** geek this easily we'll see who knows don't know yet i'm imagining just like the the cop the troops from like the crazies just coming into a nursing home with their ***** m16s and stealing people's 1:0:3 uh medicine just getting robo tripping in the in the i don't actually know what robo tripping is is that about taking robitussin i don't know it would be really funny if biden just cured cancer though in the middle of all this like biting just comes out those if it was a what was it what if it was a vaccine though what if there what if 1:1:6 there was a cancer cure all cancer is cured obviously this is impossible i'm saying whatever cancer is cured but it's a vaccine i kind of think a lot of anti-vaxxers would would cave just because how scary cancer is cuba has a lung cancer vaccine but once again it's for like specific types like there is no overall cancer cure although i don't know i gotta think that there has to be some genetic thing you yeah what if you 1:2:7 just injected yourself with like shark shark sperm or something those guys don't get cancer i if i learned anything from deep blue sea it's that alzheimer's should you re-watch deep blue sea always okay folks talk to you probably on friday and then next wednesday we'll uh talk about the first three chapters of the cool book just be wrapping up about the uh the many bangles of the of the sdp and uh and frederick 1:3:9 ebert who we all got to give two big thumbs down to um wow in the afterlife you could be headed for a serious strife now you make this scene all day but tomorrow there'll be hell to pay in the afterlife you could be headed 0:1:2 for the serious strike now you make this scene all day but tomorrow there'll be hell to pay people listen attentively i mean about future i used to think the idea was obsolete this is a place where eternally fire is applied to their body teeth are extruded and pulled up grounded baked into cakes with a pass around in the afterlife and the very other serious drive now you make this scene all day but beauty talent fame money refinement tap skill and or other things you try to hide will be and the d and the a and the m and the n and the n the t and the i o n lose your face use your name then 0:2:3

get fitted for a suit of flame the d and the a and the m and the n and the a and the t and the i o and use your face lose your name is anyone a geriatric millennial and we can name that song or is that before your time **Applause** people squirrel nut 0:3:4
zippers that's correct hell people think of squirrel nut zippers as part of the swing revival but they really were kind of doing a different thing than uh like your cherry pop and daddy's or your big bad voodoo daddies um i will confess that i in fact had that album i had the the the cherry pop and daddy's album that had zoot suit riot in it which terrible the classic example of why i didn't buy records when i was a kid because it always seemed like a bad deal you're taking a bet that what any of the other songs on the album are going to be as good as the song you heard and yeah nothing on that ***** albums anywhere near as good or as catchy as uh zoot suit riot was but i also own the squirrel not zippers album which is really good hell i believe it's called is it hell or there's a lot of solid songs on there i will i will defend them and that's one okay so today we're going gonna we're gonna talk about uh the cold book 0:4:11 which i gotta say not exactly what i wanted it to be i really did want something that was gonna be more grounded uh the way that uh fauna is i wanted like basically fonner's approach in terms of you know doing the whole systemic and grassroots simultaneous you know the the narrative uh like the densest narrative rope uh and i'm sure there is one like that but i've not as well read on that historical era to know what it is and it was not cold i must say it's a little too uh removed from the action

as it were uh so i don't think we're gonna read the rest of it um i want to and besides i'm feeling like i want to move forward anyway i mean i've been looking backward out of despair and i've realized like well what is this this is like this is an expression of despair and and i realize that a lot of what i talk about is trying to articulate despair and what it means to be politically self uh aware in a time of despair and 0:5:12 people can of course say oh there are plenty of times in history when people have felt political despair this is classic naval gazing uh presidentist narcissism typical of a millennial to assume oh yes this time it's different as though there haven't always been a period where everything felt hopeless and i will say of course that's true but i would also posit that the totalization of capitalism the totalization of our world system the totalization of our information matrix the totalization of our access to information means that we have reached a theoretical barrier of human potential that is un uh rivaled at history because every almost every point of total despair you can point to in world history has had the possibility of transcendence within it because as much as the world seemed hopeless there was space to imagine uh some 0:6:17 sort of transcendence some sort of upward movement ascension rather than endless declension unto in sickness unto death they had heaven in other words we have no we don't have heaven like nietzsche was right we killed god in the pursuit of turning ourselves into god and now we are worshiping ourselves but that is at the expense of a spiritual understanding of the universe any kind of connection to anything outside of ourselves any ability to imagine death as anything other than the annihilation of the universe the end of the world armageddon but the annihilatory kind and without like the winking out of nirvana but rather just the screaming horror all we can imagine is and the thing is we're always on flight 93. life is right 93. the question is are 0:7:20 you going to scream and bash your head against the wall or are you going to defeat the the uh fiction the fantasy the false delusional belief that is generating the fear which is that there's anything to be afraid of which is that death is some sort of insurmountable annihilation that's not the case believing it is it's the fundamental notion that drives our our individualism and it is a fantasy it's a fantasy that we need at a base level we need to have some separation from the world we need some fear of death in order to be able to negotiate it and then be in life because life moves forward life wants to flourish that means we have to want to save ourselves but that sense of danger should be proportionate to the immediacy of it the suddenness of it natural death should not be afraid but your map should not scare us because it 0:8:22 would be understood by us at a metaphysical level the way we understand ourselves as separate now in a way that is beyond the need to articulate or reinforce consciously that there is no separation that we are all part of a cyclical world where we are feeding a system that we are part of and and if you operate and the thing is though that can only be sustained in a social context there is no social context there is no time spent with others instead there is time spent with ourselves which means time spent thinking about ourselves and a time spent building this ego that cannot conceive of death i think this is all ***** that ernst becker talked about denial of death i'm assuming i never read it i have never read any of these books people keep saying hey you sound like him and it's like yeah probably i'm getting it i'm getting it without having to do the reading it's great i feel like i'm ***** playing contra just but i'm but 0:9:24 what that means the implication of this that matters is that it means we are the first generation who is seeing before around them a terminal uh decline wherein they can't imagine a better future for themselves they can't imagine a better future crucially for their children they cannot imagine the perpetuation of a legacy and a legacy is what stands in instead of our um that's what soothes us instead of social existence that's what makes us pursue capitalism so that we can leave a legacy and that is a way to extend our ego beyond our death and allow us to focus on a task and that's the thing we are what despair causes you is to not be able to focus on a task because what's the reason to what's the upside what is the what is the uh rational reason that i should pursue this why should i build up institutions why should i cooperate 0:10:25 beyond myself if there is no hope for me to leave a legacy and that is the vicious cycle that perpetuates us towards armageddon and at the very top you have these people who have started to believe a new religious delusion on top of the delusion of self which is eternal self through the uh at use of technology the singularity the feels the musks the the cyborgs at the top that is all that can persist the rest of us stuck below where we know we'll be out low the threshold of getting into the bunker where they're going to put jack us into the computer and we can play mario kart with galileo for eternity if you don't have that to look forward to if you know that of that as a real possibility something to soothe you you can't be soothed you're in terror and what do you do you drive you just try to kill yourself you destroy yourself not consciously but through the annihilation of that thought the annihilation of the 0:11:26 the the scary thing which is what generates all of our addictions neuroses horror that attempt to turn off this ***** blinking light in our brains the check engine light that's always on and we think and so we either confront it and are driven mad by our inability to resolve it the fact that we can't imagine changing this we can't do politics meaningfully uh and then just the hedonistic pursuit of uh distraction there are two ends of the same coin though they are the same thing they're just the janus faces hedonism and the sadism that associ that goes with it is uh the pursuit of pleasure but so is a hysteric like social justice pursuit that is also and like the neo-puritan purification of the ego or purification of the self purification of sin because of the imagined uh the the imagined super ego because that's what happens you 0:12:27

either pursue that you either indulge the id in these moments or the or the super ego and and uh reactionary indulgent hedonistic politics is the politics of of that of the id of just pure satisfaction but some people aren't built to get pleasure out of that because they're too aware of all the horror they are too they've convinced themselves too much that they're good people because that is how they it's the same thing as the puritans they emerge into a world where god is starting to die like the real living god for the puritans is is becoming a memory all they have is this calvinist ***** rationalist god in their mind this reasoned out algorithm that says well if god exists therefore they're uh how powerful therefore they have complete control therefore i am predestined to either be saved or uh damned well then you either party like it's 0:13:29 1999 or you act like you're saved and that's what we're all doing that is the ***** for the liberals for the liberal and left they are performing for that uh that imagined other the brig lacanian other just staring furnace portal eyes at us at all times and making us pursue a politics that plant cleanses ourselves it is the end pursuit it's the same social strata the people who came to this country not because they needed to not because they were fleeing debt or they were impoverished but the uh relatively prosperous puritan plan puritan uh settlers were the emergent middle class having its first nervous breakdown because once that collective conscious concept of god 0:14:31 dies you have to create a uh a totally internal one and for the puritans it could be a real god it could be a god that was transcendent and that could send you to heaven but now after the enlightenment thanks a lot voltaire after the scientific revolutions of the 19th century thanks a lot darwin we if we're really over cultured people can't believe any of that it's like the rocco's bacillus ***** like ideas that once you come in contact with have tainted you as soon as the possibility that the world can exist without god that there is a wind-up universe that extends itself through the mechanical processes of evolution and stellar formation and all this stuff as long as that possibility exists and you know it exists you can't believe anymore you can't now that doesn't mean you might not be religious and you're going to double and 0:15:32 triple down on your religiosity but you're going to be doing it to ignore that voice to ignore the red light blinking and i would say that that is what makes this the first generation to truly be living with political despair political and metaphysical despair we will be destroyed we will be annihilated there will be nothing left of our existence in the near term planetary extinction because once again if you know that there's a possibility that the thawing of the permafrost will unleash a chain of events that will cause earth's atmosphere to hyper uh uh carbo carbonify and turn earth into venus if you know that possibility exists scientifically and it does and most people who are aware of things who pay attention to the news because they think it makes them a good person they know that too and then once again as long as you know it's a possibility you are now thrown into doubt forever as soon as you know that that 0:16:34 that annihilation is possible there it is and we know that the car course is putting us in that direction as soon as you know that you can't imagine that you're going to have a legacy no legacy no kids they certainly won't have kids it'll all be gone you can't solo console yourself that way so you can live for today and that's what we're all doing we're all living for today but we're in a condition of material decline which means we can't enjoy ourselves we can't enjoy ourselves because even as we indulge we indulge less and less and the indulgence is less satisfying over time we're stuffed we're muncher we're eating our goddamn corn we're stuffing ourselves to just not and so this is a new situation because in previous times the times that marx imagined would exist when the final when you have a system where there's no where 0:17:39 it's just it's created so much human misery and alienation and there's nowhere for it to go you've extended like we're now in a global system there's nowhere to vent the steam the frontiers really are over and all the new ones are fake like the media like it's all just a way to scam us into see staying in the system while they ***** uh try to flee to their ***** uh cyberbunkers like that all that stuff all these new speculative investments that we have like crypto ***** currency and uh and nfts and all this ***** this is just like when in the 20s they gave stocks to people it's a way to keep people gambling keep people when you got to that point the thing would blow up because people would have as they said in the manifesto nothing to lose but their chains but we are now in a a era where uh imperialism allowed for this huge explosion in consumer uh um purchasing power among the working class at the 0:18:40 center of capitalism that it and now we are so disconnected from ourselves socially not just in building like a spirituality but just having an understanding of how to resist politically if we wanted to we don't even know how it works we are so little memory how many of us grew up with union households and how many people would work in the union how union jobs now you don't have the uh knowledge you got a rare 0:19:42 torso look there you got so we're consuming and it paralyzes us because even though we're not happy and we know we're not happy we have something to lose we have something to risk and we can't believe that our risk will be rewarded we are fatally paralyzed because since we can't believe that any sacrificial move will be worth it it will always in game theories terms be in our most rational interest like this is science this is a i could write this ***** in a scientific ***** equation i swear to god we are belief belief in something and the matrix of those beliefs orient us towards courses of action and they are interlocked and interwoven strands of belief belief in things 0:20:44 things that aren't real in any sense because that doesn't exist but things that are affirmed over and over again by our perception of uh existing by our time on earth by our being in no it's not idealist because i'm saying that's why people do what they do

CUSHVLOG 165. WEIMAR I BARELY KNOW HER!

but they don't know what these things are this isn't something they're choosing this is inflicted upon them by their life by the experiences on earth they have which are determined by their material placement their where they are what they emerge with what they perceive what their lives are determines what they believe that is why this is not idealism we are motivated by belief but we don't choose those beliefs those beliefs are chosen for us we are wound up and fixed so we all believe in stuff and that stuff is a bunch of different things one of them the front one that we need one of the first ones is the idea that we're being that is separate from everything around it and that's a necessary precondition for consciousness in fact it is consciousness and then our degree of consciousness is our degree to which we pull away from the moment we're in we pull and live in the echoing moment behind what we're experiencing and then think about it because it is in that gap that we create a map of the future that we live in and that that projection is reality it is a self-generated movie a backdrop and what makes that up is what we've experienced garbage in garbage out the thing that determines our action is the specific arrangement of those uh experiences those time and place that these things happen to us and over time that creates an emergent property of self-conscious consciousness that then bootstraps you into being a uh a actual free-will-having conscious creature it bootstraps it into existence because eventually you have so much time to build such a real world around you a real future that you can inhabit by making decisions the more you believe in that the more your actions are determined by it and not by what is just happening around you what's happening in your head right after what is happening to you occurs and that is where actual free will autonomous consciousness emerge so we have to rebuild belief beyond the south because as i said that self was once one thing that we believed in among a the the our love expressed to the people around us our understanding of the world through the stories that they tell and the and the ritual rituals we perform around these stories that are framed around human uh flourishing in the early age in the early early stages of the building of like human civilization society when you're talking about bands in harmony with nature the stories they're telling are stories that are advantageous to the collective pursuit of a group but over time as humans react to material conditions changing as it becomes harder to sustain life in a certain geographic area and you have to move and change your relationship to the world around you that you accumulate these bifurcations these exploitative classes the one side of the divide of people who can spend the time in their head long enough to wield a tail and tell a story to those uh who are going to hear it and that distinction creates your distinct the categories of labor the separation into uh more efficient allocations of resources that build up civilization on the back of exploitation because we say we're different than others and then we're we we think we are different from others but that we is it's part you but it's part everybody else but when you need to survive and you need to store surplus then all of a sudden some people need to be less 0:25:53 you than before some people need to suffer in a way that you wouldn't want someone that you really felt was part of you to suffer but they have to suffer for everyone's survival but over time those calcify and you get cultures built around entirely the people on the top of that entirely among them the the people on the bottom only experiencing it through vicarity not through their participation and that separation over time gets deeper and deeper and then technology is created to allow it to sustain itself because without technology none of this happens without technology the hyper exploitation of capitalism isn't possible because how do you get that many people to do that because there's more of them than there are of you if all you have is a ***** stick if all you ever are rudimentary regimes of like slave labor or feudal oversight you need a lot of participation from people in that system you need them to believe in something about the world around them unless they're being compelled uh by technology unless they're being compelled from outside and the intensification of technology is what allows capitalism to emerge which which necessitates a hyper exploitation that would not be possible in a more uh like look what happened in the year the history of feudalism is a history of periodic and violent and volcanic and very threatening peasant uprisings like clockwork things get too bad people get fed up and they stop believing not in maybe the king not in god certainly but in like the and so you had to back off but if you have technology you don't have to back off you 0:27:59 can bomb their huts like the the the great peasants war of the the 1520s uh that was put down by uh ***** guys with sticks just like that just like the guys with sticks uh who made up the peasant army of course it wasn't totally even those guys had uh the the the soldiers of the aristocracy of course these are regal knights descendants of the ***** uh teutonic knights and ***** they have armor they have lances they have horses but that's about it maybe what at this point maybe a ***** couple of early cannons or archibuses holy ***** this is basic almost a level playing field now post-capitalism when you saw when you saw advanced industrial capitalism cutting through uh the pre-capitalist world like a ***** buzz saw you saw the exploitation that never could have existed in any other system it just exploded across and that's 0:29:5 because of technology it creates a distance in time between but between you and the exploitation that you are benefiting from and we live in a situation where i say what you mean i mean the people listening to this the people who i my audience are the people who have had the similar enough experience of living in america to use the same to have the same language as me so that when i talk to them they get what i'm saying that's who i'm talking about i say we because there's no point for me to talk to anybody else about this stuff because this is subjective experience this is the stuff that matters because it's what we have to focus on instead of these abstract political categories like what i find so frustrating about and ultimately fruitless about political discussion at this point is that it's all framed at a level of abstraction that goes so far away from experience that you're not really talking to people they're not you're just running through algorithms you're running through argument algorithms so that you can avoid dealing with the reality around you the despair that you feel 0:30:7

once again understandable so you need to get more specific to get anywhere so you have to choose language and you have to choose an idiom and that's what i've done and so when i say we that's who i mean we are now in a situation where we have if we inherited us a world where we were at the and the political spectrum throughout a system and capitalism is now a world system that has encompassed all the other world systems that it hooked into to come to into life i think the wallstine thesis is essentially correct you have these local dynamos going of economy and then you have the emergent machinery of a capitalism and over time and what political what political ideology is within that framework on the on the regular scale on the scale of like i still endorse the system as it exists like the traditional left right political 0:31:10 scale short of its extremes the one where you could realistically engage in politics at an electoral level and invest yourself which means even if you think you're at the extremes i'm sorry if you care about who's president you have invested yourself in this thing and so even if you don't believe in it your actions validate and reinforce a system that has this orientation exploitation is unavoidable exploitation and misery within the system is necessary it is fueled by it it is this grease that runs it even though it doesn't have to even though we're now at a point where we have enough technology to distribute much more equally and less neurotically and and remove a lot of just these these persistent uh social canker sores that are created by our need to dominate like the anxiety created at the top of this relationship not to mention the horrifying misery at the bottom of it you don't need either of it but because we're stuck in the short term we don't believe other people are real we have 0:32:12 to pursue our most selfish interest all along the line and then it's our politics just become a question of well how do we orient ourselves towards that and that really is determined not by how good you are as a person but aesthetic preferences that are generated by your lived distance from exploitation liberals and conservatives do form a real uh authentic political spectrum left right but it is understood as i think not about ideology it should be understood as a relationship a time-spaced relationship to exploitation the right wing is oriented around living near the point of exploitation which is why the right wing in america anyway is the final expression of the planter ideology of the antebellum slave owning class sitting on your veranda watching others 0:33:15 labor for you all that idle time but right next to the point of misery sitting there and

watching it happen and having to consider yourself the protagonist of history a good guy in some way you build up politics around that liberalism is the power in america is the descent of the politics of those puritans who settled the north the land that was and they and they didn't they there was no slavery there not necessarily because of how good they were but because the ***** geography didn't allow for it there were slaves in salem but slavery couldn't persist and thrive there because it was all ***** clay and gravel there's no rich real loam in new england the best you can see in that part of the country is is this is a hard scrabble subsistence farmer that's why they all became and their their exploitation is removed there's they're passing around bills 0:34:24 of sale the exploitation is happening next to them well those people are being paid for their time or they indentured themselves to get across the water i'm doing this part of the rules-based order i'm doing this because i'm observing manners that i mistake because they're all we have with morality and then liberalism is built around that and liberalism is the driver towards uh like universal recognition of humanity which is good and necessary and it's part of the dynamic the progressive dynamic of capitalism in that it accumulates things it accumulates capital that is necessary to uh uh to accommodate human life and sustain a civilization and flourishing and increase the number of people there are the number of consciousnesses the amount that we can collaborate the milk that we can make the technology that we could 0:35:26 hypothetically use to distribute pain throughout the system in a way that allows us all time to flourish in our own way oh my god real human liberty part of that is driven by a recognition of others as ourselves but and there is no place for that for the working class because it's all being done at the level of culture it's all an emanation it's all being interpreted by those people sitting around in rooms in the east coast and so they express a universalism that we need but it's short of class but all it can ever do is pursue absolution because it cannot deny the need for exploitation because it takes it for granted the same way the southern and so what are we seeing in this crisis moment when oh the world's getting worse and worse how is america going to thrive i.e how am i going to be able to feel good here and for the for the descendants 0:36:28 of the planters the answer is well we just hyper exploit people what are you talking about we have fun we we embracing our carnival as evil but that we have decided is good like oh we're all christians now in our cosmology uh jesus is satan but it's christianity there's it's like the same thing levade did only less self-consciously like level is just the anton lavey's satanism is just pointing to christianity and saying this is the logical uh progression of this not that it is the inversion or denial negation of it it is because you guys worship satan too so great we'll be satan worshipers together we'll dance in the ***** ashes we'll cough in each other's mouths and we'll and that of course is right that is that is trump right that is trump expert that is that is the

id desire expressed by trump but what the liberals have to respond to that is not 0:37:29 liberatory politics is no no don't you understand the pleasure in life is feeling like a good person and that means we have to sacrifice for other people that means we have to decarbonize and we have to de-grow and we need to cleanse ourself of the sin of being born in this position of decadence to be living atop this mountain of misery we're going to cleanse ourselves but that just means that other i have to feel worse about being who i am and i need to punish other people who are heretics who don't feel bad enough about who they are meanwhile the machinery of exploitation continues but at arm's length we don't put up a wall we do the same thing but we wouldn't put up a gaudy wall maybe we use uh drones and ***** uh proxy armies to maintain dictatorships in other countries that can we use apps we don't need servants because we have apps we get an abstracted form of exploitation where where we get 0:38:30 less pleasure we don't we we have to save we have to drive tiny cars or no cars at all and drive bikes we have to we have to uh eat less meat and the thing about that is since neither of those answers deals with uh both since both those act answers accept doom as the premise they both say we're going down there's no hope well if you're engaging in politics which one of those you picks is not determined by how good you are it's determined once again by drumroll where and when you've lived did you grow up enmeshed in uh this right wing planter idea ideological uh sub uh 0:39:31 counter uh cultural uh superstructure that emer that exists in all of these nodes of like of extraction industry and look the franchisees the beautiful boaters and when you grew there did you fit in or did you not fit in once again not determined by you determined by the ridges of your brain and the accident of your skin color and things like that and and that is what determines it so then you come out and you have a political ideology and you pick one of these two sides but you're not the talking about politics you're not talking about politics as a thing of believing in a future you're talking about a regime of punishment of others who is going to pay who's going to pay for the fact that if i'm having fun i'm worried i'm going to have less fun in the future i'm having fun but my kid's not having as much fun my kids on ***** fentanyl this sucks i can't have fun they get mad about it and they need to punish someone same way the people who see everything getting worse around them and feeling guilty and guilty more guilty about it need to punish somebody 0:40:32 and that is why we have these dueling sadisms that make up politics at the level of uh the electoral and this is why i get back to if we're in this age of despair and despair is born of lack of belief in anything but the south then we have to go one more step we can't go all the way back although the reactionary idea is that we're going to get some of these beliefs back can't get any of them back they're gone once they're gone for god forgive as i said as soon as darwin is a possibility in your mind

as soon as it makes sense to you you can't believe anymore not the way you did and that happens to everything we can't believe in anything else anymore so what do we got to do we got to take this next step forward which is to abolish that last pesky thing that we believe in we have to step on the gas individually become individual uh uh existential accelerationists let's use that term existential accelerationists and 0:41:34 we need to by one way or another believe in the possibility of something other than ourselves enough to reduce that belief in self because the beauty of it is it's got to go somewhere when you squeeze on it it's got to go somewhere because belief is what powers your ***** blood in your veins you don't get to choose it it's why you breathe when you're asleep it's not going anywhere unless you want to die and if you don't want to die then you believe in something well that basic belief has to go somewhere and if less of it goes into you and so go and get it and you'll have to look you'll have to look and where will you look where is the only place you're liable to find anything can't find anything on the internet can't do it impossible it's a fantasy as soon as you're here you're not there as soon as you're here as soon as you're here pointing at the internet you're not here in your body you're in your head it's gone it's over everything there is engaged at the level of this fantasy this hologram you got and if you're and if you're earnestly pursuing that which you'll 0:42:38 have to because it'll be a matter of survival you'll hit he'll hit something and it'll be good and it'll be good it'll be the right thing because it'll feel like the right thing and that only comes from but if you try to do that without doing anything to the ego the ego is going to determine what you bump into and guess what it's going to be what serves the ego and you're back to square one you have to actually have a felt displacement of belief outward and that means you have to do something and you can only do that if you're not here if you're not distracted and that the real necessity will make you look inward and then when you look inward and whatever you do you ***** meditate you can take some mushrooms and listen to pink floyd you have conversations with people around you you sit in your body and you see feel it something will happen not to everybody not at the same rate and not the same 0:43:39 thing it won't be understood by everybody as the same thing but it is necessary it's necessary precondition so that's what i want to be called after all of this what is the next stage of the grill pill it is existential accelerationism because we're not getting back all the politics of the premise of like either fetishizing like liberals fetishizing the new deal state communists fetishizing the soviet union nazis fetishizing uh like the teutonic knights rampaging through prussia all of those politics are doomed because they're trying to go back to beliefs there's always there's only one there's only one belief that has to be annihilated there's only instead of trying to in rebuild beliefs all right i was supposed to talk about that weimar book uh and honestly i feel like

i kind of said everything i wanted to about it mainly that there were two there are 0:44:40 two social democratic parties that determine the fate of world communism the social democratic party of germany the first large-scale mass labor party in europe and the world really because america they had the democratic party but the democratic party was never a working workers party the fact that it came first actually doomed it that way because it was premature you could only have mass and you and that's because of geography and materials not ideology not the american way or not the constitution and not our love of liberty it happened because in the context of free real estate and endless possibility of of yeoman land ownership the elites could afford to have mass suffrage and afford to have mass politics they didn't even do it right away they did 0:45:42 slowly but they could do it earlier because they weren't constrained geographically the way that europe was and so they got the democratic party before anybody but the democratic party had no class character it was the party of yeoman it was a party of small peasants with their own or peasants who are emancipated and have no landlord sacks of potato the sack of ***** potato but without even the guiding hand of belief in anything because these are all ***** protestants uh seeking only themselves and worshiping only themselves so uh so anyway we got the democratic party but it was too early uh germany meanwhile constrained as it is geographically coming into existence as a nation late unable to compete in the imperial contest with the likes of france and spain and uh the dutch or britain because of their late entry are forced to internally uh develop and are allowed and and what what uh facilitates that is its federal character and then within that that furnace you create the first 0:46:45 real industrial proletariat as marx predicted uh there in britain too but uh britain had european britain had the social steam valve of uh colonialism and the empire germany didn't have that so you say people say it could have been germany or uh germany and uh and you and england are like creating the first real working class in the world but its militancy its engagement with politics is being uh constrained in england all through this period by the events of colonialism and imperialism germany doesn't have that it has to ferment from within and that means uh that it emerges the first coherent working-class politics and the first major the first mass labor party the social democratic party which is the party that inspired the bolsheviks in russia 0:47:48 to name their and i would say that the problem the question of why we didn't get the communism the communism is that why we not get to the communists when we needed it and that really was when we could have got it maybe a different world i think not maybe definitely a different world that happened a bunch of different worlds that happened but we didn't get that way we didn't get lucky we got the bad turn of the screw we got the um but we didn't get that one we got the one where it failed and i think one of the reasons the one of the big reasons it failed

is that those two parties even though they shared i would say the correct reading and understanding of marx as in they were generated by the real conditions of an emerging working class in that time and place the late 1800s they were filled with the best the brightest the the most uh uh uh insightful the most humane but they were but they did it in two different countries that essentially existed in different times but they came about in about the same period of time the problem was is that germany was the prototype capitalist state the state that marx thought could be overthrown in the near term through political action of the working class as a self-conscious uh unit russia is essentially ***** futile it is a funeral society with a thin screen of a bourgeois and that distance the distance in developmental time determined the shape of the two parties and the conditions that they would be able to operate in and that meant that by the time the crisis comes the real crisis the the ***** get off the pop moment of 1914 to 1920. the crisis capitalism hitting the thing that mark saw he was early in 1848 when he thought it was just around the corner he said okay maybe it's maybe it's a little bit further away but he was a lot closer than he thought because people say oh when was that gonna happen marx it happened 1914 was when it happened but we lost that's the thing we've been living in the backwash of that defeat ever since so when that happens germany is the prototypical country that is in this condition so what happens is is that those social democrats in russia the bolsheviks around the the most brilliant man of his era lenin and in his position lenin um they emerge as this coherent militantly organized revolutionary minded uh organization that has been illegal for the majority of its existence most of the people involved in it spending a significant time in prison or unhiding or in exile base operating as as criminals as underground and they're finding a uh they're fighting a political situation where the imperial authority has been uh completely um desacralized nobody believes in the empire anymore uh and their opponent was a bunch of peasants who were politically inert and and certainly not uh influential in the cities uh and then this thin layer of inbred ***** uh thin blooded romanovs and then a very tiny layer of middle class and on their side a massive hyper-exploited working class that was packed into incredibly dense settlements right next to these huge massively concentrated factories russia had at the turn of the 19th century by far the most concentrated industrial capital in the sense that the the factories were bigger and employed more people and the neighborhoods were more thickly peopled and more and a a dissolving red army made up of uh lumpin peasants and workers who've been given guns and then just they were the only potential progressive force that could have taken power in that situation lenin was 100 correct about that cadets the srs the mensheviks none of them had a plan the bourgeois was not existing it was a wafer thin uh uh cookie it was it was it was a ***** house of straw you could not build anything on that working on the middle class it was non-existent it would have crashed and absent the soviet absence of militia mix the military would have taken over it would have been as trotsky said it would have been a militant uh military-led reactionary movement that would have hoisted the swastika helped ten years before the ***** uh or four three two years before the nazis so they had to act but it's russia it's a backwater even if they take power they're going to be it immediate war with the the western powers are going to be isolated they're going to have to uh fight a rear guard back foot action against capital all over the globe try to help working-class movements where they were but only basic like through an the possib and they 0:54:2 would have to industrialize a country that is a ***** backwater if they are thrust into the world of party uh conflict or of a multi-state competit competitive conflict which is what capitalism was birthed out of innovation of capitalism was birthed out of the state conflict within europe the united states became a hamiltonian uh developmental state even though nobody at the ground level wanted that not even the ***** uh slave owners they had an entire political uh articulation opposed to it and the masses of people were absolutely opposed to it but they had to compete and that need to compete is what organized us into the state we became the need to compete would organize them into caring about themselves as a state not as as some sort of revolutionary vanguard they wouldn't be able to act that way anymore so what would be the point of fighting well why do you why can you fight well because this is going to be the spark that lights the fuse dummy we're in the end times this is 0:55:4 the big contest the germans will take it from here that was the theory of permanent revolution the trotsky conceived up that was the thing that was in lenin's mind when he sat those ***** dumbasses kamenev and uh in bucharan and ***** uh it's because they believed they believed and so around the same time the same thing happens in uh germany has happened in february in a year earlier in uh russia and that is the ***** rubber band snaps keel the war is over the germans have been defeated stunning everyone because they believe the propaganda and honestly the position on the field had been pretty stable uh and and the deterioration of the of the germans position was very sudden and late so shocked the entire country the british the the 0:56:7 uh but at least the war is over the butchery is over well the the german high fleet up there in uh the baltic commanded by a bunch of old psychos like people who thought they were teutonic knights like blood drinking maniacs of the feudal remnant but like the junker par excellence uh they decided that they got to go out uh with honor so they're gonna ***** pick up stones and go out to meet the british navy and go down into the ocean instead of turning over the glorious ships of the line to the the british the troops say and the sailors the common sailors say ***** you we put up with this ***** long enough and there is a mutiny a general mutiny and keel that touches off a conflagration of revolt throughout the country but the problem is the party that should have been leading that the party that had been filled by the most capable people with the best analysis of the situation who had acted the smartest in pursuing it were in the social democratic party because being part of germany meant 0:57:10 being part of this machine of accommodation because capitalism was uh developing and it was developing a middle class it was developing a political articulation of anxiety relative to exploitation and that means that you saw this reforming instinct and so fine you get the you get the uh you get the extension of the franchise you get called toleration you get the first social welfare system bismarck the great the great mind of his time the great liberal mind of his time so oh capitalism is is causing some squeaky wheels here we're going to grease them or the thing's going to blow up and he did he greased them up greased them up good and so and they legalized the sdp the the uh the bolsheviks were only very rarely legal in in soviet union as i said their leadership kept going to jail the sdp got to run in elections and they got 0:58:11 to ***** uh send people to parliament and they got to send a bunch of people to parliament they get to create an entire political class of office holders they get to get rid of political class of newspaper editors and and trade union executives who fill the ranks of this new middle class and who are also the brains of the party yes it's it's still being fed at the root by the organization of the working class but it's all being contained by this party apparatus that is growing more and more middle class more and more bourgeois accommodating itself in its daily life to the conditions of the petty bourgeois not the work this party that is that was born and contained the best analysis of of german capitalism is not ready for it because it's ***** bourgeoisie the 0:59:15 social democrats act swiftly to prevent a revolution that needed to happen because the bolsheviks were right that there needed to be a world revolution they were correct now that was a belief that was necessitated by their position at the end of the donkey but it didn't mean they weren't right the germans were wrong because they hadn't spent the last 10 years in siberia or in exile or or getting beat up by the checker it's been the last 10 years getting having tea cakes with the ***** local and so when the moment comes they can't see it and they fight against it and then who is germa who is the german revolution's lenin frederick ebert as in the person who was smartest the person who was most in a position of power and had the best way of the land but his motivation was wrong he wanted to preserve this state that needed to go and so they 1:0:17 created the fry core which becomes the spine of the nazi party to put down uh the revolt now of course it didn't help that the revolt was led by people like luxembourg and leafneck who were frankly not that competent bolsheviks and more importantly did not preside over a well-oiled machine of revolutionary um discipline like the bolsheviks did because how do you enforce that discipline and with the bolsheviks

you ***** up you might get killed you might get thrown in jail what do you ***** up here what's gonna happen you're gonna have to get yelled at rosa luxembourg's gonna say that you got to buy the google for the next meeting who gives a ***** it's just there's less of a disciplining effect and so the movement itself is on discipline and 1:1:19 you don't really see the the thing that makes you know that there was a potential for a successful revolution in germany is that between the initial rising and keel and the final putting down of like the rohr valley uprising with where the red army was formed uh in 1920-21 you saw enough sustained effectively organized uh political and military coordination and action by the left broadly construed that it could have taken power it had been coordinated properly but part of the reason it wasn't is that in that initial uh burst there were a bunch of people who either went along with the sdp or stood back and watch what happened because they weren't sure they believed in the party they thought maybe they're right and then it was only later after the establishment of the post war government and certainly uh of the post-war 1:2:21 government and the creation of like an all-powerful president and all this and the refusal to carry out any meaningful uh social uh socialization of the uh economy they started rebelling but it was too late at that point and it was unorganized and that is because of time and place time and space determining the fact this thing all explodes at once but it is unevenly divided and it's unequally developed and so it spreads across the world and it cuts to hits different places at different points and then the need to compete drives it forward like the russians didn't want to ***** do capitalism nobody did they had to do it serge gavida had to pull them by their nipples to do it framework it would give them the tools to compete with the other powers 1:3:22 and so this thing kicks off simultaneously but it develops in different ways because of the social conditions there's no middle class in russia by then it's it's a peasant it's a bunch of army barracks on top of a peasant and that means that the parties develop differently they develop and but the thing is capitalism is going all the same time it's on its own clock it's developing separately at different things because at different rates because of the conditions in germany but the glo the thing itself has a clock a clock when once it strikes the thing will go into fatal crisis and that is what we got in 1914 and what we got through it is the suppression of communism in europe and 1:4:23 and then the assertion of a global capitalist empire that slowly wall and steamingly steamrolls capitalism over the rest of the world at the expense of the people who live there and the ability to create massive amounts of surplus that can be ex enjoyed relatively guilt-free and so once again you got a time space but it was not and here's the thing that looks that looks mechanical how could it have gone any differently because these things are made up of individual decisions that can change and and they're made up of a bunch of events that are essentially random assassinations um 1:5:26

CUSHVLOG 165. WEIMAR I BARELY KNOW HER!

outcomes of battles uh changes of position changes of weather is a big one and in that world we're always uh in we're always living between these possibilities these things are always open because somewhere there is a thing a coin flipping there's a coin flipping with it all around us at all times so we can we're all we're moving through these coin flips so we we cannot subjectively experience it as determined we have to subjectively experience it as open because it is we only know what happened we can't know that is how we rescue us ourselves partially from despair we approach politics through that lens while also cultivating love for those around us and for other things and for and for and for the universe it's as cheesy as that sounds off-loading 1:6:28 our ego and the emotional connection of our ego to other things and other people and people and animals and everything and then also embracing the eternally flipping coins that make up our world and that we're moving through i mean i can look at american history and i see a bunch of spots where real happiness stands shaped us in significant ways i've talked a bunch about civil war and reconstruction you don't have to have that many flipped coins go differently for uh benjamin butler to become vice president for example or for lincoln to just not be assassinated it was not a it was not like that was a ***** uh and guaranteed thing a million things could have happened that could have by happenstance changed the outcome of that assassination attempt i mean my god they were trying to kill four guys all the other uh attempts failed or three other guys all the other attempts failed uh the guy who was supposed to 1:7:29 kill seward went into his bedroom and tried to stab him in the neck but he had a uh he had like a splint from breaking his jaw in a carriage accident and he didn't get him uh george azeroth was supposed to kill johnson and i mean there's another one azeroth goes up and kills johnson like he was supposed to then uh schuler colfax who was a radical republican and speaker of the house he wasn't a neck brace that's incorrect that i i i say that because i thought it was a neck brace and i actually was looking at a recently looking at a uh an account of the assassination and it said that it's actually in that race but or i mean a uh a splint but let me know if anyone wants to fact checkmate on that one they can but these are all coin flips and then what we get is the worst possible outcome andrew johnson the one man in the country who could have been no worse position there i mean there's a very good chance that if 1:8:31 henry clay becomes president in 1840 yes that you **Music playing** don't get a civil war but you also don't get westward expansion the way that it happened because henry clay was had a possibility there to govern the uh with to govern the entire united states along the rubric of his american system of internal improvements and terror formation and the building of an industrial economy on the model of europe but that would have required the slowing of westward expansion and the eventual end of slavery now obviously that system was resisted by the south uh very strongly 1:9:32

and they said hell no what are you doing we want to expand we need to expand uh and they were always able to uh succeed at that with the people electorally because the economy kept ***** collapsing and getting giving land out for cheap became the only real way to raise revenue for the for the government and provide any relief for people because there is no capacity no desire for a capacity in the state to actually do anything that's the minimalist notion of because all the power is in the in private hands the power to over to exploit being number one the only difference between libertarians and slave owners is that they think that they need the piece of paper because they've been acculturated the time and space has removed them enough from actual slavery that they have to have that piece of paper between them but it's the same thing and that was their electoral appeal to the broad broad population 1:10:34 is hey we actually give you land well that was partially because uh the whigs were never really able to hold power consistently they had one chance and it was in the 1830s 1840 after jacksonian van buren democracy and its its approach to uh currency and banking had seen a massive collapse of the economy in 1837 that with no real response from the government the whigs took power at the presidency and the house and the senate for the first time in the only time they'd have that in the lead up to the but henry clay wasn't there to do that because they had nominated an old guy william henry harrison and then when they after they offered the vice presidency to clay and he turned it down because he was pissed that he didn't get the nomination 1:11:35 they give it to john tyler who is a southerner who is a a expansionist pro-slavery cycle the exact opposite of their politics in every respect the opposite the negation of their political project but he didn't like andrew jackson because he wasn't uh tractable enough on the tariff literally an issue that they actually he becomes president they put him on the tape on the ticket to say hey look we're the whigs anybody who didn't like jackson vote for us because hey that'll get you votes and who cares who's vice president well this pile of ***** behind uh right behind the white house cares because look at this the guy's dead and now this guy's in charge and he just put his ***** he put uh a stick in the spokes of the wig agenda for the entire four years then the democrats get in you get uh in quick succession the recognition of texas and then the mexican war the final uh the reach too far too fast that led to the inevitable sectional split well what if wigs the wigs get in there and are actually able to deliver economic relief minus uh westward expansion they slow the pace and develop internally and effectively to grow the economy that way and therefore get the support of some of those would-be yeoman is it possible yes and if it's possible then it could have happened in this world that we otherwise inhabited it feels so determined right because there's nothing inevitable about john tyler becoming president now you might say ah yes but at a much lower level everything is determined yeah but only 1:12:39

CUSHVLOG 165. WEIMAR I BARELY KNOW HER!

in retrospect so we have to always inhabit the ignorance of the moment and that's what we can drive forward with but only if we're motivated by the it's about it's 1:13:43 about creating a heuristic creating a tunnel creating a path creating a target create creating and orient yourself in but then also it's about creating a power source to and that can only be that's a break it's a dumb spiritual process of breaking down and it's individualized and all we can do is act with the hope that we can change and those around us can change just like rocky said in rocky iv all right i hope some of next week let's say the first i don't know how long the chapters are because i haven't looked at it yet but let's say the first 50 or so pages of the future of the future book 1:14:45 of kim stanley robinson's uh what's it called something of the the future book kim stanley robinson's future book what's it called the bureau of the future ministry of the future i knew it was one how about the department of the future huh is that are you an american come on usa usa usa hear them yes the ministry of the future oh yes i quite enjoy spending an afternoon in the ministry of this the future oh yes i shall have another finger sandwich

You don't suck the future, the future sucks you.

06.01.21

this is the ground control of the major town mars ain't the kind of place to raise a kiss and there'd be no place to raise them and i think it's gonna be a long long time **Music playing** and i think it's gonna be a long long time i think it's gonna 0:1:1
be a long long time mars ain't the kind of place to raise a kid in fact it's cold as hell and there'd be no place to raise them if you did it's pretty dumb that's pretty 0:2:4
dumb lyrics you don't suck the future this future that is of course uh a reference to a line that appears in two different entertainments filmed entertainments uh in the 70s and then again in the arts uh that line is first said in i believe it's saturday night fever by tony's dad when travolta says ***** the future and he says no son you do not ***** with the future the future ***** you and then of course repeat it again by commissioner yari played with supercilious transcendence by stephen tavaloski replies to i believe it's racist steve yelling about the the land commission ***** the future to which he replies no sir the future ***** you and i would say the lifetime of so sorry about last week uh should have been on last wednesday but you guys 0:3:7
probably know that uh will and felix were in town we were doing stuff we were doing business deals uh got a little busy sorry about that and i'm going to be going to new york tomorrow to do the frequency fest which i should really do my part to try to promote frequency fest is going to be a lot of fun we're going to do something that uh we wrote for the thing we're not just going to be ***** around we wrote a thing we prepared material i know some of you are like oh ***** no their material their prepared material always sucks but some of you like it and we'll have some prepared material not too prepared though they'll be riffing and it will not be available in any other format they're not going to be releasing hopefully though we can do a lot real 0:4:9 live show soon because annoyingly we're not going to be able to have an audience for this even though new york is all opened up they didn't change that uh i just got a thing and it completely threw me off anyway it's going to be fine we're going to do a good job and if you want to see it it's the only way you'll be able to so check it out i'm really i'm hoping it's good because chris has done so much work for this chris is of course the king of the chapos our lord and master we are all his uh his children in a way like he he is our true dad and uh he put this thing together i'm pretty much by hand i want to see him i want to see it succeed and i'm excited about it i think it'll be good there'll be a lot of good stuff if you like uh e1 they're gonna be there there's i and then there's bands that i don't know what they are because i don't follow music i'm sure they're all great and i'm sure that so this is probably gonna be the only stream i do this week because i'm gonna be in new york starting tomorrow uh but then i'm hoping to get back to trying to do at least uh at least one a week maybe two uh trying to get to two but it's gonna be a little touch and go right now so bear patience uh so today we were gonna talk or yes last wednesday i guess we were going to talk about ministry of the future by kim stanley robinson and i said read that i was going to read the first 50 pages but i really obviously you know partially because of the time difference but also because it was just it's very easy to read i just blew through the ***** thing uh and so i'm halfway through already so uh i'm not really just going to talk about the first 50 pages sorry about that but i'm also not going to talk about anything too specific to granular i'm really just kind of using it as a uh as a starting point to talk about some stuff and so if you want to read along or read now having listened to this to sort of see the context go for it it's uh i i will say it's a he's got the dan brown thing of uh he has longer character based chapters but he also has those short chippy chappies those the short chapters uh pioneered by melville in uh moby dick but brought the greatest commercial success by dan brown in the the uh in the robert langdon books so you just keep going and uh i really enjoy too that the uh diffused narrative voice you've got uh point of view characters you've got um you've got paranoid characters that are individuals that like go through time you've got characters that are just there for one chapter you've got collective voices like wheeze and then those that we being a different group of people uh that's all cool and it makes the narrative which takes a lot that covers a lot of time it covers decades uh easier to contain in your head because otherwise it might uh be hard to conceptualize but there's leaps ahead that that all end up making sense it does mean that a lot of the dialogue or a lot of the dialogue and the the narrative are kind of expository but the expository voice is varied enough to keep it interesting so it's a fun book to read uh the die i mean the characters are obviously not terribly uh dynamic or interesting but that's not they're not the point it's really just sort of supposed to be a uh a broad survey of like the human pageant of trying to correct the the monstrous uh damage of climate change before it truly does it is com i gotta say though there's obviously that feels very scary it feels very uh intimidating and unfun this is why i have avoided basically any climate change related content i haven't read any of the big climate change books or seen any of the movies it always feels to me just like kind of a masochistic display and

CUSHVLOG 166. YOU DON'T SUCK THE FUTURE, THE FUTURE SUCKS YOU.

i'm not a masochist not in that way anyway i like my treats so and that includes artistic and cinematic so this is really the first time i've grappled in books in book form with with climate change and its real implications and i think part of that is because it's fiction and also because and because it's speculative fiction so that i always like that like the visions of of of a dystopian of a dystopia that you logically extend from the one we currently live in i like that kind of stuff like the oryx and craig books i'm a big fan of those so that helps and also the fact that the context here is not just what's going to happen but also the response the human response that it's going to trigger because i think a lot of the despair that i know i feel that i think of others do about climate change is the thought that we have responded so blasely to things until this point that we can just sort of accept axiomatically that as things get worse our public response to them our commitment to resisting them isn't going to get any better and i can understand that assumption but i think history proves that it's not likely i mean the question of whether it's going to be a sufficient enough shift to win the contest is a separate question but you have to get to that question and that means uh recognizing that deteriorating conditions and horror will will disrupt not just our existing systems but it's the existing systems mechanisms of uh consent manufacture and that this book really is about like as the consent manufacturer breaks down even in like the heart of of of fossil fuel capitalism there becomes a a concerted um response and so the premise he starts with is that in the very near future like 2023 there is a week-long catastrophic heat wave in northern india that kills and everything that comes after that the the creation of the uh of the ministry for the future and all of the civic uh legal and illegal movements that emerge to try to uh really push power in the direction of sustainability the context is 20 million ***** people dying uh and the fundamental artistic uh license that robinson takes is that if that happened it would create a it would be the thing that pushed us not towards collective uh you know realization or or uh radicalization but just pushes us off of the paralyzed uh spot we're currently on that that that the deer in the headlights freeze that we're in would be broken by that now i don't know if that's true that is a lot of people we have to remember and he emphasizes that over and over again it's more people than died in battle in world war ii it's it's twice the holocaust over twice the almost three times the size of the holocaust in a week and of course that does put into kind of comic relief the the notion that this book is some sort of uh happy fundamentally optimistic take on climate change it presumes as a baseline even if we avoid total social collapse and species extinction it will be at the cost of deaths that we cannot conceive of uh and the fear i think we all share i know i have is that we imagine the lives we live now and we imagine the catas the rolling catastrophes that we live in and normalize now and we project forward and we say

why would that be any different and i'd say that the answer to that is not anything that can be expressed rationally it is in uh it's in the ineffable realm of of the spirit where we have to assume just to uh you know satisfy our baseline understanding of ourselves as conscious beings that there is something beyond sheer mechanism in our uh lived actions like there is something compelling us beyond the uh pool 0:13:27 table physics of cause and effect there has to be and the book's assumption is that that that level exists that that that that point of inflection exists on the question of climate change and i would say that that's a reasonable assumption if only because it exists everywhere else yeah i'm patting him i'm petting him okay yeah he feels better now okay so everybody can relax now that i've petted the dog i'm sorry that i was so the book begins with this concept 20 million ***** people die in a week and part of the i'd say kind of ironic uh twist of this is that the way that we experience that as the reader is through the point of view of a single western aid worker who survives 0:14:29 in a city that is completely suffocated by heat uh and you know that's on one level that's like this is why uh you have to avoid very one-dimensional uh literary analysis categories because you could look at that and say oh look white saviorism literally the only person to survive is the white man but that's also that also serves the artistic purpose of pointing out the real fundamental like bio power that europeans and americans hold over the rest of the world the north holds over the global south especially in this time of significant climate shifts the people around the equator are literally more vulnerable than us than us here like not just where they live but like that their lives have been lived more roughly without the benefit of nutrition without the benefit of because we've sucked the ***** surplus of the earth we've 0:15:31 we have literally vamp we have vampirically sucked we've sucked off the world yes the second rate victorian holocaust exactly the same in the same uh phenomenon at play the north inflicting ecological catastrophe on india in order to enjoy the spoils of a global capitalist resource exchange network that funnels pleasure north and payne south which is the relationship between capitalists and labor or between capital and labor and between uh metropole and uh colonial ex uh so what happens what does the world decide to do at this horror this thing that actually causes the 0:16:32 inflection point to reach and that's this this is where you can look at it and go oh this is ridiculous and feel nothing but despair but remember this is happening in a psychological world that you are not in you are going through a looking glass the same way and you have to therefore suspend disbelief the same way you would going through the looking glass into a another into a historical period in a book or in the far future of science fiction you have to accept that this is not your world in a fundamental way even though it looks exactly like your world and the thing that separates you from that is time and event the catastrophe of the of the uh heat wave

and living in a world filled with all the other things that are also happening and have accumulated and caused misery and displacement around the world also so time and place mean you can't live there so assume to start with that it happens what happens well of course they create the un and the paris agreement people create a ***** bureaucracy that for one is very plausible and i think that that is uh robinson's fundamental insight which is of course packed with uh problems and contradictions which is that if we're going to see any meaningful coordinated reduction in climate uh outputs it is going to have to start at least in some respect with a transnational institutional framework and of course that's very difficult and that's one of the key contradictions at the heart of the the left how do you deal how do you deal with the fact that there is a there are these imperatives towards international cooperation but then also the reality that uh that national like social formations are the only ones that have any coherence and can only and they're the only places where realistically politics can be coordinated that's a real ***** problem and i think a lot of people who scorn international institutions in the name of uh like national bourgeois like because national brazil is the only thing that can resist international capital right now while that may be true it also uh means that your efforts run the risk of fracturing international cooperation where it needs to be increased and of course the other problem exists too if you ignore the reality of the nation as an organizing principle as a social reality then you will end up just uh putting a ***** green sticker and a rainbow on the venusified hell world that we're and so what is assumed here is that instead of some global revolution what we get is capitalism being challenged from within by a growing coordinated articulated political uh machine that does not seek to overthrow capitalism but to seeks to transition it into a harmony with the world by taking the externalities of capitalism and pricing them into the system and thereby leveraging the future that is going away and its economic value to create uh money create wealth create the uh basically boils down to social will to act differently to pull carbon out of the air instead of putting it in it that's it that's what they're trying to do and of course that's not communism but i would argue that communism as a coherent challenge to capitalism a it's not a going concern at the moment now it will come into some sort of root uh reality in the fight because the contradictions of capitalism cannot be contained like the ultimate thing about this is that even this if it were to work and i don't know how it ends spoiler alerts no spoilers i don't know how it ends they're halfway through i've read enough about it to know that they get to averting the ***** venusification of earth which is the best case scenario right now because if we do that we can do a lot of other things and by doing that we will have created a social base that is so much more progressive than the one we do socially and i can uh and technologically not in terms of like

raw technological output but like the technological power that individual people are going to be effectively able to uh to utilize that uh is it's dizzying to think about the future that could be made out of that and communism would eventually emerge in that context and it would be emerge amongst a re a a uh aware social class a class 0:21:44 for itself made out of the international losers the losers within the the the imperial core and the losers without a a uh an alliance between the two that would have to be facilitated at some point by international organizations like this and so this ministry of the future comes into existence and a bunch of other things are also happening india sees a uh massive political realignment where the bjp is wiped out hindutva as a movement is discredited and the old congress party is equally uh implicated and and india becomes governed by a new uh presumably socialist uh anti-caste uh political party and that that party then orients it orients india towards being the foremost country in climate uh mitigation so you have that as like the social base 0:22:45 a billion people making socialism and why not it's where the ***** actual violence was felt not where it's felt as guilt where it's felt again this is if would this happen you don't know let's just assume uh and the coolest uh part that comes out of india is that you get a terrorist movement dedicated to uh wiping out uh high high price tag corporate polluters and and climate criminals which uh i mean robinson is clearly not very comfortable with the idea of political violence but i respect that he acknowledges that there has to be a vis whatever fantasy of of of salvation we all are gonna have to believe in because we're gonna have to believe in something folks you're gonna have to believe in something uh he acknowledges it'll probably involve 0:23:46 some sort of violence although honestly and the problem with that is that the type of people who want to do climate-based justice aren't the type of people who are going to want to kill people but again we have the problem they're solved by these are people who saw their families wiped out in a ***** in a in a uh a literal holocaust a ***** i think somebody says robinson's books have gotten less and less revolutionary probably as time has gone on and things have gotten worse and the the prospect of salvaging anything becomes a more realistic goal to fight for than changing anything uh fundamental about the human condition although i wonder there's one thing that uh halfway through the book uh in cataloging all the different resistance mechanisms that come into being one of my favorites is uh space pirates or uh is uh echo pirates 0:24:50 who uh who hijack and sink fishing trawlers and liberate the slave the slave crews of some of the ones uh and just to prevent fishing uh that that's that's cool seems like you could do it the high seas are pretty wide open but obviously there's going to be a huge uh political cost to that and there's going to be a huge ratcheting up of state violence which is going to have its own knock-on effects that have to be considered one thing that he doesn't talk about though in all of these resistances is something that has come up now in the last couple weeks twice which is uh cyber attacks and ransomware so first you had some russians who just wanted to get paid cyber jack the uh the software of a pipeline in uh somewhere in the eastern united states it's why people were filling uh ***** target bags with gasoline and now one of the a fifth 0:25:52 of the u.s beef supply is now frozen because of a ransomware attack at some food conglomerate they're asking for money but what if somebody said no you don't do this anymore what are you going to do obviously you can get around it but enough of those attacks will have an effect unless of course it's all false flagship to get us to give over any of our knows if we don't get if somebody doesn't do something about bitcoin i'm really going to it's going to take a lot for me to restore my faith in human uh cooperation at this point in human history because come on man how are we this 0:26:54 is such an old goal own goal that we're still letting this ***** happen so there's uh one of the funniest segments is when there is a uh group that hijacks davos uh and instead of just panicking everybody they make them watch a bunch of movies about how mean they're being to everybody uh it's essentially they just show them like an adam curtis film for a week uh and i mean i don't think that people i've seen people in reviews say that that's sort of like a indictment of robinson but that seems to me to be pretty clearly uh indicated to be a dumb idea that is done by uh the type of trihard uh uh goody two shoes who would man a i mean i'm not surprised that they 0:27:55 haven't i'm surprised they haven't done that yet as an activity at davos i'm surprised they have not staged so really what he's doing is saying what people would do some of it would work some of it would not work some of it would be based some of it would be cringe and i do think it's interesting that another uh sacred cow climate change that he uh has to sacrifice along with mega death is the notion that we can get away and i think a a as terrifying as it is a recognition of of the of the stakes indicates that we and i think the resistance of these kind of things comes from a resistance to uh trusting the ins the institutions that would carry it out and that's totally real 0:28:57 realistic but part of the uh part of the math here though is that the ruling elite of these countries is getting going to get to a point where the maintenance of their power really is in a fundamental conflict by in their perception in their day-to-day working life uh and this new climate reality like they're they're losing their ability to uh to sustain a control and they don't block out the sun but what the uh indians do is they see the clouds uh to essentially block the sun and and uh bill gates has talked about blocking out the sun and of course anything that guy says is just a counter indicator do whatever the opposite of what bill gates wants because he is a demon he is moloch that ***** do you know how much money the gates foundation gives to lobbying groups that fight against climate change legislation this ***** this guy 0:30:1 who's telling you that oh it'll be okay if we collect everybody's foreskins and make

you drink ***** water and eat crickets is also stepping on the gas is the thing that's going to cause all of that it's a pretty clear indication of what all of corporate and transnational institutional and uh governmental action on climate change is which is a faint it is a puppet hand that is meant to keep you from recognizing the looting that is happening the final stripping of assets to be consolidated into private hands and unaccountable corporate hands unaccountable technologically supreme hands that will then so while we have this ministry of uh the future plot going we also have the technological resistance now as i said nothing about ransomware although i do wonder about ransomware i wonder how how vulnerable are these things are these 0:31:4 institutions are these frameworks and infrastructures too like a significant interdiction because you know if labor power is the power to cease production then in a global uh system a wallensteinian world system then stopping the flow is just as good uh and if we could do that technologically that would fill in for some of the lack of of working class self mobilization question there of course is accountability to the people doing it who would be behind the computer and those are questions that can be only announced by only be answered by the time and place the context that gives rise uh to these resistances hypothetical future resistances but one thing uh and i have thought of this myself before reading this book one thing that robinson argues could change the equation on security in a way that could actually make the ruling 0:32:7 class worried about resistance is drone technology is it as drones get smaller and cheaper becomes easier to use them in a way that is essentially unguardable against and there is a spectacular act of echo terrorism that occurs in this book off-screen because all the really nasty stuff is is uh is off-screen because he's not he he knows it's necessary but it shouldn't be celebrated and frankly i don't know if that's not the right attitude because i have talked about how uh uh oh ***** i forgot what i'm saying so i just i got i accidentally hit the ***** chat and blew my mind it always blows my mind when i see these guys uh but drone technology is something that could even the playing field a little bit and i feel that's true you know 3d technology 0:33:9 and printing uh and drones are really the only things that are emerging and uh like software and algorithms and ***** are the only things that seem like they can be produced outside of capital in a way that can be that could be that can so i guess that means people need to but again the the will to do this doesn't exist like that's the fundamental thing we have to acknowledge is that we don't live in this world where we can expect anything like that to emerge because this question is too 0:34:10 disused people's responses to it are too ***** diffused uh they are too paralyzed by indecision and they are too struck dumb by uh addiction to the stimulus response nexus of existence within the system and that goes for me and everybody and so the people who really care about this stuff mostly just get sad or channel their energy into embarrassing emotional catharsis like extinction rebellion or whatever so yeah 0:35:12 i'm not gonna try to make any drones i'm gonna keep uh keep post i'm to keep ***** talking to not forever probably but for right now and that's all i can really do i can just sort of make myself uh in some way at peace with my situation and then if i can't if i find that i am unable to then addressing that which is preventing me from doing so and i'm i'm trying to do that uh where it will lead i don't know but i'm i'm in a i mean i'm on a journey man like so in enumerating the responses robinson 0:36:15 also uh highlights the fundamental places where things have to change really quickly and he acknowledges uh one of them having to be the internet as it's it currently exists that it can no longer be the uh the corporate uh matrix uh that it is now well incentivized as it is now and that that would have to go uh that's like yep absolutely it's a pretty ingenious method that they go about doing it whereby they create a uh they create a fully secure social media space where your data is owned by you and you can sell it which that you do feel like oh you know going to the market but once again the idea here is to wean a market off of its worst uh social and ecological uh side effects and uh i mean we can also i think we can agree that social media uh even though you know it's only a component of a matrix is one is a uh debilitating 0:37:16 millstone around the neck of human civilization and has to be addressed uh also the incentive structure of the market to be changed by the introduction of a way to invest in the uh world in the future a way to invest in the future and that's where they talk about this uh currency it's essentially a bitcoin uh that helps the or where the world instead of destroys it that is created by sinking carbon instead of creating carbon and i thought that was really cool and not something i'd really thought about but you know it's like it does help with one of the big problems which is there's all this ***** money to be made by all the stuff that's in the ground people are going to get it out of the ground unless there is an incentive not to and that's either uh you know 0:38:19 some sort of techno uh global enforcement regime that prevents people from putting up oil derricks or uh you know you've dismantled the system of capitalism or you make it in their interest not to you make it in their entry you make it worth money not to pump oil and that is going to have to happen unless you once again destroy the infrastructure for oil or replace it with something there has to be an economic incentive to keep it in the in the ground and then the third part the third big part they haven't really gotten to it yet i'm only halfway through but uh as soon as i read it you know i started nodding it's when they say oh yeah their people are gonna have to have to actually believe in something people are going to have to actually care about and have an emotional terrain that recognizes the uh the existence of others 0:39:20 and the persistence of a human community oh ***** that's religion we need another one of those uh i they only mentioned it i'll see what happens in the second half

CUSHVLOG 166. YOU DON'T SUCK THE FUTURE, THE FUTURE SUCKS YOU.

i'm looking forward to how you figure that out because to me this is one of like i am closest to that question because i have no because that's where the people who don't have any uh technical affinity go like i don't have the uh expertise to help on any of the the technological questions uh or on any of the big questions of policy even to which the degree to which those are important i am a jackass who just talks about things i give little speeches that's that's for that's for the humanities grads and what are the humanities but not an ex attempt to dissect into pieces the reality of the human soul like that that is what the the soft sciences are it's the human soul 0:40:21 splayed out on a cork board and its organs cataloged and of course that's worthy work but absent a social practice that enlivens that knowledge with the the mystical uh emotional connection provided by communal so i'm very interested to see how robinson goes about uh nudging along because obviously it's going to happen anyway people are hitting the dead end people are hitting the dead end of materialism they're finding that it only uh can keep you going for so long before the the contradiction between objectivity and subjectivity between being the universe and being um and having a sell-by date uh it becomes overwhelming there's no degree of indulgence or 0:41:22 uh neurotic self obsession that can keep you from it forever and now we're getting this new generation of children who have hit the ***** barrier by age 18 19 years old i mean a lot of them are trying to kill themselves apparently the teens are very despairing but not all of them are going to kill themselves not the majority the rest are going to keep going on and something is going to have to move them to move to continue something is going to have to be believed in what it's going to be it doesn't have to be good signs point to it being very bad in fact but that doesn't mean that that absolves us of the responsibility to try to participate in the good version yeah it's probably going to be some some and it's sobering because there is 0:42:23 going to be a religious revival but a lot of it is going to be cult-based and a lot of it is going to be uh so defined by its social reactionary nature it's gonna say this world is scary and and big and i am a little adamant where can i find uh meaning and their answer isn't going to be inhumanity as an abstract concept it's going to be the people who are closest to them the people who are the most similar to them the people who comfort them by reflecting them which is what we seek in a in a public world full of strangers the only truly soothing image is a mirror and so that's what we seek that's what our entertainment has become we're seeking a reflection of our own values our reflection of our own sense of self we want to live inside a ***** disco ball because that's the only way to be soothed strangers are scary that's why everyone's on the internet where they can see people as a projection of themselves 0:43:26 not as real people because they're not dealing with the the uh intervening viscosity of a human encounter and so it's probably going to be based there's going to be a lot of uh mystical uh communing with racial groups and with national categories and that's gonna be bad news but a lot of us have been brainwashed by the hollywood sicko can reach across the uh the divide of because succumbing to that is a worse for our sense of self and for our uh super it our super egos restraint against that behavior because uh so many of us have become uh neo-puritan basically uh who don't believe in god anymore but still believe in eternal judgment and the need to be among the elect uh and that is you know the residual motive to be a social liberal and there are a lot of people who have those things deeply embedded i know what i do and like succumbing to the nationalist racial uh religious uh mania would be too great a violation of our sense of self so between those people and people for whom that is not an option because they are the excluded i think you could maybe put together a team that could uh maybe if we could all become mormon by now we probably would have fixed everything one of the like in the archipelago of existing like uh fully luxury fully automated luxury space communist bubbles that will exist in the future earth like an earth that's basically water world except for a few little outcroppings that stick out and those will have on them little bubble cities where you will have fully automated luxury space communism you will have the dream of uh of a material splendor for all and those people being all the people who made it into the bunkers and then were able to use their technology to build themselves a little uh a little bubble amongst them one of them will be mormons one of them will have will be will be cyber utah no question about that because they work together to make it happen the rest will be you know essentially hikimori domes of uh freaks ***** uh cyber sex dolls but of course the reality is is that if we do get the worst most catastrophic outcome of climate change that won't happen either because the faith in that the faith in mars the faith in new zealand is part of the greater faith in the self that these people are clinging to these people who are the most religiously infused the most mystic people on earth the hyper wealthy because they've cocooned themselves in something that they believe as deeply as a ***** medieval martyr at a burning at the stake which is that technology exists to sustain them and that it its power is essentially infinite relative to the uh him and that it can be utilized to their full control meaning that they will be able to use it to um to dominate any physical reality though the seas rise i'll put up a bubble the workers rebel i'll replace them with robots at every point there is an answer and then of course at the end of the question well what about life and death what about dying you're gonna now have to die having cut yourself and severed yourself completely from all of humanity how are you supposed to deal with that how is it not going to drive you insane i was not going to send you to hell the answer is i will live in the machine all of those beliefs are believed as deeply as fundamentally as people believed in medieval christianity and are as illusory god didn't make the world in six days and you can't ***** they will 0:48:38 destroy everything in the pursuit of this fully luxury automated space communist utopia for their grandchildren and them of course because they're never going to die or if they do think they're going to die if they don't if they're if they haven't been convinced by that science then they think they're going to create a lineage and a legacy because that's what you have in to focus on if death is uh too you have to have either a legacy or a fantasy of eternal life and both of those things are are sustained by the wealthy by delusion by religious mania because these people do not believe in science they don't believe in technology they have encountered science and technology through a personal experience that has seen it open its hands to them 0:49:39 and revealed the jewels of the universe to put them in a position of power that no humans had ever exist had ever held in human history not through the use of arms not through violence not even through physical effort through fear mental exertion at least that's what they think that's how they experienced technology so of course to them because it is their lived lives it is imbued and infused with belief and a disbelief in not just the self but of the supremacy of their specific selves the rest of us are just reifying our egos but in the absence of absolute power those egos are being destroyed by the inability to recognize a world where you are both the center of the universe and its only consciousness and also subordinated to others subordinated and disempowered and not able to do what you want how the hell do you deal with that and it is the neurotic attempt to square that circle that i think generates basically 0:50:47 all now of course though super wealthy are transcend bourgeois morality transcend mushua politics give a ***** about any of that stuff because they have total belief in the self and also physical evidence of their self's power and centrality they think they're gods and the world proves that they are as opposed to the rest of us who think we're god at the end of the day we think we're god but are but live as as uh as peasants how can that make sense and we try to make sense of it with politics but in both cases this neurotic drive towards distraction and and uh resentment and guilt assuagement that happens in the middle drives the actual machine of capital towards so next week uh i'm not done but just wanted to make sure i'm done talking 0:51:59 about i think the book we'll talk some more i'll talk more about the rest of it and when i'm done with the whole thing i'll probably like look back at other stuff that maybe i missed talking about this time so i'll have it all done by the next time we uh hang out which i don't know if it's gonna be it's not but we'll do the second half of kim stanley robinson's ministry for the future not of the future ministry for the future next week hopefully or the week after if not and just to uh comment on the title of the book one of the other key components here the understanding is is leveraging the future rights of humans not yet born against uh the current calculus of economic value but again with all these things you're essentially creating ideological 0:53:0 justifications for what at the end of the day are uh material considerations and that's where the coercion comes in because all of the stuff about hey we'll have a we'll have a crypto coin hey we're going to sue you in court on behalf of future generations that's just to give them an out short of final conflict and annihilation when they're when they feel that they've lost the battle this is being pushed on all fronts including uh physical fronts using physical uh coercion and intimidation but i don't want to talk about that too much because it's nothing that currently makes sense tactically it's nothing i certainly nothing i want to get in trouble for i'm a ***** i will admit it i don't want to get in trouble because what would be the point no amount of uh echo terrorism in the current conditions absent any kind of movement absent any kind of 0:54:1 catalyzing political uh um event or organization it's just more grist for the mill more uh strategy of tension fodder more stuff to keep us on the road to uh total uh techno dominion techno domino atera now i hate being under that techno dominion i hate being under that techno dominion oh child dude yeah there'll be no more gumbo if that river keeps rising if that gold mexico keep coming in there no i'm not some sort 0:55:11 of categorical pacifist but i do think that we are so awash and spectacle and violence right now that anything short of a a destabilizing degree of physical resistance isn't going to do anything other than provide more uh ***** trending shhh oh somebody 0:56:21 asked about ariel pink i know him because he got in trouble for going to the capitol uh on uh january 6th which is very funny all the celebs who went there like jay at the end of the day all these viruses operate on everybody all these mind viruses that we're spreading on the internet somebody keeps asking about the bo burnham thing i don't know what that is is he a musical comedian is he one of those guys who uses guitars while he's like doing punch lines like that seems to be you're trying to do like 0:57:22 a mitch hedberg stephen wright you don't have the confidence just leave it leave the uh dead air for a little bit in between uh apparently bo burnham did some sort of like uh epic communism and uh someone on twitter pointed out very accurately that if if you're gonna have people changing their minds on on like the viability of the system even if it's just you know not necessarily it's gonna be good it could just be performative but it's gonna it's gonna mean cringe like that it's gonna mean people doing that that's gonna happen it's no one's no one's gonna have perfect takes uh 0:58:23 but i don't think i'm gonna watch it i'll say that okay i'll leave on the the veiled prophet thing but first of all shout out to uh corpse in orbit michael s judge host of death is just around the corner a great podcast about american america's he's essentially a uh michael is a basically uh an architect critic where he's describing the the structure and map of the uh black iron cage of american uh capitalism but in 2017 because he's from st louis and he kind of knows those people he apparently uh

CUSHVLOG 166. YOU DON'T SUCK THE FUTURE, THE FUTURE SUCKS YOU.

CUSHVLOG 166. YOU DON'T SUCK THE FUTURE, THE FUTURE SUCKS YOU.

CUSHVLOG 166. YOU DON'T SUCK THE FUTURE, THE FUTURE SUCKS YOU.

uh knows uh holly josh hawley uh that he knew about the veil prophet a debutant 0:59:25 ball type thing for the upper cross of st louis that they started uh to celebrate the victory over the the strikers during the st louis uh general strike of 19 1877 part of the great railroad strike it was an end zone dance for the rulers of the city uh over the the rest of workers and in 2017 he said that ellie ***** kemper uh from the office and kimmy schmidt had been one of the uh one of the guests of honor uh so shout out to him for having this way before anybody else uh but obviously the big reason that it moved is the way it was framed it was framed as it's the clan these are the clan look they're wearing wet white hats it's a clan party well these guys were the clan now of course that's not true in any literal sense it's in said the fact that yeah this is part of the upper crust of a near south city that was dedicated to uh 1:0:28 maintaining racial and class hierarchy in st louis and they had a party to celebrate it it just that's what made it sing and that's what made it sizzle all this really proves is that ellie kemper like most actors now uh is a ***** rich kid who's who became an actor as a hobby and succeeded because they could stick around that is everybody it used to be obviously a big chunk of celebrities and of actors and and artists of all kinds but now it has become almost exclusively that because it is too hard to risk it it's too dangerous the the the cost benefit analysis doesn't hold up no matter how much you want it no matter how much talent you might have that calculus can only be made by people who have a safety net and so what a shock child of rich people 1:1:30 is the fame is a famous actor the all of the real dungeon about it the stuff about it being the clan or whatever is just more ***** liberal posturing because once again we have an example here is somebody who came from the bad kind of rich people the local elites of smaller cities this is local capital these are the bad guys so we could do this meanwhile how many ***** actors and actresses are the children of bankers white shoe law firms that doesn't get talked about because that is invisible capital and it's this trick goes the other way too of course like those veiled profit people they pitch themselves and think of themselves as the salt of the earth they think of themselves we're not cap with capitalism we're working together we're all part of one 1:2:31 community against against uh antifa and uh the global world order they're the bad ones and it's not capitalism actually capitalism is good and we do that both ways it is it's a cultural projection of a a uh battle between local concentrated capital and transnational capital a battle across time essentially it's it's a temporal war between capital at its most accelerated point and at its most its most accelerated financialized endpoint and it's more localized fixed extractive midsection and then it's thought as a culture war where the role of capital is completely **Music playing** hidden and 1:3:32 shielded and veiled in both cases so the real ***** veiled prophet of this whole thing is capitalism boo drop the mic right there but obviously it is very funny because that is some real yellow king ***** it's always been super creepy uh in the 70s some like left-wing activists stormed the thing and pulled off the ***** prophet's uh veil to show that he was like the local head of monsanto and then the one who woman who had pulled the mask off had her car blown up by a enterprise rent-a-car and monsanto are huge donors for what they use at the vp fair not exactly pumpkin pump 1:4:33 uh country pumpkin smallholders of course not because from outside these are not disconnected capitalisms the culture stares across the time frame two like they're not these people are still super rich and powerful it's just that they identify with a local formation of power and a local hierarchy because remember that we're dealing with an era of lumpen class non-consciousness across the board we have a lump in middle class we have a lump and proletariat and we have a lump and ruling class they do not have a sense of themselves as part of any project they operate out of total self- 1:5:36 interest and they are like you've got guys like the ricketts family who are billionaires who believe ***** fox news forwards that are meant for the dumbasses who vote for their candidates because spectacle and media has replaced life for everyone no matter how many how and then the and the hope of climate change is that it is a shift and a shock to this system sufficient to reorient people towards their lives and away from that spectrum whether that's true or not will be seen it's not that we are enchanted 1:6:48 by their stories it's that it's their stories have replaced our social existence there's nothing that we are choosing them in favor of that is why we can't unplug that's why we can't really log off because we are now cyborgs we have offloaded a huge percentage of our mental uh world and our emotional world into this cyber realm so it's not they're it's not anyone's fault for being enchanted they are dealing with reality as it was presented to them where that the that the euro the television howard beale said where your own lives are unreal because how could your life that which is spent not observing this stuff not engaging with it how could it compare considering 1:7:49 how much time you spend on one versus the other and how lonely the time you spend by and that lonely time is still spent it's the ghost acreage of your soul acreage is is uh is a concept that explains how uh imperial cores are able to sustain themselves by accessing a bunch of land that is not actually part of their polity so england was able to way over produce their malthusian lemon on population because they were able to access massive amounts of ghost acreage and this is the the conflict we're all stuck with and this is the the horn of the dilemma is that we need more than ever to 1:8:52 rebuild our spiritual connection to each other our spiritual connection to the world so that it can orient us towards good action that can only be determined through analysis of that world but at the same time we are constrained by our our disposition our material dispositions which are beyond our control to have to live in a a balance those how do we how do we direct the flow the emotional flow the the uh spiritual flow between the one state and the other to to push us towards right action that's the challenge and i don't know the answer that's why i keep talking that's why i keep talking around because i don't know the answer because i am alone not really i 1:9:56 have people in my life but i am not part of a project beyond the artistic project the but i'm hoping that that will change and i'm trying to make myself ready for the moment this is an original adam friedland i'm he painted a great paparazzi shot of paul giamatti on the subway and that is it's wonderful reminds me of new york okay somebody says they should be beppy grillo yeah the ***** fi five star movement huh real real ***** hit that one really hit the nail on the head with all right talk to you 1:10:58 chickens later they blasted and dug with their sweat and their guts they never drank water but whiskey by pints and the shantytowns rang with their songs and their fights navigator navigator rise up and be strong the morning is here and there's work to be done get your pick and your shovel and them all dynamite where to shift a few tons of this earthly delight yes to shift a few they died in their hundreds with no sign to mark where **Music playing** save the brass in the pocket of the entrepreneur by roadsides and rock blasts they got buried but if death if not life they'll have peace while they sleep navigator navigator rise up and be strong the morning is here and there's work to be done take your ticket your shovel and them all dynamite where to shift a few tons of this earthly delight yes to shift a few tons of this earthly delight a mark on this land is still seen and still laid a way for a commerce her vast fortunes some loyal to an empire where the sun which is now deep in darkness but the railway's there yet navigator navigator rise up and be strong the morning is here and there's work to be done take your pick and your shovel and then all dynamite we're to shift a few tons of this earthly delight yes to shift a few one of my favorite songs navigator as covered by the pogues that's not a poke's original uh like the band says band the band played well sing matilda also a cover two of their best songs were covers but that it just shows the breath of your musicality in a way that you can get a you can make the definitive cup version of something somebody asked if panda express is good and you know what i wouldn't have been qualified to answer that until a couple weeks ago i just uh the last couple weeks i found myself by happenstance going into panda expresses not in malls which i honestly before this month didn't think was a thing i thought panda express was exclusively available in malls that there weren't any standalones and now two times in the last month i've found myself in a situation where i needed to eat something on the run and i'm in a car and oh there's panda express and i've gone twice now i've had the i had the the beijing beef uh one time the bowl and the other time i had um i think the garlic pepper chicken and i realize at least this is my theory i don't know if it's true that the reason that um panda express now i really feel like this is new now has these uh standalone locations

CUSHVLOG 167. FUTURESUCK II

because i swear to god i swear to god i never saw panda express outside of a mall 0:4:9 before and since i don't go to malls as habit as a matter of course i kind of thought well i'm never going to have panda express again and then boom they're out there and my theory about it this might it's totally made up by me theoretical style is that it is the market responding to the creation of the chipotle level of like ethnic food delivery like chipotle invented a new way to get a uh ethnic ethnic cuisine right in a way that was like rationalized and standardized and homogenized for a suburban palette that had existed at the end of fast food like taco bell but it had not existed at the level of the the attainable uh like up market faster food the the area for the more well-heeled among the the middle class who buys things and goes to make restaurants 0:5:11 that you can that are a sufficient number to make a business to make to make an industry they created they found this sector of people with a little more money in their hands and yes subway was the first of this but it was really an outlier and really ahead of its time it was uh and also you know the sub is sort of a different thing you know they kind of invented something there uh but so chipotle is this new type of consumer experience for the people who want uh to gesture towards like urban sophistication that higher price-pointed food offerings represent uh but live in the context of you know economically and attainable urbanity attainable bohemianism and that created a new market really because people found out oh there's money here and so now you have a bunch of attempts to do that for different foods pizza 0:6:12 has two pie ology and blaze which i believe is owned by chipotle it's like a play for a new sector and that is hey what if you can do that with pizza what if you can make pizza bespoke enough to transcend like a hot and ready or a ***** uh a day class say five dollar hot ready from uh little caesars but is it like a brick mortar uh neapolitan place that's more expensive it's the new era and so that's gonna come for every uh type of food and maybe panda express saw the spot and went for it sort of the way that blockbuster could have been could have evolved into the streaming platform that we all use for movies but they ***** up like they had the slot and there was even the awareness that it was a reality and there was a desire within the company to move in that direction but they were and so pan express is sort of does the anti-blockbuster and slides in there hey panda express here it is machine level 0:7:14 uh uh uh chinese food but presented and the thing is it is presented like it wasn't in the this is a rebrand all along you have to remember this because the original panda express play really was taco bell for mexican for us chinese food it was de clase but i tell you guys these two ones i've gone to they are chipotle to the letter to level they're absolutely trying to be that and uh it's it's tasty it's not bad but again i just made that up i have no idea so you're saying that these are not new and it's always been that way i guess that's just the spot that panda express has been sitting in it's

been in the cut waiting to to come to life sounded it was fine it is it's about as good as that so that is to say pan express is not bad the beijing beef was pretty good i 0:8:15 gotta say you can build a bowl with the different type of things they have like six different versions and you can go with low main or fried so yeah pan express is fine it's like chipotle yeah chipotle is not great if there are better options you should take them but if you want a burrito and you're like getting uh gas you know or doing errands you could do worse look at all those emotes there are no bodegas in la there are seven elevens and i gotta say i'm with matt burning on this 7-eleven is superior 0:9:16 to the bodega in every way it is the highest level of bodega yes i do have wisconsinite taste i always have i like ketchup i like ketchup on i like ketchup on mac and cheese like a ***** canadian yes there is no chumped cheese at 7-eleven but they do have a lot of other great options they've got decent pizza little thin slice or the thin crust they've got those little uh kind of uh egg rolls with the exotic flavors in them chopped cheese and the dustiest yes bodegas have atmosphere and they better because that's 0:10:17 what you're paying that's how that's that's what makes it all worthwhile is that is that exotic touch to make you feel sophisticated that is that's that's the value you get from the the writing is coming pretty well the interviews that are going to form the basis of the book have been completed and now i'm going to edit them shape the language add stuff and turn it into something uh legible so that's the the final sort of writing by editing process is coming up you also get a lot of uh convenience that 0:11:19 way with the bodegas because if you live in new york you're never more than about a block away from a bodega in most neighborhoods so that's not necessarily true of 7's 11 in other parts of the country because you know they can only i went to a quick trip when i was in wisconsin visiting my parents and i've got to say they have definitely risen to the challenge of the 7-eleven food experience because they don't just have the uh the case of uh summer sausage and cheese curds that they used to have now they've got a whole prepared meal section with their own pizza and their own little nuggets and hot dogs and ***** all prepared and arranged very much like apparently those uh those upgrades were very expensive for 7-eleven owner operators 0:12:21 because it operates on a franchise model but 7-eleven has this contract where their they dictate to their franchisee what they have to keep in their store to say just keep their license as a 7-eleven so they have to say like to be in a 7-eleven you have to provide x y and z like as part of your uh your arrangement and now their contracts are requiring them to keep these food items in there even though it's very expensive to maintain a a essentially restaurant inside something that's supposed to be a convenience store uh and so it's actually a loss for a lot of these franchisees but they have to pay that and so it's led to this really grim and and honestly illustrative phenomenon where the mostly immigrant owners of sevens 11 who were brought

into like their franchise relationship by a concerted effort by 7-eleven to reach out to the south indian community south asian community specifically and say hey you want to come to this country here's an opportunity you don't have to worry about if your engineering degree is going to be able to get you a a similar job to that in the united states you know you don't have to worry about maybe having to drive a cab if you could own your own business and there's like there's networks that created this and now they're imposing all these requirements on the 7-elevens that are making it making the margins so thin for the operators i mean while 7-eleven is just getting the franchise fees you know and getting the profits uh is that they're essentially working for like 20 grand a year like they have been fully proletarianized and they're hyper exploiting their own time too they've been even though they're they're members of the petty bourgeois like they are the yeoman holdout because of their position their vulnerable position as immigrants largely like 7-eleven would if they picked up a fuss about this stuff like they literally collaborate with the state to bring uh bargaining power away from these owner operators so now quick trip is becoming like that this this local mainstay is becoming like that you know it's uh it shows that everything every every uh sort of social construction short of socialism that you try to build to damn up the uh the power of capital to just proletarianize everybody including people who are who hold a stake in capitalism like the petty bourgeois because there's nothing they could build that can uh that can resist it so we had this cr american idea of the yeoman small holder first of land then of some sort of business as a bulwark against uh the the condition of proletarian which is what you're trying to avoid and if you think a system will help you avoid proletarianization you will engage with it enthusiastically but then that relationship changes as the pressure of the the drop of profit the rise of the liquidation of all classes save owner and provider of labor and that means that a lot of people in that middle sector are not going to be brought up and bought into this new ruling power they're going to fall out of it they're going to fall out of the middle section into proletarianization and that is the agonized position of the american middle class that makes up whatever kind of reactionary formation and it is a resistance of proletarianization by this middle strata of people who are participators and beneficiaries of the amer of the american capitalist order and so what looked like looks like a battle between like some left and right between some working class and and the ruling class is really just this cultural battle waged between peoples on different sides of this equation as the thing falls apart so you've got this uh the last remaining believers in capitalism right are your liberal media class and the media people that they create and the culture that they create those are the last people who really believe in capitalism because they believe that even under fully uh fully uh proletarianized hyper capitalism that they will be on the winning end of it that they will have to reach the position within capitalism well they will be a a rentier and not a laborer a eloy not a morlock and that's because they believe at a level of a deep uh uh existential conviction that their talents because these are the last meritocrats that their talents will earn them a spot away from the conditions of exploitation that make up being a proletarian or a member of the reserve army of labor the totally uh uh destroyed and cast down uh a lumpin that is created inevitably by this system there's no guarantee that you're not even gonna just you're not you're that you're even gonna be able to work with your hands or work uh or exploit your time you might not be given any reason to exist in this system and have to ***** scrounge for yourself in what are essentially post-apocalyptic conditions like when we talk about the capitalism being uh uh uh unevenly distributed so is the apocalypse the apocalypse as we imagine it in our mind post-nuclear apocalypse the the global warming idea of apocalypse that it came after the cold war vision of ecstatic extinguishment was gone that vision exists for those who are no longer of use to capitalism and who cannot sell their labor in the global south but in the in this city a block from where i stand the apocalypse is here for those who have reached that condition within capitalism and we've reached a point where the war the culture battle is between those people who think that when that time comes they will be inside the house not outside and for our lumpin bourgeois that make up the trump base the the the heronvolk democratic the fascist whatever you want to call it base of populist nationalism those people believe that when the time comes given the current arrangement of capitalism they will in fact be consumed and extruded and cast out into the apocalypse a post-industrial post a post-industrial world of total pollution scarcity uh and breakdown of basic uh protections of law and contract and on the other side of that the the good guys from a cultural perspective because they uphold pluralism they uphold the notions of like universal humanity that we need to survive as a species they have that going for them but it is on top of a belief that these things can only be advanced by capitalism an embedded understanding that only capitalism can sustain this and so that means that on the other side of that you have the people the meritocrats in addition to the people who are just so wealthy that they know that they already own they already own the means of production it doesn't matter it's in their hip pocket this is all just a game to them but like that tenuous class the academic elite the the people who make up the conversation that we're all participating in and that makes up our understanding of the ***** like the terrain of the country we live in because we don't know what's going on in the country we don't know what's going on in the world we echolocate through an engagement with the culture that is made by this class of people the last believers in capitalism because they think that their talents either

their labor talents or if they've deluded themselves into thinking that they're part of a political project that will bring about peaceful socialism from within capitalism those because you can't discount that there are plenty of totally uh earnest comrades who adhere to capitalism at a subconscious level at a faith level because they think not that oh it doesn't matter i'll be a winner i'll be i'll be a holder of uh capital they think no my political project that i'm going to be part of is going to eventually overtake capitalism and so everyone will be in the tent and so my participation in capitalism in the here and now is justified and those those people are battling on a cultural firmament but at the basic the the machine is operating independently of the political engagement because we have detached from class because our politics is purely a representation of our understanding of the world which is the simulacrum which is the this cultural fake world the the world where where uh the the destiny of the nation is on whether or not we accept critical race theory whether or not that is going to determine whether capitalism lives or dies it does not it is a it is a delusional participation it is a it is a performance by a class of people who think that they're going to be okay one way or the other and so they can articulate a politics that is based on capitalism and is assumes without any metaphysical question that and that is why the politics as we currently have it is sterile and doomed why it doesn't matter whether if they ban crt from schools or if they if they ban uh any kind of ableism in any entertainment uh and make critical like you can ban critical race theory in schools but that will only make critical race theory mandatory in the culture so there's no way anyone can win this battle because things are going to keep getting worse and at the level of law the places where republicans rule are going to use the law to stamp out uh the ability to express left-wing political ideals critical race racial consciousness that can transcend the racial apartheid structure you uh that you will somehow stop the drift of culture because that's what you're actually participating in towards uh the sort of mongrelized culture you're afraid of guess what you're only making it inevitable because if you make crt illegal in schools you will make it mandatory in cultural production now they're not going to use laws to make it mandatory they're just going to use the market in the form of what people will pay for what media platforms will pay to have produced that is gonna that market that invisible hand is gonna determine the actual market is going to determine that you cannot get anything made or consumed widely within the culture unless it fully makes if it makes race and racism the central and foundational message purpose for being of it forget art there is no aesthetic question here we are only going to ask the question of does this perform a political and those dynamics will inflame each other and ratchet each other up and drive us towards civil conflict but the engine of that will be a immiserating social context of hyper capitalism overtaking everything

and casting everyone out of any position of safety into full precarity but that's not going to be in that's not going to be addressed by any of these either cultural or political fights because they're independent of capitalism who all right so this was supposed to be the episode where i talked about uh red plenty or no red planet we should talk about that book actually it's fascinating francis spafford it's a historical novel about uh the soviet attempt to solve the riddle of price point of the price mechanism how to reproduce technologically the um the price signal that was the that was what the soviets actually tried to do under khrushchev and president they tried to create a command consumer economy by and having the efficiency of the market reproduced cybernetically and that is the challenge of socialism that is the fundamental challenge of socialism because when you talk about the uh about the working class seizing control of capitalism at a point when its conditions of uh capital accumulation have created the necessary technological capacity to distribute labor outputs and you can say that one of the reasons the soviet union failed is because we hadn't reached that point yet a point that marx was probably too optimistic in his own understanding he underestimated the degree to which technology could put off the end of capitalism the technology could smooth things out socially enough to allow capitalism to sustain itself to buy off revolution essentially he underestimated his capacity to do that that's not his fault that is something he could not have known that is one of those unknown knowns that that that's the ignorance that you like have to revolve around it's the ***** it's a black hole at the center of the universe of our understanding of the world is this unknowable future and that's what every one of our understandings is built on and so marx built this perfect i think framework for understanding capitalism is as in as an economy and as a politics as a culture as an as a reality but yeah as with anything you can either know momentum or speed you can't know both there is a great unknown known and for marx it was technology and the technological capacity to create to ease to distribute rationally resources by which i mean to keep the host alive and not kill it rational distribution and rational distribution happened at the center of capitalism because of imperialism because the hyper exploitation of the global south allowed for a rational distribution of resources at the center of production where capitalism was most vulnerable away from crisis and that was buying off the working class that is why america became the world headquarters of capitalism it's why the german revolutions of 1918 and 1920 failed because at the center of capitalism rational distribution had been and it spreads through the system but at the level of the hyper-exploited **Music playing** endpoint of capital accumulation the colonies you have just pure uh savagery you have you have you have no room for a social heart to beat you have the cold steel you have the whip of the slave owner you have this the sneer of cold command of the

slave owning and that meant that when the great crisis of capitalism finally came in the early 20th century the capitalism marx had been predicting and was correct in his understanding of about when it would happen the technology had existed long enough to distribute rationally at the center of capitalism sufficient adherence to capitalism among the working class that there was at the time of crisis there was no one there to fight when the real moment came because you can forgive the social democrats in germany for example for voting for war credits because they assume like everybody that it would be like every previous uh european war since the uh end of the napoleonic era since the council of uh uh since the the the council of vienna short one season long affairs bloody nose and a treaty they were all assuming that they shouldn't if that was insane but it was underlining their logic because you go by when you're trying to make a decision you go by what had happened in the past that's one of the fundamental things that's going to doom us as a species so you can forgive them for that public opinion was patriotic even among workers because the system had been rewarding them it had been giving them better lives it had been giving them political control it had been distributing the the the surplus of capitalism rationally and away from just the market hoovering it up and that meant that sure they voted for war credits but then in 1918 after four years of the most horrifying war anyone had seen since the 30 ***** years war but on a mechanical scale of death that was unprecedented in the in the in the folk lives of these people a a technologically aided massacre of unprecedented proportions that leaves the the cream of the german working class the french working class the british working class **Music playing** the working class of europe had committed suicide at the behest of their rulers but in that moment the working class of the the the remainder of the working class of europe turned towards their leaders turned to upward and said holy ***** how did you let this happen and that crisis came all across europe but the only place that it broke towards revolution was the place where the working class was the smallest and where the spoils of capitalism had been distributed least rationally towards the maintenance of some sort of and so it snapped the system snapped in half and and the incoherent working masses of the of the of the russian cities were able to seize power now if that had been the extent of it if they'd known that it'd been the extent of it there's a real question of whether they would the bolsheviks would have gone on and carried out the revolution because an isolated russian revolution was going to die every single person among the leadership of the bolshevik party and i would say the majority of the people at the leadership levels within the soviets themselves among the workers and sailors and and soldiers was that they were the questions of the soviet union that left all the blood on the hands of socialism and tarnished marxism were all made in the context of what do we do now you could

argue they made the wrong call you could argue that the one guy who knew what to do was bakarin who said this has failed that means that we have to step back and let the bourgeois do the job of building capitalism to the sufficient point that we can seize it because we're not there yet we have to admit that climb down buy off the peasants buy them off create a more rational distribution of resources through central planning but through through like a collaborative effort of a of a party that comes from the working class but introduce capitalism and by buy us back into the system as it exists so that the moment of crisis can come and we'll be better prepared for it instead of yoking ourselves to a monstrous project of hyper exploiting 0:34:8 the the uh the peasant class turning it into a proletariat at the cost of millions of lives which is what happens everywhere that capitalism is introduced but doing it under communist auspices wouldn't that be worth doing and they would say though maybe now it is if they if they ask themselves honestly they might have said that wouldn't be worth it but they made the choice that they made and we all had to fight the fight we had the war with the armies we had but the reason they got to that point is because they believed they were going to be a world revolution and there was god damn it there was going to be one in some universe there was one when the keel mutineers refused to let the ***** suicidal junker psychopaths these kraut samurai of the royal of the german high command sail the ***** baltic fleet out in a suicide mission to to be destroyed in honorable combat by the british navy doing a a massive seppuku they didn't want to do it because it wasn't their ***** 0:35:11 war and it started a a revolution that if it had been yoked to the project in russia could have created a a genuine conflict at a point of of fluidity with a capitalism that might have been disorganized enough and weakened enough to be challenged by it and why didn't it happen because in germany because that's one of the places that capitalism had developed first it's it's it's its flesh was most robust it its tendrils into the working class were the strongest and that meant when the moment came the majority of the german social democratic party both rank and file but definitely among the union and political leadership of the of the uh of the party itself were aligned with capitalism at a material level and so the fry core the the brain fried 0:36:14 uh death worshipping psychos who had been turned into orcs essentially by contact with industrial warfare were organized and let loose by the social democrats to stamp down the world revolution which was what anybody with eyes could see should have known was the moment the apocalyptic moment that marxism was and so the soviets challenged that it failed to meet after the uh end of the the world war after we failed to turn the world war into a class war after we offered a after they offered a truce with the united states and allowed them to build a world economic structure that they would be excluded from where the u.s dollar would be the reserve currency of earth where they would have to participate in capitalism in extraction of surplus value for the market in order to sustain themselves in the state competition system that they had agreed to after world war ii instead of extending uh the war into which you could argue is stalin's greatest crime is in that moment turning towards cowardly self-preservation and you could say he might have lost but we lost anyway here's the important thing to note we lost anyway and of course you can't blame these people for not having this the knowledge to know that at the time they did what they did because they didn't know but we have to recognize it now that is the whole point of history is to recognize in the now where our opportunities lie so that we because if stalin had built up that industrial behemoth turned that working turns the the clay that the potato sack of the russian peasantry into the beautiful uh uh twice baked potatoes of of the five-year plan in industrial russia allied with workers movements all throughout the world that were essentially appendages of them at that point and putting down the fascist beast in a climate before the before the creation of um like the the a bomb on a massive scale would have fully tipped the balance maybe you could fight but if you don't fight it my god what was it all for it was to save your ***** ass disgusting honestly disgusting stalin's greatest crime because all the other ones would have been redeemed if he'd made the right choice in that moment the choice that tito wanted to make which is the basis of tito's split with the warsaw pact is that when the um when the civil war in greece broke out and there was a real contest for power between the the greek partisan communists and the reactionary monarchists backed by the british stalin decided to trade greece for the iron curtain and tito said if you do that then this is all for nothing because we will not be able to contest capitalism in the context of the market on their terms they will eat us they will dissolve us and stalin because he was scared said we're done and of course you could say but they would have lost anyway you have to the blood on your hands has to compel you to something beyond your own disgusting self-preservation but anyway people are people and the system of a bolshevik party in power absent a world revolution was going to mean stalin was gonna a figure like stalin and by that i mean is the bolshevik party was a vanguard illegal party and this is the important part it was an illegal party that operated through the vast majority of its time as an illegal entity in russia where its leadership was largely uh exiled at either exiled internally to towns in siberia where they frequently escaped from or in exile in western capitals where its activities within russia were banned its newspapers were banned it operated as a criminal enterprise so that it could be at the moment seize power and they did it and they did it on the right context and i'll tell you right now lenin is the great genius of all time because lenin was right at every moment until he until but the thing is he died at the moment where we never had to find out we

died at the moment with lenin where but lenin was perfectly suited to seizing power with that going to war with the army he had he but his assumption that seizing power in russia was worth doing was premised on the idea that it would launch a world revolution it was all premised on that underlying assumption that trotsky had conceived of the permanent revolution that is what solved the riddle of how to move forward in a context where marxism couldn't really be applied to a system where there was no capitalist class to work against you had had capitalism brought in as a cargo cult by this uh this feudal ruling class that was been thrust into competition by capitalism and was frantically trying to keep up and that's the most important thing to remember is that none of these ruling parties none of the ruling classes of any of the european powers save maybe the dutch the ones who started it all wanted capitalism to triumph wanted things to change the way capitalism made them change wanted to move power away from central hierarchical authority and towards a ritual of social affirmation but they had to do it because they were in competition with each other and capitalism provided a superior mechanism for wielding state power by rationalizing the redistribution of resources of the state a way towards private profit and towards socially uh advantageous uh uh mechanisms of governance they did it because they had to the youngers of germany didn't want to ***** create capitalism do you think bismarck wanted to ***** legalize the socialists he had to do you think the tory weirdos of uh of england those those those wigged freaks out in their ***** chalets doing horrifying sex crimes to each other looking out on their fast acreages do you think that they really wanted to ***** be cheek to jowl with a bunch of uh of foreigners and jews in a city using little tokens to make fake fake value you think they wanted to do something as honorable as that as dishonorable as determining value in a way beyond honor and conquest on the battlefield no they had to because the french were doing it and the spanish were doing it and everybody was doing it and they were fueling it with the spoils of empire and conquest in the new world and the hyper exploitation at the point of the spear of imperial capitalism allowed them to distribute profits socially because capitalism gave them up look at russia the russian revolution was essentially preordained by the fact that the uh the absolutism of like feudal rule was so recently intact at the top of the social order in the form of the tsar that instead of facilitating capitalist development in russia like the royal houses of western europe were doing the ***** romanovs were sticking a goddamn uh they were shoving a stick into the because capitalism had been thrown up in the lap of the of of a medieval order meanwhile in england the the country that develops capitalism at the point of like the cerebrum where their royal family was literally brought in was essentially hired for the job of being the royal family of england by a a um by the emergent merchant class of england like the glorious revolution of 1688

CUSHVLOG 167. FUTURESUCK II

where the last vestiges of land-based rule in the form in the form of the stuart line the jacobite line the the catholic stewards of england was overthrown by the by the new emergent merchant class of england which had first overthrown the stewards before were unable to form a social basis around capitalism that early and therefore brought 0:46:33 the stewards back but once stuart absolutism reasserted itself they essentially fired their ceo and hired a new guy someone from the place where capitalism had been birthed in the modern era the ***** dutch lowlands by importing a constitutional monarch into the system with the understanding that his job was and so capitalism in england is presided over by this machine that is designed to lubricate the system a parliamentary system that just throws water onto the gears to keep it from smoking keeps the friction to a minimum by distributing rationally as much as it can in russia medieval absolutism shows up is forced by competition with europe to sustain capitalism to to indulge the whims of sergei vitta and peter stalin but at the end of 0:47:37 the day it has to reassert itself and and the effectlessness of of of uh nicholas where he goes back and forth between liberalizing and and and going reactionary it always has to be understood as him having a natural inclination towards reaction being forced by circumstances to give in but then putting the lid on as soon as he can until he can't anymore which is what happens when but in every other system in europe every other monarchy in europe there have been sufficient infusion of capitalism capitalism had been around long enough to infuse itself within the mechanisms of power that 0:48:38 those ruling classes could preside over a system that allowed so even the kaiser reich which was slow on the uptake bismarck genius of geniuses one of those 19th century geniuses like uh like marx honestly like some sort of a a revisionist marxist in in in the highest level of power you could like a guy who understands we need to keep civilization alive here because we cannot allow these two things this this uh this system of absolute power held by a small minority with capitalism ripping people towards the level of total sub sub submission to it of straight of which created social reaction that's the thing that matters is that as you create misery as you create proletarianization you create a reaction you create social formations alienated from the system willing to fight against it and capitalism cannot deal with that because 0:49:43 capitalism can only extract maximally within all classes who can do it by creating politics was able to look at the system and understand that there needed to be a rationalized buy-in of these workers if they were going to sustain the state project of the german empire and so that's why the uh one-two punch what did he do during during the 1880s what did bismarck do to the uh to the emergence of capitalism as a fully formed system that was going to be undergirding the the economies of all the european powers and was going to determine the the uh conditions of conflict between the states okay state state conflict had been the rule since westphalia but

now it's state conflict under the conditions of universally applicable capitalism what do you do every leader at the every level of power both private and public in the western world had to answer that question in about the 1880s and the answer was determined by where there were the technological the combination of technological uh efficiency and extraction of uh colonial plunder that allowed you to buy off the moment of of reckoning and allow you to compete now in the interstate conflict bismarck said what do we do we legalize the socialists we let them vote for socialists we left socialist serve we let them get essentially turned into bourgeois everybody at the every now that you you've you've validated the working class you've created new jobs for the working class that are no longer working class jobs in that they are no longer uh connected to the uh process of extraction of surplus value they are now there to facilitate capitalism and that's his cushy job you're you are no longer feeling you're of course still exploited with capitalism but it's now a mixed condition and you don't feel exploited you feel rewarded you feel that you are the beneficiary of alienation at a material level because you are and then you have to rationalize it one way or another but it is your condition now and that but you invested in capitalism it makes you invested in the perpetuation of a system that has allowed you to feel this comfort so now you believe not a conflict that will see you annihilated you believe in a conflict that will see you victorious over time because of how ***** smart virtuous you are and that's how the smart and virtuous rule leaders of the s uh dp by the time world war one rolls around vote for war credits and then when the crucial moment comes in 1918 they ***** bring fascism to life they perform a ***** dark ritual and bring the fry core into existence which will then be the the the needlepoint end of the spear of fascism that ends up cracking open the social ***** uh fabric of of germany and then and all of that is just a way to say that your system can compete in a in a multi-state westphalian conflict contest with other states under capitalism if it could distribute rationally at this at the center because of technological uh facility and uh some degree of like social cohesion and outside resources from the exploited half of the world and the exploited half of the equation both within the country and outside of it and so that means that the challenge of the khrushchev's after stalin ***** out at the moment of of truth and puts us on a conflict of uh of where we're assuming capitalism is the conditions then you have to create a consumer society you have to buy off your own working class because yes things were provided universally within germany russia in a way that they weren't the united states but comforts and pleasures of a consumer society were not there not in the same amounts the bounty wasn't there and it's because there were less there's less to ***** access you have a smaller based area than the capitalist west you have vastly less developed technological capacity you have vast

much less concentrated capital that can circulate within the system you have a lot of poverty and impoverishment and you have a lot of undeveloped areas that is still in uh the production of the production of uh agricultural surplus which has to be rationalized you have to rationalize the distribution of agricultural surplus first and foremost and so khrushchev is the challenge of how do we create plenty and therefore allow ourselves to compete with the west and they tried it with computers and read plenty is a great book about that uh and it's not it's fictionalized so it's really it's it's a very interesting format uh it just goes through the era and you see where there's a real attempt to marry planning with like technology with with uh algorithms and 0:54:51 stuff and it falls short in large part because the soviet leadership is too adhered to their own power to risk losing it by the machine making decisions that aren't to their benefit like they were too ossified as a ruling class and that's because they were the party that had taken power they were an outlaw party that operated as a criminal organization which meant once lenin died once the moscow made brought them to the promised land and they had to start fresh the person who was going to be closest to power and most able and to effectively exercise it in the conditions that they were presented with would be an only in amoral gangster psychopath in the conditions of a criminal organization ruling under conditions of total encirclement and attack first a civil war in an allied invasion and then full economic warfare after that and 0:55:53 then of course the ***** germans showing up and killing half the country those are the conditions that are creating that are forging the conflict within russia and that means anybody with any ***** uh social conscious any proletarian solidarity is gonna get ***** thrown away by the wayside they were going to be destroyed as were the dumb cynical people who couldn't just operate from uh from wiley uh planning the only ones who win are these cynical people who are also smart and that's stalin and he did a great job assuming the conditions he did which is all right now we're just going to be we're just going to care about this state existing and what's good for it is good for socialism and there's no more socialism outside of it in the rest 0:56:55 of the world so that ends up becoming the framework for the rest of the cold but the challenge of khrushchev the challenge to crucifix to build sufficient technological capacity for solving the price problem to distribute things to allow the soviet idea to to conquer because it is an idea the reality is capitalism the idea is socialism and it can only do that if it is pressed forward with an idealistic way but the soviets didn't do that they operated largely through realpolitik now not totally not like but they couldn't spread the idea after a while and that's because they were locked into preserving the party not preserving anything as transcendent as the idea of socialism but anything that happened in russia is not their fault it's germany's fault that is the 0:57:56 thing because germany was supposed to answer the call and they so once it was clear that the soviets weren't going to be able to answer the question in the 70s when the when the oil what happened in the 70s is that all of the urgency on any meaningful question of solving the contradiction of a consumer socialist society under restrained resources was solved by oil prices going up the big uh the big oil shock in the in in the 70s boosted the uh vastly boosted the soviet export economy and therefore allowed for this stagnation where the political crisis was bought off for the first time with the consumer uh the consumer glut that uh had been promised by khrushchev but 0:59:0 it wasn't because they'd actually solved the question of price and created efficiency there like they wanted to do like cybersin and chile wanted to do what before it was destroyed by pinochet one of the great disasters of our time uh is that they provided them with it black sea vacations for workers a ***** new washer dryer in a shitty car they actually were able to provide that for a little bit but of course the iron ironic thing is is that that oil shock they they thought that it was the solution to the problems of the soviet state it was actually dooming them because once that shock wave went all the way around the world it resulted in the full neoliberalization of world politics and the destruction of the soviet union because it is that oil shock that breaks the keynesian consensus at the top of capitalism in the united states and forces us to crack the whip in the political realm essentially to to to stop buying off and to start uh start you know enforcing austerity unevenly distributed towards the 1:0:3 bottom away from political power which is why the people at the center of the center of capitalism succeeded and and we're fine with it the homeowner class in the united states today by the time the crisis came they could they were bought off sufficiently that they're still republicans they're still the base of this reaction but first it came for the urban blacks like people think people talk about uh the the the collapse of the of the of the black community in the 70s and of course the conservative argument is that oh their their culture went to ***** uh thankfully because we got rid of uh segregation because they started commingling and living lewd and lasciviously they lost their community center because they lost their uh their segregated character that's the liberal that's the conservative argument for what happened what actually happened is that the the small black working black working to middle class that had 1:1:4 been established for the white working to middle class after the world after world war ii was actually taking hold they were actually starting to build some of it in the urban centers they were actually going to build some wealth build build uh infrastructure and a social reality there a fabric within capitalism but then that oil shock that resulted in the reorientation away from uh from the labor end of uh distribution of profit towards the ownership end that's going to un tip over the keynesian consensus into uh the final unraveling starts with the industrialization of the cities which means the people who move their most recently the black emigrates of the great migration period are the first to be uh just deprived by it and what we see in the 90s and arts and and the hillbilly elegy phenomenon of white people oh my god these white people they're acting black that's the big horror of the charles murray thesis is why are these white people acting like black people socially and it's like well no it's nothing it's nothing to do with culture it's nothing to do with brain shape or any of this ***** it's that the conditions of total admiseration in america uh the total proletarianization hit them first and now your social order is seeing the same disruptions the same pathologies emerge what a shock but it hits the bottom first it hits the bottom the poorest the poorest urban uh minorities then later uh the poorest rural whites rural and suburban whites they fall off the board and they stop and they they become the they are now are are the poor uh they're not as essentially as social they are as politically alienated basically as as as black people are like not quite but it's it's it's similar uh and then you have those remaining uh homeowners who got bought out after world war ii now it's shrinking the the the ring of protection is going away and their their expression of that alienation is this culture war because they are consumed by the same matrix the rest of us are and they cannot express their politics in class terms because they don't live them and they don't believe themselves to exist in in those categories those aren't uh defined to them with meaning what means things to them are questions of race culture nationalism and therefore their politics reflect that so that's that's the conflict we're seeing now that is that's all we have instead of politics and that's why our only hope is the reemergence around labor of first resistance first strike culture and then political culture coming out of strike culture that's going to be it is going to be the the the conflicts these sparks lit in labor fight conflict like not the cultural con cultural realm of politics that'll come later and it's going to also be going on at the local level now to seed bed because remember all big changes all big shifts politically are driven at the base by the ferment of class conflict but they are like those torrents are moved through uh tributaries defined first by culture by politics by formal conflict by ideal conflict because the people carrying out the people creating these social forms that we live are all outside of class conflict there's they're not living class conflict they're living there there's the fabricated conflict that and so their culture reflects that and of course the real the real tragedy of the moment and this is why i said read plenty instead of ministry for the future and why i think ministry fear of the future is a book that has similar questions on its mind uh is that the the question the the the dilemma that failed the soviet experiment that failed actual existing socialism in the 20th century has been solved to a large enough extent to guide humanity away from total annihilation towards the continuation of like a social conflict a social project because cap the tribe of capitalism equals the annihilation of the social that is i think that is that's a math i would write that on a board if i knew how math worked because it is total admission at the bottom which means a smaller and smaller percentage at the top protected by technology until there aren't any left until they're destroyed mutually somehow maybe a few of them escape into the singularity and they win that is 1:6:12 the axiomatic endpoint of capitalism socialism could technologically given that if we have the existing given the existing level of technology that we have a rational distribution of resources in which capitalism the end the profit motive has been extinguished from the machinery the machine that capitalism built its software its programming around capital around profit accumulation around surplus extraction has been uh removed has been bleached out of the system and then you boot in a new ***** software protocol towards rationalized technologically facilitated distribution of resources within the system we have the sufficient concentration of capital now 1:7:13 to do that i think that is the fundamental argument of the book ministry for the future i'm not going to talk about it too much today because i kind of went on a tangent i'll follow up more on this tomorrow but suffice to say for the moment that i think that question has been answered and the book ministry for the future is largely about making the case that that's that's true and i think that is why the book has basically nothing to say about how this thing would happen how this machinery would be seized by the working class of the world in any meaningful definition of that term that is left pretty much unexplained marginal it is it is turned into like a voice it's turned into a feeling it's turned into an experience rather than a description and that's because that answer the question cannot be answered no it's the same 1:8:15 reason marx couldn't know the capitalism was going to defeat the the conflict that he saw within it technologically he didn't know that was going to happen because that was the x factor we're in a new world with new x factors so the thing you can't know is what is going to move this thing at a grand level all you can do is know what to do in the moment and this book is essentially kim stanley robinson saying imagine you're in the moment when it matters imagine when you're in the moment where you can feel like what the right thing to do is and instead of rationalizing your way around doing it you do it imagine every moment of your life where that counts and you make the right choice the choice that's against maybe your best interest because you're blackpilled because you've decided that nothing matters but you that there's no point in fighting anything truly that politics really is just a moral costume that you put on to validate your position and that's been rule that's that more or less has 1:9:17 been what has ruled us all through our lives now it doesn't rule us all all the time but it rules most of us most of the time and honestly any any like the arc of uh history that that uh martin luther king talks about that arc is defined by people pulling against that but the thing is they don't do it uniformly they do it one by one but

then if the right chain reaction is triggered by action then in punches and then you can actually see the hand of god but those moments are only retroact retrospectively understandable as such in the moment there's still contingency decisions that we have to make instinctively and what drives us is an emotional thing it's not a it's not a reasoned thing and so we will be driven and the question is is that emotion tied to our self-interest our narrow belief in ourself or to a greater belief in others in the world in reality in love to be incredibly cheesy about it in meaning beyond words and beyond sensation because if the world can be defined by sensation then words like love don't mean anything emotions are essentially alien they're basically random and all you can do is pursue the most predictable ones the most selfish ones the most indulgent ones because they're the most sure the other ones require belief they require you to be able to get in your head and imagine something and have that thinking give you a feeling that only comes from experience and by adhering meanings branding them with meaning through words through words and symbols and so if we're going to win humanity is going to win this thing which is a big if i don't think i don't like our odds but because we're here there's a chance there's always a chance definitionally because remember this these this moment is always there the moment to choose love is always there so you can't know and so the book really does leave that what's left is the skeleton of stuff and that makes it very unsatisfying obviously but it does i think still mean that it is a useful contribution to literature because for the people who are more inclined more inclined towards believing that emotions don't have any kind of uh uh effect on reality that reality is essentially knowable and that emotions do not form its reality that we don't essentially make reality emotionally and that is that is the rational delusion the fact is is that all beliefs all understanding the world arrives from emotion first and foremost emotion is what defines all everything else it comes in every sense after in the temporal sense and that it comes it is a response to feeling it's the response to bodily and sensorial and pre-verbal emotion you have the feeling before you can put a word to it which means rationalism is always going to miss that part of the world that is composed of pure feeling but that is made by our rational perception of the world that is the dialectical tension between the two and if you have to have a faith in that to act and if you do you will find the moments to act and if enough of us do and the right and we hit seven enough times on the ***** uh on the craps table of of the universe and the right hand falls the right way we can do it and this book is there to give the more rationally minded a little bit of faith in that because here is the what we could do if it was possible there's a different energy in you know rushing at a cockpit like flight 93 style if you've got a pilot on the plane who you know could land it you have like you you think about it longer you plan more ahead you coordinate your actions better because your fear

has been overwhelmed by your belief in your future if you work together you don't have a ***** pilot and the pilots are dead and there's these guys aiming the plane 747 you'll fight for yourself we know that and unless that didn't happen who knows 1:14:27 like i believe that's a possible result i believe if people knew that the plane was been hijacked they might do it if not to just sit there because they'd be driven there by fear but they'd be driven there purely by fear by angel animal fear untethered to reason because why they wouldn't really have any reason to believe that they'd actually survive and and uh an understanding of this dynamic reading history through this lens seeing this dynamic play out throughout history and in the world around us applying that dialectical lens itself us it soothes our fear and allows us to see the world through more clear eyes because we are not being ever so momentarily made anxious by the bleeping alarm sound the knowledge that we're on a ***** flight 93 1:15:28 with no you have that knowledge tethered to some transcendent understanding of the world some transcendent understanding of and so that is why i can't really ever it's why i really sympathize with robinson reading this book because i feel like with a lot of these talks that i'm doing and a lot of my my like i guess you'd call it artistic project pretentiously of my career insanely you could call it has been to give voice to that understanding that dialectical fixedness that explanatory framework because it can soothe fear a little bit it can give you reason to believe that there's a possibility 1:16:30 that there are machinery we can grasp if we can push ourselves out of the matrix together there's machinery yeah my throat is getting a little i should wrap it up though it's been so i'll talk more specifically about the book tomorrow but for today just that's a long way of talking about it's interesting to study history politics in the contemporary sense it's interesting to apply the historical materialist heuristic to the culture that we consume because it can make us fitter actors in the world history can make us sharper it can make us less fearful more uh more truly virtuous 1:17:32 i mean i hate to be pretentious and sound like a like a ***** greco-roman but like apply virtue to our public life which is a real thing that we really deal with because the left that we have created online i'm sorry is the left defined by capitalism is the left of defined at the base level by the equation of your self-interest with the left's self-interest the idea that if i prosper materially that's good for everybody which is the same delusion that powers capitalists rising tidal it's all boats if i'm in the arena posting or if i'm doing my job at my podcast or i'm doing volunteering for the dsa or i'm voting the right way then i am essentially earning my spot in the human tugboat of virtue because remember you're still doing lifeboat ethics from within capitalism without even knowing it because as i said this is a culture created and 1:18:35 reinforced by the reality of and so that is the only way that i can think of to take the fundamental contradiction that my job is to with the fact that i my goal now is to uh it's disenchant people from that you know the howard beale thing like how do you do that is that not a fundamental contradiction and it is but it's one that can be transcended by belief by belief i will keep doing this to the and i will continue to feel good about doing it that's the important part i will feel fulfilled i will feel centered i won't feel anxious i won't feel guilty i will not feel neurotic i will feel kind of at peace the degree to which i do what i think of earnestly is a good job of making the case 1:19:36 to disengage not at the level of discrete content consumption because everyone now is a cyborg no one can log off because our understandings of ourselves are embedded in these matrices merely a question of emphasis and mindfulness to be pretentious about it and and and and uh and yoga pant mom about it and so i can only feel good about doing this about spending my time doing this if i could feel that it is contributing to that and that means that i have to be doing stuff that i believe in and so i find that that's usually the case when i'm like doing these like i feel very on the beam i feel like this is good stuff but it really is when i try to write when i try to abstract in the cold in without the like the the light on me when i try to fill in the gaps i find that that's when doubt starts creeping in and that is really because i have no doubt that what i'm saying now is is correct but it is the specific language of 1:20:38 reinforcement that i'm less confident of because i'm not that talented because these are different abilities born by different neural pathways that have been reinforced over time that are now largely fixed because your neural elasticity stops around 25 like the brain you have at 25 it's going to develop over time and change but its basic structures are basically fixed you're going to have essentially the same amount of capacity to to add neurons as as you did at 25. so i'm pretty much fixed there so that means when i sit down and have to like in front of a thing then self-interest in the form of do something that's more engaging and pleasurable because it's less anxiety producing like post or watch a movie since you can't do that why wouldn't you little 1:21:41 gremlin the demon on my shoulder and so that means i'm less productive and then that creates a cycle of uh of self-doubt and uh self-loathing and recrimination and fear that then pull me towards indulging uh and not doing the work that i got to do and so that is the dynamic i'm working with and what i've come to terms with and i think it's like kind of me um hopefully making a breakthrough is that this is not a conflict that i can resolve this is the conflict that drives the whole project atom this is the split atom at the center of the reactor because like that state that those states of of of of contentment and tranquility they uh what interrupts them is intrusions of 1:22:42 of the selfish desire and so they're going to pull you away from that unless you can and so you balance the two because if you do it for too long then then eventually you know you're not uh unless you've reached a level of spiritual attainment that i'm not at yet you get pulled in that direction devil the devil gets louder in your ear but the uh fundamental conflict the manatee and delusion of christianity is that that can be resolved one way or the other and that's what powers are deformed politics are are the cycle of indulgence and puritan abstainiousness that drives our culture it's because we think we can stamp it out we have to embrace it we have to let let those atoms spin around that nothingness at the center and then power our machinery of life and your challenge is to be aware of that condition so that your actions are driven by a felt belief that what you should be doing is what's good for everybody else because that'll drive you towards good work in every sense it'll drive you towards doing your job earnestly and well to your best abilities but also doing service in the community helping people helping friends helping strangers operating out of a felt sense of universal love that is maintained by a rational understanding of what you should be doing in a moment and that's where that the the uh the they live glasses of historical uh somebody says um just to wrap up here because this is a good this is a good capstone somebody says is this like in 1984 when winston says that he believes in the end the party will lose yes because uh orwell was only talking about the soviet union like there's there is no universal application of uh of his vision of dystopia which is why it's aged so poorly and why it's so irrelevant to the current moment or any moment frankly it's because he was so fixated from capitalism from the bosom of capitalism with uh with defeating the soviet union and you could argue he had good reason to because by that point it was a snarling beast it was this whipped dog it was this this self-interested brutalized traumatized uh halfling trying to survive in the wilderness you should still have fought for it pro if you're on the capitalist side you should probably still have fought for it in the way that you could have and he didn't for whatever reason he didn't and i honestly don't blame him too much because the seeing seeing uh barcelona in 1937 uh when the when this the communists crack down on the anarchists uh being on the anarchist side it's hard not to take that personally i can imagine but so he's assuming this condition of scarcity this condition where you have a party that is actually rationally distributing but in a context of complete scarcity and that might have happened if the soviets had somehow beaten the united states in the market in the market conflict or like one ex one maybe one a nuclear war i guess that's what could have happened the soviets had won a nuclear war that might have been how the future goes but if you assume that capitalism is going to win which you should if you're in the west and that that would be a bad thing which you have to you have to assume that the triumph of capitalism will be a bad thing then you have to imagine what that would look like and then you have the other guy the opposite of orwell aldous huxley whose brave new world supposes what if capitalism wins but on its own terms capitalism is able to reach a level of that eludes the question of impulse that obviates the necessity for

exploited people that obviates the necessity for any and since that book also has a nuclear war in it you can kind of imagine that those two books are two visions of the future after a nuclear war one where the soviets win 1984 one where the united states wins but also from within capitalism so that assumes that it can sustain itself it assumes that it's a stable world and it assumes that stability through technological innovation yes there is still need for a physical labor at the human level but we have sufficient technological capacity to create humans designed to work that way without feeling exploited literally changing humanity technologically and that is always the understanding of capitalism every utopia and dystopia of capitalism is premised on its ability to technologically overcome its own contradictions because capitalism can only technologically overcome its own contradictions over time as it is comp and so you have to ask yourself if you're a capitalist first of all if you win your best case scenario is a brave new there is a kind of a ritual jungle orgy people live for eternal youth they fixate on youth and then they just die they just snap dead uh around age 60. they don't have to worry about seeing people get old they don't have to worry about dealing with uh age or time they get to live in a delusional fantastic now until the moment they essentially get assassinated it's like hey what if capitalism was you get to eat drink and be merry and then you shoot you in the head when you're 60. that's a way to solve the question of uh inputs right like okay we don't have to worry about us outstripping resources because we're culling the population but they don't mind because they're having such a good time that's your best case scenario under capitalism so if you believe in capitalism and you also are a believer in any kind of uh like traditional reality some traditional masculinity any of that stuff no not going to happen you're probably going to be an upsilon semi-moron and then you're going to get to watch all the ***** uh alphas just ***** suck until they get thrown into a meat grinder now you're forgetting i said 60 but part of the technology they have is that they extend vitality so that people aren't feeling aging they feel you feel like you're like you're in your 20s or 30s until 60. and you look that way too that's the so you got to say if you like capitalism that's your best case scenario but here's the important thing that will never happen because we are now at the point where we see the inputs capacity do we have it do we have the technological capacity to rationalize human production yes not without bumps not without conflict not without violence not without mass death but mass death was going to happen anyway we're talking handleable mass death george c scott i'm not saying we won't get our hair must mass death the alternative is mega death with a few people left in their bubble sucking and ***** for eternity until something breaks in their equilibrium and then they are eliminated and annihilated or they all become computer programs but then the computer program will end and that moment will be eternal the moment that will

hope everyone is ready for this i hope everybody is prepared to get nothing else from these ***** people after spending the first two months of these people's ***** uh administration going oh my god it might maybe they are fdr all over again because they just cut a check that by that trump would have cut i think i i honestly feel like everyone has been sort of uh negligent including myself in pointing out during that whole ***** argument about like how radical this was how much of a departure from neoliberalism or obama it was that those checks would have gotten cut by trump if he'd want they're the same checks that trump already cut before the checks that would have been bigger if the democrats had not interfered with them now i don't know if anybody remembers this uh because it's time to move you know the news moves at the speed of of light now but nancy pelosi sandbagged a deal that would have delivered checks and relief before the 2020 election this needs to be stressed she admitted it and the logic was very simple a big check before the election guarantees that trump will win and the thing is she might have been and so everybody who is rooting against trump and that includes leftists who hate democrats have to ask themselves uh was doing that on behalf of a biden presidency was that worth the extra suffering that happened the deaths let's not ***** put too fine a point on it people died because those checks were late i don't does anyone deny that could anybody because the idea that uh austerity and lapses in uh uh like redistribution of income to where to where it's needed as opposed to where it's accumulated like that active redistribution of income uh saves lives and that the loss of it loses it like how many thousands of people has uh have has the labor party accurately or at least the corbonite labor party accurately how many people uh were estimated to have died because of the brutal austerity that britain did after after the uh economic collapse much more austere than america i mean obviously obama didn't do a lot and obama uh codified you know the mass theft of homes through through the dispossession of the people who were the victims not the perpetrators of the financial uh but in terms of just redistribution there was stimulus the brits did no stimulus because they had a bigger welfare state to start with they just started cutting it and hundreds of thousands of people are claimed and were claimed by the labor by the corbyn's labor to have been killed by austerity and i think that logic holds people are on a knife's edge in countries like this where you are disciplined with poverty with uh not just like deprivation but inability to support your own life because you can't go out into the ***** woods you can't sustain yourself you don't have the skills you don't have the access to land to subsist you're at the mercy of the market if the market doesn't have something for you to do that it wants to enumerate you with money for that you have no alternative but to actually fall towards being kicked out of the system being turned into a post-apocalyptic subject like we talked about about how the apocalypse is here like you could have been kicked out of early early uh capitalist systems and fallen out of urban environments uh in in like the medieval era but the possibility of subsistence existed like skills existed it would have been dangerous and you probably would have died but there would have been at least a idea of viability of a lifestyle to be kicked out of the market now with no skills no access to land this 0:9:19 is to be a post-apocalyptic subject this is to be somebody living in the aftermath of the climate collapse we're all terrified of or the nuclear war that the ***** uh that the cold war was supposed to result in any of those apocalypses the survivors are live they the lives that you fear uh happening to your kids or to yourself when you're older are happening right now to people who have fallen out of the market relationship and that means that the things that sustain you immediately go away like access to medical care access to basic nutrition uh access to housing and the inherent uh stability provided by that so people are on a knife's edge at all times in this country more money means people are more stable less likely to be pushed overboard into an overdose into some sort of reckless uh act that causes injury or death uh into not being able to deal with a medical condition or getting one imposed 0:10:20 on you by your exposure to the elements without being able to sustain yourself so we have to say that happened to people because of the tactical decision of pelosi and the democrats not to make a deal now you have to ask yourself when you try to condemn that because i saw a lot of lefting left-wing people condemning pelosi for doing that before the election but these were the same left-wing people who had said either to themselves or publicly that as bad as the democrats are it was important that trump loses that they were hoping but biden won that they voted for biden that they were invested in a biden victory if that's the case then i'm sorry nancy pelosi did the right thing she sacrificed those people to get the democrats in now if the bill that the republicans passed in uh the face of that resistance and only after they 0:11:24 lost the election would probably would have would have definitely passed before the election without the democrats and would probably have passed in a similar form to the way it passed after the election now maybe not as big because you know now they don't have to get reelected but the momentum and trump's position on that and investment in it i think would have gotten something done and also just let's not forget the need to provide some sort of keynesian stimulus at the demand level just to keep the wheels moving like they blew through they blow in the pinwheel as much as they think they need to keep it going and that would have been necessitated there at the bottom of that point it might not have been as big but it would have been similar i think and so we got a trump size a late trump size recovery bailout for the people we got money into the system at the point of uh of paychecks and if we don't get anything else then what was the point of all that suffering that was caused which by 0:12:25

the way also does long-term damage to the brand of the democrats and the ability of the democrats to actually be a vessel for positive change which is the implicit under assumption that under right but that does it's not blame anybody for wanting biden to win i wanted biden to win because i was sick of the whole ***** thing like that it was everything the language everything was getting too ratcheted up the emotional ***** tenor relative to the material conditions which meant that it wasn't going to snap towards some sort of popular revolt it was going to snap towards some sort of uh just to further ratcheting up into oblivion i mean if it the snap might come like 0:13:27 later but in the near term is just hearing this persistent din just and as a guy who's doing a show i just was sick of talking about the concept of him being president it was it had reached to for me it's and i honestly do believe especially and i said this before the election i predict i will say i'm not a very good at predicting things and i've owned that now finally but one thing i do say that uh i predicted accurately is when i said before the election that if biden won it's it was going to be because people just wanted to turn the volume down on the tv a little bit that only that not a smaller percentage of people were interested in some sort of political ragnarok some sort of genuine confrontation they weren't ready for it because things were too good for them and when you look at what won the election for biden who voted for him it's clear that that's what happened we are of course in a situation where people are more precarious than ever in america we are seeing a political breakdown 0:14:28 caused by the nervous breakdown of the the white yeoman the white or not or of the middle class american like yeoman who had been bought off since the ***** uh first expropriation of native lands to now uh and now the buying off is going away and so precarity is being felt but the people who are feeling that least in the electorate white suburban college educated people are the ones who shifted in the largest numbers trump saw his percentage and share and raw number of votes among uh more about people who did not make did not go to college go up significantly and is and he did gain in working class uh latino households he gained big time along the rio grande which is a heavily latino uh area uh he even made small inroads in in because for the people for whom this is aesthetic for whom they don't really want to 0:15:31 see anything really change in the system there is no appetite for this sort of political confrontation that trump's persistence in office would have necessitated the same way that the persistence of uh sectoria sectoral political uh emotion is what tipped the balance towards civil war in the 1860s because the civil war in it was not uh was not the product of an economic crisis that needs to be remembered it preceded a fundamental crisis between the two modes of production at that point there was still a a relatively smooth machinery connecting southern plantain plantation slavery to northern finance and uh like the uh the looms of manchester were kept moving with 0:16:34

southern cotton that was moved through northern finance comp uh financiers that that that that got the ***** they they northern money northern merchant money moved this the ***** the cotton to new york and then got it to manchester it worked but there were contradictions within it that were going to reach a critical point at a critical uh material point at the point when the uh accumulation of entropy in the system exceeds uh the technological and social advances that uh that ameliorate that um that entropy but we hadn't reached that point yet and right now the thing militating against all language of civil conflict and collapse is the remaining cargo that we're all fighting over right now because america still is in terms of its standard 0:17:35 of consumption and living uh comfortable they have achieved to a greater degree than almost anybody in human in the in the human family right now the dream that the collective dream that we are all uh imprisoned by now now the capitalism is a world system there can now only be one view of heaven there can only be one view of the world as it should be sought there can be only one understanding of the cosmos one vision of happiness vision of heaven vision of peace and that is where one in which all uh all difficulty is amused by convenience all difficulty in life is ameliorated by and of course convenience is bought at the cost of massive exploitation of all 0:18:36 living resources humans of course but even as technology uh uh replaces human uh inputs into the system that exacerbates the uh the exploitation and oppression of the ***** biome that is and sheer waste of course you people saw the video of them smashing new laptops and phones in a in a british imagine the human misery that goes into the production of one of those ***** you guys probably are aware of this if you're on here if you're on here trying to exercise the political ghost from your body if you're if you're watching this stream you know what goes into your small 0:19:38 your smartphones and your laptops in terms of what physically goes into them sure there's they're manufactured in the end state in factories in asia which are you know essentially modern sweatshops sure but far more horrifying than that is that there are precious metals uh that can only be uh accessed uh in regions of the world that are the the the end point of colonial plunder the the end extraction point the the civil the contours of the cold war i would say the the the whole wars of the 20th century the the conflict between capital uh and humanity that defined the 20th century and 0:20:40 was won by capital the civil the second the the second world war and then cold war eras was a as a civil war amongst humanity over who was going to be eating ***** for the next hundred years what way the human centipede of progress was going to be pointed and the winner was the people who weaponize capitalism into a uh into a national a tool of domination of other systems of economic uh life other systems of social life uh it was the it was as nile saver ferguson called it in one of his dumb books the killer app like the stuff that created modern capitalism the soil the capitalism was built in which was a medium state con medium state conflict in a context of 0:21:42 technological innovation and restrained in christ uh and a restraint of resources and and dis and uh flows of like uh trade and stuff the ferment of early modern europe and renaissance europe especially after the ***** black death which had come along to wipe away all of the contradictions that had been accumulated by feudalism because feudalism had reached i think i don't think not enough of is made of this is that the point that um the black death hit europe feudalism had reached its terminal and its terminal point of uh of contra of internal contradiction it had become completely uh frozen it could not respond to conditions uh you had uh in pre-plague europe you had this malthusiasm malthusian pressure uh of of population growth you had uh 0:22:43 deflation of the currency you had a a breakdown of trade networks you had uh a liquidity crisis essentially there was no way to facilitate trade and uh that's because the social forums were un uh not amenable to what capitalism necessitated which was the introduction of relationships of estrangement of social estrangement that were not conceivable by the feudal world because the feudal world necessitated these social bonds the thing that kept so feudalism together was not authoritarianism from the top there was not enough technologically exertable power at the top of feudalism to do that nobody had enough power to assert their will individually it was a bunch of people with swords with sticks what they had was social technology that is the bonds of family clan religion that gave people a investment in the outcome of the 0:23:46 social project even if they were getting ***** by it even if they were serfs the thing that kept them from rebelling and of course some of them would and when conditions got worse in parts of europe some of them would rebel and you'd have a peasants revolt you'd have a bunch of people massacred but it those are the punctuations that move you forward uh to resolve your uh to resolve the political problems inherent uh in your mode of production but by uh by the the eve of the black death europe was completely stagnated feudalism had reached its terminal crisis and that's when malthus intervened in the form of the black death now the flip side of this and the reason that malthus is not an a complete description of reality and why it is almost always pointless to bring up malthus is that malthus did not take into account that 0:24:47 technological response to crisis that a civilization as opposed to just a bunch of wild animals can come up with things like the green revolution uh things like ***** uh antibiotics for a while i mean eventually they'd all work but you know in a near term they do get they they fix some of these malthusian questions but there was no sufficient uh technology that had been you know uh brought to bear at least in europe by the developments of uh slave society and then feudalism that had happened up until that point to accommodate this crisis so it was solved by malthus and in the form of the black death 50 of the population gone social ***** bonds were literally uprooted by the hand of god and the people who were left were in a condition where land was much more bountiful labor was much scarcer which meant that the deal that the peasants could strike for their labor became destabilizing to the author to the rule peasants who could have access to land independent of your ability to coerce them which existed after the black death necessitated a change in social relationships it necessitated a new uh the ability to coerce outside of social bonds outside of like a religious understanding something estranged to a market mechanism that transcends all human relationships and that be and so that system wasn't going to sustain itself if it had persisted what would have happened is that the uh the ruling class would have been explored by the peasantry because the numbers game would have kicked in and eventually they would have said what the ***** do we need you for our self-organizing like urban and rural communes are using the uh mutual aid networks that were implicit and inherent and unspoken in a bonded social order that feudalism represented we can just uh imagine manage this ***** ourselves what the ***** do we need you ***** in your ***** uh uh uh fancy frilly outfits and your castles oh it's because so you guys can all fight it out over control we never have so what happened is that the ruling class the ruling the ruling feudal elite to protect their near-term interests destroyed their long-term interests because short-termism is the endemic vocabulary of of uh of a crisis there is no long-term so you only think short-term and that's what the feudal lords did and they they they sustained uh and they allowed for the creation of this merchant culture in the cities protestantism was like ***** gasoline on the fire of that they let this happen because they were in a contest for power with other powers and by that point you had stable states a stable state system especially after west failure at the end of the 30 years war that creates a situation where all right you have fixed environments now you're going to compete over resources there is no superseding authority god and the only way to win that fight is to be more efficient and the only way to be more efficient is to replace the uh the the the local and the temporally fixed social uh life and imagination and culture and economy of the feudal order and replace it with a de-personalized alienated fish uh uh rep uh symbolic economy you take the rule that was that persisted in the in the symbols of religion the cross the and replace it with the symbol of currency of exchange and that is the transition you kill god and replace it with the market because the market becomes the thing we all actually worship it's the only thing that actually motivates us and it is unlike god totally alienated from man as it has to be to facilitate this level of exploitation the level of exploitation that would allow you to say to get back to the ***** laptops they destroyed in england that the horrifying spear point exploitation that is no different than primitive accumulation under in the iron age of putting guns to people's neck and making them dig ***** metal out of the ground the same way that slaves did 2000 year tradition technology and culture 0:29:56 and refinement and all the better angels that steve pinker talks about none of them exists there there's been no progress because that point of maximal exploitation has never been alleviated but that that happens so abstracted from us the levels of responsibility are so far from us our sense of responsibility as beneficiaries within a system that pulls that ***** out of the ground in africa through the accumulated hyper-exploited slave misery of people that pain goes into that work that labor the labor that has to be slave labor because you there is not enough money you could pay someone to have them do it and they have to do it that way to make it profitable to do otherwise you have to use uh technology and technology costs money as long 0:30:57 as you can buy human labor at the work at the price of somebody holding a gun and not somebody actually doing the work because you can pay somebody a hell of a lot less to stand around with a gun then you would have to pay somebody to go into a hole and dig out the ***** earth that no one would no one would think of destroying a ***** computer that was produced by that kind of lit horror if they felt it all responsible for it and at no point of the system that allows for that thing to be made and then smashed has anyone had had to interact with it if they were in the ***** pit with the person if they were watching they would have to come to terms with it they would either become the guy with the gun or they would fight on behalf of the person being forced you would have to do one or the other if you sat 0:31:59 there next to that long enough you would have to do one or the other but the reason that this thing is going to kill the earth is because every scream is going unheard the scream of the earth the scream of the ***** trees the scream of the animals the scream of the ***** air the scream of the oceans the scream of every person who is being mutilated spiritually and physically to service this ***** thing are all unheard because there is no one who is there in the room to hear them the person in the room hearing that the guy holding the gun in that room he's got bigger ***** problems man his choices are being at this end or being at the other end and when you have that choice of course but you comfortable beneficiary of this product you you don't have that relationship to that moment you've been civilized your distance 0:33:0 from violence and exploitation your distance from power and it's and the exercise of power has made it so that you get to enjoy the benefits of these things without considering the cost and the system continues producing these outcomes the ***** poisoning and acidification of the ocean the destruction of the ***** biome the mass miseration of the human population spiritually and physically the reduction of the ***** uh carrying capacity of earth through mass through uh none of those are being counted no one is thinking about them when they make a decision because that is on somebody else because like i said when you're in the room with the most powerful people in the world there's one person in the room like elijah sitting at the edge of the table who isn't actually there and that is capital and what that means is that you abdicate within capitalism all responsibility to capitalism which means capital is responsible for all of it which means hey if i benefit from my relationship 0:34:2 to this system and i get to sup at the at its teeth i get to uh live life where i don't have to dig for my existence where i don't have to provide alienating painful labor or i don't have to spend time in my body uncomfortably i can do that but then i don't **Music playing** but i don't have to extract it directly from somebody else oh my god who wouldn't take that deal because it's their it's the fault of the the of the market the market's making us do this and that's what libertarians mean when they say that that's what liberty means because they are spiritually dead but they've been they have been spiritually lobotomized by capitalism they recognize a situation where because capitalism does at the end of the day enforce itself on people people do not exert their force on it therefore freedom cannot be possible 0:35:4 under capitalism uh libertarians basically say yes but you can create a system where some people we're all you can create a situation where culturally all of the people who are benefiting from us thanks to technology all of the people who are benefiting from the dividing of earth into two spheres exploiters and exploited where the misery of the one becomes more and more and the luxury and decadence the other becomes more and more you can make a situation where the political concept of a human person only applies to people who benefit from and that is a situation where yes you're pursuing maximal liberty because the people who will be ground the people are going to be ground into dog food by the system by the division of people into the exploiter in the exploited class they don't count they're not really supposed to 0:36:6 be here they have failed in the meritocratic contest of the market and really that is what all strains of liberalism broadly defined meaning conservatism meaning fascism yes meeting fascism meaning uh left liberalism as we understand it like the the the vocabulary of the left online and in culture of social liberalism girded to capitalism all of them have the same logic which is that you're going to in the future create a situation where there is maximal hyper exploitation in your face on the very other side of maximal decadence and it's going to be enforced by a regime of technology and market relationships and that that is going to be it and you don't have to actually do the exploiting but you have to watch the machines will do the exploiting you have to watch and if you're okay with it if you feel okay with it and 0:37:8 you've created a situation where everybody feels okay with it then you have created a system of maximal personal liberty the anarchist uh dream the anarchist dream uh the libertarian dream the dream of fully luxurated uh fully automated luxury whatever you want to call it communism heaven on earth everyone free everyone free from market coercion everybody able to exercise their own uh desires in life free of any friction why because friction has been taken up by everybody outside the bubble but you have to be okay with it and that's what libertarianism strives to do create a system where the people who count as people don't care they think it's good they think it's the world working itself out as it should be the left alternative to this and it's the only one the bar it's the socialism to that barbarism is uh the competing argument that we can get to that point we can get to that point where we're all free in a way that everybody living in the system would understand themselves to be free free to live free to explore ourselves in our time and life free of the friction of the coercion because of the provision of of a bounty now is that possible in the near term hell no not even the medium term but as like a long term like the way kim stanley robinson imagines it or even longer it's certainly possible but it would have its basis in a political movement that overthrows this notion and replaces it with a bedrock human as in believed in with the power of religion to counteract the belief that is the to the power of uh metaphysical in money that currently rules a counter-hegemonic value system because it's spiritual we talk about how it's it uh capitalism is has killed god it has replaced god it is spiritual people fight for capitalism with the with their spirit as much as ***** they believe what they're doing now ***** right now they don't have to do much but kind of watch everything because the system is running technologically and technocratically but that's going to change with time as conditions deteriorate and the the violence is going to get more on our face it's going to be harder to look away from and we're going to have to decide whether to be participants uh and which side we're going to be participants on and what's going to motivate people to pick the side of capital even though they think it's race or they think it's uh uh they think that it's religion because they're all evangelical ***** christians rational they think that it's logical it's all it's a holy war it's a holy war on behalf of capital where where there is no human community humanity doesn't exist i am the only thing that exists we are all competing gods without any ability to uh humble oneself in front of the other for fear of being destroyed because the social uh the the metaphysical connection does not transcend our separateness that's the underlying assumption and it is a religious one because it's not scientific it's not rational it is religious it was created by capitalism it is forged from capitalism and it will be not defeated from within like all like i say this is why we have to disengage emotionally if we can't uh uh otherwise from the meaning behind our current culture war there is no way to fight this war and be on a side uh helpfully you can try to convince yourself yes these specific issues are are a distraction but you have used to have to use the opportunity to like critically like popular front critically support and i'm not saying it's like gonna hurt anything to do it that it's just gonna make you

it's harder for you to do anything that matters because what you are doing is by feeding this thing on any side of it and that means if you're doing like critical support for uh you know we need to talk we need to support critical race theory right now because it's under attack from these uh anti-democratic white supremacists we have to talk about this stuff all the time or if you're saying we need to fight them we need to we need to purge we need to expose the fake corporate global homo left uh and their adherence to this cynical culture war so that they can so that we can reassert class politics you're not reasserting class politics you're reaffirming the general brand of petty bourgeois reaction that's all that you're doing those are the two sides and you're just providing uh you're providing the the actual content that makes up this spectacle uh to replace the actual energy being itself um oh man this was supposed to be a chill one how about join an anti-imperialist anti-racist organization go for it i don't i would never begrudge anybody any active thing that they want to do because i'm not in their position i don't know i have nothing i have no actual uh advice that i would feel comfortable giving on any question of what someone should do in their life to contribute to their political identity because it's not my life i've i thought about this today i was i was thinking about how one of the real problems one of the real difficulties in trying to create a a cultural uh uh force around like explicit left social critique left politics is that because we have replaced our individual social lives with this sort of uh transcendent public space that includes like the entire country in some respect some percentage or another even though it's of course wildly distorted to be urban and like young and professional like that's that's the that's the demographic of the people who are doing most of this tweeting the people who make up the culture of it that's and that's because that's who makes that's who generates the bulk of consumption of all culture is that what more well off one way or the other uh and the younger of the two like if you want to break down demographics as those two uh axes younger and wealthier that is who is traditionally the uh the audience for entertainment now that entertainment used to be largely the product of a centralized professional process hollywood movies television networks then then cable that kind of stuff books published by authors things that people watched now thanks to changes in technology thanks to change in social relationships we live in a time when that when a big chunk of that media space that entertainment space has been replaced by us watching each other us using technology social media specifically to watch each other and the thing about that is that that isn't much cheaper for capital investment because you don't have to actually produce anything you just have to perform you just have to uh create the platform so for like silicon valley this is perfect like they don't have to worry about creating an infrastructure that's old-fashioned that's the forest economy we can't afford that anymore lol we cannot afford the forest model

we cannot afford labor peace we have to minimize costs because the background all of this rate of so they're going to ***** and so we're going to spend more time and we also of course all of us because we're getting more self-absorbed because there's nobody else to care about because we spend all our time alone of course we only want to see ourselves we don't know anybody else we can't feel confident and comfortable around anybody else everybody else is becomes a less real in a fundamental way 0:47:24 they become less real to us we take over that reality we take over that place that used to be for other people and that's where there are like our political uh ***** is that that's what this is uh that's what all politics media is it's part of this new it is a genre of entertainment it is not any kind of uh countercultural object outside of capitalism but as i said there is no replacing for most people realistically the day- 0:48:27 to-day experience of depending on this infrastructure because it has replaced vital parts of us we are now cyborgs so we do not we can't say ***** it we can't say just indulge with it because that does that's the entertainment that is the ***** thing for that's the dvd that uh that um david foster wallace predicted and he was just a little too old to get it to get it right because he didn't have the imagination for it because the internet hadn't emerged yet it was you did that in the mid 90s people thought the internet was going to in infinite jest if anyone's read it there is this dvd basically that if you watch it it's so entertaining you'll die you will not do anything else you will just waste away watching it and it's used as a terror weapon by these uh quebec separatists and we've created we have created a way to amuse ourselves to death 0:49:33 but one of the consequences of we get us getting to a point where something like the entertainment is possible means that we have given over a significant percentage of our souls in that parts of ourselves that form our identity from the internet because we spend so much time there and even if we all decide tomorrow to stop we have spent so much time there that time spent there doesn't just go off you're not just wasting it you are reinforcing emotional relationships you are reinforcing you are having memories that are suffused with emotional connections to certain phenomena certain things you saw certain things you liked or didn't like uh things you said things you read experiences are being had they're simulacrum of experiences but they have real emotional effects that linger physically that form your understanding 0:50:35 of the world and there and that they're accumulating in a thin gruel it is like it's it's very nutrient light but that's why we get sick we're spiritually malnourished by this ***** but it still is feeding us and we cannot get rid of it completely because we have nothing to replace it with so we have to wean ourselves not necessarily ever hoping to be totally broken free because then that creates the anxiety around i'm ever going to actually get there i think if you accept that you're always going to be somewhat connected to online just because of the necessities of the fact that we live in a world created by and for people who are that far from each other you need it how you deal use it is the question and so everybody who has a role within this system there if there is a responsibility to be had as in a thing that will make them feel better about doing it not a thing that's being imposed from without a 0:51:37 thing that's being imposed from within like if you do it it'll make you feel better if you don't do it you will feel worse you might try to convince yourself that it's something else that's the problem you might try to convince yourself actually no the reason i'm not happy is because uh i haven't achieved x yet then i will this is not uh dissatisfaction from the fact that i'm doing something that isn't helpful this is uh instead just the discontent of not getting a full filament of my final perfect state such as being totally uh taken away or totally detached from the internet uh a totalizing state but you need to be replacing as you wean and that means you have to search yourself as you break free if you're not feeling satisfied where does the dissatisfaction really come from realizing that if any anything is formulated around the internet 0:52:38 any emotional connections there any any level where that is providing you with an excuse for why you don't feel good then you can examine and sort of detach and look under a microscope at where that's coming from and then hopefully neutralize the the thing that's pulling you away from your instincts about what you the hope of socialism is the hope that through the creation through the the breaking of the wheel of history and the reef the resettling of it and then like a new blueprint working from that over time you will create a situation where social relationships are such that the vast majority of people who are born and when i say people i mean human ***** beings not any not any socially cons defined subset of but all of them within 0:53:39 the system of earth not of any specific ***** uh national polity every person within that system is self-policed to a large extent by a commitment to that system benefit now the faith of capital is that that's not possible that that kind of that that sort of social relationship is unattainable because of the metaphysical reality of human uh 0:54:40 separation that you can't create a social order that uh runs on belief in itself now we have for a fact we know for a fact that's not true though from human civilization we know that there are bonds that can be that can transcend the self sufficient to police a group of people and sometimes a significant number of them but it's conflict with other people that generates only once you get past the point of can you get back to that point but it's possible and it's not imposed by pain and oppression and and propaganda it is seeing in your life the benefits of the social arrangement having 0:55:42 good experiences that you ascribe to the social arrangement and therefore when you think should i do this thing or that thing the thing making that decision is a sense of self so we know it's possible for people to live that way and then we just have to get to a point where our understanding of human is all-encompassing and our

degree of technological and our of uh uh our degree of technological advancement both social and physical material the material reality of like labor-saving technology and like uh algorithmic replacing of like economic functions to increase efficiency 0:56:43 because capitalism is defined by this massive inefficiency that's going to be the thing that destroys us it ***** it it creates efficiency but does not create alienation and that was the problem with actually existing socialism in the 20th century is that it created alienation because people were still being alienated from their labor they were still employees who did not control the end product of their labor because that was being defined as a consumption and they didn't have anything to consume they were in competition with the west they had to tighten their belts and then khrushchev tried to compete with the united states on the question of consumption and failed we talked about this you have to create a situation where the social benefits of the social order not just that it that it gives you a sense of life that is unalienated that gives you a sense of control of your choices without there being a uh the din of like a uh like the 0:57:44 tyranny of capitalist choice where every choice is the wrong one because you're gonna get things are only gonna get worse and you're going to be and you're just going to miss you're going to feel bad about the choice you you're going to be able to make free choices and people would provide their own policemen but in the in the fucoian sense but not on behalf of capital or of a ruling class so we know that's possible the question is can we push through it progressively through capitalism into socialism and the most important thing though the thing that really makes it uh that really makes the choice between these clear and why nobody of any kind of clear heart or 0:58:45 mind can pick ***** uh capitalism is that if you assume that capitalism is correct in that belief and it is a belief because you're talking about a metaphysical question that cannot be defined that you're just deciding at a certain point you're going to give up asking the questions and decide that that's reality and that's what rationalism that's what enlightenment that's what liberalism is going to create a total uh uh alienation of the spirit from life and the replacement with belief in self even if if that is the only way humans can live and therefore you should support capitalism and hope you get lucky enough to end up on the right side of the of the dam and that you stay in the middle and if you're an american hey and if you're listening to this you might actually have a good chance at that not most of you won't of course and that's the whole thing the vast majority will fall into the mouth of the mon the lion but it won't 0:59:46 matter as long as some make it through as long as some make it through that's going to keep a lot of people believing even if you end up there you end up you end up in elysium you end up living in your little fully automated luxury space space jam on the other side of the glass watching remember being at that point has alienated you from who you are like all of these liberals all these all these uh uh woke liberals who want to use meritocracy shorn of racial uh guilt as the metric for who win lives and who dies that's they want meritocracy as the right does the only difference is what they think merit means do they think that merit comes from uh do they think that merit comes from the earth in the form of bloodlines like that's the right way these are both these are just this is just a split within liberalism remember this is just a split in the enlightenment uh the right the whole right says that the uh the the line here this the the define the thing that divides humanity into the into the winners and losers the the mr th those who are made miserable and those who feast upon their misery is the land it's it's the blood it is nature's distribution the cat that god's hand being cast whoever rules should rule the liberal argument that splits off from this and that has become the non-socialist left too is no no we make this choice we as humans get to decide well how do you decide if we're making the decision if god the world the actual settled conditions don't make it who makes it well then we make it how do we make it there's no metric that works there's no metric that a person who is making that decision is going to choose to be on the other side no one will and remember the people making the drawing the line are by definition the people who are being uh benefiting this is what a capitalist superstructure is it is a culture made by the people who benefit from exploitation yes they are exploited too many of them but they feel like they benefit they feel connected to it they feel power they're empowered if they didn't have the power to write the documents and to create the they wouldn't be able to and that power comes from feeling like they're benefiting from a social arrangement so they're always going to draw themselves on the line of uh the angels and that line the only one that you can draw is you have the right opinions you have the right spirit you have the right soul you are good good and bad it's the only way good and bad boil down to it good and bad how do you determine who is good and bad there's two axes there's the axis of who do we need to be able to actually staff this government who are we going to need to be able to provide the human element of labor that is necessary to keep this thing going and also um who has done good or bad things in life and so one axis of that is just the the the vocabulary of uh of desert theory that undergirds liberalism we have capitalism and if you do well you are uh uh rewarded you do poorly you are punished of course that's actually just nature grinding through the world that's not any kind of ***** uh uh that's not anyone's fault no one deserves to be punished for this it's gonna determine whether or not you can us live and and on the moral side of this question of good it's because it's are you a good person in two ways are you useful that's where the meritocracy part comes in get those uh let's make sure that uh the sat isn't racially biased we still need the s.a.t we still need a system of higher education to identify the most uh abstractly gifted students who can then perform the knowledge work at the headquarters of capitalism like we need to um we still need these people and we need to have a way to find them so that's why we need things like higher education we need things like standardized tests but we don't want to feel bad about it we want it to be purely dispassionate we want it to be the market we don't want it to be us so that means we have to make them non-racist sats non-racist uh tests of course that's still determining people based on the luck of the abilities they have and if you don't luck into those abilities you're ***** now what la racial liberalism does is it says no no a lot of those people at the bottom are only there because darn it of the racism of these bad white people so therefore i get to stay on the good side because now i deserve to be there because of my abilities and also i would sacrifice some portion of other white people on this side of the uh of the line to bring in more unjustly uh persecuted and objectively oppressed black people and then we will all together thrive but of course once you draw the line right once you've created the schmitty an exception in law which is where we're headed one way or the other whichever of these two wins unless something else breaks the conflict uh when that draw lawn gets drawn the people who are gonna mis get immiserated are going to be a combination of people for whom it's just sad they're the legacy of racism and it's top it's not fair that they're there but there's nothing to be done about it and the people who are being punished righteously for making that happen it's your fault this is your fault white people and you get to feel like a good white for condemning the whites well just shrugging at the economic and so that is why if there is no if that is the end point if if we have gone past the point when socialism metaphysically understood can can cut have have actually coherently uh break into that conflict and destabilize it turn it from a two-way war into a three-way war if that doesn't happen at the level of politics uh the the the the final war will just be about who suffers will it be those who have been decreed by uh the by history to suffer those who suffer now or will there be an attempt to reorientate uh the laser beam the death ray to take in others of course the main thing that is up need to be stressed here is that the admiseration is total no matter what everybody the vast majority of people are going to get ground into jerky but because we'll be consuming this what we're going to see is either one triumphing or the other but neither one will be triumphing because everyone will be mutually being dissolved it will be cannibals all until there's only the little b band of uh rulers who will then drive each other insane and themselves insane with their captivity and emptiness because what will they have had to be what will they have had to do to themselves to be in a position to watch that happen and be okay with it the movie that gets this better than anything i hate to no i love to uh to draw a pop culture comparison because watch this movie after listening to this and you will get what i'm saying conceptually zardoz uh the h.g wells is time machine but but with the emphasis that the eloy do not live in heaven the eloy's heaven is destroyed by the neuroses of those who are within it the people who are going to survive this 1:9:4 coming ***** culling at the rights on the right end of the glass are going to be unable to sit with themselves for even a second they will be so wracked with neuroses and horror and self-observed obsession they will be so infused with their own isolation they will be so lonely they will be so convinced of their own metaphysical uh uh solipsism and they will be so unable to reconcile the concept of their own death more than anything they will be unable to reconcile death because they will not be able to imagine anything existing outside of their consciousness because they have made their consciousness in every sense the only reality a social life one of the things it does is it allows us to live in a world beyond our own minds parts of our minds are in the minds of others and we know that like we have mutual experiences we 1:10:5 fuse at the level of emotional connection and that means that our minds expand beyond ourselves well whatever is going to get you to the end of uh the zardoz world whatever spiritual mutilation you do to yourself or you've been acculturated to just by where you grew up is going to uh consume you internally because you will have to because you there is no god is everything which means he's nothing right it is there becomes a point when you have experienced every possible experience and differentiation and distinction becomes impossible that's why we can't conceive of heaven that's why we can't conceive of eternity of any kind we can't really imagine going to hell either because people always think wouldn't you get used to it and it's like yeah you would eventually distinction breaks down because novelty and that is 1:11:6 that's eternity and that's what happens when you die is that it bleeds out into all so you have to create another even if you are god and you're spending all of your time in your time crystal cube by yourself and maybe there are other people there but they are they're they're not people like you they are lesser beings you don't feel you have no spiritual connection to them when you look them in the eye you don't see another person you don't even see an animal you see a thing so you are alone you have to create another that means you have to as love has been replaced by hate as the only people you see are people that you are exploiting and therefore have to 1:12:7 hate to make it their fault that they're suffering means you have to put that hate somewhere and when there's no one else you have to turn the death beam inward and so just imagine torturing yourself in hell for eternity in the singularity that's where these people will end up if you give them a long enough time that's where they'll end up if they win and win and win and defeat entropy over and over again if they're able to defeat entropy at every point by just a little more technology a little more exploitation they're able to stay ahead of the ***** reaper if they do that and they get their singularity it will be hell literal they will burn forever until everything is the

last pain they felt as differentiation becomes impossible again so there you go hell for everybody everybody alive every conscious mind will be in hell for eternity or every conscious mind will be in heaven because everybody will die in total harmony with themselves they will have lived their whole life without accumulating the clenched fist of anxious animal uh fear that is irrational and that can be tamed by the mind because they live a life that allows them to do that instead of run for themselves instead of run from pain and trauma that is inflicted on them in a moment and it defines them we're all defend defined by our traumas as traumas decrease our ability to that's why tolstoy said every unhappy every happy family is happy that the same way and every unhappy family is different so you reach at any either point of this the isolated mind in the jar eating itself or universal uh human harmonic relations with their environment what will it be in the mind of the person who dies in that world when it finally winks out when somebody unplugs the machine or when their natural body naturally changes state as is ***** determined by the real ***** bible the goddamn laws of thermodynamics that is the real holy book those are the real laws thermodynamics because that is the speed of the ***** soul it's ego death eventually it is eventually the point where all distinctions ceases to and it is probably if it's if you're alive if you're around for it it is probably felt one way or another like a rising up of orchestral lights like a a a light turning on rather than the existential fear of the black enclosure because the difference between white and black is that white is all colors and black is no colors so like we don't really fear hell like the idea of being poked in the ass by the devil we don't really fear that most of us what we fear is the sopranos ending now of course it's irrational to fear the sopranos empty for a very obvious reason you should be able to explain this and some people are able to convince themselves of this and they don't like they have transcended it those people work well in the system because they can more easily convince themselves and live with the reality of being separated totally from the world because hey if it happens like that it doesn't hurt i'm not scared it's fine that's perfect but for most people it's just the thought of what's on the other side of that black screen that freaks them out all the stuff they're gonna miss all the experiences all the things that they are connected that they have spent their life attaching themselves to that means that your brain is spindling around this inner axle of this black no colors that's scary all colors no colors is no nothing no knowledge it is having gone through all of the world in pain and suffering and then just had it be for nothing because you didn't white is all lights white is all knowledge light is as the body drains of energy as that dmt burst kicks in as all of those little things in your brain those little scepters spin at a rate that they never could in your normal life for even a second you are aware of things you know more the more you learn the less pain and fear can really hold you

the less you can be afraid because fear is just ignorance this is dumb like yoda ***** but it's all true like this is one of the really difficult parts of trying to communicate in the post-modern era is that all the most true ***** is banal you have to have to fill it though like the challenge we all have is to fill banal truths with meaning in a way that is convincing and that means building different structures and different new symbolic orders around them but the central ***** principles are so the more you know the less you're afraid and so that light turning on is not anything to be afraid of and so you can live your life with that lightness with that light as the spindle and that is what people think of when they think of a belief in god now i think for um for convinced christians i think that the metaphors around christianity and the 1:18:22 symbols of christ they represent all that good feeling all the stuff that accumulates from a life luckily well lived in a position to love like it's it's as great or as little as your experience of love and and it gets wrapped around symbols of christianity but depending on where you live depending on where you experience these symbols what that's going to adhere to very much differs like i would say most of the people who consider themselves believing christians white ones anyway in this country are if you were going to like cut their motives in half on the side of capital in the sense that they are on the side of the liberal side of dividing humanity into two with a big sword and letting half burn they're in favor of it and they have a a theological belief that undergirds it but that is not their religious belief if it was a religious belief it 1:19:24 would be around love that is around fear they're terrified they're terrified of being on the other side because they're right next to those who are suffering the most so their chances of success of winning are much lower so they can't have faith in the system they have to have the faith in the supernatural they have to believe that if they die of a heart attack at a ***** water park that they will go to heaven not that um not that like they're gonna make the themselves feel good about the life they live now through uh ease of consumption and ease of fear that come from being nestled in the bosom of a gentrifying neighborhood where you get to consume like a ***** uh aristocrat but without any of the guilt of it where you get to live the life of of someone uh in in london at the height of the uh of the british empire someone uh enjoying of a a t on the but that's only possible if you think you're gonna uh 1:20:46 make it materially and those are our knowledge workers and also are very rich uh uh people like landowners and stuff uh but like people on the edge they're gonna they're powered by their fear because their life has been one of fear they've been traumatized by the economy or they've been traumatized by other people in their lives that has made them bad in that they have bad political goals which is all we can to use in the in the culture context but they're not it's not their paul any more than somebody who is uh commits crime because of racism it's their fault now people have different degrees of like responsibility to to the moment and political responsibility that has 1:21:48 to be weighed out abortion to their relationship but that's not about morality that's about their class position that's about where they are in the and that's because their motivation is a is a deeply felt religion a religious belief that at its base is powered by this this faint sense of love for others that's been battered around by reality one way or the other and then this big massive ***** black hole of hatred at the middle that has to be the fear of fear around that darkness that they fear because we've all been robbed really of heaven by modernity and we're trying to oh man i remember why i was even saying this i'm gonna wrap it up now finally so the whole 1:22:49 reason i said that all of that was to get to the idea that trapped in a cultural uh conversation dominated by two ends of this liberal spectrum because these are the people who consume politics and make it now make it both in the people who do fun film and television but then the vastly larger number of people who make up the social media conversation they're all liberals of one stripe or another right wing or left they want to divide us in half and kill one half do they want to do it by by uh the will of god or or of the will of man marriage meritocracy or genealogy that's the fight and that's the fight they're having on media that's the fight we're all consuming even though the places in our lives where our political engagement in like electoral 1:23:55 politics are would would be best used are at the local level by definition because that's where you have actual local information that's where you have information that comes from experience not from this hot house but people's argumentation and the issues people fixate on and the and the dynamics that people respond to are the dynamics of national politics that are carried out in this new entertainment realm where they're getting their political identity because they're not getting it from their life we're not getting it from this machinery the spectacle we don't have enough social uh life to have those conversations and to have those experiences of shared exploitation and then conversation and uh and organizing around those questions instead those questions are all asked into the machine into the spectacle into the matrix and so all of it is in the terms of national politics and the dynamics that 1:24:56 play at national politics are not the same as the one at local politics and that means that people who then try to apply themselves to local conditions end up being uh in many ways stopped from being effective by what they're bringing to the question from uh their political observations of the internet their culture warren uh so yes the only politics is to politics or resentment because if if no one's because the promise of socialism is everybody flourishes everybody as uh as al slovik said in caddyshack 1:26:0 either everything is play or as judge holden said everything is war those are the the two sides they're they're they're the same social end through the looking glass one is uh is post scarcity democratically uh distributed the other is uh scarcity violently

uh disputed over those are the two things that you're uh you're looking at and the political debate that we're all engaged in is being conducted by and for people who either consciously or unconsciously and even if you don't want that even if you consciously because you're taking to the place where your efforts could be useful a vocabulary a value system that has been generated by this uh poisoned uh reflection and of course that sounds like hopeless and nihilistic but it isn't because if it's like the broncos bacillus thing if you've heard this and you are convinced by it that's the thing about all of this is that if everything i say is true at the end of it when you get to okay now what your answer can only be found outside of that text and if you have to look elsewhere i would suggest you look to the place of the world around you you should look to the things that occupy your vision and your sight and your smell and your voice because those things are the only experiences that will tune you towards the resonant of like the it will the only ones that can turn you because if you know this if you believe this is true and you still just do online stuff you're not going to feel good you're going to feel bad you're going to feel tense because you're reinforcing separation you're reinforcing your commitment to something that your heart doesn't want you to do your heart knows is wrong because now you know you don't even have a selfish reason to pursue this because that's just the irrational short-termism of capitalism reproducing itself culturally the wise decision is to be genuinely altruistic because then even if you fail even if your efforts are not rewarded by people responding because they're too selfish and they've been made too selfish you still feel love you don't feel fear and resentment if you depend if your happiness depends on your uh personal pleasure then you're gonna be on that you're gonna always be on the tender hooks of what am i doing to deserve this pleasure because this pleasure is it's someone else's expense because you know that you can't not know it you can't unknow it you can't talk yourself out of it so when you get to that end point when you've confronted your anxiety at its deepest route and you can no longer find another explanation you can no longer put it off on an erotic of a flight of fancy because you can identify those then you actually have to confront what you're doing with your time but the answer can only come from within it is a response to the passions it is not reasoned from because you're reasoning with the vocabulary of your enemies you're using the tools in the real sense because like i think in material sense like in terms of structures of power and stuff you absolutely use you the master's tools are you kidding me those are there to be used they're great they're tools about those tools you can't be operating from market logic you can't be operating from the pessimistic assessment that all humans are fundamentally alienated and cannot be brought back together if you believe that you cannot persist in effective socialist activism or self-conception and of course you can keep can you can try to but your efforts are going to involve more and more intensive distraction 1:31:6 and distraction is harder to come by over time because novelty reduces uh another thing is that literally like you're ***** if you're a guy for example your testosterone goes down your t ***** drops your ability to engage in pleasures is reduced which means your ability to find pleasure physically goes down and so you have to find it elsewhere where else is pleasure to be found in the hedonic calculus there's no room for love there's no room for feeling because it can't be priced it's priced out of that is it so for the liberal the conservative as it gets harder as they get older and 1:32:8 as they get less money and are therefore able to indulge they can afford to indulge themselves less are less stable or less able to enjoy comfort both of those things are going to increase their misery and their need to accommodate for it by rescaling uh or rearranging the scale on uh the the hedonic uh calculus like uh rebalancing it towards pleasure so that they have a reason to keep getting up every ***** day and some of them don't a lot of them don't which is where deaths of despair come from but the ones who keep on the treadmill are going to keep ***** running faster and that means they need more and more indulgences and that means that their resentments need to become more are need to become more uh a part of their lives they need to be able not just to see someone owned on the internet but to see somebody to spoil physically in front of them maybe carry out violence against somebody becomes the only way to gain pleasure gain experience of pleasure and not alienation and fear 1:33:9 and misery and physical pain that is accumulating that only comes by seeing others despoiled seeing others in pain and the war that's coming the political war that's happening right now the the political meltdown of the the meltdown of the brain that this gets the final schizophrenic break of the middle class american brain is between those who want the other to suffer in the form of a defined like a racial uh ratio just another they want to destroy the other and then there are the ones who uh want at the among the whites anyway the whites want to destroy whiteness they really do and then the minorities on that side also want to destroy whiteness for very good reason because they see whiteness as being responsible for their misery and light whiteness as in the actions of white people absolutely are the actions of white people 1:34:10 are absolutely the result of black people's low uh uh relatively high level of social alienation and misery that's not a it's there's no question if you strip it of moralism and you just say white people doing things for one reason or another then the answer is yes it's not difficult so of course they want to extinguish whiteness and of course guilty white people would want to extinguish whiteness and then on the other hand you have largely but not entirely a desire to extinguish another that is partially racially defined but not entirely racially defined all the other elements are permeable to a point of uh distinction and that distinction runs i would say nationally so you

yourself and that is the that is what that is the fight going on in the culture and then we're all participating in it one level or ever we are either engaging in it on one side or another or we are watching it from a scar afar and we are if we're alienated from it we are commenting on it but by doing so still contributing to it to some extent i will say that but maybe it's worth it you are contributing if you're not ignoring it and even if you're part of the the general firmament of entertainment and you can't disengage from it it's it's what we all have it's what we have instead of uh identities is is our role in this uh spectacle because that's where we're a cyborg that's where we've offloaded our brains that's the ghost acreage of our minds our conscious minds 1:36:13 and of course that is why the only way to resolve that is to create a orthogonal political movement based around class based around a universal understanding of solidarity that instead of wanting to destroy the other or wanting to destroy the self seeks to this is the synthesis at the heart of the dialectic at the psychological level is to bring together as a social reality because when we say self we're not saying like at 1:37:14 the end of this we're not we're not recognizably human no we're as able to recognize ourselves as we ever are because remember we're all different people all the time it is it is our brain that's creating a narrative of continuity and that continuity is created by the brain it's not imposed up from the outside of it it is us and that is it's generated by and so the self is destroyed the other is destroyed and what comes from them is a synthetic self where the other has been incorporated into the self in a way that would not be recognizable to the person on the other side of that interaction the white nationalists are right to say that whiteness because yes the notion of whiteness as it currently exists as a category of identity that we carry with us that will be 1:38:15 abolished if socialism is triumphant over time it's not going to happen overnight overnight and it's not going to happen before a change in social relationships but it could be overtime generated by a so there it is those are our options that's what's beside us that is the three legged stool these are the of uh of this is the roundabout how about that and when i say that i mean in your heart you can operate from the one you bring with you when you go out into the world and when you bring with you when you log onto the internet and the one that you filter everything through it's going to contain all of them but it's going to be directed from one perspective 1:39:17 consciously whoo that was a long one i thought that anyway i hope these are making sense because you know i'm going a lot far afield i'm hoping to uh what i'm hoping is that with the last number of these i will be able to pull them together and then pull them apart and like build a chain of argumentation that connects these you know what i mean because i feel like they're not they're in the order of like a stream of consciousness and i need to uh array them better but i feel like once i have them like sort of chained up in the right order bye

wha happened

06.24.21

foreign ah now oh hush whoa i guess i should turn it off right i've hijacked something 0:2:20 was did i just interrupt uh michael or something what happened was it going and then it like kicked off or no i mean but like i didn't usually i have to i get an opportunity to go in and like edit the information but it was already going when i logged on so he was on was he on before me what happened he's been done okay i felt like i i didn't want to max headroom his ass and just like bump bounce in but like you people were already in here weren't you what were you doing hanging around shenanigans 0:3:30 all right i'm sending it to twitter to advertise to the masses that i'm i'm on and live what is up with my camera's aspect ratio all right uh so today i wanted to do 0:4:32 something weird get a little esoteric get a little uh metaphysical get out on a limb as it were so i'm just talking out loud here so please nobody take any of this too seriously it's literally just musings i don't i'm not going to stand behind any of this this is really off the head type of thinking so just take what makes sense leave the rest i was thinking about how how our understanding of the world where we are in it our understanding of how the world works as capitalist uh identities as as individualized liberal subjects which is what we are we have to stipulate that when we talk about being human being a human is not what it meant in other periods in history it 0:5:33 means what it is to be human in this particular point in history those people lived in a different world in a fundamental way and i'll get to that we have to really come to terms with that so like we might be trying to build socialism but we are doing it as liberal subjects which is what makes the twitter obsession with pointing out who's a liberal amongst the left so funny because of course everyone is they could not be or they could not not be they are at some level aware of that but since they can they're still uh mobilizing their politics on liberal assumptions that they have not interrogated they figure ah the way that i'm gonna prove i'm not a liberal is by becoming an ultra liberal is by uh determining who is the liberal and casting them out creating a uh uh distinctions because while a lot of these arguments about who's doing liberalism are correct uh the impulse to say if you have violated this in one way 0:6:35 then you are cast out is ridiculous because everyone will eventually be cast out and

CUSHVLOG 169. WHA HAPPENED

you will annihilate all solidarity because you will be applying this litmus test from a perspective of wanting to succeed in a hierarchy that is what liberalism is a liberal subject it seeks to succeed in a hierarchy they are motivated by the basic hedonic calculus of that is created by liberal society the value system of narrow hedonistic selfishness expressed culturally and uh intellectually and idealistically and religiously is uh what is generated by a liberal subjectivity the experience of living amongst other people who are all similarly situated who are all liberals we are motivated at base by a narrow hedonic understanding of self because we imagine ourselves as separated from social existence because we believe that there is an objective reality that is interacting with us our subjective reality and that overalls it and that determines it and that we are only captured by and we are completely captured by it that is the liberal assumption that that that there is a mechanistic reality operating independent of the human will that we basically get to respond to pressed at its base it will accept the premise the under undeniable premise that logically there is no such thing as free will this is understood by the liberal subject that free will is one way or another however it's expressed the fundamental understanding that free will does not exist is deeply rooted in liberalism it's what drives everything else because if if the universe is separate from us whether we think of it like the early protestants did as uh the separation embodied by the supernatural god to the current moment when god has been replaced entirely by the self the understanding is still that there is the self and then there is the world to be threshed into pieces by it and it's a question of how do we live with that and the answer to that question if we are all separate from one another will always be my narrow self-interest how i can spend as much time as i have on earth as pleurably as possible and it is that programming that drives the liberal subject through their existence it's it's what we are uh are pushed by in the absence of the ability to assert ourselves on a world that is not determined by us it is either termed by god or another word for god the mechanistic determinism of cause and effect that you observe through science if you observe the world heuristically through metaphysics or through physics the end result is the same there is god that is outside and separate from the self there is a universe that is outside and separate from the self and that we are not in charge of that is the fundamental supposition of liberals and it is what undergirds everything else and it therefore is it is the inner it is the metaphysics that capitalism produced because it facilitates capitalism because if there can be no if there is if there is uh if there is no control power asserted and all we can seek therefore is our own pleasure how will that pleasure be expressed how will we express our hedonism and it is either through sublimation or through indulgence the degree and what determines that is which one uh is more motivating to us personally which boils down to who we are as what our experiences are the sum

CUSHVLOG 169. WHA HAPPENED

total of our traumas determines what we use to orient our pleasure but then we just pursue it we just pursue our pleasure because that's the only rational thing because we're not in charge because but that is a incomplete understanding of of the self conscious beings humans that are capable of inter of of of conscious thought and then uh communication across space to other does not is not a mere subject to science it's not a mere subject to reality that consciousness and those consciousnesses brought 0:11:42 together literally determine what reality is they are they they are part of a feedback loop that gives reality actual uh dimensions and that drives which means that there is no uh uh dichotomy between uh spirit and and and material that there is no um there is no contradiction between free will and determinism because everything is literally wrought by our collective decision making which while driven by material causes is generated by a consciousness that operates independently of that because while we are physical beings that receive stimuli and that those send signals to our brain and though that brain that makes decisions there is a distance just a temp an 0:12:44 actual physical distance that means that at a certain level those responses are not perceived consciously and then it is another level they are perceived consciously and that gap between those two is the uh inflection point at which consciousness emerges at which there's sufficient distance from the stimuli to allow you to live a little bit in the future to imagine the future and then step into that reality before uh you've been determined by the physical interaction by the cause and effect chain and then that changes you and then if you act from that and then re direct your body towards that you have literally broken cause and effect that you have started to create the world and then you live in that fantasy through symbols that are generated by cooperation with others so you control the world but this is the crucial distinction the reason 0:13:46 that that ends up turning towards bitterness and isolation and nihilism in western cultures because if you imagine yourself to be god at a certain point the fact that you're a god who is subject to law starts to ***** things up you start to get um uh questioning of of your of your degree of centrality to the universe because how can i have control if nothing does what i wanted to but the more people believe something and operate from that belief the more they are able to make things happen that they think cooperation literally facilitates the re-rendering of the fabric of nature and we do that by collaborating along communicative access where we find common vocabulary and symbols but only to the degree that it is shared so while we are that 0:14:47 what reality is and therefore shape it we only do it in so far as we can act collectively the more collectively we are able to coordinate our actions of free will it has to be of of will it cannot be coerced at least consciously coerced it has to be consciously chosen action consciously chosen by sufficient people can literally break the ***** wheel of history now the problem is is that even though we are getting to a point

CUSHVLOG 169. WHA HAPPENED

we're far past the point in my opinion where capitalism has accumulated sufficient uh uh concentrations and the technology has been generated by that action sufficient to create a rational distribution of resources through the biome coordination of action 0:15:49 to uh capture and reduce externalities from the system to recover externalities into the system which is necessary to be able to operate a functional system because like the hayek school the whole austrian uh concept is premised on the idea that the price signal is the most efficient way to send information through the system of the economy but the thing is is that the price signal is flawed by its uh neces the price signal only works to the degree that um the externalities of the interactions and exchanges are not priced and are kept out of the exchange and so therefore as they accumulate in a closed system they start to break it down and it but we have 0:17:0 generated sufficient technology at this point where we could actually price in and bring in externalities by reducing profit by breaking the by pulling the ***** spine out of the machine by by taking the virus out of the programming and that virus being profit maximation as the as the actual organizing principle society and the big obstacle to that is distribution of resources independent self-interested action because capitalism is promised on the idea that people will distribute it through a system with the uh the behavioral reinforcements that capitalism has people will act narrowly selfishly within the system and that those who act narrowly selfishly will be selected for leadership and influence and therefore be able to exercise technological control over a greater greater degree of the population while it extracts capitalism but if we had if we'd use the technology we have we could actually do it but we could 0:18:10 only do it if people were operating in that structure willingly so you need people to change their understanding of their values away from selfishness now why where that idealist notion intersects with reality is is that what generates that is not a mass consciousness raising it's not 2012 in the ***** time a wave cresting over humanity it is not some massive alchemical shift it is a slow grinding it is people in specific positions in capitalism having experiences that spark new relationships and that build new symbols of power that are exerted that build new practices of behavior reward structures a ritualized uh uh ritualized building of meaning fixed two symbols 0:19:11 of action and cooperation and that that driving through the structures of capitalism will create the counter-hegemonic force will and all of this is just to to say that the the one of the big for me like i say i'm always talking about myself and trying to talk my way around my own paralysis why do i feel so stuck politically why do i feel so uh kind of captured by my position and and at constant uh unease with it and my need to keep like trying to think my way around it like what is what is generating that and i think that my kind of uh ritualized uh response to that agitation is to try 0:20:14 to dig deep into why i feel like i am unable to act and at least act in a way that feels

affected uh or feels like a real use of energy and um i keep coming back to just this liberal subjectivity pulling me away from of beliefs and efficacy of action and then i have to ask myself why is that and the answer that i come up with is that i focus from my position outside of most traditional uh of like a traditional labor relationship uh and it's certainly not in a sense of feeling uh exploitation the sort of keen felt an alienation from a social structure the feeling of being exploited by my society rather than a benefit of that society is not very high i feel mostly considered i feel mostly uh 0:21:16 to have benefited from my relationship to capitalism in terms of my day-to-day life and its comforts of course how could it be otherwise so i and so i say okay well there is of course the just the material relationship that's one thing but what is politics what is consciousness if not finding a limitation and then overturn overcoming it through just concentrated uh mental work taking your mind away from the constant just billiard ball action of stimulus response of fear and desire of feeling guilty and then wanting to have your guilt assuaged of being comforted by misery because it's familiar feeling uh like a need a need to punish yourself on behalf of a moral code that is totally self-imposed and that could be trans could be actually challenged if you and so my answer is i have to do this hippy dippy ***** but not everybody does 0:22:17 because i think if you feel capitalism as an exploiting force in your life if you are alienated and feel alienated feel immiserated feel precarious but you also understand the system broadly as the cause as opposed to you know being captured at a lower level of ideology by the idea that it's some sort of race war or that there there's some sort of uh national capitalism that could save us uh you have to like if you recognize uh the fundamental uh nature of this fight like what the stakes are and then you know that solidarity and numbers are our only advantage and that that should guide your actions and so anything that says well you know hey look the republicans aren't 0:23:19 great at the top they're controlled by capital but at the base there's at least this nationalist uh desire for a state that works for people besides just profit like there's room in in their ideology for a uh for a capitalism that is redistributed but along these prescribed lines nationalism very narrowly uh and then you know along these hierarchies that they want to protect and so there's a the pitch that is made is you can't beat them at least you can join them and maybe move them but the fact is that as much any case you want to make that the left is held captive by the democrats and that they their alien the alienations they build up along the cultural axis are insert make it insurmountable for them to try to actually engage with people uh 0:24:21 beyond uh liberalism you can make that argument but you will be defeated because those same problems on the left the democrats exist for anybody who's trying project on the right because at the top it's still the most concentrated capital and it's still grinding away independent of what the base wants the base wants spectacle and they can give them spectacle all day long trump gave them the blue blueprint cultural spectacle this there's this fantasy that these idiots have that the democrats because they're waging this culture war jihad that if the republicans you know what if they just won they wouldn't do culture war stuff there is annoyed with culture where stuff is our we are because we both hate the same arguments in the culture war but like dude they hate them for a different reason they hate them to hate them they hit them because it provides the dynamic that serves their best interests which is that you keep ***** arguing you can like go oh let's give us some cat national capitalism 0:25:23 let's give us some hair invoke democracy let's give us some racial like some racially means-tested uh uh democratic social democracy and they'll say yeah that's cool no you're gonna eat trans bathroom bands and critical race theory bands and your and uh militarized border and extravagant uh of anti uh uh crime measures and like public executions on television uh uh licenses to to hunt the homeless although democrats will be down for that one too in major cities there will be no because there will be no pressure it's all about pressure just because these people's like the the republican base has these ideas about nation that would be served by uh like some sort of keynesianism uh as opposed to just strict neoliberal uh uh rip out the floorboards uh uh late stage you know bust out capitalism they're still exerting their uh politics through a filter of culture and engaging with a a spectacle of politics that is as simple as it is as synthetic and as dominated by capital as at a certain point you have to it's like nationalism emerged as the liberal um resistance to capitalism like nationalism because capitalism begins admiserating right in the early 19th century that's when you surely start to see uh precarity enter these structures exogenously like oh like things are getting worse but not because of the of a harvest or the decree 0:26:25 of a king but just because of this generalized this new ghost whispering through our our cities this new this new boss that is not seen anywhere and people respond by trying to resist it because why wouldn't you why the ***** wouldn't you resist it but the people who are always going to be the people who are most uh alienated by capitalism the fastest and most importantly the most influentially are the middle class because of course the super wealthy as this shift changes they just it's just a change of revenue stream they don't feel they feel a little they feel a little uner unnerved maybe that they've unleashed this cis power that's beyond their control but they're still at the top it's and at the bottom people are are actually being alienated along strict labor lines like you work or you starve and they work and they start getting class consciousness but in the middle they just feel this precarity this sense 0:27:27 of being stuck between these two new categories they don't feel responsible for either but they want to resist on their own terms this encroaching capitalism and what can they use to do it what can they change the world with and the weapon they have is the 0:28:28

nation because that is a vocabulary instead of symbols that can be translated across space and time in the form of the newspaper-based uh uh nationalist movement or nationalist uh projects that created modern nationalism if anyone's read benjamin anderson's imagined communities he talks about how 19th century nationalism was a middle-class movement generated by the knowledge workers of the european berg 0:29:29 the university students the uh newspaper editors the intelligentsia do you do i need to see it do i need to even say the word that they are well they are not alienated along a class line necessarily because they feel like they're actually getting more out of this deal than they're not because it is as we've said it is always outside of the absolute categories it is a range and it's a range defined by which one you feel more do you feel more invested in the system do you feel more benefited from it do you feel more afraid of it changing do you feel more that if it changed you would lose then you don't want to change it and those people are the ones with the time to sit on their asses and consume and make the media that forms the culture that makes nations things the nations of europe were all made in the minds of poets and journalists all these 0:30:30 projects of bringing together folk wisdom and language and this identity these are these are things that were real but we're in a context of feudalism in a pre-national context of like local culture and they're turning it into this machine made capitalized idea that is a pure propaganda and so when capitalism is resisted in 1848 how is it resisted along the axis of nations the springtime and it was the national projects that advanced the farthest much farther than the workers project which was there because the workers contributed to the 48 at every level they contributed the bodies in the streets they contributed the manpower but they did not contribute the leadership because they were out there working for a living which meant that when it came time 0:31:33 to deal with the powers that be with your metadates uh with your king of bavaria the people negotiating would be doing so on behalf of people who are more dedicated to nation and liberal reform than they were to egalitarianism because it wasn't in their interest to be egalitarian this is the same situation as the french revolution france is the first explosion of this you've got to imagine capitalism being infused into into england into europe it's like a virus infecting a body and over time you have these these flare-ups explosions of accumulated friction within the system that lead to apocalyptic change and that is the punctuated equilibrium of social evolution these conflicts drive forward the mechanism whereby politics and so that means that 0:32:38 the the remaining notions of liberalism that persist now as we reach this now this new stage of crisis this worldwide crisis we are essentially in the pre-1848 stage of 1914 1939 these are all the crises within european capitalism that define its progress and when you got to the end the apocalypse of 1945 world european capitalism gave birth transferred over tagged in america to create international we are in this we 0:33:42 are now in a system where all of the uh contradictions within european capitalism were solved exogenously mainly by the the the taking over of the system of america by the shrooding of distribution of resources so that hey europe you know how you guys are doing uh the uh ruthless blood scramble for resources that defines terminal capitalism you don't have to do that anymore we're gonna create a global capitalism where we can export the uh social uh alienation from the heart of the system and displace it out to the periphery we will take over we will take over your empire we will administrate it rationally through the through the mechanism of capitalism we will defeat the soviet uh and and third world challenges in the field of battle where we have to but the end result will be you will get the spoils of hypo hyper 0:34:44 exploitation to enjoy at the center with all of that social alienation burned out all of those externalities filtered out because america can coordinate it on your behalf and you don't have to fight anymore the same way that the progressive era stopped all those robber baron trusts that were destabilizing capitalism from fighting between each other and the thing was is that as if if interstate resource conflicts continue in a technological age it is the end of civilization the end of humanity and as long as you have some humans around to apply the brakes on capitalism it'll put brakes on but we've reached the end stage where there is no one to put a brake on it that is the new era and we're now we haven't seen the first big explosion but we've seen the first condition setting events 911 of course huge uh the um the 2008 collapse massive and 0:35:45 all of it in the background pushing it climate change the externalities building up in the system the carburetor and so that is the situation we find ourselves in and but because the working class was defeated during this period first the european working class then the global working class were defeated over the course of the of the uh the overall war between capitalism and humanity that was fought in europe over the course of the 19th 17th 18th 19th and 20th centuries and that once the european was 0:36:48 the european working class classes defeated the global working class over the course of the cold war but that only means that conflict and crisis are inevitable because there is no more break on the pedal which means all of these situations become uh unstable and we once again reach a time when people can act and this is to get back to my original point which is that one of the things that keeps me frozen in place and i think many others in the liberal condition is that because we view the world from a remove because we feel the world having lived because we live isolation we live in isolation from each other we spend little time together as equals we spend a lot of time in simulated engagement that is not human interaction and so we build 0:37:49 this selfish island we build this isolated consciousness that imagines itself separate from a and if you will think that way you decide what to do by looking backward like i i look backward i i'm a history guy and then forward which is or like what you think is like the contemporary moment but really forward which is politics politics is looking forward and you look back in history to try to figure out how to look forward at least if you're trying to be you know helpful to the human project which really needs it right now we're in a crisis then you have to so you end up looking at a past and a future that are defined by people operating through the skeletal logic of cause and effect because when i say that we make the world that we literally can make it that we are gods within the matrix that we could cut through all of this if we were able to communicate that back to each other if we were able to feel it if we were able to feel it we could literally remake the world in almost any format we have the capacity we have the unleashed human potential we have the tools to do it now it's not gonna it couldn't happen overnight that's where the materialism comes in it's not transubstantiation it's not everybody does acid at the same time it's the building of institutions and reinforcing social structures within a counterculture that then becomes a challenger for control in a crisis moment and in a period where capitalism's ability to sustain itself is undermined hyper-exploitation but it's hard to believe in that if you're a liberal subject like me because you look at the past and you think of the future and all you see is people acting out of self-interest all you see is the result of the the anti-life equation writing itself across human history from from the dawn of time until the end of civilization and beyond everything is written by this deterministic uh yoke of cause and effect people operating out of selfish interests over time being atomized and oh and and having their uh humanity stripped of them and turning and so therefore when you imagine the future you imagine one made that way and that's all rational but it is insufficient because that's not the world that is what's left by the world because when i say we all make the world when i say we i mean every person in every moment and i went and i say the world i mean the world in that moment and because we are not the same people from moment to moment because we are constantly being interacted with with other uh matter shaped by other people both past and present who are literally giving us the world that we engage with and giving us the symbolic understanding of what those things in it are and what they mean and what our values are literally creating the world for us but then we inhabit it and then act out of it interact with the world shape it that is how we literally make the world but it is in the moment and then once the moment's over the next moment appears to you changed by what you did and you might remember a little bit of who you used to be but you don't really remember everything and now the thing that's real to you is the world around you that is now interfering interacting with you having been changed by what you did and that is how as we decide what to do in an increasingly technologically sophisticated world where we live more and more isolated lives that are more and more determined by our uh

CUSHVLOG 169. WHA HAPPENED

selfish understanding of uh our fundamental alienation from the world our finitude a desire to to um protect our own pleasure because it is the only thing we can imagine to be real in the universe we then act like that's everything and we act from those premises and then history is that is the uh is the dead hand uh uh the the weight of history lying like a nightmare on the and so we ignore the world that like our body wants our mind our our hearts wants that can be divined by paying attention and 0:42:58 that is why for me the only reason to do stuff like this is to get back to the idea of slowing down and experiencing and how and and seeking that with the language that makes sense to you that is going to be determined by things that you feel that are associated with time and place time and place all the stuff you're interacting with here the place the ideas the time leaves and therefore the emotion that you felt is gone like if you look at human history as like a giant it's not a body it's a skeleton and all of the muscle and all the fat and all the organs and all that stuff dissolved off over the course of time because we're different people looking through a lens of time 0:43:59 at other people not just ourselves obviously but people in previous relationships to previous modes of production social formations symbolic understandings but when you're understanding what happened it's not just the pull of selfishness that leaves its mark because that's how people are interacting with their world but in the dreams that they had and the dreams they had were not about that the dreams they had were based on feelings that transcended selfish desire because they were fixed to a a sensuous understanding of connection that is baffled and obscured and alienated away by living in the symbolic realm of the post capitalist or the post but this is 0:45:7 something that gives me a lot of hope and makes me feel uh i feel it makes me feel optimistic about not just how i will able be able to impact the world in the future but that how humanity will be able to respond to the challenges is that while we're all operating from hedonic calculus that calculus changes our ability to ignore the pain around us also changes and that changes our relationship to that pain and every one of the moments that we have a change of relationship of understanding and and start looking at something differently and then most importantly acting differently stepping into awareness of one's ability to have exercise control of the world which is faith that's what you can boil that down to because the thing that you can't make sense the thing you can't find in the dry retelling of history up until 0:46:10 the last second you looked at it and your imaginings of the future is that they are without a soul essentially they presuppose that there is no soul but we know there is because it's what actually propels us through life but that does not leave a track culturally and the rev the apocalypse that we see is one where we can't imagine living life the way we live it now and we won't but our relationship to that world will be different our relationship to concepts of meaning and the some things that we can't imagine going through will feel like a gift like the ability to do them 0:47:13 because it is rewarded in your life will the essence the essence is created by the the process of re-awakening and rediscovering in the moment and reorienting towards the moment and experiencing every moment and like the memory of it like that that that haunted house in your head that is your understanding of the world that is made up of all of your experiences of it and then your fantasized that is generated 0:48:16 by you living through the cycles of time the cycle generates a spark but it is not an eternal spark it is a moment-to-moment spark but because it's every moment it fills a defined time space portal like it becomes a a trail like like a donnie darko someone says is this expecting everyone to spontaneously change behavior no and this is another place where you have to remind you have to get back to specifics i am talking about this because this is my relationship to my world i have found myself a podcaster of note with a relatively large public profile with social and uh familial and friendship obligations to other people that i feel what do i do and the answer 0:49:19 that i can come up with is well i'll look around i'll keep myself conscious of options but if i'm doing this as a job which is absurd to think of but is true this is my job it is not it is unalienated labor it is the dream it is the i am living in post like i was talking i talked a few days ago about how a mile from me there are people who are living in the post apocalypse and here i am a mile away from them living in the uh utopia i am living in the post scarcity utopia in practicals in practical terms i get to hunt in the morning and fish in the afternoon and criticize after dinner or criticize all day and order grubhub if i want to i because this does not feel as though it is alienated labor but the reason that it is not post-capitalism the reason it is not a 0:50:21 utopia is because there's somebody having the post-apocalypse a mile away from me and that this this utopia depends on that dystopia and therefore if i am to live a moral existence if i if i am to feel like i am honoring my feelings of connection and and and love then i have to try to change that i have to so how do i do it well if i worked if i worked a real job i would want to do whatever i could to try to encourage a class consciousness raising at my job that is what i would try to do i would try to and of course it would require you to be if you really wanted to do it and this is the self-disciplining part like if you want to do that because it makes you feel like you're doing something and that's it you'll do it half-assedly you'll do it in a 0:51:22 way that doesn't require a lot of work on your part you'll do it in a way that gets other people in trouble you'll do it fecklessly because you're really just doing it to feel like you're doing something just like liberals vote so they feel like they're doing something or post because they feel like they're doing something if you really want to do it though if you really want to help other people because you love them then you're going to make it your duty to do a good god damn job and that means figuring out what the steps are try trying to find the vocabulary and language that works for other people hit them where they live not where you live put your own thoughts and beliefs and feelings down a little bit privilege those uh interactions privilege making connections and making political points that will make people understand 0:52:23 you being motivated by getting people on and i would try to do whatever i would do what what in the moment made sense to make that happen but i can't answer the question of what that would mean if i had that job because i don't i don't have that relationship that labor relationship i am an entertainer essentially without this is what the artisans of 1848 were fighting for by the way do you want to really if you want to call this the pre-48 era like the beginning of 48 the rise of nationalism as a response nationalism and socialism as a response to the admiseration of capitalism this is now the final revolt of the sort of pseudo serb pseudo artisans it's a pseudo 0:53:25 art no see somebody says my moral obligation argument is the new england no it's not new england puritanism it is an obligation to one's own hedonic self-interest it squares the circle you don't do it because you're obliged by others you do it because it feels better to do it than to not do it it feels better to do it because if you ignore that feeling you will be worse off you might be able to ignore it you might be able to find pleasures to distract yourself but over time and in the moment of self-reflection it because there is no conflict between the best interests of others in your immediate 0:54:28 vicinity and your own if you are not trying to hide from your sense of felt connection to other people you're not trying to hide it under rage and selfishness and that is what that is why the only answer capitalism can have internally outside of political interaction and political mobilization is to buy people off is to say yes this system strips the humanity out of everybody but if you all knew that you would destroy it here's the deal it will strip the humanity out of some of you much more slowly than it will strip the humanity out of others of you and those who will strip the most slowly to will be the artisans the people at the closest nexus point to capitalist production at its most vulnerable positions where it is legally constructed where it is 0:55:29 ideologically constructed and in its early days where it is materially constructed the people there if you give them a deal they'll take it and that is why the artisans and the uh the liberal nationalists sold out the workers in 48. and reified nationalism so that when the big cap crisis of capitalism comes in europe in 181 1914 what happens the working class commits suicide because everybody else got bought off enough people got bought off that the artisan class turned on the workers which is what 48 was it's what fascism was and in america post-world war ii we we took the uh 0:56:31 industrial factory worker of the most vital sectors of the defense and then consumer economy and we made them artisans in the sense that we gave them enough but not in control of their work because that's one thing artisans were there's two things

artisans were fighting against that they were getting less money for the work they did and also that they had to do work that was more uh because they had to work harder for more money they worked more miserably and it was literally less pleasant for them to work and they wanted control over their rate of work that would have made it more pleasurable for them that complaint was bought off in europe first and then in the united states through free real estate and by racial caste system with more consumption with more convenience in the time that they did have and so by half buying off the the uh artisans who were the middle and decisive class because they're closer to production they're closer to political mobilization and they help capitalism win and congratulations what did it get them it got them it bought them time is what it did and that was a good short-term deal for those guys who made the deal because they died before the ***** deal kicked off now we're dealing a crisis where the people who've been getting this deal until at this moment basically are having the terms renegotiated and they're right next to the ***** production but the production has moved it's now been transubstantiated into the global supply chain through technology so there's nowhere to fight it is fled capital fled the the crucial st points and the the legal structures have now been totally uh and so what we're seeing now the culture war that defines our politics that i've been talking about the past few few days is a nervous breakdown of this post-artisan class because they stopped being working class people even though they kept having but they were not living working-class lifestyles as marx understood them and as would be created in a closed system because capitalism cannot def cannot afford partisanship over the long term as the entropy builds up in the system as externalities begin to choke the gears as resources are depleted entropy and so people had relative to others because remember when i say that they lived in artisan lifestyle obviously they did not have anything like the freedom of an artisan but one thing they didn't have the precarity of an artisan because there were poor artisans and two that the life of a of a uh artisan which is a life of semi-alienated labor more alienated than um more alienated than the working class but obviously not capital holders not renters and what that boils down to is pleasure pleasure during work and what we got after world war ii was a new professional class where work was the deal was everybody works about 40 hours that gives you enough for this nice house this nice uh tv and ***** now would you rather do during that time a mindless repetitive task or something with your mind those decisions are made demographically and then people file into these jobs and then they live this semi-alienated life that is dependent upon the maximal exploitation of other parts of the spectrum both within the ***** metropole and then after imperialism and then finally imperialism exploitation at the end point of empire the global supply chain where the where the where the conditions are always antebellum southern where we have never gotten past primitive accumulation where you have never gotten past and that misery allows for this this hybrid existence near the center of power and influence political um mechanisms people who staff politics all the way through it which therefore do have a determining factor their self-interest is until the global system gets too much entropy and the deal breaks down which is where so the pseudo-artisan class because it experiences itself as between two classes feels basically in the same spot that the pre-1940 1848 artisan class did but now because there's nothing else to buy off there was a africa to buy off there was and there were there was um that is now those that frontier is closed so the artisans are now in a situation much like 48 where the system cannot accommodate them because that's why it broke down in 48 because at that point it had not developed sufficient to distribute or sufficient tentacles of democratic response because democratic government even though it's a sham under a bourgeois dictatorship is still essentially a price signal it is a social price signal to capitalism nervous system to tell you how much ***** uh silt is building up and how much resistance is building up and how much and it couldn't respond because it wasn't a sufficiently advanced where that mechanism is fully developed because uh we've created a global flow of capital like nineteen after 2008 you have 2008 was basically 1929 all over again in terms of an apocalyptic infarction of the global like circulatory system our response to it was different because the forces the social forces were different because our working class had been turned into this bought that didn't want to fall and couldn't situation somebody's telling me that there is no second law of thermodynamics uh okay sure fine whatever if you're going to tell me that disorder within a system is not constant you can but you are right i would argue only in a narrow enough sense that it's meaningless somebody keeps saying close versus open system it's a closed system someone explained to me why it's not a closed system i don't believe in the big crunch i believe in a second big bang i believe that at the end of the total heat exhaustion of the universe you were at the same point you were when the big bang happened which means eventually the big bang will happen again it could take a billion years and yes does that mean eternal recurrence perhaps it could also mean though that every time we relive we remember a little more of the feeling of living and maybe every single one of these that we're living is the one where we're shifting our understanding and memory in one direction and of course we don't know which one we're in now where we recognize our collective ability to communicate our collective connection and then maybe because we're alive now we're in the last one because once it happens it's always happened right and then history the human the the universe is just this constant cycle spinning through because remember once you're talking about it is this uh this univ these universal time scales it loses all meaning the fact that it because then time means nothing

it could take a trillion years for the ***** because materialism is correct in that when you are doing the thing of studying human history the humans the structures that compose human civilization the skeleton of human social dynamics the human consciousness coming into it into itself you are getting the mental skeleton of the world spirit if you are doing that you have to apply material constructs because it is the material so we can only build accurate models by focusing on the actual existing stuff the things that pushed us through that time as a species the subjective 1:8:8 experience of the moment is gone and that's the dark matter of history what is it how much of the universe is dark matter similar amount of our understanding of the past is dark matter it is gone it dissolves because all that's left is our actions that come from them and they are such a small fraction of our actual uh felt experience of life and it is the felt experience of life that when crucial moments come determine our actions because there are always crucial moments for every person and then among people and those crucial moments determine fates and what makes those moments but you can't know it and the more that you project it which is what moral is a moralist history does and what what idealist history does if you project it because 1:9:9 idealist history is let's read the minds of people in the past that's what they say let's read the minds of our historical figures and we'll know why the past happened or you could look at what they did you won't have the full story either way but the story you tell from that will be more useful to you in understanding what the world is and how it works then whatever the ***** you're gonna get out of that self-projected fantasy that is entirely made up of your own and so that is what materialist history is it is powered by a spirit it is powered by ideas but the ideas can only be seen in their shadows you start from the assumption that these shadows are there but you 1:10:10 make sense of how they wrought themselves on the world by looking at the structures that they left what those people the decisions those the second law in my mind has not been because all propositions are true or false at certain layers of the cake the question is whether they're applicable to what you're trying to do and for me grand conceptual history and theory that i'm supposed to talk about to people so that they can think about them and then maybe having thought about them change their 1:11:12 relationship to the moment like they co-op live their life and because they heard something i said they decided to do a instead of b is that going to change history by itself no but those are the things that provide the context for people to change that are generated by changes in their so i should wrap it up so once again this is all just another uh mandala it's basically what i'm doing to bring you back to where 1:12:17 you always were with a fresh perspective or that's what i'm doing for myself so that when i do go out into the world when i do engage with questions about what to do with politics what to do with other people in my life that i'm remembering these things and the feelings that they all are connected to because at the end of the day all of this boils do not allow the uh the mind to take your feelings capture your feelings and use them against you which is what and that's some hippie ***** but you shouldn't be doing it if you have an actual useful job but if you are a little eloy floating in the in the uh uh in the amniotic sac of post scarcity where you have to keep yourself from going crazy which means you have to square the contradictions 1:13:18 of life square the contradictions of being the exploitation but that guilt needs to be worked through it doesn't need to be uh acknowledged as as like uh real because that's where protestantism shows up protestantism is when that gnawing voice in your head maybe we shouldn't be doing this say if you're a puritan bookkeeper who's like kicking people out of their homes in in early uh 1600s and there's a little voice in your head saying what are you doing you start to feel guilt and then you have to find a purge for it and how by showing god that you've loving him the most and showing god that you believe in him the most we can't believe in god anymore because we look too close we talk too deeply into greedily and we know too much so now we can 1:14:21 only feel guilt and have to constantly purge it to satisfy an other that we have created a psychological projection that judges us now and makes us punish ourselves or feel pleased now because we won't be in the future because we now have internalized the end of life as the closing of the and that is faith that is inverted what i'm saying is a rediscovery of faith that says okay what do i do about this if i don't feel good and then seeks out not to hide from it but to engage with it and that means engaging with the pain of others engaging with the herd of others and seeking to soothe it and by soothing it soothe our own and i don't know how successful i'm going to be at that because i have to admit to you guys this is a very soothing balm doing this 1:15:23 always who i feel so you know what i really am helping people and of course that's always going to be to some degree self-serving in the narrow self-defeating sense but there's other voices out there there's other choirs singing and i'm still hearing them and i'm still listening and i just am taking the moment to make myself feel ready to hear them when they start or when i can oh my god somebody says the soul as you know it cannot possibly exist the soul is the universe the universe as you observe it in the moment not as you look at it through the rearview mirror as you experience in the moment literally is a soul it is our souls all interacting through time and space both intimately intimately and over barriers spirit material there is no dichotomy we 1:16:32 can only we can only talk coherently about one or the other at a time and so we need different vocabularies to address one or the other but they are not they don't negate each other they only negate each other in our minds which is why we have to keep that in our heads at least i do the beauty part is that once you start acting acting out of this motivation you don't have to think about it so much you don't have to think it'll present itself as the right thing to do because you're not doing it in your head you're doing it in the world and you're getting feedback from the world you're getting emotional feedback from the world and then you will follow that hot hot hot and then you don't have to think so i'm hoping i can balance my way towards that 1:17:38 over time we'll see i'm hoping that i can put this down translatable because yeah like it is part of what makes me feel motivated to do these is the image of it helping somebody somewhere which is very pretentious but also

hey there little red riding hood you sure are looking **Music playing** like to hold you if i could oh what full lips who have the better to love you with little red riding hood even bad walls can be good i try to be satisfied just to walk close by your side maybe you'll see things my way before we get to grandma's place gonna keep my sheep suit on till i'm sure that you've been shown alone ether everyone's aware of what's happening here ah here we go man the forever purge i'm so pissed all right so i have a long relationship with this purge franchise first i remember distinctly when i first heard about the purge it was not even seeing the movie it was reading in on one of those awful movie websites years ago when i would just do that all day uh just indulge in this you know a hamster ball just spin around in the wheels of like observing this culture and uh instead of actually doing anything with my life this is just a really cheap way to get around the classic home invasion problem plot problem of why don't they just call the cops like you have to do something to explain why this house is going to be invaded over the course of this long without them you know being able to raise a neighbor and get people involved outside of uh the house you can only you know how how many times can it be a remote farmhouse in the middle of nowhere uh so hey what if crime is legal it just felt like a plot cop-out and then the movie really did confirm that the movie is uh is really just a very but then with the second purge which is a really really good movie uh it seems like they're actually grasping that oh like what would it actually mean to do this like what what what would our society basically have to look like to have that be a thing and how would it impact things and in that respect it got interesting and those movies i mean obviously you know they're not revolutionary documents nor they should nor should they be but this is a rare case where the infiltration of like political uh text uh is actually helpful because it's still in the realm of just you know pulp entertainment it's as far as you can get from something that someone can really think is going to be politically meaningful it's it's it's yes it's politics but it's politics as aesthetics as it should be which is watch a movie and you know get riled up like like a john carpenter movie it's like they they live i think would be would be a good comparison to the purge movies in terms of their their uh their text level like how much how uh how uh expressly political the texts are it's about on par with they live which i think is a great movie so it's in that tradition and all those movies have explored parts of it to better less degrees the election night is uh okay it's a bit of a letdown there's some good stuff in it but uh it really does sort of uh i mean obviously you know politically it's it's very lib it's very koutsky as opposed to lenin but uh that's really 0:5:8 not the problem the problem is that it doesn't really take that whole like electoral element interestingly enough they don't they don't do enough with it uh and also their idea of like our ruling class is too parochial it's too bush era you know it's like oh it's it's crazy christian fundamentalists like no that's not it uh the the first purge i think was really good the the first purge meaning the third or the fourth purge movie very confusing does something really interesting with the concept in terms of making it uh you know this overt political document this like 70s style agent prop but is marred by among other things the use of ***** cgi instead of squibs and bullets 0:6:11 and it's just it's very distracting they cheap out and it just so it's like a video game and you don't get like if this this genre is about viscerality this genre is about cheap thrills and that means when you see somebody get shot you want to imagine that that really is blood exploding out of their chest i know that's sick but that's what you're trying to get out of these movies it's like some part of it is and then they did a purge tv show and very quickly it dawned on me when that was announced how that they really did not the people who made this stuff the guy's name is like uh james deangelis or something is like the the the uh the singular genius behind the purge franchise is that they don't really get what's interesting about it they just keep hitting the same beats over and over again as many people have pointed out there's nothing in these purge movies about what other than people running around and ritually murdering each other people would be doing on that night because yes 0:7:13 i don't i don't think you can downplay that there would be some significant ritual violence during something like this this society has reached a point of boil where that would absolutely be the case are you kidding people act like it's the purge is uh there's millions of people in this country who act like the purge is real every day of their lives is this in terms of their practical uh application and and we know the but there's so much else that could be going on and they really hit a wall creatively because they did a purge tv show and i thought oh you know what would be great here an anthology series where it's the different story every episode with a different thing happening in the purge and maybe they're all part of one greater uh like plot that gets tied up at the end but mix it up and instead they just did another thing that they done they did before and then only even more ham-fistedly political than 0:8:14 anything before and then amazingly they did a second season on the tv show where the purge ends in the first episode and the rest of it is people is people like uh trying to investigate what happened like at the very end of the purge and so it's not during the purge and now this new one is the like anti uh ice anti uh immigration or anti-borders uh you know politically like what the uh the first purge was clearly the black lives matter purge and and the this new forever purge is the uh is the uh immigrants rights movement purge and i gotta say that's not that interesting to me especially if you're gonna say yeah now it's forever the purge is forever and it really does show that if you're not gonna get interested in the context uh in your like high concept it's gonna wear out quickly it uh it's what it says is they didn't know what else to 0:9:17 make it to do to make it interesting so i'm saying there's other things they could have done if they were a little more creative like do some comedy do financial crimes do like com complicated stuff you could do some amazing like uh farce with the uh like splitting the hairs between like the levels of weapon that are that are uh you know allowed to be used and stuff like that well happened um well there you go not 0:10:30 gonna lie this ***** ikea ass chair uh it was held together with like bolts and it just absolutely exploded oh well i really should just stop talking now because what would any why would anyone listen to anything i'd ever have to say after that good lord 0:11:31 wouldn't own god damn i just got so owned now fair enough cap that if you must because what am i going to do you know it happened exploded hey well i hope that was pretty funny i hope it was funny damn annihilated r.i.p to me all right boy all 0:12:39 right i don't know i don't know i'm gonna follow that but let me give it again give me a minute ah well uh so anyway uh yeah thumbs down to oh yeah i know i'm in i'm in 0:14:0 my i'm in a new reality now i'm not i i didn't really even look at the sopranos thing i'm not that interested it look i mean i'll watch it probably but i don't know and i'm really not i'm not a fan of prequel stuff at this point it really does feel like the tail eating the the the ***** the snake eating its own tail like culture consuming itself into extinction like cannibalizing itself because we cannot there is no money to be made uh reliably in uh trying to create a new world for people to believe in because 0:15:2 they have no belief left so all you can do is take those scraps of things that have worked the things that have like proven themselves to have some sort of symbolic power and uh and just put more money into that and you can say oh they might try to do something good but like it's essentially the same artificial constraints on storytelling that happen with the ***** superhero movies like you are constrained you aren't able to tell something that maybe would be more authentic to the artist whoever that might be they're kind of chained by the existing intellectual property literal intellectual property like that's that's how uh it's organized i mean like i think better call saul a lot of people love it but for me that is the number one example of what i'm talking about better call saul feels like it to me it could have been a 0:16:3

really interesting show if the original elements of it hadn't been i mean i really did not what really turned me off that show was when we found out oh how how hector got uh his got in a wheelchair yeah that would that was something that was an uh an unanswered question of of like significance like that's not the kind of set dressing that you just take for granted in any story you hear it only gains mythic relevance afterwards when you're trying to build on this ***** this carcass this artistic corpse that you're just trying to pick over so uh no thank you to uh the whole trend of things that are just and also i'm sorry how we get from uh how we get from jimmy mcgill 0:17:4 to saul goodman is not uh an interesting uh arc to make as the basis for your show because that's not what anybody liked about saul goodman he was in a story that was about that that was about like a a regular person becoming a criminal like that was the whole mr chips to scarface and you're you're just saying hey remember that 0:18:13 uh arc thing that happened here it is again with a different character it's the way that when they made that solo movie now maybe lord and miller uh had a good idea for a solo movie that they fired them for making because it was too uh outside of the brand of star wars but what they ended up making with ron howard is ***** and one of the big reasons it's ***** is that it recapitulates the arc that han solo has in the first trilogy you're just having his character have the exact same conversion towards caring about the rebellion that he had in that movie and you could say oh maybe he gets disillusioned again between then and star wars but who ***** cares and that's 0:19:14 because it had to be in this box it's it's all cannibalism you're cannibalizing the corpse of like emotional connection that people have to these existing intellectual properties and then just trying to smuggle in this stepped-on dog ***** because who really cares about any of this stuff artistically everybody is doing this stuff has already made so many compromises internally away from what they would want to do artistically that they essentially can't stop themselves because they are once you're cooked into the system once you've accepted a certain level of comfort in life and a certain level of ease and lack of alienated labor you take that for granted and then you organize your idea of art your idea of what matters around that and all of 0:20:16 a sudden you find yourself becoming much more liberal much more much less and then you make things in that mold and it's not as good as the stuff you would have made if capitalism wasn't determining your in your motives in that moment and it's like i'd rather not celebrate this decline i would rather like hold a standard just because if you don't you will be drill sucked into the abyss you will be pulled into uh uh abstracting away from yourself all of your emotions and and vigor not and life and connection not around the world in your moment not around life experience but as life remembered in the form of these symbols these dead symbols that you're gonna and that is the challenge that we all in our lives the things we do every day 0:21:21

the choices we make every day by what we think of as our material interest so this is the essential insight of marxism right or one of them anyway i could say maybe the most essential in terms of building like an understanding of human is that people are driven at base by their material interests not an idea in their head not any ideology nothing but what is good for them in in now through those people all interacting with each other they build structures that create new relationships and those new relationships alienate us away from certain elements that we have taken for granted and then all of a sudden we find ourselves in new arrangements against capitalism 0:22:22 perhaps but because of our our lives lived but always through the pursuit of material interest and the pursuit of material interest determines everyone on every part of the chain that it is not the exclusive providence of the evil rich they're not choosing to be self-interested because they're choosing evil they are being self-interested because we all are and they're better at it because they're already next to money that gives them more time to focus on it it gives them a better ability to coordinate amongst each other but it is still uh self-interest it's the same way that class consciousness develops among the working class because of mutual conditions of exploitation and it is understood oh my self-interest would actually be uh advanced by uh the collective self-interest being advanced and that we could do better together than alone and separate against these forces that's the forge that creates class consciousness and it's all generated by material interests now that insight is uncomfortable for a lot 0:23:23 of people to accept and undermines a lot of people's uh uh credulity when they're engaging with these notions is that if that is true then there is no position for free will that we are we are fully determined in this condition if that's true it is clear cause and effect we're like pin we're like billiard balls in which case how are we to live even if it's true it's just like any question of free will you have to assume free will so what is the use of this doctrine if it proposes a mechanistic understanding of the universe where we have no place for agency and the answer to that in my view is that when you say material interest you are not some sort of super naturally idealistic form of what this person should do in every situation that is not the material 0:24:24 interest what the material interest is is an individual's perception of their self-interest which means it is not just pure profit seeking its profit seeking wrapped around all the cultural forms that that person has absorbed given where they emerged what community they lived among what norms governed them what values they absorb what things do you want and what things do you not want and that doesn't just mean sensation it means social esteem it means a sense of security and safety it means love it means all of those things and those things are not perceived as a uh market exchange they are perceived as human interaction and experience which means they wrap up around cultural they're wrapped up and then reified through culture the steam rising from the vents of and so when people are trying to get figure 0:25:25 out what their self-interest is they are it is they are sorting through their uh culturally imposed uh values and then applying that to the question of every every material relationship in their life so that means that material interests are only self-perceived and that is why capitalism is suicidal because there is no break that can be applied once it is fully uh uh once the machine is fully in motion and the momentum has accumulated sufficient the the brakes because if the only motive is material interest in the most narrow sense you will eventually get to a situation where competition spurred on through technolo and technological competition over resources is going 0:26:31 to because as resources go away as entropy enters the system extraneous conceptions extraneous notions other than self-preservation can no longer be afforded and so all of that gossamer falls away and what's left then is material interest and that is why at the sharpest ends of the distribution material interest is most self-aware people if the very wealthy understand their material interests much more usually i mean that that's going away but that's going away for all of us because we're getting demented our brains are being destroyed by capitalism we're being hollowed out by because the algorithm says uh extract value of others for oneself it is taking the labor of others 0:27:32 and holding it them yourself and using whatever degree of culture and technology is necessary to maintain that relationship it is it is exploitation and that can only go and that can only operate if there is not a human understanding of value that is not self-interested otherwise the self-interest becomes narrow all community bonds explode and are shattered and are replaced by regimes of technological enforcement that alienate us fully from ourselves so but at the very top end material interests are felt at the bottom material interests are felt because material interests are how do i stay alive how do i stay alive how do i keep a roof over my head material interests are well understood the land of politics is the land in the middle is where we live the land of politics is for those people who are comfortable enough to have a conception 0:28:34 of uh of self-interest that is beyond oneself because they have some sort of faith in a community to maintain their security and to to provide them with the chance to advance to feel the good things we want to feel to feel all the good stuff and to not feel the bad stuff that is the basic the basis of a material interest we want to feel the good feelings and that is what we want short of all uh language but what that means has a cultural dimension the more in the middle you are the more precarious you are where the more you feel the need to invest in politics as a mechanism to change things because it makes you feel like you're in control at one end people know they're in control at the bottom end people know that they're not in control and can't be in control only in the middle is there a fantasy of control but of course control goes away 0:29:38 at every control is going away at every level so it's all relative so at the one end they understand their material interests more because and they have an ability to control things more but that's going away too our powerful as i've said before are unique in world history and that there is no earthly authority that supersedes all authority that means we are governed by the algorithm of self-preservation everyone for themselves because we're at the end of the the uh that we're at the uh point where the entropy has exacerbated through the system so much that there's uh they're going to it's going to destabilize the structures that allow the distribution of resources that we call um it will all be undermined by self-seeking narrowly understood self-interest 0:30:54 because we won't be any money to afford anything else and technology will have taken over enough of the decision-making that there's going to be plenty of room for the people who can be rich and live with themselves while the machine grinds everybody else up and that really is a fight that's the civil war uh that defines politics in america it is a civil war between different factions of our ruling class between the fixed capital of of of the uh of like the land-based economies uh of the american hinterland versus coastal uh finance capitalism and they're they are two ends of a pole defined by time and space coasts uh central uh areas uh uh former agricultural and industrial bases and coastal areas of trade and finance most importantly and then 0:31:55 the cultures that are arrayed around them are all cultures of those middle sectors representing those that's our that's our politics it's a civil war between these factions that can no longer recognize each other because of the atomizing and isolating uh and depersonalizing and alienating effects of capitalism it's stripping the rich of their sense of autonomy too and they're expressing it through alienation from each other through much narrow self-seeking through a lack of any long-term investment in any stable uh uh economic and that is why you get a situation where the rich 0:33:0 are steering the boat for in terms of human in uh human agency the wealthy the transnational the predicted by march marks transnational uh bourgeois that actually run this thing that move the levers of this ***** thing that play the they have less and less discretion over what to do than anybody in their position in history even while they have more actual control over it than any other group of people on earth and that means that they predominate they're able to express their will what they think is their will on an unprecedented number of people thanks to technology and globalization but they're not even in charge and they don't they don't feel in charge and their the breakup of civil society is their uh their the lack of faith the the crisis 0:34:1 of faith they're having in the state control and that's not what any of those rich people would want to have happen they don't want this to happen they're trying they've been trying to steer the ship away from this their whole lives and everybody in charge has always been trying to steer away from this but the runway has run out the brakes have failed there's too much uh feedback in the loop now it's destabilizing

things and so people have willed us here without wanting it to be the case people have willed us here without it being their direct desire and that is why material interest is not deterministic because it is it ends up depending on how all of us as individuals process the world around us and then individually like try to live in that world as liberal subjects is not their interest it is the interest that their society gives them it's what it's the values that they have been raised and observed absorbed and that how that happens is an individual thing it's not your demographics as destiny it's your demographics as setting for an experience that shapes you one or another way in a way that is individual it truly is and that means it's it is unique to everyone that there is no cl uh material interest that transcends the individual but there are aggregated uh behaviors that organize around these material interests and then those end up inscribing themselves on the land and then that those are the ones that build institutions and that build legitimacy and then a language around them a vocabulary around them and uh a coordinated effort around them the self-interest of the ruling class the self-interest eventually of the working class that is how those things and so that would also seem to be fixed you're saying yeah but these things are determined and you're fixed in this web of of like demographics and happenstance but you're also moving through time entropy is entering the system things are moving the uh the butterflies are flapping their wings which means you're re-encountering the world at every turn and in every moment you have new relationships to all of the things around you your relationships to labor your relationships to uh culture your own identity and those and that is where new forms come from that then and that's why for an individual at the individual level the challenge is to recognize where you are in this chain and try to just break the break the machinery break the mechanistic rel determined relationship between a stimuli and your reaction to it not your necessarily your thought because that's gap is the only freedom any of us really have that little moment in time where we can consider and then and then change our perception and change our approach to the world that we're and that is cope that needs to be said this is all incredible cope and yes of course because all of these thoughts i've been having are in the context of recognizing that the war between the classes was won that we are now in a crisis of capitalism because the the breaks the class resistance that counter edumatic resistance to capitalism used to provide are broken that doesn't mean that new structures won't be forged out of this crisis but it is a terminal crisis and so the question of what to do probably isn't at the level of who do you vote for certainly not for president maybe at the local level and i would say at the local level yes because you might be able to build actual uh actionable networks out of those uh relationships because they're people who are in the same area but that like national electoral politics where you're talking about oh oh are we gonna add dc as a state to get a few more senators as though there's anything like the time to address the situation through those channels without a direct channel challenge to the very edifice that they are part of i think is unrealistic that doesn't mean people shouldn't vote but it certainly means that if you are counting on voting to be where the the action is and not just sort of a 0:40:13 a social ritual a re-commitment of yourself to a commonwealth uh a entertainment element that keeps you invested in the world around you and and keeps you talking to other people because remember well this stuff might matter it's what people care about so you want to be able to talk to people about it you want to be engaged because that's how most people understand politics but the results that happen there are not going to be determinative the results that happen locally are going to be determinative the results that create robust infrastructures of resistance are going to be what matters and that's why i think in la for example where i've recently come uh there's a very impressive effort to uh make an attempt to grab control of the uh the city council uh in la uh from like the coalition of of you of you know unions and machines that run it now now of course the terror there is everyone 0:41:15 thinks immediately aoc oh god we're talking about all of the awful uh questions of sheep dipping and and uh that happens because those ***** representatives have no accountability to anybody what the ***** can anybody do about aoc no one who who thinks that she's part of their team or wants to kick her out of the tent of their team has any real influence over her but the local level at the council level you can actually potentially because especially because the voting pools are generally smaller and more concentrated you can actually wield block-like influence over uh your local politicians in a way that changes the stakes and makes you have to reorient your whole upper uh understanding of what the politics are it makes you have to give up 0:42:16 a lot of your ego based uh fixations on uh like ritualized positions on things for one like you might actually have to sacrifice some uh uh idealized notions on the altar of um of practicality which had never come into anybody's mind because no power has ever been wielded on the left if you do get local local power it's going to come with the necessity of realpolitik that i don't think a lot of people are ready for because purity politics has been the sum total of politics for most people's adult lives there's been nothing other than your the purity of your position and this isn't to blame anybody for that it's not to say you're being a culture of narcissist pmc because of that there is no other thing to base it on because there is no actual power there is only a daily like self understanding of who you are in a fallen world what else are you supposed to do but when power is on the table you have to reorient yourself 0:43:20 and it's going to be a big challenge and i honestly don't know how it's gonna shape up it could create up like a bad feedback loop that generally genuinely does like uh

undermine everything or you know uh it could be a situation where the momentum of power has its own converting ability its own um its own uh persuasive power like if you actually get something done as opposed to be told something's gonna get done and then it never actually does if you actually have a situation where you vote someone for someone if they don't you stop so they do what you want them to do if you actually have that the stakes change and it more than anything clarifies 0:44:22 action because your decisions are not no longer well what position am i going to take on this because all i'm going to be doing all day is reinforcing what i believe by expressing it to other people what if i'm actually doing something like participating in something like active in it all of a sudden the stakes are much closer to my moment and it clarifies what i should do because the actual moment can be viewed clearly because it's in front of you it's not in the ether it's not in this machine that rewards novelty and righteousness and that is why i think the uh absolute the only response to have uh to this whole stupid online argument about stalin and whether he's good or bad the most tedious argument ever one of them anyway that comes up over and 0:45:23 over again uh can be answered by not ch by not even engaging with the the the genuinely bourgeois sentimental ***** about number of bodies and stuff like that which anyone with elementary understanding of material analysis would say that's ***** uh ***** churchill had six million uh bengalis on his hands and he he ***** laughed about it throughout the entire war he thought it was he thought it was uh basically a giant like prank from uh one of his disgusting who cares about that stalin was a ***** coward a ***** and a loser and that's what matters stalin did an incredible thing in building the soviet union if you want to give him credit for it which is of course stupid in the first place because another reason all this discourse 0:46:24 is ridiculous there's no the power does not reside in the person that way you're actually doing like mysticism to imbue one dude with the entire uh like uh agency of the soviet project that's stupid he built this thing him and him in the system that he presided over created this formation this thing that was not capitalism that was developmental without the profit at the heart of it now it was as capitalism had been in insanely bloody in its development had rung blood from stones had turned peasants into mulch because that's what you do that is what's that's what progress and civilization is it is pulling people away from the land it's pulling resources away from the land it is reducing uh uh reducing miles basically in the countryside so that 0:47:25 consumption can happen in the cities and that is where you build state you build capital you build an economy you build state capacity you build something that can compete on the westphalian stage of of state competition that emerged in europe in the 18 17th century which is the context for all the developments of capitalism and soviet communism and everything else that is that is the the train that gave birth to everything and so communism did what capitalism did it killed a lot of peasants and it effectively distributed resources enough to leapfrog historical development stages far faster than capitalism would have allowed for because capitalism parcels out that violence and parceling out that violence was harder for the soviets because their empire was a multi-ethnic empire their empire was relatively homogeneous as opposed to the empires of europe which were so you could have safe cozy social democracies in the heartland and brutal extraction at the edges couldn't do that in the soviet union everybody's a slav basically certainly everybody where there's any and so you got to do it to your own people which makes your system poisonous in in in world memory in a way that the european imperial powers aren't because of that so they did what the capitalism did much faster to their own people and they fought off an existential attack by this monstrous national capitalist mutant in the form of the the nazi state that was going to solve the problem of of of capitalism and culture under capitalism by creating a a master race for who who would have all rights and therefore all liberties and all material uh uh all material interests met any kind of conceivable material interest met and then other humans who are either extinguished or provide the slave labor and are outside of humanity essentially libertarianism because libertarianism is the same end state it is not the end of human misery and human exploitation and suffering and oppression it is the cordoning off of that into another group the soviet union didn't do have that they did it internally but it gave them a chance to fight off this uh attempt to snap off a a middle-class society and just dominate the world with it technologically they weren't there yet international capitalism was the only force in the world with the ability to organize and coordinate material relationships because it had been developed in the anglosphere it had been developed in the american common law tradition of free real estate and ex appropriation of a foreigner the assimilation into an into a cultural infrastructure that made it more supple more able to coordinate resources and able to and it was the survival of the but then the soviets who had who had turned away from the permanent revolution had turned away from igniting the war in europe that everybody understood needed to happen to save the soviets from doing what they did to their peasantry he cut off that possibility to save the soviet experiment because he thought otherwise it was going to collapse and maybe he was right the only other off-ramp for this was bakarin buying off the peasants and slowly reintroducing capitalism in the countryside which honestly might have been the best choice but i understood i stand why they didn't do it and if they don't do it then you have to foreclose on the world revolution you have to become another state among states mercilessly competing for power for self for for survival but then you do it and then you get to the end of it and then you ***** turn up your belly your final chance with the final confrontation with capitalism that you've spilled oceans of blood to afford and you ***** out because you are too addicted to your to your position you're either if you're stalin or anybody in the soviet bureaucracy you are too addicted to the comforts of not bourgeois society but whatever a new bureaucratic class that they composed they weren't going to give it up there was a chance that they could have given it up if they had really embraced cybernetics in the 50s and 60s and created machinery that could reproduce the price signal but then what would they have had to do bureaucracy is necessary to the is it needs to exist to the degree it's necessary but if material interest is dominating people and because these are still western subjects these people were not these people were essentially not the workers who arose to take over soviet union it was this cadre of of agitated middle classes who seized control of the of the bourgeois state in the 1917 uh revolution but once you have a self-sustaining bureaucracy its understanding of the good of this of uh the revolution the good of communism becomes the their own self-interest and they don't even recognize that the two are identical and they pursue one in the other thinking they're doing the best thing for the soviet union but they're really undermining it from within no no we can't allow the price signal to be determined rationally because then what are we gonna do are we gonna have to get real jobs are we gonna have to work in a factory too are we gonna have to do useful socially useful work too ***** no that's what they signed up for though when they decided to play the game after the civil after uh world war ii when they decided to fight the west on the terms of markets and outputs and consumption and economic development through consumption and that wasn't khrushchev's fault people put it on khrushchev it was stalin's fault this needs to be emphasized solon set the stage so that by the time khrushchev took power he had no other options the other option was barrier trying to do glass nose 50 years earlier i don't know if anybody is aware of this but uh if any if you saw death of stalin they really uh they speed things up very quickly uh beria was head of a troika that ruled after stalin's death for almost a year before zhukov and khrushchev uh got together to coo their asses barrier's move was to essentially in exchange for a russian marshall plan stepping down out of a conflict with um capitalism completely a formal surrender that was barry's bottom line this monster one of the most disgusting ghouls to be coughed up by the stalin estate and he was he would have been the man of the year he would have been the hero of the millennium in the west if he had pulled that off and khrushchev could him and yes then he pursued botched agricultural policy and a consumer economy but he had to because stalin had set the stage because stalin even after building that state was afraid to use it when the time was right stalin after the war is in the same position the german social democrats were after world war one and he made the same decisions and the russian because they had been bourgeoisied by their conditions of life and traumatized of course by the ***** purges uh and just the the sheer um you know uh trauma of the war of the civil war years and of the ***** famine and years and maybe he doesn't have to go to war over greece right away but he has to not do what he did which was allowed bretton woods the ***** anaconda plan of bretton woods system to strangle russian ***** communism by turning it into a maximal because yes oh we got to feed these uh we got to get out consumer goods for these people how are we going to do that whereas in the west get give more of these material comforts to your working class and they don't they get to they have to work less because somebody else in the third world is working more somebody else in the newly created third world is working more so he gets to work less so he'll keep working and maximal efficiency meanwhile if all you're offering is consumption and they can in the consul but there was no other way they could have they could you can't win you can't win if you're operating from an idea of material interest that is selfish you will you will eventually commit oh somebody says the soviet union needed control of the hellespont period the ***** czars knew it the czars were the dumbest people on earth and they ***** knew that you needed the hellespont if you were gonna compete with europe russia was too backwards to compete with europe unless they had something like did stalin direct his post-war foreign what he did was he allowed capitalism to gather its strength to wage a war in the in the rest of the world to dominate and control resources in terrains that the soviets were afraid and making them putting them in a putting them in checkmate allowed by because salon stalin let the west set the chessboard he let the set he let them set the conditions of play before so that is why i think there is nothing more tedious than argue about whether somebody says i have incurable alternative history brain that is 100 accurate i copped that i am uh i'm all about the counter factual but as walter shile has pointed out counter factuality is literally how you think of history you can only relate historical realities by contrasting them to things that didn't happen so you're creating a ghost image of history as you conceive of it and then it's always going to be intriguing to just wonder where the intersections are where the portals were between one determined reality and another because i really do believe that that randomness is in the system sufficient to create wormholes of possibility that are both that are that bore through every other over-determined physical interaction and that in that is the sum total of human agency the the awakening of the world spirit is in that it's the ghost in the machine that is slowly being extinguished like our spirit is being extinguished by capitalism it is not over wrought or adversaries to say that in a very real sense this gets me back to material interest our understanding of our material interest is different than it used to be at every level of society at every level of experience people living now experiencing this world now are doing it with a more impoverished sense of interest a more personally focused less communally 1:0:50 validated notion of and i want to give an example of this not divided by from us necessarily to them but within time space so when i say that i say everybody now has a different and more narrow understanding of material interest than they used to that means that every level of society so every type of person that exists now that fills the ranks of our social classes and reproduces social behaviors now people to the degree that that same it's still situated with other ones but within them they all had a more socially capacious understanding of self and material of material interest so to contrast two different people or three different people i guess within one time 1:1:53 span across uh like personal axes of experience uh as anybody seen the movie uh the founder about ray kroc starring michael keaton a very very good movie directed uh written by uh robert siegel the guy who also wrote big fan and directed big fan which is also a very good movie so i'm gonna do some slight spoilers here the movie is about how uh the process by which this this itinerant salesman uh this guy had been on the grind trying to get rich with like ronco level schemes since uh world war ii uh ray kroc uh finds these uh brothers who had created a new system for uh for fast food delivery literally uh an efficient distribution of labor within a within a kitchen to vastly increase the output of a restaurant and he and the movie is about how he 1:2:55 got his brothers to sign over to him to allow him to franchise it his creation of this franchise model that consumption of the brothers he ends up buying the brothers out of their control of the company uh taking away their restaurant that they had created where this the first mcdonald's so that they had to call it something else and then he put up a mcdonald's just destroyed these guys who had actually created the thing and that's the story and it's about my and michael beaton plays the guy so the mcdonald brothers and ray kroc these characters are all what we would call capitalists right by the within i mean by the time uh croc is like income is fighting them by the time croc is is exercising control the company these are all capitalists but 1:3:56 they do not share material interests even though they are the same class even though they're part of the same project the mcdonald brothers in a sequence that's one of my favorite scenes in recent movies and something that honestly they could teach i'm not surprised the prager university hasn't used this thing as a p pay on to the glories of capitalism like this is a story that is like would be in any textbook to talk about that wants to talk about the possibility of the american dream which is that you can through your own ability will gumption and vision and creativity you are able to write your will in the world that is the american dream writing your will in the world is the dream of socialism too but it is a collective dream we don't have that we have the individual dream that is our material and it is depicted in this thing where uh the 1:4:58 brothers played by nick offerman as uh as rey and uh john carroll lynch aka zodiac as

uh as maurice mac mcdonald and the ray kroc sees the restaurant is blown away by it sees their system takes them to dinner and wants to hear the story and they tell it and you can tell right away that they've been waiting to tell this story to somebody they're incredibly proud of it they tell it with theatrical panache uh john carroll lynch is just like absolutely hamming it up in a very very credible way nick offerman is like doing this very bemused uh under stated thing they're clearly just having a ball because they did this thing and they want someone to know about it and they tell the story about how these guys came from new hampshire to l.a to be in movies and i think that's incredibly important these guys didn't want to be capitalists they had the artist's spirit their first instinct was not to start a business it was to get in on the dream factory maybe you start as a grip and make your way up to a director you get to be a stunt man or maybe you get to be cast as like one of those guys in a 50s movie like the comic relief uh who who has his uh pants all the way up to here and then they they were like extras they were stunt man they washed out of the thing then they tried to do a movie theater they wanted to movie theater if they couldn't be in the movies they wanted to be around the movies these are people who did not want their material interest their understanding of their interests was not material acquisition over everything they wanted something else something that could only be achieved socially through expression and and then the movie theater was killed by the depression and then they had them find something to do so they were at a restaurant and then they applied their artistic temperaments to the restaurant and it was literally the bringing together of these two artistic temperaments this guy who wanted to create a machine a beautiful machine and this person who wanted to uh package it and express it built this thing and there's the montage of them sketching out the kitchen on a tennis court and having people go around there's one scene there's one shot where nick offerman is literally standing over these people coordinating the actions waving his hands like he's a conductor going relish ketchup he's literally ray kroc here's the story now ray kroc has no creative anything sky has no desire to be uh appreciated for his soul his self-expression he wants to be recognized as better than somebody else higher up than somebody else this is a guy who has spent his whole life trying to get rich has lived beyond his means he's probably married to a rich woman he lives in uh goes to a country club with a bunch of rich guys who all look down on him he's the perfectly aggrieved nixonian subject he's been he is a 50 year old man who's reciting the same spiel about ***** uh malt uh malt machines to disinterested uh drive-in hosts and he's he has nothing left to care about uh anything other than getting getting some validation through uh advancement through social advancement power money all that stuff so here's the story and he just wants to make money out of it and so once they start the company

CUSHVLOG 170. MATERIAL BOY

the mcdonald brothers are keep pulling the reins on him keep saying no no don't 1:9:6 do this we have values that uh are transcend money and he's saying what are you talking about i just need to make money more and more and more i need money what are you talking about and these are both people on the same class position who share if you wanted to use one word for it of the same material interest but have different material interests as they understand them because they're different people who and that is true in every strata of both of those guys are republicans those those guys are happy to exploit labor for their vision are happy to use the capitalist system to their benefit but towards different ends towards a more social end and towards a personal acquisitive end and the thing about capitalism is that it is a magnet that 1:10:8 pulls people like ray kroc up and pulls people like the mcdonald because the system rewards the person who is most interested in making money by definition because that's what the system does it points like a north star those with an affirmative who are most aware of their self-interest as narrow who are most blind to abstract notions of value to socially stored systems and uh portions of value expressions of value i should say so they have different material interests and so over time ray kroc what do you know he gets the upper hand on the mcdonald's boys even though they had an iron clad contract he's able to get together with another guy who tells him hey you should have these guys be buying the land from you and then if you control the land your leverage changes he didn't think of that but he uses it to get to pry one over and to dominate the mcdonald's boys and to take it from them and to 1:11:9 impoverish them he runs them out of business even though they're both capitalists with the same material interest because his interests are more narrow and because they are he's willing to do things the mcdonald's brothers aren't and it means that eventually his power is socially rewarded enough that he's able to win because who cares what the law says the reality is if he's got more liquidity more access to capital than they do then there is no legal question that he won't win because he can wait them out yeah sue me i will drag it out and i have more money than you because he's willing to do things they won't because he's willing to cut corners they won't he's willing to ignore values that transcend money they won't and then that happens at every level of the economy over and over and over again that process happens so that now we have reached it's now 70 what 80 years later almost 100 years later 1:12:10 and now the mcdonald's are gone everybody is raykroc the mcdonald's have been driven out of the system pulled out those artistic talents they either lie dormant they are destroyed or somebody makes it on the margins of society or or takes a precarious labor falls out of power becomes politically so bad driving out the good exactly uh and it's all bad now there's only ray crocks uh there are still people doing art there's still people doing entrepreneurship they're still doing things that have

that associated historic relationship to self-expression or autonomy but they are now crabbed and broken and small and everyone who pursues them has compromised 1:13:12 so much that they don't get the pleasures they used to be out of it and so they have to reconsider their self-interest is more narrowly because there's no other place to get validated than narrow self uh pleasure had won't the ray crocs eventually turn on each other though i mean that's what we right now like in a larger sense the battle between the republicans and the democrats between those two capital and social formations is the battle between the people who are in the mcdonald's brothers positions not in terms of like ingenuity and and brilliance or anything but local local concentrations of capital are at war with the ray crocs only everybody is ray kroc the 1:14:14 only thing that still exists is the social distinction because they still do have different understandings of their material interest but they are no longer being defined by this conflict over values because the values have desiccated and fallen away they're now just the forms of the values they're just the shadows left by the nuclear incineration of the values it's private equity versus like the local uh uh tire store conglomerate or and those guys are those guys are like those type of guys are the actual social engine in terms of the people who made up the voters the candidates the ideology defense provide the money for the conservative counter reaction that started in the 50s it 1:15:15 was those aggrieved guys not the mcdonald's brothers who had a song in their heart it's the post-defeated mcdonald's brothers it's the ones who never had anything in the ones who were like local just power seekers and from the the it really you could pinpoint it from when robert taft had the republican convention stolen from him the nomination stolen from him by eisenhower and wall street you can begin that that is the beginning of the creation of the guys who stormed the capitol like that is that that was the the big bang of that specific social trajectory trump and then whatever 1:16:40 the hell we have now this this populist right so that's material interest it's what binds us it's in this uh deterministic web but it's also moment to moment what liberates us from it is the fact that there is until we get to the end until you become jeff bezos there is a sheath a human sheath around that understanding because remember we don't even know what our best interests are if they're abstracted beyond our noses so even our self even even there can be no objective perception of our self-interest even in the narrow even in the short term and of course then you get the con the conflict between the short-term and the but even beyond that you can't even know the virtualization of the economy is what this is all leading towards the creation of of 1:17:53 of cryptocurrency in general is is an example of that there the fact that you have uh you know facebook has a trillion dollar valuation at a time when you know real real construction total value of those industries is a fraction of that there's nowhere to put the money that can be profitably brought back in production there's nothing you

can produce profitably anymore the margins are too narrow it ends up costing more to make you we're at the end point that mark's predicted but it's being propped up by the creation of an abstract shadow economy taking those transactions and then generating economic activity out of those transactions out of the ether essentially creating fictions around them and then and then trading the fictions but that's all it is but because it's technological now because it is virtual because it moves at the speed of the global like cybernetic mind we've now reached the point where you can do micro transactions where you're you're you're trading stocks in a fraction of a second and accumulating guaranteed profits over time that can only happen because there's nowhere else for the money to go the money is being directed more and more into the virtual realm into finance into all this because there is nowhere else you can put it you put it in as a loss leader to finance now all actual productive capacity all our actual finance i wanted to say about croc is one of the great things about croc as a character as depicted in the film is that in contrast to the incredibly inventive croc learns nothing has no connection to anything his desire is totally unmoored from any uh any enjoyment beyond self-validation it's it's totally arid at the beginning of the movie while he's still trying to pep himself up to be a milkshake salesman he uh he's listening to this dale carnegie tape or this dale carnegie uh um record on a portable player in his hotel room and it's just this spiel about how persistence is the key to success and he's repeating it and he's repeating it and then he goes through this whole thing where he gets the mcdonald's brothers and he he swindles them out of it he takes credit for it he calls his first franchise mcdonald's number one he starts referring him to himself as the founder he buys their name from them because it's clean and crisp and american and you can make it into anything at the end of the movie he's giving a speech before ronald reagan when he was governor of california and it's like recapitulating everything that happened and he's practicing the speech in the front of the mirror and it's just this ***** dale carnegie uh record it's just the same thing he's been listening to for for 40 years just a hollow he's just it's just a all he can do is echo this voice saying grind persist because it's all that's ever animated nothing has been accumulated nothing has been learned uh and he spends the whole time succeeding because of the efforts of harder working or more uh more creatively minded collaborators who come up with things at every point that he then takes credit for because he's the guy with the money all right i've already gone but anyway so i think that's another reason that's a great movie because not only does it show you how capitalism develops it shows you what capitalism does to people and more importantly how the kind of people who thrive in it remake us in their image through their ability to persist like a ***** fungus like a bacteria and it can only be carried out by hollow people and and they they literally was my own fault my own laziness um so rumsfeld died today and i gotta say i understand why people want to like celebrate when that happens when one of these guys dies one of these ghouls actually dies it proves that they are not immortal reptiles although honestly do we know for sure that any of these people die do we know for sure that they're not just molting from one ***** flesh skin to another how do we know that they're not just peeling off their decrepit uh rumsfeld or h.w bush 0:4:14 uh archons that i mean these guys are archons these guys are they're so close to the center of evil and they're so uh consequential in the the misery of so many others that they're imbued with like real spiritual power i think they are sort of dark wizards i mean and you know we know for a fact that they all to some degree or another and you can argue about what degree that they all love performing rituals of power from getting your ass paddled and having to jack off in a coffin for to join skull and bones or like how david cameron the uh the uh uh prime minister who put his dick 0:5:17 in a pig's mouth they love ritualized performances of humiliation as like a gateway to power and then like indulgence uh as like a sacred ritual like like you are sacrificing millions on the altar of like your personal satisfaction and pleasure you have to have if you're a thinking pure person with a ***** heart and yes of course these people are all sociopathic but they also have they have identities that extend beyond that

CUSHVLOG 171. BOOK CLUB REQUESTS

they're not pure uh you know like nobody is purely self materially interested right like there's always something surrounding that and then they have to create channels to work through it they have to vent all the associated bad feelings that come with being in that position and they do that through ritualized indulgence or denial and of course that's the difference between powerful conservatives and liberals as denial versus indulgence but if you're when you're at the very top and that's what these people do from ***** bohemian grove to whatever the ***** they were doing on they have this ritualized uh gradation of power that is conferred through uh performance uh sallow got that 100 correct about like what is at the base of like he said he was talking about fascism but really any ruling power in in the moment of crisis like the whole context of sallow right is that that is the uh puppet regime that's the nazi puppet regime that was around um mussolini in northern italy after uh mussolini was rescued from uh italian like state custody that's the italian state that had uh overturned him and was negotiating surrender with the allies uh and imprisoned mussolini for his many crimes uh when he was busted out by of uh the like it really is some james bond stuff otto scorseni who was like the nazi james bond uh flew mussolini out of an island fortress on a ***** uh on a uh what do you call him a glider like you took a ***** glider it's wild and then they put him and a bunch of us like top fascist cronies up in charge of this puppet regime the sallow social republic that was quickly enveloped and destroyed and and uh was it finally over overrun by partisans communist partisans who captured mussolini and executed him and famously strung him up by his heels uh you know one of the people who participated in the firing squad that killed mussolini became a italian communist politician after the war and was actually inc so these uh the fascists who run italy or run this little portion of italy in the film in pocillini's uh film are consumed all in there consuming all of their time with these elaborate uh rituals of sadism where they take these poor young people and subject them to the most horrifying violence that is explicitly uh related to their erotic enjoyment of it they're not just watching it coldly it is it is sexual and it is a fusion of like sexuality like the the ba uh it is taking bodily connection and stripping it entirely of intimacy and replacing it with domination which is the end state of the ruling class in terminal crisis of death it strikes out at everything because it is isolated from everything and so eroticism is all of life all of life is aesthetics as it is under fascism and those aesthetics are of theatrical violence and cruelty and of course that's present in capitalism at every stage but when you get to the end point and the sen the south social republic it was 120 days just like sodom before it was overrun so these people were partying in a burning building and they all knew it nobody thought that they were in charge nobody thought that they were they had the ***** allies on the run they knew that these were the last days and they engaged as you would that means that when you get to the end of capitalism all that's left is dominion and a culture around dominion an intimate dominion that is required by the intimacy of crisis conditions necessitates necessitates an eroticized sadism now of course the reason we aren't having that kind of erotic explosion here is uh because we're so far from it because capitalism even though it is in a crisis where conditions of apocalypse are already here the rest of the people within these systems and the ones closest to the the organs of political organization legal authority uh and electoral structures access and proximity to technology uh and to capital flows 0:11:29 like the most are not experiencing that what they're experiencing is is the fear of it because they're seeing it around them and they're feeling bad about it but they don't feel the way that a guy in the room has to feel as they're carrying out some sadistic ritual they don't have to feel about it the way that the uh the way that the sallow aristocrats felt about it as in having to be there and having to really just turn your brain into something that finds that pleasurable fight against all human connection and all of your instinctive sense of of continuity with the universe but most people aren't going to do that and most people don't have to because they can afford to imagine that they're not benefiting from that more than they are being undermined 0:12:31 from it because they are aware of their own subject position we're not in charge of anything and so instead of confronting the horrors of the system that they're happening right in front of us we can perform rituals of either a cruelty simulated in the form of voting and like what t-shirt you wear and what you post online and remember this is a cruelty that is across the board of all liberal people who think that they're on top and think that when it comes to the the end of the line when they're when they're in the salo social republic they're assuming that they would be the ones uh uh who are the guests and not the the servants like if they close their eyes and put themselves in pasolini salo at the end of capitalism when it is the naked lunch at 0:13:33 the end of your fork instead of this machinery of ritual and technology and distance and geography and culture and spectacle to get you to uh detach from it and and operate within it and they say where are you going to be if we got those conditions now where would you end up we have elites and by that i mean even people uh who are aspiring to positions within the uh knowledge economy people who think i'm going to be a professor or i'm going to be a media professional i'm going to be a a influencer but for the left i'm going to ***** i forgot what i'm saying i'm going 0:14:35 to ritualize my anxiety about this situation about this horrifying precarity i don't want to be the one watching that i don't want to be the sallow person i identify with the other i have nietzsche's slave morality and so i can't even though i'm a ruler or i imagine myself that in the future i'll be a ruler so you have to create a situation where the people who are suffering have it coming and it's not your fault and you're understanding of the world that is what makes us on the notion that there is an outside exterior an outside of the transaction world where all of the friction accumulated in that transaction all of the social alienation that accumulates from subjects who are forced into these conditions all of the destabilization of the ecology that occurs from from changing things like carbon dioxide outputs and uh putting acid and ***** uh plastic in the environment like actually and in every one of those transactions that is assumed as the undergirding uh logic of the algorithm of profit extraction that thing that is not priced just happens somewhere else but there is nowhere else to account for it the thing that's supposed to account for it i would say in the telia if there's a teleology of marxism it is that this dark matter ends up creating its own articulation its own social uh reality that can then come into conflict with this broken system that cannot recognize what's in front of it that is the hope of class consciousness but the machinery of class consciousness so we're now in a point where there is just this accelerating crisis that will only be resolved by it starting to break up and change the conditions and relationships that undergird these dynamics because they can be arrested and diverted at every i've been listening to a very uh good podcast called uh fall of civilizations recently uh it's in the it's sort of in i would say it's sort of in between uh dan carlin and like uh mike duncan or something it's it's pop history but it's well researched and it's about different civilizations in decline and and it describing what those conditions uh what conditions brought it about and it's amazing when you exclude the ones uh where it's an outside invasion that emerges and changes like a rapid condition exogenously like like the uh the spanish invasions that you could argue that there were internal contradictions within the aztec state obviously there were but the definitive uh disruption of that relationship came from outside but then uh but excluding those where you have civilizations that collapse from within like the ***** uh like the mayas for example who started to decline long before uh the europeans got to uh latin america uh and or the the late bronze age uh or um greenland or the uh the thing that they all have in common is that humans came together to adapt to their environment to create a system that allowed them to manage the the dangers the scarcity that's the word the scarcity of their social conditions that uh is what starts the building of civilization some people sitting around thinking of things to do directing resources doing ritual ***** other people putting their nose to the physical grindstone of of creating a fixed agricultural civilization some working for it for others for others and then those people may be giving each other like some sort of uh payment to simulate an exchange that is like uh uh based on exploitation when really the exploitation is happening at the bottom uh and but the culture this is the important part as in the reified structures that people navigate mentally is created by the top the structure of this social order

is created at the top it might be made out of like uh a social relationship uh a distribution of job of people um and then like the actual infrastructure of okay we have surplus what do we do with it what do we build with it well let's build uh some ***** canals so that we can generate uh a more uh stable supply of uh of food so that we can have a larger population so that we can compete with and so that we can um we can we can maintain stability and the structures that are created by the people who are sitting around all day are dictated are are determined by that 0:24:58 this relationship where some work for behalf of others at the rate that they want they're dictating the terms and that will persist until a climate-related shift that is often but not always precipitated by these specific actions that these civilizations have taken to change their relationship to the land and their relationship to uh to like uh human habitation like hey we're gonna sell here we're gonna we're going to grow this here we're going to clear this land for more crops we're going to move this like that uh that is all those decisions are made by those who are benefiting 0:26:0 by the labor of others but they want to keep it that way so that means that when the feedback loop changes and those external uh changes to the uh the externalities put out into the uh into the ecology the shifts that have been put on the you know the the uh randomness generator of like the natural world all start pushing in the same direction and then that pushes back and when that happens when you have a uh system of drop when you have a bunch of droughts that overflow your water systems or that uh you have a diminishment of uh global temperatures that reduce uh your pr crop fecundity and and you have uh you run out of arable land and the arable land you have begins to be exhausted of minerals by over planting to sustain population growth that allows for the maintenance of your social structure and so 0:27:2 when those externalities start piling up the system cannot recognize the cause of them because it is made up of dark matter it's not built into the equation they don't understand it and so even though there are things they could do hypothetically to to address these crises and maintain homogeny maintain a social order maintain a social body they fail because to change in a way that would be amenable that would maintain the social order like greatly like the social body that you're part of would require those at the top to actually do some ***** work it would have to change the distribution of labor within the system oh we can't hyper exploit others so that we can have and have more efficient agriculture so that we can have more surplus that can be eaten in the cities and eaten into temples well we all dance around and 0:28:3 do blood sacrifices and uh and look at our ***** calendar to figure out why this is happening when the answer is right in front of our face and if we had applied the genuine um like presence of mind that that uh exemplifies the best imagined tradition of empirical uh science and engagement if we had the eyes that we had had

when we designed this system to confront the crisis now we could ***** lit lick it but it would undermine the social order because changing those structures knocks down and so over and over again the fall civilization is a civilization finding itself confronted with a change in the expectation of the uh the climate an expectation of how much water would come when how much fertility would exist in x amount of land how much how much calories you could get you could you could guarantee from a certain area because once you have a stable and sort of guaranteed house of calories you can start distributing them and you can just start distributing them to build institutions of technology of social technology of of literal technology and scientific mind scientific acuity and bring it to the like the the the thing that actually uh the mechanism that uh really does under gird alienated civilization pre-socialist civilization is uh this is the consumption is the urge the consumption of those at the top defines the culture it defines the actual superstructure and that is why the marginal revolution when it came really was the the triumph of capitalism as it into itself as a fully coherent uh concept that it says no lit production labor is not is not the value associated that is not where value comes from because the un fundamental idea that of the labor theory of value in my mind metaphysically is that because labor is unpleasant the labor that is alienated and all labor under under uh regimes of control is alienated because you're not getting the benefit of it and you're not choosing to do it you're not choosing to do it someone else is making you do it so it is alienated labor that is pain that accumulates in the system as feedback that has to be addressed that has to be sued that has to be transformed into something else and as long as culture is being made by people who produce even because there is a relatively small number at the top who are unable to whose culture is very uh contained like pre-modern civilizations they were what those guys were talking about and what they were making is much farther from the experience of the average person within that polity that is true in the modern world of mass uh literacy and mass media like those guys were living in a different world and inside the castles and inside the temples for one thing they could ***** read they could read and write which the vast majority of these people could not do culture and of course what the the temples are what's left so we look back and we say oh that's the civilization no that was this thing on top of the social order the the real the real culture was going on at the base but that real culture is gone we can't see it it's dissolved all we have left is this and now we all live in it we live in the temple because the temple is now the internet the temple is the internet and we all live in it everybody who got to this x point where they are alienated but but comfortable enough to put time into uh creating a identity that extends beyond themselves into a cyber realm where their actual subjectivity their human sense of self is no longer extricable from this network once we took over because technology allowed the smaller number a much larger group to emerge out of the exploitation of one the spoils of imperialism were 0:33:14 were measured out at at the top not evenly but over time which created more leisure and more technology more importantly more time to spend in the cloud which makes your reality part of the cloud in a way that previous people were fundamentally not like this is a difference this is where you go from a society that is that is bifurcated where we're only seeing half of it or or not even half by by uh only half by like uh relationship not half by numbers a minority that's what we get that's all we've ever had and that is what how you have to have in a society that is a pre uh that is dominance based but pre-modern that is class-based but pre-modern once you have 0:34:15 a modern social uh media once you have mass media you have uh taken huge chunks of people who are being exploited and who get to live in the realm of the rulers they get to live in the cloud with the rich people they get to live in the temple they get to live in the temple of their minds while their bodies and that is that's what's scary about the moment is that if we are at now a point where this dark matter that is now pushing against our social order that has accumulated since we went to a global system once we created a world system we created a closed economic system and all of our models are based on open ones every model we have of how humans interact and engage with each other are premised with interactions having externalities not priced in which means we're literally unable to see their contribution to this until it's 0:35:18 because you could argue it's too late i think that to avoid a breakup from within to avoid that crack that fall of a civilization but what that means is up to us because civilizations can fall in different ways there's no there's nothing i would say that necessitates the fall of this civilization to be a uh totally apocalyptic and gen and uh omnicidal one which i think a lot of people assume and of course there is a lot of comfort in assuming that if you assume that then you can kind of feel like well it doesn't really matter what i do in a real in like a metaphysical sense and in in another uh just more selfish you don't have to die worried about missing stuff which is what i think a lot of people feel or have felt especially in moments of progress oh man what 0:36:20 am i going to miss what what human heights are we going to scale that i'm going to miss you don't have to if you really think that that the light of humanity is going to be extinguished in the next hundred years you can really you can do the saturn the bakanali now how at some point it's going to get too sadistic and you're going to have to ask yourself what you actually care about but you can live in that gray zone for a while so that isn't to say that we aren't going to all die in 100 years or 200 years it is simply to say that any you cannot approach that question and answer it objectively because these are things that frankly none of us are equipped to know predicting the future is the hardest thing in the world understanding the past is impossible

predicting the future is equally impossible it is absurd to do so and uh it's it's one 0:37:21 of the lowliest intellectual pursuits and yet we can look at a question like this which we can break down into numbers like amount of carbon uh ex amount of carbon that we're producing amount of uh energy necessary amount of energy consumption all these questions you can look at them all and get a pretty good map of where we're going with nothing changes and of course that's the big if if nothing changes or if not enough change is fast enough but you're filling in the gaps in your own mind you are not getting some perfect understanding and rendering of this you are looking through a glass darkly and you're filling in the spaces with what you want to be true even if you don't know you're doing it this is the most important part it does not have to be conscious in fact it isn't if it was conscious you'd have to deal with it you get to keep it under and then it stains your reasoning like it does everyone's in a way 0:38:23 that you cannot perceive so everyone who's like convinced that that's the case you have to i think you should admit that the deciding factor in you believing that is not any uh extrapolation from data or rational response or considered thing it is the the seductive freedom the seductive indulgence that it suggests because you really could say like what i'm not really hurting anybody yeah i'm hurting a little people a little bit you know i'm i'm consuming carbon outside of my uh vastly outside of what i what i should as an individual i i uh subsist on the labor of other people in other countries and and uh uh the manufacturer uh and agricultural sectors to provide me with food even here domestically i take advantage of people through uh delivery services and servant apps but all that violence is sublimated and and 0:39:26 i really am in many ways not responsible for it so why not just have fun and it's like yeah you know what if you can convince yourself of that do it but at a certain point you're going to hit it where it doesn't work anymore the hedonic treadmill you will be left exhausted you'll be left a husk because the pleasures over time become familiar and therefore and also just the the the uh the sensuous uh energies the the chemical and hormonal uh and your physical components of of uh sensation forget even sensuality sensuality in general not even sexuality sensuality in general sensual 0:40:28 pleasures and those even include like the pleasures of uh the pleasures of like uh soporific indulgence are also those like being lazy is that too those all go that the ability to uh to feel sensuously is also adult physically and just through repetition and you're still going to be in this condition where you're headed towards the in the furnace but also feeling guilty and powerless guilty and uh miserable then that that can't be masked anymore and once you get to that point you have to say what do i do and the the the problem with trying to coordinate action among people who are all experiencing this is that everybody is at a different point in that trajectory the dream the fantasy the mystical uh hope of like a universal awakening comes from

the idea of everybody getting to the same point at the same time the same point 0:41:30 of this isn't working anymore and so we're all floating through space trying to grab each other and form a human chain away from being cast into the sun basically we are reaching out and grabbing at each other and we're being scattered through space by the momentum that we've had by our accumulated interactions we're just bouncing off of one another through space the only way we're gonna ***** uh avoid getting eaten by the sun is if we all get our hands together and move in the same direction and that by doing that we can change our uh our physical presentation our material arrangement towards the sun our relationship to it and that comes from 0:42:34 people reaching a similar point of disillusionment with the life as they've known it and a similar need to change directions to avoid catastrophe avoid avoid a crack up that's not going to happen naturally that would it would be too unimprobable that's just what it boils down to these are all random we're all in that random particles bouncing off of each other the odds that any of us are going to get into a point where we can have a meaningful moment of of clarity is is randomized too so it would be the ultimate lottery when it would not never it's just it would not happen but people are still always bouncing off of each other and they're always bouncing off of concepts and ideas and experience and they're all having experiences and when they line up the light right way like on a codex or a ***** a and then if that happens 0:43:39 you can change the direction that you're going you know those little those little if somebody saw gravity with clooney where he's going around on the chair and he's able to change his direction with the little oxygen spurts that those little moments are those little are our spurts that allow us to reorient ourselves but of course they're not constant i mean you'd have to be an ascended plane for them to be constant most of us are regular people we have flashes then we go back to being normal and then we have to live in that normal space until we have another flash but we can array ourselves in those moments between with little spurts and then increase the likelihood that we're going to bang into somebody else and maybe change their trajectory by making them have one of those moments and then you can start moving in a direction 0:44:40 with others and using just your bodily the accordion like muscle tension to so if you accept that your black-pilled convec convictions come from not your best rational mind but your most your worst most indulgent mind if you accept that and then operate from the premise that therefore you are still an agent of history you still have a a responsibility to yourself and everybody else to move through space and time in harmony with it because otherwise it will make you miserable forget everybody else this is the difference between puritanism and real spirituality is the puritanism says no the fact that you're not get you're not enjoying it is makes it better which of course creates the whole perverted uh superego uh dictatorship of the modern liberal 0:45:41

you do it because it feels good you do it because it is good for you it provides you to feel harmonious which is the ultimate the ultimate distillation of when we say what does it mean to feel good in any abstract sense what does it mean to feel right to feel home to feel safe secure to be validated is in harmony with the moment most of us never feel that because we're being ground through this thing without any awareness of where we're going or anything and the ability to uh to not allow the feelings the emote the the physical feelings associated with our life to dominate and dictate our well i was supposed to do book club requests today and i didn't really look at the chat so let's do it now if anyone speaking of books uh it was announced today that i signed the contract with zero books to do uh a book called behold a fail horse which is going to be some transcripts and edited and and polished of course uh of interviews with me maybe an essay based on these last few that i feel like have been pretty uh uh pretty helpful i feel like i'm it's never going to be finished but at some point i'm going to say good enough somebody said the black jacket is by clr james and that is not a bad suggestion i will take that into account i'm not going to necessarily say now but that's the leader in the clubhouse i just got done listening to uh my friend everett's really good napoleon podcast series on the haitian war of independence and it is making me been thinking about haiti a lot yeah it's called age of napoleon let me let me uh plug that one of the best history podcasts out there he uses napoleon basically as a lens to look through the uh the the uh the the phenomenon of like europe's uh final uh messy birth into full modernity like napoleon is basically the midwife of modern europe he pulls that baby out of the mother gets the forceps in there yanks her out history on horseback just yanking that baby out of the gap so he's a very useful character to examine the whole process through because that really is that that period from uh from the revolutionary war to uh probably congress of vienna there you've got uh i would say there's two there's three crucial flash point conflicts that define the that define the the uh the trajectory of capitalism as it breaks free of containment basically in europe because capitalism starts off as just the accumulation of a bunch of practices ideas and technologies which had existed throughout human history the chinese famously had most of them but even in europe they'd existed in some form or another uh throughout its period in its existence and even back in the the greco-roman era uh what happened specifically in uh in modern europe though is that you had a a the creation of a technologically uh advancing social order coming uh into uh um uh coming to a point of crisis created by first the the uh the black death and its incumbent it's a change of uh property relations it's undermining of ruling class authority like there is a long-term crisis of authority at the top of feudalism that emerges from the black death because there's so much more land because of all the ***** people who died that the individual agricultural workers had a much better hand that they could play they could withhold their labor at their own terms because they could and the response to that is enclosure the creation of a a landless peasantry who would have to sell their labor to live that's and that's where capitalism comes from as a response to the crisis created by the uh the crisis created by um the black death and colonialism was part of the process of solving that and at first it did it sued the engine a little bit it it brought in currency into the system which was very important but i would say that uh once you have that explosion and you have this the emergence of these forces the unleashing of the bourgeois basically that occurs at the beginning of uh of the of the fourteen hundreds of the fifteen hundreds it culminates you know in it the first big crisis the first third continent wide crisis that runs it apart and it makes it have to break it has to break up the foundations of the system that it accumulated to that point is the period from the 30 years war uh uh basically i would say from the beginning of the 80 years war in the netherlands through the 30 years war including this the english civil war and ending with uh the glorious revolution of 1688 you have a political revolt of broadly the bourgeois over the landed aristocratic nightly class of europe that had been the rulers of feudalism that fight starts in the immediate aftermath of the of the black death it accumulate it culminates in this crisis and then the creation of the westphalian system of competing states that are eternally coherent and uh have like and whose sovereignty is respected across borders sort of as assumption like if you are the head of state by that definition you are the legitimate ruler of that uh area like the the your rulership and this is still how we understand sovereignty now in international law basically until the the people who are in charge say different but uh at the time there were none like so within the system is whoever is in charge is the legitimate government so that means that you know this this breaks up the the dreams of universal monarchy or a religious basis for uh authority and rulership which had broken up over the pr pro uh the reformation nope we're doing realpolitik we're doing nations we can't do religion if we do religion everyone's going to die we learn that in the 30 years war if we do religion everyone is going to die so we'll do it on nations and nations started to compete with one another and out of this competition the system that best accommodated uh that competition was the one that most assiduously took the mechanisms of capitalism and use that to make their economic structure and that was the the constitutional monarchy of of the uh of the hanoverians it took a long fight they had to kill a king they had to have a ***** commonwealth they had to have a bunch of civil wars they had to ***** uh fight off a bunch of angry scottish guys but they ended up with this dutch ***** who came over after a job interview and agreed to basically let the burgers run the show because it worked it got them uh it got them money it got them control of resources in the rest of the world it got them uh rulership over the sea of over the seas it got them an empire where the sun would never set and then so europe starts competing on that browns the other states have to play catch-up now the main other state is france france is doing catch-up with britain that's why it's fighting with britain in these wars it's exchanging slugs but losing all the way because it does not have this efficient structure its burgers have not been empowered and so once the crisis is within it become too accumulated it pops off in 1789 with a bourgeois revolt there and then that bourgeois revolt culminates in the figure of napoleon as the english civil war culminated in the figure of cromwell who then marches across the ***** continent 0:56:29 literally uprooting all of the uh all of the less efficient systems holy roman empire you're done dogedom of venice out of here ***** the grand knights of malta you are you have been uh creatively destroyed in the shumperterian sense that was what the french the french revolution and then the napoleonic wars were it was because europe was never england after the hundred years war was always looking uh in other directions it wasn't looking at europe it never really was it was like okay we're not going to be a european power in that sense but we're going to wield power elsewhere france was still a european power and so it brought the competition of the bourgeois state that had been pretty much dominated by the dutch and the english before that point who'd been fighting each other until they had a ***** uh a leveraged buyout which is what happened the dutch basically uh oh the hanoverians came uh came 0:57:31 later but william of orange was a dutchman literally the the the ex the exhausted dutch republic being being bought out is by the british so the french bring this bourgeois revolt to the european continent and then through superior adaptation to the marketplace they just carve up all these less efficient feudal remnants and they replace them with with a modern with modern people modern conceptions of nationalism that is now not just a state project but a middle-class political project oh my god now you've got a whole new basis to undergird this thing nationalism ethno-nationalism hell yeah now you don't need now this thing that's bigger and more unwieldy and has much more uh complicated social structure and and mechanisms of uh of of culture that have to be maintained and more and more people who have 0:58:32 to be put to idle work mind work more and more minds are going to be idle and they have to have something to do give them nationalism build a state now well capitalism is still grinding around behind these people disrupting them undermining their uh structure and exhausting their their uh ability to uh max to do profit in the closed system of their of their uh of their individual economies and that conflict in in a in a political context of nationalism 1914-1945 and so we're now in the aftermath of that 0:59:40 when when the national model was essentially broken and replaced by international capitalism and institutions cultural uh political and most importantly economic uh replace national ones international capital is truly born in that era and now we are living in this totalized capitalism but there's nothing left to convert transition that belief to this is the when uh when the divine right of kings was extinguished over the course of the 17th century it was not that faith didn't just evaporate it had to go 1:0:41 somewhere and it went to individual like uh religion it went to confession it was there of the king schming we need to be able to define ourselves by our religious tradition well okay that holds for a little bit but then the 17th century shows up uh oh that's not good and over the course of the 17th century you have the emergence of this new this idea that we are all individuals uh pursuing individual uh self-interest but within a framework of identity within a box within humanity and then we fought that no longer tenable after uh in the crisis of the early 20th century because periodic 1:1:45 crisis are emblematic and definitive of capitalism it continues there will always be cyclical crisis of of increasing uh uh devastation because of increased extinguishment of the system and increased just by literally population and cultural density now all that we have is ourselves that's all we've had since the end of 45 and there's there's no way to fight back within that framework is the thing that's that's where that's where we're kind of screwed we have to build it ourselves these other things are built in by the superstructure of capitalism these things were inscribed in the culture that 1:2:46 we all imbibed the religious confessionalism the there's nothing embedded because the they were directly ruled in a way that in a society that doesn't have the total technological control that ours does and when i say technological i mean just to the power of the money form the fact that you cannot in most of the world live outside of the cache nexus that is a genuine enslavement that's why it's so funny when people say i'm not going to live in the cube and i'm not going to eat bugs ***** you already live in the cube you already eat bugs because all other systems of life are closed off 1:3:49 you i mean my god how are you what's the difference between like some nice clean roasted crickets and whatever ***** uh pig anus and uh kreutzfeld's jacob brain slurry uh uh ***** uh feces rat poison uh barbiturate ***** uh antibiotic slurry that you eat if you go to a ***** taco i and i'm not saying it's i eat the bugs because i eat that ***** i'm not gonna act like there's a line i won't let cross because the line doesn't exist you will always accommodate it because you're comfortable and that 1:4:51 is the point of the fall civilizations thing is that the civilization can never correct because it cannot undermine its own control people within it are too wedded to it because they cannot imagine living outside of it they cannot imagine living with their hands they cannot imagine living no longer within the systems of esteem and comfort and consumption oh ***** to get back to something that i've forgotten a while ago i got to stitch these together because i think this makes sense the ***** the marginal revolution is just the situation where culture where the steering wheel of humanity is hijacked fully by a self-conscious bourgeois which then imposes itself on a public on a for national and international subject because we are consumers it is the consumer's choice that defines the market and the thing is that is a correct understanding of how the movement works in capitalism because it moves towards need it it moves towards power and need the needs of those in power or next to power who benefit from powers overwhelming and overflowing largesse which is what we have a giant suction system of need and so we build a culture out of the consumption and then we look at it and say culture is consumption and therefore we are consumption and that's only possible because of how alienated we are from ourselves as workers and how few of us do meaningful work within the ***** temple which is why we are facing this new crisis that is as overwhelmingly obvious as when the sun started dimming uh on the mayans or the ***** uh the little ice age kept the uh froze all the uh the waters between greenland and iceland or the ***** or or 30-year drought or the like the watt that's not a drawing of me that's paul giamatti thank you very much that's a famous paparazzi shot of him on the subway looking glum so the more but the marginal revolution is part of that general process of economists describing the world as capitalism makes it and then refining it as natural law even though it is the contingent best interest of the capitalist class at a given moment which is in conflict with the best interest of the species and the planet because of all these unpriced externalities that the ruling class is unaware of and can't see their material interests cannot recognize it because their material interests in the near term so we find ourselves in a situation where people from the guys who say i won't eat the bugs the people who say we're gonna we're gonna guillotine all the rich people uh to the people who say uh i need i'm keeping my guns so that when they come forward i can i could go down like a man and i can fight for my rights that moment has been passed for everyone in this bubble like the guy with the gun what he thinks that gun represents is the frontier mastery of the self that the early yeoman american farmers had or or at least had a much uh they imagined it too but they actually had the ability to live off the land they could live off the land they could live outside of the market they were free from the market that gun is just the way to keep that state of affairs we have people now who think that they're in that same position and who think that that gun represents the is the guarantor of that position who have been fully stripped from their ability to sustain themselves who have been fully atomized and made them and are fully at the mercy of the market they cannot live outside the market the market it's like getting booted out of the matrix without their zion to catch you boot it out of the matrix to die of exposure in a public park that's what we have and that is the that's what the extravagant public cruelty display of homelessness in this so that gun is a ***** trinket that gun is a is a is a is a symbol not of rights that you're defending but of rights you've lost that's what that gun represents because your right is to go on a shooting spree your right is to get shot by to do suicide by cop okay but you're not gonna do that and by the time you do it it'll be a lost ***** cause and even your dream of being part of some wolverine zest resistance will mean nothing it will be a pathetic orgy of a pointless bloodshed and you'll know it that's the important part you'll know it you'll know that it's a farce you won't go down smiling you won't go to ***** uh valhalla to sup in the ***** uh in the uh mead halls of the gods you're gonna be ***** yourself and crying if you get up the balls to do it you will either accede to what they want you to do or if you say no or if you just can't hack what their new demands are mentally you get kicked out you get up to go on the other side of the human line you are no longer a person you are a homo saucer and at that point it doesn't ***** matter what you do with that gun you have no ability to threaten anyone all right well i didn't talk too much about the book club although i gotta say jack black jacobins is leading in the clubhouse because you guys know i'm all about alternative history i'm trying to do some projects along those lines and i've been thinking a lot about haiti as a result haiti reconstruction 1918 like the real the real protean moments the real the real lubricated joints in the structure um but yeah i won't we won't say for next week but uh i'll think about it and announce if i want to do it i'll see i'll go seek out get my hands on a copy unless i think of something else though you in a wooden boat in the shipping lane with the freighters towering over me i can see the jets flying overhead making lines across the darkening sky and when the sun is going down i can take a taxi into town another raider at the restaurant sets a table just for one wheels keep on spinning round spinning round spinning round wheels keep on so i had a plane to take me to a place so far away from you eventually we began to see that we could be completely free and i could get away from you and you could get away from me and we could live each separately in our cities in the sun wheels keep on spinning round spinning round spinning round wheels keep on spinning round in a seedy karaoke bar on the banks of the mighty bosphorus there's a japanese man in a business suit singing smoke gets in your eyes and the muscular cyborg german dudes dance with sexy french canadians while the overweight americans rather oh you say you are not in love with me all right how's everybody doing oh thank you if anyone is enjoying the the podcast with chris i i've been a little worried about it uh it's it's always hard to know how to how to grasp the needle uh but it's a work in progress i think i think it comes i think we have at least uh what i've wanted to do with it is try to take some of the stuff we've been talking about in here some of the ideas and concepts and put them into a uh it's like a container historical container but the thing that's really you know always dogs me is what do you pick what do you talk about you know and then that's what do you leave out that's what's always uh so what i've always tough so that's why i've tried to focus on just like my role is within it just trying to sketch together a uh a meta narrative which is what you don't get when you learn about uh history in in uh school is is a meta-narrative of why these things are happening you just get them happening so we'll see hopefully hopefully people so oh uh i don't have a copy yet uh because it's not available uh as an e-book at least i could probably have asked for it and somebody would have sent it to me never mind i'm going to get i'm going to get a copy of black jackman's for next week we will be doing black jackman's next i haven't said uh how much of it uh i'll say that on a future show but sometime next week hopefully we're gonna start reading the black jacobins by clr james classic piece of marxist history uh and i think something that will be useful to talk about in the context uh that we've been discussing all of these books which is you know or at least the historical ones uh and that is you know the making of the atlantic world uh and the atlantic uh empire that we're now like in the terminal phase of uh and the key turning points and the key phenomenon that made it happen the extension of uh the creation of a slave economy outside of the metropole of europe broadly but like the atlantic you know the the british and then later anglo-american economic unit accelerate capitalism accelerate the uh social coercion cohesion of capitalism into a absolutely hechamonic force in europe because there is a lot of resistance there's a lot of resistance to capitalism first and most importantly uh in the 1600s and 1700s from the top of the social orders that were being uprooted by it the old feudal land-based ruling class that sees itself losing its authority over the course of those centuries and fights back i think that the uh the english civil war is like the first big uh uh explosion of that conflict well the 80 years war first but then that as part of the 16th cen 17th century that ended i would say with the conditions that uh allowed capitalism to triumph uh and like cemented its control that would be the glorious the glorious revolution of 1688 more than anything but we've talked about that in the past so that was the first sort of emergence of elite resistance to capitalism but then the 19th century is defined by uh by common if we're going to still talk about like these feudal orders that are being broken up these feudal social arrangements will be broken up by capitalism it's like a wedge breaking up this thing it's like a jackhammer breaking up this thing but the chunks are still there and they make up the new uh world so you're not just when i say common you can't just say working class because that's being brought into existence by the emergence of capitalism before that you had a common group which included merchants but included peasants uh it included everybody who was not of the uh the landed authority and they were being sorted into positions within this new proletariat in the 19th century and they revolted uh somebody says do 30 years war that is a project that me and chris want to do if we do another show we would like to because i do think that if you talk **Music playing** detours to talk about the 80 years war and the english civil war if you do that you have essentially narrated the the birth of capitalism as the dominant uh not just europeans uh um motor production but the world empire but what so you see this huge explosion of violence this capitalism is coming into being from all ends that's that of course racks the 17th century but continues on into the 19th and that every point would have state what stabilized it and allowed it to uh and allow the conflict to not become fully apocalyptic to allow structures to continue to be developed state capacity and such was the existence of this this place where the most horrifying uh resource exploitation uh both in the terms that resources needed in a place that didn't have a lot of them but also um the intense bodily exploitation that needed to carry off that needed to happen to to allow this to persist to allow the system to exist like uh the the the groaning gears of european capitalism were literally oiled with the blood of the uh of the of the colonies like you look at sugar for example sugar not something that is native to europe not something that constituted any element of the european diet for the vast vast length of the existence but as capitalism and its massively painful birthing uh miseries are occurring across the continent what should exist but this new thing this thing that you can eat and but the thing about sugar is that at this time and honestly still now but back of course wait much more back then given its technological uh level to make sugar is to do on is to uh do an unfathomable pain to the human bodies because it is incredibly labor intensive it requires a lot of really shitty work that nobody wants or would want to do that would not be anything that anyone would if you have a relatively s uh contained social order like post-westphalian europe and these contained nation states you can't do that kind of uh exploitation uh in order to facilitate like the soothing of the of the anxieties of the of the now newly precarious upper classes you can't do that without creating uh unsustainable social uh dislocation alienation and resentment at the bottom unless that work is being done elsewhere by people who don't count and so now you have this thing sugar that is incredibly profitable it has an entire industry around it and forms for example for a majority of france's uh uh trade is this literal luxury that is only possible through massive hyper exploitation and of course to a lesser extent that's true of all of the uh of the new consumer uh comforts that are enjoyed thanks to and it's that in it's that introduction into the equation of european capitalist creation that sustains it that rescues it at every point that allows for the transition from a system within europe that is leading to the common rune of the contended classes in two world wars that were genuinely uh you know if europe was the world or would would have been the vision people had of total apocalypse but they were rescued from that by the uh the creation of a set of settler states on that land that are able to create their own capitalist uh social orders and political economies that could then become the world sovereign the world sovereign that europe was always seeking and could never get from ***** uh charlemagne to charles v to um to napoleon to hitler everybody failed because europe but globally once you have a sufficient degree of technological advancement in order to allow power to be remotely enforced now you have a power that can truly attain universal the universal monarchy but of course the sovereign is not an emissary of god as he was understood but an emissary of the devil of satan of uh old scratch himself the capitalist algorithm of profit extraction which untethered to any uh resistance feedback loop uh pulled away from its maximal position by the application of human will destroy the earth will make the earth hell will reign in

hell just like you wanted to do in paradise lost like they like capitalism is was a tool created by man to win his petty war of power and in so creating it has lost sovereignty over the earth to it because no longer does decisions yeah the great satan they were right about that they nailed it of course now everybody's part of the thing the world system is locked into into uh gear and now no matter what the discrete ideology of the people at the top of any social formation in the world might think of themselves they actually serve the algorithm everybody serves the algorithm no matter what they think they're doing they're they think that they're they're uh defending allah's honor against the west or whatever the ***** or they think they're they're uh preserving they're preventing china from descending into another century of humiliation or uh they're defending social democracy or or the white race or whatever the ***** they think they're doing what they're actually doing is sort of the algorithm because all of their decisions at the end of the day have to conform to the algorithms dictates then they can make up a reason why they're doing it after that they can have their best minds sit around and figure out how what they're doing is actually for the greater good of a la or uh the the han people or um or the america whatever the ***** that means or even the best the self-interest of the person which is of course being undermined because our goddamn ability undermined i mean my god look at the space race stuff somebody's pointed out very astutely that the space race stuff with the billionaires isn't so much about them escaping to elysium some of them might be might think that's possible but they're but they would be the dumber ones i would say that uh most of those guys uh and gals at the top uh are aware enough of you know the actual state of technology to understand the the the non-viability of of outer space is a long-term uh uh as a long-term uh destination for themselves and their families they know that that's why i think most of them believe that they're gonna go into the ***** singularity because even though that's just as much moonshine it's something that uh is easier to trick yourself into believing is real i think if you have a curse like if you ***** read a collection of neil degrasse tyson uh articles you know that it's incredibly expensive and difficult to live in space and that do and the terraforming mars is a fantasy and all this stuff isn't real the reason that they do this stuff for the most part other than the fact that hey maybe it works and hey maybe i get to go to space that'll be fun like as a recreation is that they have accumulated more money than they could possibly put back into a system where rates of the profit are declining and there is no profitable investment to be made in the markets what they could do is a seed to those profits that are useless to them as investment vehicles and useless to them for personal consumption because they could never spend that much money on themselves they're useless to them that money is in a literal sense useless to them they cannot invest it in the long term and they cannot use it

CUSHVLOG 172. SOLVED MYSTERIES

personally they just haven't this is why cyclically and traditionally societies have to uh destroy accumulated surplus otherwise it fatally destabilizes a social uh system and the thing that makes the the that jubilee happen is not the ***** algorithm it is people it is the people who man the machines recognizing what's happening and what we are is a place where there's nowhere else nobody is connected enough to the machines to be able to interdict because of our intensification of technology of the fact that technology has its own logic that we become subservient to shout out to my friend uh uh john collins for reminding me of this central fact that we are living in a technological society in which human interaction has become uh superfluous and most importantly human intention is suffer fluids and in fact beyond the point 0:20:18 because the thing is going to do what we're going to do what the thing tells us to do and then we're going to make up in our culture and in our halls of state reasons that it was actually in uh some broad understanding of our interest but anyway so these rich guys are doing that too because they have this money that they cannot spend and they cannot invest it could be used to uh invest in like the that money could be put to a social use but that would minimize their power in the hierarchy their position in the hierarchy it would undermine their envision of their long-term project which like i said is much more likely to think that to be in the singularity than to be in space but anyway they have to do something with this money and putting it into space shooting it into space is their privatized form of destruction of accumulated 0:21:21 capital but in a way that does not benefit he gets some residual uh effect because he gets to influence things more it's a propaganda victory like for all these guys uh they get to have their hand in the federal kitty in the form of nasa funding uh they get to influence and control like our technological uh agenda governmentally that's all value uh but that's all second order value to the main thing which is the money's got to go somewhere shoot it up in the ***** space at least then hey i get to go to space it's just incredibly expensive yes i said the ai stuff is a hoax too but i think these it's a little harder to prove it's easy like i said it is because it's less empirical than space you know what i mean we're like we know what it is to go into space what the 0:22:22 singularity would look like it is theoretical in a way that can give people uh an in to kind of fill in the gaps for themselves put in the frog dna in the holes in the dna the dinosaur dna so that you can ***** clone a velociraptor but i think if they have a long-term strategy for surviving eternally which you would have to to make what they're doing worthwhile and not monstrous like unless they're turning themselves into god uh they could not continue what they're doing but like i said they're along for the ride and they at this point are convincing themselves as it happens that they have and the may and like when i say that we've lost the ability to control it it's because the people who maybe hypothetically could control it like actually intervene 0:23:24

CUSHVLOG 172. SOLVED MYSTERIES

in it because it's not totally cyber it's not uh completely uh it's not yet completely skynet because humans still program the machines for now humans still program the machines now that doesn't necessarily mean that's going to always be the case and it looks like we're sliding away from that but the majority of the important code is written by humans in the expression of human intent and the people who could exert their intent in that position have been so alienated from humanity and from their very spirit by being that close to the heart of the thing by being by so closely that they cannot recognize the human stakes they cannot wreck it they cannot hear the scream of the earth and of their fellow humans it gets filtered into music because 0:24:25 of how far away they are because they've surrounded themselves in a world where they are convinced that they are that that means that they are the most worthy people of uh of their minds being preserved that have ever lived their their lives being comfortable and pleasurable and themselves and them being able to do what they want is literally a in their minds been turned into a sacrament that is a level of mental conditioning that cannot be undone and even if one of them had even if they also collectively had a horrified realization of that it's too late at that point it is too late it won't matter what they say like when ***** elon musk talks about he's afraid of uh ai uh he is speaking from that part of him that realizes what's happened to him and what was happening to the world as a result of people like him and he is 0:25:26 thinking of that moment when the algorithm totally takes over and he thinks oh i'm scared of that but of course he thinks of it as a technical question but it's a spiritual question and it's and he is only ever going to recognize that it's it what's happening until it has already happened because the only thing that he's going to feel is that lack of control he'll never feel an ounce of uh of of of pain that is outside of himself an ounce of the misery that's being inflicted around by him and by his world and the world of the people around him you will never get it you will never feel it you will only feel a lack of control that's it and at that point once he has no they can't 0:26:29 love at that point and so they cannot they cannot uh hear the screams the rest of us who can hear the screams are too far from the buttons and the only thing that can overcome that is if we bring our voices into harmony which is of course you know the the cheesy uh fantasy but it's the only one we have and so we have to keep it in our minds at all times because you don't get to opt out of that you don't get to opt out of having a uh something you believe in and it's just a question what it's going to be and if you say no thank you to that you're what you're saying is i'm just going to believe in my my physical senses and my my personal interpretation of those senses and that's what i'm going to believe in and that's that's not any more real than 0:27:30 than the ***** uh that's the word for it i don't like to even say the word revolution because it is so so non-real i did like the last episode of rick and morty you gotta

love it look he's you got rick you got morty i thought that this that that last one specifically was uh was i don't want to like do parables about rick and morty but all the clones killing one another trying to kill each other i really like the new i think you should leave i get that because it's like more of the same in a lot of ways that people are gonna be less impressed with it because they uh they're not having that like revelatory force they had when they first saw it because hey you know this really was way different uh than anything i'd really seen before so it was never gonna get the same result i laughed very hard at a lot of it uh so i'm very i'm very glad i'm very pleased with it and as i said on twitter they managed in that in the in the uh cop movie parody trailer they managed to have squibs every shot in that ***** trailer that's not cgi that's something going off in someone's shirt which means that there is no excuse and if i ever got lucky enough to be able to uh make a movie and it had it had gun gun shooting in it man i would really hope that i would put my ***** foot down on that and say you can we'll ***** make money or we'll make deals uh on any other element i'm willing to compromise on anything but ***** every goddamn bullet hit will be a percussive squib now unless you're talking about like you have commando levels of violence and then i'll be happy with you know three of the four guys who get shot just fall over like in a 50s western but then there's a close-up on one guy who gets opened up with ***** squibs dan flashes was very funny uh the ice cream sketch with odin kirk was very heartfelt the paul walter hauser sketch also very heartfelt the haunted house one kind of killed me when he comes back and he's crying and oh god total recall escalator scene **Music playing** god that that is just such a needlessly sadistic piece of filmmaking that's and that's really what sets verhoeven apart is that he has an a keen edge where his excess is never just someone who doesn't know what the line is which is sort of the michael bay thing but who knows exactly where the wine is and has intentionally gone one step over it like some poor civilian in that scene and get just absolutely murked by michael ironside at the top of this escalator and then he falls and he's just a ***** schmuck he's just a guy standing on an escalator turns around annihilated 50 squibs then he falls down and then arnold runs away michael einstein and his guys run behind and they cut two ironside and his dudes just stomping on this dead bloody shot to ribbon sky as they run for after arnold the that's why he's one of the best ever i'm very much looking forward to his great but yes i like to where uh i think you should leave too very much i hope i hope there's another the shark tank what i thought really was oh i got the watermelon uh lacroix i gotta say with the with the pretentious names i guess that's why they can uh charge like a little 50 cent or something premium over other seltzers is pastique oh man everyone's talking about the the bumper ass climate yeah it's not great climate's not doing so good there's no question that the

the climate and this is where the whole you know capitalism as as as the satanic god overseeing the creation of hell on earth comes into things because it's getting to the point now where i gotta believe that climate change denial is very very rare on the ground other than uh you know real partisans i'd say you've got to figure 65 70 percent of people are fully convinced that climate change is here and it's because of carbon the two things you that you need to have is like a minimum understanding of the world but what with that knowledge can anyone do what can you do because we lack the mechanisms of collective action to turn belief into anything because we have this democratic structure that has created a party rule that is as unassailable from the beliefs and opinions and best interests both self and objectively understood of its citizens as the ***** late era soviet union did 100 there's no any other claim is in my mind uh either disingenuous or or delusional like how can you look at what what has happened specifically the last 40 years to the average american and you're going to tell me that that their best interests are being expressed in their politics like their even their like i said even their narrow understanding of self-interest not even like a question of you know filtered not filtered through parties or stuff but like what they think that would be good what we all think would be our best interests and then you look at what we have gotten and this goes for basically everybody uh it it correlates about as well as you would ex you had in the soviet union with its one-party state because the parties rule independent of real influence any influence is felt at the ballot box by 150 million individual voters who are making individual consumption choices not acting out of coordinated uh interest they are they're voting for a brand that corresponds to a self-conception that is independent of any question of and if that's the case the party rules the party's rule in coordinating with each other and with the ruling class and with the international you know uh bourgeois and then ruling over all of it the goddamn tick the clutter clack of the algorithm they decide what to do and you could say well yes people didn't vote for this but this is all like in their general best interest only at such a remove from their like actual desires that you're not talking about a democratic deliberation that would take people's desires into account you're talking about a technocratic overlordship by people who are doing what they consider is in the best interest to a group that does not include them because they are in a bubble they are not going to face the majority of the consequences the negative consequences the sacrifices that their decisions entail like the 1970s which we come back to again and again the crisis of the 70s and how to answer it was made exclusively by people who would not really suffer and of course some of them might lose their jobs jimmy carter might have not become a two-term president but they would not have to work for a living they would not have to feel uh real precarity they would not most of and that means that what sacrifices they were willing to we're not being judged democratically what we would want but what they would want what off what would offload the majority of the suffering to others and and because everybody involved in this including the ***** media that reports on it they have no vocabulary to even express now of course a lot of these people in the long term ended up being ***** like all those journalists by now oh they're out of job well for them in the short term it kept them to get it kept until they got to a pension and in the long term who really gives a ***** and more importantly even if i wanted to think long term you can't because what the algorithm and if you're going to listen to the algorithm you're going to sacrifice humans on a ***** altar which is what they did and choosing which humans yeah like look at the republicans and with their hatred of big tech it's literally a consumer revolt it's i'm not being followed enough on facebook my grandkid won't reply to my ***** tweets that's it i am not being validated as a consumer which is what we got instead of democracy you will not be able to if you look at what we got and what we sacrificed what we got was consumer choices and what we lost was everything else but that made up for it just like the sugar made it up to the to the newly precarious elites of uh of capitalist europe because we've uh gotten all of our boredoms amused and all of all of our uh material interests met if we're above a certain level of precarity we're going to be able to be we can ensure that every day we're going to have food that we're going to be a hebrew roof over our head above a certain level and it's talking about the people who are more likely to be uh you know in some way democratically connected to the system in that they vote and they participate in party politics and even if they have even if they are more precarious that precarity is not political it's not understandable as political let's understand it's natural what's understood as political is that this order gives me access even if i am precarious poor it gives me access to creature comforts that we become uh used to and if you're at a certain level of that these options become stultifying and the goal and the uh the job of becoming a consumer is not the job of satisfying your desires it becomes a job of creating your self creating your sense of identity building a you it it becomes abstracted to that level because how else are you supposed to pick you're not picking by taste you're not picking by uh color i mean these things are all relatively insignificant distinctions the only real distinctions that we can hold on to are much more cultural and that is where we get our kicks being validated being able to express ourselves and be seen by others in some respect and therefore to see ourselves and that means voting for a party that represents a basket of values that we then and that replaces politics which means that on a question like what to do about climate change which would resolve which would involve interfering with the algorithm which would involve breaking the algorithm and ripping the algorithm out of out of the heart of all of our uh political economic

software like we would have to delete this thing from our hard drives that's the only way we're dealing with it when you have on one side you have the algorithm on the other side you have individual consumers who are just observing the world through a consumer lens finding out hey wow the earth is cooking right now well what can you do you can express yourself but you're going to be doing it through the framework of politics that baffles out through its many levels any real urgent material request 0:44:49 because it cannot conform to the algorithm you could vote for democrats what are they going to do well what are they doing what are they going to keep doing that's why the hope is that the feedback loop that keeps people at this level of paralysis where they're just almost instinctively hit the pellet of of identity hit the pellet of uh or hit the bar and in the in their in their little Skinner box to get the pleasure release from uh that that paralysis will be broken taken for granted access goes away and then that makes people have to reassess the world and how to deal with it that's 0:45:51 our hope and that necessitates everybody to be in a state of awareness and readiness for the moment which is coming and it's happening right now all around us and if when the enough people start turning away from the the narcissus river uh it'll win because the forces are right against it are pretty overwhelming but you know to it is we're gonna have to choose what to do with our lives every minute of them we do and at some point the things that have been good enough until that point no violence is inevitable well i mean hell when is it not like we're we're in we are 0:47:6 in a roiling sea of violence at every moment i mean you have actual you know uh violence as it's understood in the bourgeois sense but then you have the the invisible violence of the market wreaking havoc every moment of the day and violence will continue the question is uh who will be doing it and will it be a per it will it be a progressive force or will it be sort of the final guttering of the human candle you can't know that's the important thing and any guess is going to be colored by oh 0:48:24 man that movie uh the tomorrow war i watched that thing and i mean i've how weird it's going to be watching big budget movies made by well-intentioned liberals try to reckon with climate change and already we have the the the template from uh aquaman and and black panther where you have a villain who has a legitimate gripe against the system and undermine and underlines a actual like uh contradiction at the heart of the global order uh but who goes about stopping it the wrong way and for the wrong reasons that's the important part like in aquaman or says yeah the humans are killing the ocean we need to fight back and the movie says actually he's just he's just jealous of his half-brother aquaman who gets to go on land it's like i'm 0:49:26 sorry are we not killing the ocean if there was a king of the ocean wouldn't it be his ***** job to go to war with us what other point of having a ruler would there be that to protect you from what we're doing in the ocean we just cooked a billion ***** uh

fish we cooked a billion sea creatures off the coast of british columbia just cooked him ***** set a fire in the ***** uh caribbean ocean no no he's only fighting earth so that's one model and we're going to see more and more of that but then we have the tomorrow war which seems to very explicitly try to make a connection between global warming and i guess it's trying to make that argument of like if we saw global warming the way that we imagine an alien invasion being then would we be able to come together to use our ingenuity and our human uh energies to defeat it but the movie comes down really on the idea that unless this is something we could shoot in the face it's not getting fixed and of course you could argue well there are people you could shoot in the face to maybe change this but you know the very nature of uh the system is that our fantasies of violence must always be cathartic and not addressed at our real uh pain that's the reason that the thing exists that's the that's the reason it's it's the same ***** uh the same power that keeps the global supply chain moving is the power that prevents violence when it accumulates with a system from naturally flowing up but rather going down and it's so great so if you haven't seen it this is a minor spoiler but i mean honestly who cares these these 30 years in the future there are these aliens feral creatures that have taken over the earth and have killed most humans but the humans were left have created time travel and as a last-ditch effort they've opened a bridge to earth 30 years previously to request humans to come and fight these aliens and they actually do a pretty ingenious job of figuring out the time travel mechanism which is you've got the two portals we've got the portal between the two dates but you can't go anywhere else and it goes forward at the same pace both places like a week that goes by on 30 years ago is going by there so you can't jump within it and i think that that's and so then they just send people into the law to fight these creatures and then it's discovered they discover that once again spoiler alert you can stop watching if you're worried about this dumb movie but it really doesn't matter it's not going to affect your enjoyment of it they find out that uh these creatures were not aliens who landed in a ship in 30 years they were underneath a glacier in russia since the 11th since the 10th century a.d and that 30 years from now 30 years from the initial moment when the alien the huma the time travelers show up before the alien invasion uh they find out sorry if 30 years ago in the thing goddammit talk about time travel is always confusing uh they realize this thing is actually in a stuck underneath a glacier right now but 30 years in the future the glacier will have melted and then all the right the aliens will come out and eat everybody and so instead instead of preventing the ***** glacier from melting they go to the glacier find the aliens and ***** kill them and i don't know if they were trying to make that point or not but it's pretty clear they're saying yeah there is no coordinated action shy of like violence organized by a social order

which means by capitalism uh to vent off uh hostility and battle for resources away from the actual but the thing is is okay congratulations you killed the aliens you blew up the aliens they're not gonna come and uh when the thing melts but you're still gonna have a melted ***** glacier and how many other glaciers are gonna be melted and what's that gonna do to the ***** coasts i mean the fact that they go 0:54:36 30 years in the future and miami is still there seems like they didn't really grasp the metaphor they were trying to use they weren't really able to get through to the real implications of it like they dropped into miami of all cities and it's all there ground level all the buildings are still intact the ones that haven't been but tenant is like that 0:55:43 too a time travel movie about about the generational conflict that we kind of that is going on without us knowing it which is the generational conflict between us and the future people whose are going to be born into a world that is uh radically different than the one we can imagine and uh and those movies are both dealing with that and it'll be fun watching just the mental the mental uh gymnastics being done with these big budget movies that attempt to be socially responsible and address issues without drawing the genuinely radical and terrifying forget like politically radical but just all right i'm uh gonna head off so next week at some point i'll say when we'll 0:57:13 uh we'll read black jackman's or part of it anyway and start talking about all the different ways that uh that our colonial agricultural economy uh built the structures of control resource distribution political management technological facility that um that allowed capitalism to sort of jump the barrier from europe to the whole world in a way that was able to stabilize it long enough to defeat the global proletariat and then consume itself one way or the other um it's two o'clock in the morning i am thinking of you wondering what i should do when i'm finally cutting through it's four o'clock in the morning think i'm fine and i think i'll survive i'm finally cutting through this haze of love for days and days 0:1:5 and days i'm in a haze it's you don't and i see this will end and i see it depends i'm finally cutting through this age of love haze of love stick shifts and safety belts bucket seats have all got to go when we're driving in the car it makes my baby seem 0:2:6

so far i need you here with me not way over in a bucket seat i need you to be here with me not way over in a bucket seat when we're driving in my malibu it's easy to get right next to you i see baby scoot over please and then she's right there next to me i need you here with me not way over in a bucket seat i need you to be here with me ah howdy folks oh baby little cake for you today slice of cake little slab the old cake uh i can't i can't tonight i love it good band my my favorite guys so uh 0:3:9 today let's just start off by saying obviously uh hands off cuba come on not even a contest this is one of the easiest tests that there could be this is like a basic this is like the ideological equivalent of the questions they ask you to make sure you haven't had a ***** concussion that is the level of difficulty that cuba is especially uh this context where you are seeing some sort of demonstrations in cuba the basis of which we have no idea the pro come from that are even in the ***** words of the running dog capitalist press issues of scarcity uh of vaccines and uh and food and supplies uh the thing you're supposed to put post on uh and the answer to the the remainder of 0:4:10 that sentence is we are being starved by the united states of america like all of these most uh keening issues that are supposed to be generating this demonstration are against not the cuban regime but the actual cause of the direct cause this is not one where you get to act like oh we're gonna throw some fairy dust in the air and say oh you can't accuse the cia of everything oh you know just because somebody's part of the global you know economy that uses the us dollar and you know their their uh their ability to actually exercise democratic governments is compromised that's that's too uh abstract you can blame anything that way this is a direct economic intervention something that is an act of war in the form of the embargo which means

CUSHVLOG 173. DANK SOCIALIST NIGHT COURT MEMES

no trade between cuba and its largest natural trading partner but also no trade with any company that wants to trade in the united states that is suffocating and even 0:5:11 in those conditions even in those conditions cuba is able to maintain a a basic uh level of social provision that is light years away from what is experienced by other countries in the region that are governed by our allies and that and obeying the rule of law and having and cuba is able to do that even though being strangled have been for 60 years and this is not even something that has to be adjudicated in the the cumbersome mechanisms of uh of congress this is something that a president could unilaterally change obama was to his credit moving in that direction of course you could argue that obama's move towards cuba was like his move towards iran it was an attempt by a strain within the capitalist ruling elite to prolong american 0:6:13 power by the application of the market like we have these places these nodes of resistance they can be undermined by integration and that's what they tried to do and that was what the the lifting of sanctions in under obama was about doing it was about introducing capitalism into cuba as a ***** plague bacillus but it had a narrow short-term effect of actually helping uh cuba you know breathe a little bit but this could be something that could be removed this this stranglehold could be removed and then the starvation and the privation that is generating this discontent would actually be addressed it would actually be addressed of course the deal that the united states is making is look we will stop strangling you and allow you to get uh access to all these nice vaccines and all this nice trade but only if you overthrow a revolutionary government and replace it with the capitalist algorithm unless you 0:7:15 pull out the ***** software and replace it with the market that is the deal that's always been the deal that was the deal under obama it was like lure moore flies with honey type situation but the same goal any organized social opposition that has the ability to express himself itself in something as you know meaningful as a state and cuba has punched so far above its weight internationally cuba cuban foreign policy and cuban uh uh yes cuban foreign policy is more responsible directly responsible for the end of apartheid in south africa and the end of uh of like late colonialism you know the last vestiges of it like from the portuguese uh was the direct result of 0:8:17 an independent castro foreign policy of military uh aid to uh marxist revolutionary where uh where russia where um where the angolan marxists uh fought with the the uh regular cuban military and some russian advisers a months-long standing battle with the uh the puppet angolan uh rebels uh and the south african military which until that point had been uh undefeated in conflicts with uh with native african uh military uh units of any kind and uh they fought him to a sand still and it was sort of the end of uh the line and it was when the smarter boars started to realize that they needed to negotiate an exit from the thing and that was because castro pushed back 0:9:18 and was able to organize a military force that was literally fighting an ideological war it was not participating in a resource grasp on behalf of imperialism that part of power cannot allow to be persist persist and right now there's it's more soft power thanks to the cuban investment in medica medicine and medical knowledge in the form of doctors who they send all over the world which is a source of uh revenue for the state and also is a soft power projection no good they gotta go and the difference between trump and obama on it is a difference of tactics it's a difference of what can we uh what policy do we pursue uh and biden looks like he's going to just take the easy road out and keep the brick on the accelerator because hey maybe this is maybe maybe coronavirus is the ***** last straw because they've been holding it together god love them but it's been in the face of real uh difficulty and persis sustained uh 0:10:20 economic uh pain at the heart of the system like poverty and that undermines the regime it has to it makes it more brittle and less democratic by definition uh but that still means that it is a progressive force in the world that has to be totally defended because if we did take our boot off of the neck cuba would if we took the ***** boot off the neck if we stopped and since that's the only course of action that matters is get rid of the sanctions the only thing that's in the american power to do and the imperative morally because it's the actual direct cause of the suffering like if you want to be a bleeding heart and say the thing that matters is what will stop 0:11:22 suffering then the answer is simple this ending the sanctions will stop the suffering because that's the direct cause it's like once again this is an easy test to pass it is the lowest difficulty level and yet people are ***** it up they're botching it they're bungling it and it's like what idiots no end the ***** embargo you don't need to have any opinion on the ***** cuban government you don't need to know anything and by the way you can't know anything what are you you're looking through the ***** the the dog ***** of the internet to try to find out what's going on you see a ***** picture of some people marching somewhere and you think you know where we 0:12:24 are way past wag the dog territory this is a totally synthetic reality you're viewing through the ***** social media lens and of course since this is such an easy question the only way you get to the dumb way that you ***** yourself over by deciding that you have to have a morally correct interpretation of the cuban government is because you are too agitated on the on the question of politics and two in need to justify yourself because you're disengaged because you're not doing politics in your life you're doing it in this fantasy firmament and that means you have to convince yourself that it matters what your opinion is of the ***** cuban government it does not matter in any sense anyone's opinion their discreet opinion on cuba is it does not there's nothing you can do with that information that can mean anything anywhere 0:13:25 meanwhile there are things you might be able to do about the ***** embargo like

organize around it politically turn it into an issue that you connect to other issues to build inner solidarity and notions of like uh you know actions on behalf of wait the way that like the scottish uh dock workers wouldn't unload uh they wouldn't unload chilean wine there's something you can do even if it is like you know uh liberal ngoist um uh activism you could still maybe get something done because this is an option this is just the us doing what it's doing because nothing is stopping it you could change the equation for power to be like alright fine let them up we know during obama that there was a crack a crack there give you know just give them some room to breathe yes of course now they're going to have to deal with the fact 0:14:26 that with that will definitely come an increased marketization of their economy but maybe the cuban state by persisting for all those years is going to be able to actually manage it and not be overwhelmed by it the way that say that the chinese state was we don't know but we have to see and if we want to see we can do one thing like i said having opinions about the the uh the objective merit of the cuban government whether it needs reforms or not is is an opinion that will do you no good in a literal sense there's nothing for you to do with that opinion except have it and then bat it around like a ***** kitten in an enclosure trying to keep themselves from going insane with boredom and that is why this is the kind of question that captivates certain people on here why they decide that it becomes a litmus test and the hill they're going to die on i'm not going to name names because i don't want to give 0:15:27 fuel to these but it's because for these people for a certain number of people who comprise the online left and its media sphere and the the specific audience that they appeal to uh you're not talking about some generalized group a cross section you're not generalizing about a cross section of people online expressing leftist opinions who might do something about them if they thought there was something they could do this is a subsection of people and i would define this group of people the people who obsess about stuff like how how much i should condemn this regime are people who are coming to left politics as it is merging with culture from the culture side of the equation from the culture end i think that the the ques the the culture of 0:16:29 the online left which has now become inextricably linked to popular culture to the mainstream is creating the uh what we think of as the online left so some of them the ones who make the most uh the most like salient uh media creations like the people who do podcasts the people who post the most the people who post other people read the most motivated those people are coming at this fusion of culture and politics from politics they are thinking of themselves as political subjects who also engage in popular culture and popular media mainstream style and are pumping 0:17:30 their investment their their uh investing their time spent in popular culture with their politics because they're feeling an excess of political feeling and they feel like

they should be doing something politically because of how much they're agitated by the state of things and how much they want to change things and so they put that when they when they write about popular culture and then when they write popular culture by becoming the people who staff shows and write scripts that get made into movies and the people who make the conversation of the day and form what is like the correct opinions to have are doing so out of this agitation this political agitation that is driving them to make their consumption and production of culture more politically mo uh defined and this is as the uh the rituals of politics become entirely spectacle-based so everybody is just doing this as a spectacle we are all 0:18:31 fully invested in this thing called politics as at a level of spectacle so the people who are making the left are being agitated to politics to culture from politics but a summit big chunk of the people who make up the audience for this stuff and now the producers of it they aren't coming at it from that perspective are people who would otherwise be either a political or right wing who are fully invested in popular culture and the consumption of it as part of their identity the way that these politics people think of themselves as political these people think of themselves as consumers of this palette of this culture like the the the the busy bees people like me we are coming at culture from politics as stymied political subjects these people who watch some of this stuff and are now making it come at this convergence as people who 0:19:34 want to consume culture they want to watch marvel movies they want to play video games they want to watch this and when they want us feel like they're smart they want to watch prestige tv shows they want to live in the clubhouse they don't want to grow up they want to be toys r us kids because of course who wouldn't it is a in my opinion and more rational in many ways decision to be like that than to fantasize that you have some sort of political subjectivity and then try to act from it through your cultural consumption but what the the problem with being that is that you're being led into politics you are forced to become a political subject because the people around you consuming and making polit uh culture are more and more obsessed with politics and you have to fit in that somewhere now that is where you get uh the entire social base of like the disaggregated downwardly mobile 0:20:35 white male uh uh internet user that's where you get the right wing ones people who just want to ***** do pop they just want to consume culture as identity they don't care about politics but eventually they have to and that becomes that reactionary process becomes the formation of this defined alternative to a counterculture defied by this new mainstream of culture but not everybody is going to be relate to that rejection they're going to accept it it's either because they're white males who have been acculturated to have certain values or because they're not white males and therefore they're alienated from that and therefore they find something comforting

in the validation of an increasingly accepting and multicultural mainstream they find it more they find it more uh enticing than alienating whereas the future grippers find 0:21:38 it more alienating than enticing and then there are the white males within it who are able to say well i'm one of the good ones so i get to be in the good part with the and those people who are coming at that from culture they don't want politics to mean anything they want to turn politics into another thing that they consume as a spectator like the video games they play like the movies they watch like and that argue about hey i want to be on the internet always all the time arguing about something i would rather it be video games and movies but since it has to be politics then i'm going to pick a side and and i'm going to watch it try to own somebody else and that is where the debate culture of online leftism comes from is we need a spectacle to make out of this because that's all we really care about but because they're consumers of left content because they have to be if they want to be on the 0:22:39 right side of it if they want to be enjoyers of the mainstream because they want to see the big stuff they want to enjoy earnestly the major productions the huge capital infused spectacles the high calorie high density of nutrient ***** that makes up their cultural diet like blockbuster movies and entertainment they want to be able to agree with it and root for it and love it not define themselves by how and so that means they always have to find a way whereby the uh the more and more they have to find more and more uh ways to keep it interesting for themselves because they don't really care they're not anxious the way that the producers of this stuff are they they 0:23:41 just want to ***** grill they want to watch their stories and if their stories have to be politics they wanted to be a guy who looks like them telling them that all they have to do is root for the democratic party and then spend their times deciding to have what the right opinions are on things which is just like watching a tv show and then commenting with other people and deciding how good it is or not which is everything else that is their political their uh cultural consumption and what is they it is what they want out of their cultural consumption and they're going to turn politics into that uh production because they want it they will create a market for it and someone will fill that gap and now that gap is being filled and so when something happens like uh demonstrations in cuba you get to have a week-long argument about how and much you should support the cuban government what the exact balance of opinions you should have how much because you're imagining that you're in an argument with somebody and that there is some sort of judge there to tell you who's right or 0:24:42 wrong and that you're going to get a good grade and a shiny apple you're going to be you're going to get a little boost from and that really is determining i think the uh that's determined like this new fascinating online culture around debate and around hypothetical situations and and these free-floating questions of like responsibility

that have nothing to do with anyone's lived experience that can't relate to anyone's lived experience that are designed to keep you occupied about something else because you're not actually a politically engaged subject you just think you are you are still a full consumer and what you're consuming is a debate that is the same as your shows and is the same as and the existence of this these people you they're just the mirror image of people who have turned online politics into a place for them to exercise their guilt that's the other side of the coin these are the producers because they're the more anxious the more politically uh identified ones but they're still operating out of a desire to consume a spectacle and gain enjoyment of it from one end or the other of either indulgence or uh i guess high anglican like the the earthy land uh the earthy sensual rule of the feudal landowner or the uh flesh-scouring puritan uh abstainiousness capitalist of the of the urban bourgeois in his counting house reading his bible over and over again trying to convince himself that god is real by scaring himself because he's been disconnected from uh any felt conception of uh i would say that with the amish lack to truly be like a like counterweight like like a behavioral norm to adopt is that you you need it needs to be more uh frankly uh evangelical in the sense that uh it needs to be it needs to be a uh recruiting faith it can't be a sort of a turned inward thing because that's just neo4j ism that's just you're back to the overnight uh uh model and like that's oh uh i didn't want to forget i'm glad i almost forgot this so uh we're going to start black jacket on wednesday first three chapters of black jacob the first three chapters of black jacobin will be discussed on wednesday three chapters one through three of blackjack not very long if it moves it's very very very easy to read book it's absolutely uh with that but it's suffice to say that the fact that this this online leftism that people are part of is fully invested with the the logic of capitalism and like at a base level uh every incentive uh of everyone participating in what we think of as the online left is doing so is being uh being pushed along by being motivated by by capitalist uh imperatives not because anyone is choosing that but because that's the only uh those are the only signals that get priced that get noticed like if it's if if the extent of our political subjectivity is engaging in a public conversation in a social media space where we are the product being made where we are both the performer of culture and the producer and consumer of oh boy i completely lost my train of thought but that's fine it happens sometimes somebody can remind me what i was saying uh all right that's that um that we are coming to to do this job of consuming and producing uh our our personalities online because uh and the only way we can succeed at it is to is to try to make it entertaining keeping our eyes on it like we're building our political identity to the degree that we're spending time on this app on these apps listening to these things having these conversations like we're building a thing out of our desire but not our desire to do our desire to avoid doing and that's not our fault because everything is hopeless everything truly is in an objective sense hopeless but we are still here and still have to live and within capitalist structures counter counter hegemonic concentrations emerge they really do but we're not there yet i 0:33:13 think the bernie campaign proved that conclusively we have not given birth to the structures that can generate their own incentives that are outside of the capitalist selfish one because right now that is what we're all operating out of and everybody to some extent is trying to be at a certain level like uh what the most indulgent uh debate guys want people to be which is fully invested in politics as a place to gain emotional catharsis through identity formation and the way that you lose yourself in a narrative the way that you get to the same way you get to pretend to be one of the avengers and invest yourself in in the in the story arc of ***** captain america you get to invest yourself in the battles between the different uh youtubers uh and they're different and and every time they come together to fight it's like the third 0:34:21 act of a marvel movie and then and in that realm where you are don't have any emotional connection to to these concepts where you don't have any commitment to them beyond them as you all questions become academic because all you're doing is is picking who is who is right by who is smartest just imposing a a ideological meritocracy i am not conservative because i'm smarter than them and here's the proof that i'm able to out argue them even though these arguments aren't purely meaningless rituals where you just pick a you p you you pick a side and invest yourself in it with the surety of of like belief but obscured by your conf your absolute faith in and of course this is where i have to once again come back to the supreme anxiety 0:35:39 i feel as someone who is still is part of this like how do i justify myself within this structure in a way that is not purely self-interested in a way that does not privilege my personal my personal narrow self-interest over a greater interest that i could be serving and i don't know you can't see the back your own head you got to take some faith that you're that something feels right it it gets to that level and when we all govern ourselves that way and and we just ignore it because it's the implications are too scary if we really accepted the fact that the final decision making that we have is not done rationally or logically or consciously that what the final the determiner 0:36:42 is is outside of our senses we would maybe stop to figure what just believing that we've talked ourselves to an act because i don't think we ever talk ourselves to an act because it's a certain point our our logic becomes so abstract that it loses our ability to uh discern it the way that there is a distance between the end of a nerve and where it's uh and where it has where it's processed in the brain creates a spot in between the two set the two points where it's lost where where uh discrete like levels of intensity of perception kick over into an uh into a greater perception which 0:37:44 is what consciousness is when it arises out as as an emergent property from sense perception but that creates a black hole i said this in a previous uh blog there's a black hole where the in one end goes unperceived stimuli and at the other end comes our words for it our visual conception of it in our head our symbolic representation of it in our head what comes flying out of that is not there is such no chain of evidence between those two points and that is the root of free will because at a certain level our consciousness is guessing at what reality is every second it's making a guess about 0:38:46 what the real world is and the degree to which it understands the world around it it affirms to its sense body senses it affirms to what its body is being told by the world around it but every moment it's flying out of this hole as that we're being shaken and banged around like ***** uh socks and a dryer we're just banging around the world guessing in every moment what the world is around us filling in the gaps created by our minds and we're guessing together and all of our communication is an attempt to guess together what the world actually is but we're guessing and we're banging against it and we're creating these things called consciousnesses and these illusions of a self-perpetuating identity that pilots us through a reality that is not real that is at an angle that is orthogonal to the real world to the real world of determined 0:39:47 conditions and so while that we are determined over time in an arc in general patterns of entropy and and and uh you know physical reactions cause and effect we're all being piloted by these demons these ghosts of consciousness that are guessing and that means they're pressing against the determining structures and that's the and it is then that space that little pocket of air that all human consciousness emerges from and the world as is the world that we all experience individually incorrectly can't be it could be experienced collectively and that is what that is the drive for the world spirit that is the world spirit coming into awareness of itself that is the whole 0:40:48 process of the human mind dealing with the condition of consciousness in a physical world and trying to make sense of the world through the scheme through that that veil of ignorance that we have and so everybody is getting the wrong thing so we keep banging around and making the thing more and more out of shape but if we're all experiencing it simultaneously living in the same uh imagined world it is there at that point symmetrical with the universe you have locked it back into being and that is of course the uh you know that is that is the moment of uh of total transformation that of course none of us will see it's important to note that this uh i guess you could 0:41:51 theoretically argue that like since if if everything that could happen has happened somewhere if you take that principle then somewhere somehow at some point that happened where we achieved a final species-wide communion with the galaxy but that doesn't mean that the world we're living in is going to end that way in fact violet very very very unlikely to be the case very very very unlikely to be the case and say that human civilization winks out all the other galactic civilizations that might exist all flare up uh go out there's never is like a a moment of of of species 0:42:52 being of species awareness and transcendence uh we all just go we all just eventually die out the the the mach the robots run out of battery uh the earth loses its ability to sustain us we just cough it up now all and all subsequent life on earth also fails to cohere that way all other consciousness emerges break up under uh ecological strain and then the ***** sun expands incinerates earth and the whole thing is over wiped from the galaxy anyway say that happens in this universe at the end of this universe all matter will have been expended right you'll reach a point of absolute uh absolute uh static moment right like all entropy has been extinguished in the system right so all all matter energy has been that condition is the condition of the so you don't 0:43:53 get a big crunch and you don't get a steady state you get another eruption you get another big bang now is that big bang going to create the exact same universe that just extinguished itself i don't think so because i think that's the same gap that we live in so that means that the next one is going to be different maybe when roland finds himself crossing the desert to follow uh the man in black he looks down and he has the horn of eld this and so our that means that our moral imperative in life the one that will keep us in harmony with ourselves and the world around us is in 0:44:56 seeking to build a world that leaves a trace that can be found elsewhere in the galaxy where where we can build experiences not just institutions and and structures but experiences that imprint themselves in the galaxy in our ***** in the the uh the the ricochet of of atoms imprint that psychically on the world and people have done that throughout history like history is this cycle towards oblivion and annihilation and misery but then there are these counterpoints that are the human soul screaming out against that and that's us dragging the world in a direction but we could it's just an echo through history that can accumulate our harmony with the world is our because then one day maybe the ***** thing starts off again and the conditions are 0:45:58 changed a little bit and the chess board is different and remember this is happening infinitely because there's nothing else to happen eventually the lines are going to line up the right way eventually all of the and if that has happened if that moment has happened somewhere because it's what's sustaining consciousness because the universe is just is a consciousness forgive me this got very uh very like dorm room i'm sorry if it sounds too uh too either incoherent or pretentious or uh like hippie 0:47:1 ***** but i feel like it's i feel like it's truth it feels true when i say it which is the the most fun i have in my uh somebody asked for the marxist interpretation of uh world war one i would say i mean you can say that's marxist or not i i think of myself in those terms but also i really do not see it as a uh marxism as a doctrine i see it as a heuristic it's like a way of thinking about things so some people would say that means 0:48:3

it doesn't count because they want to really get committed to the uh you know to the branding or whatever or the identity of one i don't really care if i'm called that or not uh but i'd say that world war one is the beginning of the final at the beginning of the end of the process the land bound classes of pre-capitalist europe resisted the rise and domination of the uh i'd say if that that that process begins uh i would say uh in earnest in the 17th century with the 80 years you are in the netherlands with uh the english civil war uh and then concomitant to that the 30 years war all 0:49:6 culminating in the west failure treaty it starts there and it goes through the world wars both starting in world war one with the final defeat of uh the landed ruling class and the land-based peasantry everybody has been uprooted and turned into either a capitalist or a a seller of labor this is the process that marx talked about at length which were land-based that were based with relation to specific real land and there was there were hierarchies of rule that were affirmed by that relationship and those were cultural and very much importantly religious but also um just but but also 0:50:7 structural in the in the forms of like systems of governance and legal structures like common law in the uk that end up becoming permanent features of capitalism and in the uh in the conditions after the black death and the the scrambling of feudalism that happened this the breaking up of feudalism's uh fatal uh uh stalemate because feudalism was stuck in a stalemate at the extinguishment of its viability when the malthusian shock of uh of the black death sort of scrambled about now it did not mean that feudalism went away overnight somebody said that i said that i did not mean that if that's what i ***** said what i meant was is that it changed it shook up the conditions under which feudalism uh existed namely way more land for way 0:51:8 fewer people with labor commanding a much higher price because of that and that the condition and that that destabilizing change of conditions under which feudalism had been relatively stable uh meant that the class dynamic shifted and you saw the breakup of these structures that gave dominance to rural uh ways of being because of course the peasants there were things they hated about being peasants but they would all of them the vast majority of this and them and this is true everywhere capitalism emerges peasants everywhere would rather be peasants than proletarians they would rather work the land than work for somebody else that is a universal preference you don't have to ***** uh people would rather work the land than be proletarians now you can look back at the the arise of history and art or the rise of capitalism say but you see those peasants they ended up their kids had higher 0:52:9 standards of living and their kids had more sophisticated existences and and their kids got to ride around in motor cars and like yeah but they didn't and it wasn't their kids usually it was like their ***** grandkids and they had to suffer for that and who would want to do that especially since they're not they're not imagining

depriving their kids of that they can't even conceive of that they're imagined keeping their kid in the condition of stability and and relative uh you know uh security and and self-sufficiency that they had on the land they're not comparing it to some future where they have access to the markets because that's not real to them it comes later and then they get to look around and say well you know what this is better than my dad had it because they're consuming more and consumption replaces autonomous like our idea of what our best interest is becomes our consumption patterns and and the question of how good uh how much we validate the regime we live under is how much it allows us to consume because that is what we got now that's how things start once capitalism gets a bite in though things change and then you see this mass move of people to the cities now of course and that is to participate in the thing that got built there this new this new world that is is less that is more advanced than rural life that doesn't have the idiocy of rural life but now they're comparing it to something that's not true of the early the early peasants and the ruling lords of the land they didn't want a seed powered a bunch of ***** uh uh but they had to to pursue the contest over power between the medium-sized states that start with uh either within states in in uh between within states like habsburg the habsburg low country which is a section a a regional revolt against uh the spanish crown and then the civil war in spain or in england uh and then later on the continent between states in uh and within the holy roman empire you have these things these th things that are essentially three civil wars that go throughout europe the civil war within the habsburg lands the civil war within the civil war within the habsburg uh lands both the lowlands and uh the holy roman empire and then uh off the continent in and those wars are the ruling classes the landed classes fighting each other and in so doing building up the forces of capital that will eventually suborn them completely not just in terms of structures of debt but culturally which undermines foundations that were central to the preparation of and all these capitalist innovations that the landed powers who technically all of these account accommodations to the market undermined their power in the long term and they knew that but they needed to use them to fight their wars against each other in the short term because these were independent capitalisms emerging along these national these national identity groups these national groupings that formed later into secular nation states after the after west failure treaty so if you have capitalism emerging as the dominant uh mode of uh political economy in in western europe where it is able to massively concentrate capital and intensify industrial production and and create a more and more refined civilization because of its ability to exploit undeveloped regions and do hyperexploitation there to to allow for mega consumption in the metropole that that dynamic will eventually be interrupted by some sort of uh crisis of inputs and that's what happens when european uh european capitalism hits its first big system-wide european capitalism its first system-wide crisis that then necessitates as it always does economic crisis necessitates conflict over resources among the nation-states of europe which used to be religious but are now civically national but the same thing the only thing that matters is it'll get guys to get march out and kill each other over it that's all that matters so that means it's the same type of state with the same sort of structures and it responds to capitalist crisis the same way and at every level it is first the ruling class and then the peasants rebelling against the impositions of capitalism but of course not coordinated with each other and in fact opposed to one another which is why they and you have a situation where the old ruling class is stripped of their formal of their actual power they are bought out essentially into uh some variety of um of gentlemanly retirement and the crowned heads of euro of northern europe are the perfect example of this where capitalism was first introduced where the ruling class allowed it to dominate earliest is where was most quickly developed a mechanism to slowly extinguish the power of the old land-based aristocracy without provoking them to rebellion and this and that took a few it took the cutting off of the head of a king it took the ***** uh lord protectorate of cromwell it took the reimbu it took the uh uh crowning of william and mary uh it took the jacobite rebellion but eventually formal power of the landed aristocracy was converted into capital they got bought off from power with money some of them became powerful because they invested well some of them spend themselves into dissolution but one way or another they were bought off from defeating the bourgeois and now are just a part of it one part of it one part of the new ruling owning class the ones who won some of them they're they're descendants of nobles among our poorest classes now people who ***** up who fumbled the bag and now they're on the bottom so for the descendants of the people who made that deal it was a bad deal but at the time it looked good because they could imagine a future where things were better off which is the exact opposite dynamic that exists with the peasants who can only see things getting worse and so they have to be brought along with the stick bludgeoned into submission which they are over the course of the uh from the enclosures to the suppression of the and then to the uh the socialist movement the socialist movement that becomes the first coherent class-based uh uh counter hedge hegemony and it's like oh my god this is a this is something that can actually resist the working class the ruling class will just be bought off over time the peasants will be broken up and defeated because of their inability to organize among themselves but then the leftovers of those peasantry will then be able to organize as workers and that emerged and it provided a flight flame of tension and and it is in the context of the rising working class that the the happiness with which the rulers of europe went to war

uh in the uh in 1914 shows how it contributed to this dynamic of constant eventual punctuated equilibrium of violence where you have these flare-ups and of course the french revolution is is key to that it is the continental sparking of this engine it is the it is the it is the uh overthrow of the french land-based rule by the french bourgeois eventually in the in the personification of napoleon bonaparte where finally now workers are able to organize themselves but only incipiently and then by the late 1800s you have a condition where oh ***** you have a coordinated working class in these countries they are milit they are organizing along their own axis in what is the new version of a peasants war but not run by peasants done by workers who have a greater capacity for self-organization who have a greater for cassidy for coordinated activity and from and all of it generated by class consciousness which they their peasant forbearers were incapable of producing and that conflict comes to a head that drive between colonial superpowers who are in conflict over resources to sustain their internal battle with one another while also fighting their internal working class it led them to destroy themselves in a fit of suicidal violence and then emerge from that the rise after this war of the enraged bourgeois and what you see in the 20s and 30s is the rise in the vanquished countries or the main vanquish country of germany uh johnny come lately they didn't get any of the glory italy uh this working class reaction or i'm sorry this uh this small bourgeois revolt against the large bourgeois so over the course of the 19th century the the the landowners are defeated by the bourgeois the combined bourgeois but then after the destruction of the civil war or the destruction of the of the capitalist civil war of europe that happens it ends in 1918 the crown heads are destroyed but the working class is not sufficiently organized to to contest for power in europe and instead the small bourgeois take the power and that is where fascism emerges fascism emerges as the enthralled and enthroned and traumatized small bourgeois of europe trying to defend themselves against their own subsumption into the master slave owner employee dynamic that is the fundamental endpoint of capitalism and then the end of that war is the final extinguishment of the contest in europe anyway the final contest ends in 1991 when the but the the creation of the eu and the nato and the un and and the international monetary fund and the bretton woods system and the dollar and the marshall plan and uh political subjectivity had been seeded from the europeans they had been bought off essentially you guys play you guys can pay each other money for jobs but you're not the masters of your soul anymore you're not in charge of anything because if you use those uh your nation states as nation states in this contest for resources you're gonna ***** destroy each other but the good news is you don't have to worry about fighting for resources because we're going to subsidize you us the united states the ones who was the people who were able to because we were off cast from your conflicts we're able to synthesize our the social order with capitalism and the and turn it into a new headquarters for global capitalism but that was all predicated on the super profits of empire which are now being more evenly distributed to maintain the structure which means that at the center the treats are running out and the thing that bought us everybody off is is the things that bought everybody off are no longer holding sway even if you're still enjoying the pleasures of your sweet treat life you can't imagine a better future for your kids and so therefore they don't taste so good and so we 1:6:46 have this now american-led bourgeois revolt but political subjectivity was killed in europe so now it's all spectacle now it's all just a fun fun house a game we can enjoy root for one side or another well both of us are annihilated by the machinery that is unchallenged okay i hope this made sense this was a wacky one i hope i hope i don't sound too out there man i don't want to feel like i'm too wavy gravying it anyway signing off next i'm sorry wednesday first three chapters of blackjack events bye-bye

*Music playing** foreign just about a year ago i went out on the road seeking for fame and fortune looking for a particle things got bad things got worse i guess you know the tune oh lord i'm stuck in a low die **Music playing** again rolling on a greyhound i'll be walking out if i go i was just passing through must be seven months or more i ran out of time and money looks like my plans fell through oh lord i'm stuck in low die again i should probably do this button we'll be talking about the first three chapters of blackjack which is a terribly enjoyable book and very well read james is a great pro stylist which is pretty rare among historians and you got to give it up when you find it uh it seems like there are a lot of the sweet spot really does seem like the 30s for a lot of that like really uh uh pros uh poem prose poetic history where it's like you know you're getting you're getting a synthesis you're not getting you know an academic treatise but you are getting also a work of literature and i would put this among here uh another book that i would recommend for anybody who wants to read something like that is cv wedgewood's book on the 30 years war uh just delightful incredibly easy to read and that's difficult with the with uh which this with this sort of history like reconstruction for example reconstruction is a great book but you know fauna is he is trying to build like this this house of evidence you know and like it's more workmanlike whereas this is frankly artistic which is something that's gotten squeezed out of uh history honestly as it's become more and more specialized and professionalized you know the creation of the academy as such especially the neoliberal academy the the academy of uh you know constant production in order to get uh these few signatures cinecures uh senecures it's it's it leads you to the point where you're just uh you're just pointing at things or you're just throwing out words that you know people want to hear two three four five six seven eight nine ten eleven twelve all right we might kick yeah all right so we'll probably do we'll do the next three for next week same time wednesday no no we won't be doing it wednesday uh so the first chapter of uh james's book which was written in 1939 8 as i said and uh another thing that distinguishes it as a product of that time in addition to its pro style is the fact that uh james is clearly uh operating in in a polemic mode he's trying to use explicitly use the story of the haitian revolution creating a historic narrative you know conjuring a a vision of this thing that did happen uh in the moment of uh colonial the first inklings of colonial upheaval uh in the periphery uh after because world war one like fatally wounded the empires of europe but it took world war two to to doom them finally and in that inner war period was when you saw the first real explosion of coordinated anti-imperial activism in the in the empire and CLR James is from trinidad which is part of the british empire and he wrote this book as uh an explicit parallel for the times and he is he is several points in the book analogizes 0:6:18 the slaves of sandoming to the uh restive african and asian and uh latin american subjects of the european imperial system and that their task was the same that the haitian slaves was that they were to complete the historical uh mission begun by the haitian slaves uh and that the context of the incipient war in europe that was uh that was on the horizon for everyone to see uh would be the cause of that or would be the opportunity like the world the the crisis in the in the in the in the capitals of europe that was occurring as hitler was continuing his brinksmanship towards the poland invasion uh that is analogous to the conflict among the the whites of san 0:7:20 domingo and what ended up happening is is along those lines in that it was the war that led to the creation of the first really organized effective military algeria uh uh india obviously uh kenya cuba of course and that uh process did lead to a a a sort of liberation you know but it was uh the same stunted liberation that the haitians got which is they were able to secure their independence as a nation among nations but 0:8:21 cut off from capital and doomed to be a a client state of more powerful capitalist governments in the things that in the in the uh the trade system that took over for colonialism and perpetuated the colonial relationship that's what the cold war is it is the it is western capitalism imposing itself as the post-colonial uh imperial authority that maintains the maintaining the relationship the economic relationship between uh the periphery and the metropolises of the uh old empires that are no longer uh affordable that had to be gotten rid of and haiti got that haiti got independence but it was cut off from all trade to the united states which refused to recognize it until the civil war uh forced to pay billions of dollars billions with a b in uh reparations to 0:9:23 france for the for committing the crime of self-liberation because they could because france could do that and the post-colonial third world became a place where every country was a haiti in that they had independence formally within this nation-state formation but then they were still stuck in the capitalist structure and forced to to trade on the capitalism's demands which means cheap uh goods to the center labor uh difficult painful labor extractive labor uh to the ex to the periphery uh uh relatively milder labor uh and surplus from the periphery to the center that relationship was perpetuated by the global brenton wood system that was imposed after the war because the west could do it because russians stopped fighting and allowed them to dictate terms and doomed the soviet project in the long run unless they were willing to actually um and so as in haiti you saw the development of instead of a liberated population a uh a system where a few wealthy families in haiti or able to secure positions as colonial uh operatics of western capitalism and then operate the uh extractive economy of haiti uh with the same coercive mechanisms uh that were in operation with the colonial authorities not with the name of slavery anymore uh but with a similar relationship between the government uh and its ruling class that backs it and the actual mass of people of haiti and then haitian uh political history is is is a story of fights within these concentrations of power broken up occasionally by us military intervention the united states occupied haiti for i believe it was from the wilson administration until hoover i think like 19 uh i think 19 uh 14 or something until 1931 someone can correct me on that and that's completely forgotten no one literally nobody knows that uh and in the united states like a fraction of a percentage of americans know that uh or honestly would care if they did you know that's the thing about all this history stuff uh it isn't really true that if only people knew it's like they would just process it through their preconceived ideas and what they think they want and then they would get the same answer it's not the fact that uh does something it's the fact in context it's the narrative built which is what james is trying to do build a narrative that could be persuasive that can carry you through battle but that occupation as you can imagine was incredibly brutal like this is america at the absolute height of its race hatred america's american racism in terms of like as a social uh value reached its uh uh absolute apogee in america uh in the uh early 20th century because of the stresses of the great migration because race hatred was concentrated in the south because that is where blacks were concentrated and it was the breaking of those geographic bonds and mass entrance of of blacks into urban areas that triggers this this massive explosion of race violence you had 1919 the red summer which is a series of incredibly bloody race riots that occur all throughout uh american cities and that is that is the latent racism uh of a society at that point uh being put under strain put under pressure and you see this explosion and so you see racism become for the first time this nationwide self-conscious uh pursuit which is why you see the second clan at this point and this is why you have uh you have the clan running the state government of indiana through the republican party that is how detached from the the traditional regional racial obsession that characterized white society there and it was a crisis that was fundamentally uh solved first by as always enforcing people in the land and in the cities too uh in order to uh you know relieve white anxiety because you know they are they do not have representation in the system and so they can't be used that way without it uh

affecting the decision-making of actual governors because it doesn't matter to them they're not at they're not at uh hope beholden to them at all but then what led to this what allowed the civil rights movement to happen and for that racism to kind of push away enough to allow for something like the civil rights movement and then the civil rights acts and and formal secret segregation being abolished everywhere were where's the surpluses of the post-war era it was the good times provided for by the establishment of this global post-colonial structure of oppression this is all a tangent to say that america's rape most racist army occupying for over a decade 0:15:38 the first and only black uh republic in the western hemisphere uh my god it was brutal it was monstrous it was it was a it was a government organized lynch mob and then we leave and leave propped up those people who were more committed to the project of being rich than to any national uh any kind of solidarity beyond their own disgusting inbred families which is how you see reproduced in this in the the free slave republic the same social dynamics that existed in the uh the repu the uh colony i mean do you think that the the ruling families of haiti have uh any warmer feelings for the masses of port-au-prince than uh then the ***** old planters and 0:16:52 then we propped up the duvalier family as a literal client uh gang to run the country on our behalf and then when they first and then when uh and then when aristide gets in there and starts to stabilizing the the power structure and introducing you know regular uh haitians into politics it's amazing we they think jean-paul air steed was overthrown by american trained uh military guys on behalf of the ruling families of haiti then we put him back in power i think this is because uh more than anything it triggered a big refugee crisis in florida that was not something that bill clinton wanted to see and so they figured we put aristide back in but because we did it he 0:17:54 owes us but then he got too big for his britches again and we ***** kidnapped him we kidnapped him and dropped him in the central african republic we claimed that uh he asked us to do that for him but he says that didn't happen and it's who are you going to believe i guess you know maybe he's just trying to save face but even if he didn't it's another case where we just uh went in there to unilaterally decide who's in charge and now the uh us-backed president who has been triggering massive street demonstrations for refusing to leave office and is worrying a lot of powerful people in haiti that he might trigger a revolution gets murked by mercs maybe from miami including fbi informants or are they patsies either way it seems like and now 0:18:55 we have uh haitians uh in government asking for american military intervention it the development plan that the us has made for haiti in the last 20 or so years since they uh since they since the duvaliers fell really was to intervene enough in haiti to establish the the uh governmental legitimacy and uh infrastructure uh to carry out a process of restructuring around uh um factory labor essentially turn haiti into uh one of those uh sweatshop countries in asia uh which had been prevented by that point because haiti didn't have strong enough really institutions to pull people off the land 0:19:57 i mean they had uh done a good job of destroying the agricultural sector through uh the dumping of american uh subsidized agriculture into the thing same thing they did in mexico and elsewhere uh to destroy their domestic uh uh agricultural sector but it was hard to get a private investment to into the kind of capital intensive uh uh capital intensive operations that you would need to um that you would need to actually get a lot of labor out of that haiti's uh urban slum population uh it was there wasn't enough infrastructure around it to make that a a decent investment and so the un and the ***** clinton foundation has spent the last few decades trying to uh uh proletarianize the uh the lumpin population of port-au-prince but you got 0:21:0 to figure even if the us doesn't invade haiti this moment allows for some sort of transition of power that everyone can cross their fingers and hope will tamper down the the uh anger in the streets uh and maybe it will i mean that's what that's why we have elections is to get people riled up and then have their uh their uh pent up anger released through the uh emotional spectacle of a changing of power like you have to do it if you don't do it eventually they overthrow you you lose the mandate of heaven unless you have a little fake change every four or eight years or after somebody gets shot in their i'll bringing us back to the first chapter of the black 0:22:3 jackets which is about the uh experience of being a slave his main uh james main goal here is to give you a true sense of the horror of it of the genuine of the misery that it inflicted on humans and and that and the misery that that uh that then shaped the culture around that uh um and part of the thing that makes it so brutal is how james repeatedly uh highlights the fact that uh shorn of the mystifications that you'd 0:23:6 have in a bourgeoisie like uh developed country like england or even france at that point where of course you have brutality you have brutal uh class segregation and you have oppression and filth and misery but there is also a there is a ritual around it you know there are rituals of obligation around it that cloud everything and that make it feel more uh more consensual because it is because people have like a shared experience that makes them invest in the world around them even the parts that are serving their oppression because they don't they can't recognize the difference that is how we build our consciousness it's not that the reason false consciousness is an incorrect uh term is that it implies there is such thing as a true consciousness there's not false consciousness is just a shortcoming from when that consciousness which is always false is false in a way that hinders class consciousness because class 0:24:8 consciousness is also false in that you're picking a group of people to to identify with psychically that is fundamentally arbitrary but it's arbitrary in a way that moves the ***** wheel of history because we're all just guessing and being pushed towards

outcomes uh by the grinding of the gears of history that's it so for james because uh colonial uh plantation agriculture is capitalism shorn of all of its uh attendant mysteries you get the purest expression of material interests of people operating from a belief only in their own most selfish intelligent conception of pleasure because the thing about uh the thing that distinguishes plantation slavery most of all uh from 0:25:12 uh capitalism as it was uh being carried out in like the burgeoning uh merchant capitals of europe and north america uh oh ***** i completely people are really talking about whether or not haiti should become a state oh brother they would never do that because they're trying to do it at the minimum of cost they're trying to and then standing the place up as a sweatshop is the lowest uh capital input it costs way too much to ***** i was saying something about what the fundamental difference between those two forms of capitalism were but oh this is it is that capital 0:26:18 is not reinvested when the merchants of the cities of boston and london when they met profit on a venture they maybe had a nice duck that they put some towards the building of a new part of their house and that is what builds capital intensity in the cities and that's what builds uh the infrastructure of capitalism like factories and and uh and and you know gives the people who come from the countryside to the city a put a place to go and a way to be uh productive is capital reinvestment in slave in plantation agriculture that they just ***** spend it because there's no 0:27:19 need to invest at a certain level you got the land you got the slaves if you have sugar you have the sugar processing facilities which are relatively high investment but for like indigo or a cotton plantation or rice you've got a couple of buildings basically and you are not uh you're not a corporation you're just a guy you're just a guy and you probably honestly are in a lot of debt so all your money goes through repaying your debt and then spending it on fancy fancy gloves and and wines a way to create the illusion of civilization in a place where you're just sitting in a ***** dark and that consumption rice is more complicated because it is more labor intensive but remember if you have slave labor uh the it's not as capital intensive is what i meant 0:28:20 and so that is why you have the colonial uh uh uh that's why colonial and uh then slave places are more backwards less developed morse just savage and the culture that they produce is more savage and that is because everybody here is just living by their material in the narrowest sense desi interests and of course that's why they were destroyed that's why the slaves were able to defeat them because they were everyone was operating out of this base material interest and at the end of the day there were too many slaves whose base material interest was freedom uh and those ***** at a certain point they couldn't even agree what they wanted and you see again and again 0:29:23 the the the the planter class dooming themselves uh in the long term for short-term advantage so the first chapter is is mostly about the misery of the slave uh and how

it made santa mango a miserable place uh but then a second chapter owners which is about the whites of uh santa man uh really goes very far uh the great pains to show uh that the misery uh of the colony was felt in both halves because while of course the the whites were all uh living lives of relative pleasure and leisure they were also creating a culture of absolute miserable uh nasty brutishness they were living as pigs they were and so this map this this uh rather than like the the dream of the like the the southern aristocracy was always that uh being a slave owner in america allowed you to be like an ancient athenian you could spend all day doing philosophy and reasoning and figuring out ideal forms of government and contributing to the general good because somebody else is doing all the ***** work and and you are you your mind was better spent there because you were more advanced you were uh smarter and therefore more valuable your time is more valuable but the colonists of saint domingue show that that is absolutely not what happens uh in in in amongst the absolute brutality of of american and caribbean slavery unlike anything that happened that existed in ancient there is just this savage grotesquery the whites of haiti really do remind you of like the more carnival-esque but because it's uh it is dissension within the white ranks that helps lead to the revolution james uh takes pains to point out that there are different groups of white people uh in uh domain different classes you had the planters who actually owned the plantations uh many of them uh uh down downwardly mobile uh aristocrats basically uh people who were uh maybe the disinherited second son of a family uh from uh a rural uh mezzo or whatever the ***** uh who could uh get the family name back some some stature by uh making money in the in the uh the third world the big whites and there was very few of them uh but they had the vast majority of the wealth of the of the plantation of the uh of the colony then you had uh the small whites the administrators the overseers the lawyers the shopkeepers the people do who are doing jobs that could not be uh given to slaves because the education necessary to have them do those jobs would make them too dangerous to let them do those jobs so those jobs had to be done by white people and that is where you get the real uh dregs of french society the white dregs who aren't trying to rebuild a family name with money they have or money that they could borrow but are just trying to find any kind of uh employment and of course to say dregs is not to say that the fact that they uh were poor made them bad it just meant that they could not continue to expect to live in france and not have life just get worse and worse over time so haiti was their chance to do that and uh there they were of course the the people who were most devoted to um the color line because as james points out racial segregation or a racial segregation of like uh prescribed rights based on uh race was not uh did not emerge instantly there were no early regulations or statutes about race in uh haiti uh it was

CUSHVLOG 174. BLACK JACOBIANS 1 over time over the course of the 1700s uh that that comes into play as the small whites insist that if they're going to be in haiti here taking this ***** in this place 0:34:34 where they're risking yellow fever all the time and going to be at the beck and call of these these fancy people then they have to be assured that they're never going to have to do any of the real work that that is a pres that there is a prescribed group who who uh will take that labor and that makes them feel less precarious because precarity is the driver of all middle class political activities not solidarity precarity because they cannot they're not they're not class conscious they are self-conscious because they are the product of liberalism they are the the purest class and their precarity at this point drove them to assert a color line that led to the creation of an 0:35:36 incredibly intricate array of legal rights that are distinguished based on percentage and fraction of of black blood stuff that is absolutely absurd and and to think that people sat there and wrote this stuff down and took it seriously is it is it's it's grimly kind of funny because of how ridiculous in the bosom of the enlightenment these people do in this thing but it was necessary uh it was required to maintain the social strata because you needed those whites there and that meant you needed that line there but that con that relationship is complicated by the fact that you have this other group uh what james calls uh the mulattos uh the colored population uh the the the products of uh uh european and african reproduction and because of the 0:36:39 very very small number of whites in the colony uh and the need for uh people in an intermediate uh position that is not slave but is not really master either because there's some jobs a master can't do but you can't have a slave do and so you need whites for some of them but for others you need uh someone who is outside of uh you know full citizenship but enjoys a privileged position relative to slaves but then therefore will feel their precarity and so you get the uh the colored population people who uh are the product of relationships consensual or non-consensual between uh slaves and uh whites who are not uh who are free upon birth and are able to uh buy property and that puts them in a position where even though they get they 0:37:41 don't have equal uh legal standing to whites they are um and they have to they're uh forced to perform uh compulsory military uh service in slave patrols that white people don't have to didn't have to do uh but they're not slaves and they're more aware of the danger of becoming a slave than they are inspired by the thought of being equal and so but this is why these systems are so ingenious and the way they emerge is so organic uh the colored population is adheres to the uh white population uh and not the not the black slave because they can own property because they can they are uh connected materially to the interests of the slave economy they can own slaves they can work in in the colonial economy that depends on slavery they can 0:38:45 make and so they have a material interest that is with slavery even though slavery

treats them as second class just like the small whites have a material interest in a color line that stands in for their uh and that is and that's that is what keeps these systems going from from the middle area from the from the fat of it for the people who at any point could hypothetically stop everything from working because they have the most crucial choke points what's keeping them all in this system is that they feel more than anything a precarity and a fear of falling and that's because they don't feel solidarity and the theory of the theory of ***** marxism is that the creation of uh of of a class-based experience of exploitation creates a different uh sense of uh a different sense of best interest a different sense of material interest that means that instead of going towards despair and rage which is what happens when the middle class sees that things can't get better within the current system solidarity allows you to think that no well we can overcome this system and replace it with something whereby we don't have to fear falling anymore and that that feeling is a more is a superior um social mechanism for uh seizing political power than because what fascism is and i think we are in a post-fascism where we're inside a cone of misery and despair and that means everybody within that framework of american liberalism which includes the entirety of the republican and democratic party as in people who adhere to a liberal world where they believe that capitalism is eternal that is that is who we're talking about if you're republican or democrat not talking about how you feel about anything i'm talking about what's the systems that you're part of and the systems that you ritually engage with and psychologically engage with what they represent those parties represent polls within one reality where capitalism is immutable and everything is going to get worse forever that is the world that everybody within the bubble of american politics lives now and our politics is an expression of that and if you really believe that then politics can only serve as a vessel for revenge against somebody whose fault it is because the fault cannot be and then if you can act you can only act and the difference is how much have you displaced your own sense of guilt and responsibility within this system and so the democrats are those people led at the top i wouldn't no i would not say led at the top i would say the the majority of their supporters who vote and participate as democrats uh at the top it's it's just malik but uh because they are they're they're shielded from everything everything's gonna be fine for them they have underwater bunkers they're gonna be fine they're serving malik everybody if elected by both parties is serving malik everybody at the top levels of the media is serving molech but there are still people staffing these parties at the at the staff level at the level of like workers within the political infrastructure and then of course those people who vote for them most assiduously and who organized for the most those people middle class precarious without the ability to think uh in class terms and to hope for a challenge to the system that would make it better would make life better uh have decided that it's their fault as highly educated white as white people basically uh that that white society did this because what liberalism is because urban liberalism 0:43:54 is is is the middle class trying to convince themselves that it's right and just that they're sitting in a nice appointed room surrounded by misery and that makes you start turning inward and it turns uh it it uh and that means that you end up being overawed by your super ego you end up being uh you end up sublimating all of your libidinal energy into denial and punishment uh and that is urban liberal that is urban american liberalism now suburban whatever the democratic party in general and the way you do that as a liberal is by finding somebody else to blame who is like you but isn't you yes white people but uh if i'm of white woman white men uh yes white people including white women but some way that it isn't me or even if yes i am all those 0:44:55 boxes but i'm aware of it and all of those things exude exempt you from punishment but that means somebody else has to pay and so liberalism is now making some type of uh understanding of republicans however you want to define that pay be the first through the shoot it's two for it's two guys falling into a ***** uh uh meat grinder and they're fighting to see who can push the other one in first so that they can watch them go through and then yes they get destroyed too but at that point when you've given up hope for anything better that's the only pleasure you can imagine that's the only future that you can find solace in is one where now the republicans they haven't sublimated ***** they're they're out there loud and proud because they their uh 0:45:56 political formations their uh their traditions their definitions of the terms we use to even think and reason our way through the world were forged in the more brutal chambers of slave of plantation economics so they're not sublimated ***** the the it's everybody else it's somebody else's fault not me not not who i imagine myself or who i relate to another it's the other and i will destroy the other and i will see the other destroyed and so those are the two strains of uh oh also in this chapter uh uh james does a little uh mind blowing for people who might have always uh uh nurse the idea hey uh you know maybe if the british had not uh had not been kicked out 0:46:58 and we'd stay to colonies uh they would have gotten rid of slavery earlier and we wouldn't add a civil war because it's true that around the turn of the 19th century uh the british empire uh started agitating significantly uh internally to abolish the slave trade which it eventually did in the 1830s uh and then led and then began to patrol the atlantic ocean to suppress the slave trade uh after being the biggest slave traders and that's a story that is sometimes told in heroic terms you know like the abolitionists of america william wilberforce and all that well according to james as soon as the uh north american colonies were uh lost uh it became in england's long-term ben best economic interest and geostrategic interest to end slavery uh because they had enough uh slaves they could certainly ban the slave trade because they had 0:47:59 enough uh blacks in the colonies that they controlled already meanwhile uh saint-domingue which was hugely profitable the most profitable colony in the americas uh but because it was so brutally exploitative and it required so much slave labor being imported because so many slaves died it was really it was the fact the fact that it was the most uh gruesomely uh physically degrading and dangerous slave colony is has an intimate profitable and so old wiley uh william pitt over there in england figures out hey we could uh burnish our credentials here uh and also enforce 0:49:1 a slave trade ban in the atlantic that would allow us to cut uh access to slaves to uh the most profitable french colony and make it more vulnerable so once again james coming back to material interests uh and and how how you can see through the bones of social nicety so much more clearly in a place like haiti and in and around uh slavery specifically where you see every consideration social consideration dissolved before the exis exigency of uh maintaining slavery so having set up the the main uh within haiti on the eve of the revolution uh james's third chapter is about how 0:50:4 the colony responded to the french revolution which is what really tips everything in out of balance you'd had a miserable grinding relatively stable status quo in haiti for hundreds of years at that point uh the the the reality of life as a as a slave in haiti was such that even though it was insanely miserably uh brutally uh miserable i mean one of the worst places to be a human uh it was the way of the very nature of the regime was such that resistance to it was sort of tired just drained of the population people just literally didn't have the energy they were kept at a state of pretty much perpetual exhaustion to the point of death and that allowed for this thing to stay kind of stable but then news comes from paris the king has called the 0:51:5 general assembly the states general what are we going to do and uh it leads to a big explosion of political uh ferment on the island the big whites immediately uh attempt to use the moment to secure independence for the colony uh because like all big for their britches colonists they were sick of the mercantile system that forbid them from getting uh materials from outside of france or selling outside of the french networks uh and imagine that well with the king's authority now uh compromised ***** it uh we will uh we'll just be our own dudes we'll rock but then the small whites uh joined 0:52:6 along because the threat of the national assembly in paris and this new revolutionary government to perhaps mess with the racial arrangement and one of the big things that destabilized uh haitian politics during this period was the uh uh the loosening of uh restrictions on blacks the the uh are not blacks i'm sorry uh collards colored uh uh as they were known um haitians uh um increasing their access to civil rights and allowing uh even the handful of uh coloreds who were the product of two parents who were both free uh what at the time of birth the small and big whites who in 0:53:7

france are killing each other or rather the the big the big whites are in the process of of of finally being you know held to account by uh by the small whites of like the urban uh uh artisan classes the son culat but they were on the same page in haiti because uh they were equally committed to the maintenance of the color line uh meanwhile the uh the colored population uh is trying to use the revolution to assert a universality of of rights among property owners and of course not among any slave which is what renders this whole pro uh uh this whole moment so kind of once again grimly uh absurd there is a lot that's really brutally grimly absurd about about the 0:54:10 haitian revolution uh and it's because of uh the absurdity of trying to run a civilized country uh with pretensions to ideas of rights and obligations and laws uh on top of just a giant machine of human misery right there not not somewhere else not baffled through chambers of law and language and geography right in your you have these people uh you know uh fighting for their civil rights their their universally recognized uh human rights to be equal to the other slave owners to be able to vote together with the other slave owners on what to do about and all for a sweet sweet delicious 0:55:21 treat that you put in your tea or coffee something that rotted the teeth out of your gums uh kept you up late and that's it that's all did it wasn't necessary it wasn't it wasn't a a needed element of the european diet so at the end of the third chapter uh an assembly has been called to replace an assembly that had broken up during this tumultuous battle uh where all the while the uh colonial authorities who were the other group of white people i didn't mention earlier the actual uh military leaders and the uh the governor the intendant and all that uh and then the bureaucrats this thin sheen of of legality on top of this whole process uh they were unable to control events there weren't enough of them there weren't enough troops there or enough 0:56:22 bureaucrats and they were there was an attempt by uh the colonial authorities to uh ally with the colors uh to uh check the uh rebellious uh coalition of the big and small whites and it was in the as this uh battle was uh heating up and as uh the color population started making moves towards uh insurrection one had already happened uh and been brutally repressed one by o'jay uh as this was happening out of nowhere some the people that these people have been talking in front of and mobilizing in front of the whole time and it just would not even thinking about what they might be seeing what they might be thinking because of the screen of dehumanization that they had to put up to keep themselves where they were that very thing that allowed 0:57:23 that line that allowed them to gain all that power to gain all that luxury and all those beautiful homes and fine silks became the very thing that meant that it would all go up in a ***** blaze of fire in a ***** inferno as their plantations were burned as they were because in the middle of all this strikes a strikes the the first mass uprising of the haitian revolution and uh fourth chapter will no doubt uh uh set the scene for that

whole so yeah three three next three chapters for but i would say that that that the 0:58:38 sugar uh industry is a good illustration of just how the colonial project provided the necessary uh raw materials uh uh trade establishment of trade networks um surplus uh uh production of uh helped capitalism in europe not collapse in on itself because capitalism is wildly destabilizing and it creates social uh it creates massive social dislocation as it occurs it is it is it bores everything into oblivion and that means that it creates unstable political situations and it creates conflicts within societies and between societies as the resources are ground into the maw and as people are 0:59:39 pulled away from their uh their established connections to the world around them and the people around them and turned into individuals and they resist everybody resists the old ruling class resists because they weren't they didn't really sign up for this when they unleashed these forces but and now they're going to try to fight and then of course the peasants resist because they don't want to be made into whatever the hell this thing is has in mind for them which they can't even imagine and what gets them off of their ***** tractors and which gets them into the cities and what soothes the ball and soothes the anxious minds of the aristocrats and the landowners sweet sugar sweet egos gim cracks stuff that is all the product of a trade of uh raw 1:0:40 resources processed by uh slave and honestly i would say that that's the one thing that marx under uh emphasizes and i think that under under emphasis is the biggest explanation for why he uh wasn't wrong marx wasn't wrong about anything why he underestimated the timeline the time scales that he was operating off of and that was because not only did colonization jump start capitalism in europe it also provided a uh like a stabilizing uh fin as this thing is rocketing and then the crucial moment came in the early 20th century when capitalism's headquarters moved from europe to 1:1:41 north america and in that case and once that happens the inherent uh instability in european capitalism can kind of blow itself up without destroying the whole system and then can be rebuilt creative destruction baby we love it don't we that's world war ii world war one and two the second thirty years war as i like to yes the cold war was 1:2:44 world war three that is tracked eventually uh i might do a book on the 30 years war after this if i find a good one i don't know maybe wedgewood again there's this like thousand page behemoth that i've always wanted to read and never got around to it though yeah world war 4 is not climate change annihilating us all it's uh technology 1:3:45 plus its human traitor minions uh the climate change is just the context of them liquidating us uh as needed and when i say us i mean all humans i don't mean us as in americans not right away we will be the last to feel the blade but what will make the blade send faster is how much we're going to be fixated on making sure that our enemies pay hit to take the blade first that is what's going to if anything does is is our politically invested populous being so committed to uh seeing somebody

else suffer before them uh that if things get disabled destabilized uh they're gonna 1:4:47 want they're gonna reach for the acts of destruction not yeah i mean we're we're they're going they're at war with us right now and of course for right now we are also the ones that aren't war on behalf of because right now they're fighting war on behalf of the american standard of living basically because the american standard of living is what powers the world economy it is the thing it's the reason we have stuff and economic development is extending the american standard of living as far into the world as possible now of course that's impossible you get to a point where 1:5:49 you start having enough people living the american standard of living and the uh ***** biome starts to collapse which is what we're in and so everybody who enjoys an american standard of living anywhere in the world is uh on one side of a war with the rest and a lot of us are really struggling with the implications of that how do i live knowing that i'm on the wrong side not because i do that i use plastic straws not because of any specific actions i do but just because of where i am situated in the global chain you can't not be uh in there because it's not you standing it up it's the uh it's the structures that you are enmeshed in that stand it up your individual participation is beside and i think that is one reason people like to think of climate 1:6:55 apocalypse in in very uh mid-century mid mid 20th century terms they want to think of it as another uh dr strange love ending because they love the idea of of you know extinguishment rather they certainly find more pleasurable to imagine about apocalyptic extinguishment than they do of just slowly over time becoming more in nerd to the misery dished out on our behalf and more uh in need of a uh escape a mental justification for why uh what i'm why i'm not trying to do something more why i'm not risking anything to stop i can see why why you want to think everyone wants to think that it'll just one day that you're always going to be you can imagine 1:7:57

i see a bad moon rising i see trouble on the way i see earthquakes and lightning i see a bad time today well don't go around tonight or it's bound to take your life **Music playing** i'll put some whiskey in your water sugar in your tea what's 0:1:10 all these crazy questions you're asking me this is the best body that could ever be turn on the lights cause i don't wanna see open up this window let some air 0:2:13 into this room i think i'm almost choking i saw a sale that cigarette just smoking scared me open up the window sucker let me catch my breath yes randy newman wrote that song definitely one of our best guys folks so today i wanted to talk uh as about broadly very broadly about like seek meaning from politics in the current 0:3:15 moment and how that manifests itself in mass politics not not niche politics but like centered around significant numbers of americans all identifying with the same s constellation of symbols and ideas with the same leadership that is able to exercise like actual influence so we're not talking about anything on the left we're really only talking about liberal and conservative the two parties and specifically wanted to start talking about what it is to get meaning from politics if you are a republican that is to say if you're a so there's this article this uh in the post today washington post to trump's hardcore supporters his rallies weren't politics they were life and it 0:4:19 is an embedding a reporter did with a bunch of people who were essentially dead heads for trump rallies these are people who would follow trump's public addresses across the country they would fly and they would stay in each other's houses they formed a little community of like the hardcore like these would be your the closest thing you would have to like the altar comforts and street fighters of the nazi party if you were gonna try to make the fossil fascism argument whereas those people uh were traumatized world war one veterans in germany their equivalent here are all because for the young politics is as dead as it was before it was born that doesn't 0:5:21 move people the symbols have been exhausted so they've tuned out by and large the people who are still invested in this ***** are people who still have an investment in this system because it's don't serve them well enough their whole life and now their politics is this spectacle of of uh nihilistic excess it's fandom it is fandom and if you want to explain if you want to understand january 6th it's not a coup it's not a it was not an insurrection uh it was barely not even honestly a riot it was well it was a riot uh like when the lakers won the uh the championship or like when vancouver lost to boston in the stanley cup is an excess of emotional feeling associated 0:6:24 with a spectacle of mass uh expectation of mass convic of massive warning into a **Music playing** it's like you're it's the sense of being subsumed into a greater uh consciousness that comes from mass participation ritual mass participation the kind of things that make people's lives up when they're struggling for survival and for uh power over their lives the political struggle that defined but that has been superseded in america because we got bought out everybody got bought out all autonomy all ability to to have a mass consciousness like work on behalf of something beyond 0:7:25 capital beyond the algorithm beyond the inhuman all of that uh all that ability has been stripped of us depoliticized whether we uh live or die whether the oceans rise or fall whether uh we uh are able to keep our house or we have to sell it whether we have to go in the pod and eat the bugs all of these decisions have been taken out of the realm of politics they're not considered by us so we can't struggle for them and there's no uh social order to back with like your material struggles beyond uh you know criminality or or something like that because uh if you want to express anti-social behavior because all violence has been monopolized by the techno capitalist 0:8:28 state so you cannot struggle on your own behalf but in exchange you don't feel the need to struggle because you are otherwise compensated in the form of the dream of the hope of not the actual fulfillment of homes consumer products conveniences and this is not anyone's fault because this change happens because the uh structure uh accelerates proletarianization over time but not evenly and and the the role of the post-war specifically the american post-war government was to direct as much as possible uh the misery of the building of capitalism world capitalism away from 0:9:30 americans at least the americans who mattered that that was what government did existed to do to keep the people in the center happy enough to keep the machine going and that meant that doing most of the real exploitation out in the periphery in the colonies where there is nothing but a pure miseration and pure exploitation but that is just abstracted away from the real lived experience of people in the center they get to benefit just from the ***** excess and not feel the exploitation that's inherent in making that uh making these trade routes and and the difference between now and uh what we think of american government like the expectation that was created by the new deal and everything is that uh the uh hose is broken and it's just it's hitting everybody now it was all the tank was filling but now there's nowhere 0:10:33 else for it to go total admiseration is coming and that is the ah the entirety of our our political crisis is that reality is that emergence and what that means is that people are getting more and more anxious and they're needing their politics which is where they have subsumed away their uh their sense of any control over their lives because since the 70s there has been a general more generalized demiseration slowly but surely the ones who lasted the longest were the ones who got the homeowner deal the ones who in 1980 were said look if you got a house by now congratulations we're going to create a a bubble around this house that is going to make it turn it into a guaranteed investment a a a solid gold bond that will always appreciate in value because it is supported by the entire structure of the united states government and economy and so they got low property taxes reduced income taxes a deregulated market for them to invest in they got stuff out of it but their kids aren't getting that deal the people around them who weren't as lucky didn't get the deal and so they're feeling the heat turn up but nobody signed off on any of this because the whole time this was happening actual politics was turned into a pure spectacle of fandom where you go to seek the reason that the uh that soccer hooliganism exploded in england after world war ii is that you had the british of people who had been the most martial humans on earth people who had ***** galloped through history at the at the drum beat of of a world ma destroying empire where um where military service and and military sacrifice was a defining feature of masculinity and uh just told no no they don't we don't do that anymore we don't do that anymore those animal energies got to go somewhere and if they're deferred from politics they go to some other public place public ritual that can allow people to feel communal for a minute feel like one one force feel like one mind even if it's around a spectacle an enjoyment a game a circus it is a venting of that energy that cannot otherwise be satisfied because the rest of your life is determined by the patterns of the market and of exchange and you have no real autonomy you cannot choose to do anything and that drains you uh and emotionally grappled with and that's where it goes and it was traditionally sports but now it's become politics because politics has been totally uh removed from a question of accountability the reason these guys can do this stuff and care and to treat our institutions so so cavalierly is because they know at heart more than the liberals do that none of them matter that might makes right that that is it that that all these niceties are and so politics is this it's a it's an indulgence it's an emotional indulgence it's a time to feel like you're in a room with other people who are also you and you get to see yourself reflected in a way that you can't in a world where you are alienated against from yourself and so that means that politics becomes part of the spectacle of fandom and the ritual of fandom and that's what the trump rallies were in our is a ritual of fandom uh which is why i think the best way to understand uh january 6th is as a sports riot and the thing that makes that meaningful is that this is all individuated this is not a political act they're not actually coming together as political actors they're not imagining themselves capable of actually changing anything they can only express their libidos they can only indulge and that means not cooperating that means not wasting any time they could be selfieing themselves in front of nancy pelosi's office they will not sacrifice anything from their pleasure their pleasure is why they are fighting this fight in the first place to protect their ***** pleasure so why the hell would they 0:15:47 give that up when they don't think it's possible when they have discounted because they have not lived it that can supersede the algorithm of capitalism no that is inexorable and so what did they do they wanted to overthrow the government how they were going to mill around until somebody else did it and that is the key is that the american political subject is not political because he is always imagining that somebody else somebody has in the sense of some organization some uh abstracted mechanism that he is not part of will do it but that's impossible we all it has to be us we have to feel like it's us or else you're not gonna move the goddamn wheel because otherwise everyone's gonna hang back and do the least and do the most self-indulgent thing which is what all politics is now everyone is mesmerized by the pleasure ***** 0:16:48 principle and trump is like the leading edge of hysterical boomers who are heading towards a death that they cannot comprehend trying to grasp uh meaning and and emotion and and uh and a sense of of genuine mystical like communal experience in the short time they have left because everything else has been burned out they're all stephen paddocks they're all husks nothing can get them off anymore because they're old and they're they're wasted up and then and uh this is a new thing this feeling this pseudo politics of of fandom but it's purely motivated by selfish indulgence which means no one will actually do the work of politics they will just mill around and then the people who are paychecks are being signed by capitalism and which is has 0:17:49 as its core uh objective maintaining the the schematic of american democracy quote unquote in order to maintain a minimal consent to fill in the gap of that cannot be technologically imposed i mean these literally are people who thought the rapture was going to happen and then trump showed up and like it just became they can't imagine heaven anymore because it's coming too close they have to feel it in the world they have to immunize the eschaton they have to feel god well alive because they have no faith that there will be an afterlife because they are totally alienated because they've never had significant communal experiences that have bonded them to others that have given them definitions of words that are more spiritually uh invested than the ones that we and so they're grasping for it they're going to do it 0:18:53 now but the only way they can do it is just to in do it the way that you watch the other team the team the fan the celebrity the the the high priest basically like trump is and represents a force beyond you that you cannot impose upon you're recreating

a mythology in the in the here and now to make up for the one that you can no longer sustain in that thereafter because it feels too real and part of that i think is that these people have death drives i mean it gets over tight oh uh republicans are a death cult i mean sure capitalism is a death cult i mean that doesn't really tell you anything about what to do about it it's just it's just a bumper sticker but um but in a very specific sense i think that some of these people who are really committed to trump are seeking an oblivion that involves him that are that are that want to die like in a way that a viking wants to die in the field of battle so that he can go sup with the gods and valhalla these people think that if they die like in the orbit of trump in the trajectory of trump they will be absorbed into his light in some way they will be lifted up and made they because they see him as them like it really is the thing they love about trump is the thing that is they recognize about themselves uh and so so they want to be validated by him they want some validation from this other and to be subsumed in it and the only way to do that is to pursue life with purpose but that purpose can only be rotating around the thing and feeling the rays of it because you cannot imagine political subjectivity because it's been ground out of you because we really are the stripped threads of society here like we have bro for all the reasons that the frankfurt school in everybody's senses described and the ***** postmodernist and everything we have busted off the conveyor belt of class consciousness and class formation because we've gotten to the terminal endpoint of capitalism whereas it's no longer it has fulfilled its historic role and it's still around the only explanation for that is that its superstructural powers have overwhelmed the machinery like the actual machinery of human interaction so yeah they uh we are we're through the looking glass in a real sense and our the the the task before us then is to live in that reality how do we confront the truth of this and like cut through all of the wishful thinking that undergirds our libido politics and this is what happens these people in this article are the op are the people who either cannot imagine or refuse to do that and therefore seek oblivion like i think these people want to die in trump's honor in some way listen this is one of my this sentence this paragraph is one of my absolute favorite first of all among these group of people uh one of the one of them dies is one of the first people to die of coronavirus in the country and it immediately shocks them and horrifies them but that they end up turning it into a motivate a story in their head about how it's actually uh christine whitner's fault and they start they keep traveling to these rallies even in like in empty planes because they're that devoted to it they they refuse to believe the dangers there they're like seeking to be around the virus but listen to this this is my favorite paragraph when randall thom a sixty-year-old ex-marine with a long-grain mustache fell severely ill with a high fever and debilitating congestion he refused to go to the hospital he was a heavy smoker

who was significantly overweight and knew he faced an increased risk of severe effects from covid 19. still he refused to take a coronavirus test and potentially increase the caseload on trump's watch quote i'm not going to add to the numbers he told me tom survived the scare but died months later in a car accident while returning home to minnesota from a trump boat parade in florida now to me this is a person who is seeking valhalla in where where all the gods are trump and it's just trump as a mirror telling him how great he is and how wonderful he is and how he's tremendous and how he's so special and how we love him and how we love him like these are war boys for trump but what does that mean does that mean following someone's political directions hey you know uh seize that building hey uh execute those prison 0:23:59 prisoners hey show up for this ***** meeting so we all know what we're doing no no no no no they watch the team on the field and then they get they get their uh sense of uh pleasure and identity from a mutual experience of of uh spectaclized uh indulgence just a pure uh a sin if you want to get like building this entire device of uh of capitalism that is destroying the earth and rendering to rendering it to the purpose of giving me everything i ever wanted even though none of it has ever made me happy put it in my mouth let me eat it num num num let me just have it i i need it i i cannot handle any less pleasure that i'm having right now and in fact even the thought that i might have less pleasure in the future than i have right now makes my 0:25:1 current pleasure uh miserable but uh we still need to direct the entirety of the world economy around this thing we still have to have that uh goal the miserable pursuit and consumption of ***** uh of the of the limited resources of the earth where all of the misery of capitalism is externalized in the form of our drive to consume which once it became the engine of the world global system in the 19th century you could argue that was the end of humankind and maybe we can fight it back but i mean for real because once that happens we will consume until it's exhausted because all 0:26:2 social conflict is resolved through consumption yes there are wars yes uh there is class conflict and there's political struggle but fundamentally the some aggregate of the uh governmental policies of capitalist governments is to repress to the extent that you can and then increase consumption to the extent that you have to that is the that is the uh the algorithm that is the decision matrix repress until it becomes unsustainable because it undermines uh uh consensus government it undermines uh the adherence the basic like epis the basic uh uh like emotional adherence to the system of your 0:27:4 subjects and so those people get benefits and you cut it along geographic racial lines you create bright lines that can be seen in the skin or uh and in gender and then you at the top of the hierarchy that trickling down buy off everybody so the wealthiest get the most of course indulgent lives but then there are those below who get a little better and a little better and the post-war keynesian bubble was it filtering down and that meant that when the crisis of capitalism came in the 70s everyone was a consumer they were not workers even if they live work working class lives they were fundamentally estranged from politics by the experience of living that lifestyle where all of your anxieties all of your social conflicts all of your alienation is can only be 0:28:6 soothed can only be directly and and in the present sense uh uh extinguished through consumption you give up control of your life you give up the ability to direct that animal energies and your bodies into anything collective the reason that we send our young people to kill each other and ***** wars so they can vent off that sense of life that sense of wanting to actually assert control of their environment that capitalism denies them that has to be vented elsewhere ritually first in violence and then once you've got people comfortable enough uh in leisure until they go insane and start up killing themselves which is what we're doing the west the death of the west is that suffocation by by pleasure by consumption drowning in honey awaken a dream 0:29:9 from a great clean side song secret rulers of the world they drifted away on a black limousine and that was the last of them it really gets the whole arc of uh modern paul it's like it's essentially like all every olive pension like just crushed into one's idea just we're we're all at the mercy of the lizards about the mercy of the lizards that is uh the abstract uh the profit motive expressed socially which is consumption that is the uh the profit motive the price signal expressed in social reality is people 0:30:11 maximizing their their personal pleasure as the homo economicus model says and what that creates is a system where decisions the uh degree to which a decision matters to the direction of the system is totally proportionate to how uh close the the people there are to the benefits of the system the closer you are to the real gears when the thing formed and then uh the more insulated you are and our political cultures are all just built around certain formations that show up at certain points in time and then responses to them like the binary between our early yankee new england political economy and the later uh southern agrarian uh plantation slave one that has defined our politics ever since and that is distinguished by place in 0:31:12 space time not by anything else liberalism broadly defined that uh was born in the county houses of new england uh liberal conservatism broadly defined was born in the uh in the slave markets of and those are places separated uh geographically and over time so that their political cultures emerge differently the the uh the plantation culture is the uh real tip of the spear of capitalism uh and therefore it cannot afford itself the the illusions of uh capitalism back in uh boston what has done instead is that if you're on the top in the charleston society you are presiding over slavery the 0:32:13 thing that makes it acceptable to you is the almost infinite amount of treats that you get out of it because one of the reasons that it's such a relatively inefficient system relative to capitalism in the north is that um uh is that there's no reinvestment really

CUSHVLOG 175. A FARCE THAT GIVES US MEANING

once you have a plantation you just consume the profits and that's why they lived so disgustingly lavishly the new england puritans didn't have to live that way they accumulated money and then they had a little house and they went to a little uh clapboard shack maybe they had a bigger house as they got more successful but at no point did they need to organize their their life around those pleasures they had sublimated away a lot of that into their religious convictions into at that point their uh their puritan calvinist beliefs but over time that translates into uh secular liberalism but it's from the same associates some of the same arrangement people doing merchant capitalism which is clothed in rituals of consent and has certain understandings about what things like liberty and freedom mean what these words mean are defined the rival uh was developed in the south it grew in tandem with the north but at a slower pace but was where the super profits were to be found so it had disproportionate influence in the early days and later because it's where the profits were even if there wasn't the political organization around it and so it was able to stage a last-minute fight for its own survival because remember this is an attempt to re-establish or to resist capitalism the imperatives capitalism through slavery it was a rear guard action by the old aristocracy the old land-based ruling party that was being overthrown over the course of the rise of modernity from the 7th 16th to the 19th century so it's all about access to treats politics has become our politics shorn of a class basis which we briefly had in this country from about the from the 30s until like the 60s you had a little brief period where there was an actual organized working-class access of demands of political representation that had its own superstructure and its own uh uh its own counter hegemony uh even though it was within capitalism uh but it was never strong enough to with to uh withstand the corrosive power of the consumer model to dissolve the capital the socialist movement from outside from by dispersing its membership into suburbs and making them into ***** homeowners which makes them into petty bourgeois in a meaningful way to some extent they're no longer simply workers and they live distance from one another and the time that they used to spend socially interacting is now created by uh is is now now spent interacting with a pseudo capitalism and now at the very end of this process we are a population who is to one degree or another fully alienated from politics younger people by and large have given up on anything happening anything changing through collective action because they've never seen it work they've never seen an example of it they've only heard descriptions of ideas that don't correspond to the life that they as they understand it and then you have older people who remember a time when there was a more uh coherent social bond that there was some sort of social responsibility beyond individual consumption but it's been so damn long that now uh their understanding of those concepts is wrapped up in a bunch of other concepts

about identity about uh uh racial hierarchy and gender hierarchy all these things that are wired in to living in a capitalist system are also there and it just becomes one part of a mosaic of desi of things that is always going to be there but in years in previous generations was always undermined by the fact that you could vote as a ***** worker in america and expect your interests to be actually represented in terms of trade policy and taxes and things like that and that handle broke in the 70s and so no one really thinks that that's possible anymore that you could get anything out of it so what else are you going to vote for you're mostly still going to vote some of you aren't going to stop some of you are going to still vote and then who do you vote for and then trump comes along and he just represents this package of uh he is just the sum total of the culture that made him he is this sock puppet just filled with the tides of history he is like a napoleon in that he has embodied the moment but whereas napoleon embodied the dynamic moment of capitalism in its birth liberal capitalism and its real birth on the continent he was like there at the explosion of the ***** uh the big bang trump is sort of like napoleon at the end of that in that he is here at after the energy has been totally dispersed and the thing is collapsing in on itself because all of the um the modernizing forces that napoleon unleashed on the on the world the the modernization of legal codes the abolition of uh a feudal land uh jewish toleration which sets the tone for uh like cosmopolitan capitalism he is unleashing this dynamo upon uh europe uh and all the things that are created out of that unified nation state with a uh a unified nation say with a federal distribution of power strong and authoritative central governments that that uh essentially coordinate national capitalist formations that maintain like a a state competitive uh and then within those the the systems of technology that connect these things into uh one uh holistic uh being uh and that they're and that create one citizenry like the the revolution and the napoleonic wars were one of the big ratchets in making france into a thing because there were relatively few people in what is now france spoke even spoke french until the late 19th century and that process that wrenching process happens all through the 19th century and it's brought in the beginning by the napoleonic convulsion and it's a rationalizing process but what it creates over time is what we have which is a system where the liberal imperative having overwhelmed class consciousness is now totally unshackled from any uh real technological constraints and can now operate as a global hive mind of consumption and if napoleon emerges from in one moment to take the reins of power and you know show the muscular power of liberalism trump represents liberalism law exhausted of all power to do anything because trump is just the sock puppet that filled up trump had no real politics trump had no real desire to be president he had no organization he had no ideology he had never planned to be president he ran as a fit of peak and as a publicity stunt and he was able to win because all of the forces of global of of american capitalism had come together to create a population of people who were fully atomized fully the consumption of themselves as consumers their identity based around consumption identities that include a bunch of ideas about hierarchies and differentiations along age gender race and they're interlaced with our class position but not as anything that can be determined like as or they're not that anything that's self-conscious just as the thing that sets the shape uh and that they are going to uh involve themselves in a politics that is entirely spectacle-based where they have lost all belief that politics matters that politicians tell the truth that what you vote for matters everybody absorbed the last 40 years from watergate to the ***** financial collapse and had the same underlying understanding that everyone is lying and it's all full of ***** liberals have fantasies to try to deny that conservatives accept it that's the only difference once again that's because one of them loves doing rules and rituals to a better their consciousness about being in capitalism and others just want and and so people are driven purely by their resentments their loathing of another their desire to see politics is a conflict with the other where they're in uh existential threat and where uh they're at all points imagining the in some way the discomfort and pleasure of their enemy which is not a a class enemy but is just this social uh gorgon conjured up by uh uh are conjured up by our fantasies uh of uh these identities that we're protecting in the face of a collapse that we did not sign up for so everybody is one way or another disillusioned with uh the actual functions of democracy so that means that we can lose we can indulge ourselves and one of the big things that undermined me getting trump right in that i was i failed to at every point assume he would win as soon as he showed up is that i thought more people had faith in the system enough to not want to see these structures defamed because trump being running for president is degrading to the institution it is degrading to politics in a real way and i assume that there were enough people especially people who voted who cared enough about these structures to want to see them preserved and it turns out no at the end of this thing at the at the at the old scared white end of this thing or culture where where precarity is purely a matter of an aesthetic revulsion and changing standards and threats to hierarchy that really doesn't have anything to do with your material conditions except at the bottom where it's less at the top where it's most organized it's just petty bourgeois grievance and if you combine penny bourgeois grievance with a system of uh telling you that actually it's very these things these institutions are all very uh respectable they don't they're not filled with liars uh you should trust the media and you should trust political uh parties and you should trust science and they say yeah this is all ***** and you're all saying that because you run them so i don't give a ***** if we if we get hamburger grease on the constitution we don't have the illusions about the system that you do because we don't require to live in denial because our political uh our political pa uh uh conception our tool house of our reality tunnel that we're boring through the world is determined by our class position and and so trump just shows up and he's like hey 0:45:31 i'm you i'm i'm a famous cool guy uh who is as petty and vain and persnickety and uh miserable as you which means that he has the same things he doesn't like that they don't like that means that he has the same things that he likes the same symbols the same lazy symbols that they like like he loves the flag because he thinks america is him it's like these people love jesus because they think it's america because they think it's them it's pure narcissism which is all that a capitalist consumer economy can create as narcissists because that's where the price signal is so those are the those are the uh the maggot ladies and gentlemen who traveled the country and all 0:46:34 they're ever gonna do is go to ***** rallies all they're ever gonna do is go to rallies and then if one if somebody says hey let's go to the capitol they'll go they'll storm in then they'll wander around and take pictures just like you would do if your team won the championship you'd go downtown you maybe throw a police car over maybe you make love in the middle of the street then you go home because it's just a venting of energy it is not a political act they are venting off their native creative impulse that is that as in creating the world by imposing your will on it which necessitates real expression of of of of the will to human liberty power freedom identity whatever you want to call it it requires coordination and cooperation because right now we're all being ruled by the algorithm which is that we are seeking the treats even as they 0:47:39 run out and even as we recognize that they run out we are seeking the treats so that we can be the one to go last if that's all we can hope from the future your conviction your belief that there's another way that people can be that really is what it boils down to do you believe that humans can at a certain level and then that you have like a you don't have everybody that's ridiculous at first or even in the very near term but you have a nuclear nucleus of people who are able to generate a political cultural economic inflection point that pushes through the human population the same way that individual consciousness did the same way that the liberal identity 0:48:41 was emerged from eur just burst out of europe in the uh in the 17 and 1800s that swept over the world it doesn't have everybody now but it has it now has for a long time now hit an inflection point i would say the inflection point is probably like uh 1989 where this is now the animating uh metaphysics of the global economy the people who are actually around the machines that move the stuff around even though we have reached a point where we could program them differently we would have to do it not any group within us and we have not had that transformation yet if you think that that transformation is possible that you get to a point where enough in practice the coming of the millennium that would be uh heaven that would be the the the the apocalypse like the good one and there can be no heaven not it's 0:51:46 not for us here it's for us in the everlasting that's i think that heaven can exist on earth at all points and it does exist on earth in places where people have allowed it to exist little wormholes to heaven and that the task of humanity one giant portal that allows us to step truly into another dimension into another another earth and i can understand if you don't think that's possible like i said it uh it is millennial you know in a way that uh that the jaundiced uh late capitalist subject has a hard time believing it so and i certainly didn't for a very long time if pressed i would say no 0:52:48 no no no no because you're only seeing things from the outside but i now know that experiences is what generates real knowledge not any kind of rational uh syllogism real knowledge comes from experience which is then translated into language that we use to convince ourselves that that experience was real and to anchor it and if that's true and i think it is if that's how we learn and that's the real if that's the truth of epistemology then uh then every moment is absolutely pregnant with possibility no matter what the overbearing structures are because you still have to live and then you have to live with that you have to live with that as the motivator so that you can be self motivated to short-circuit the pleasure principle you have to have a structure that can withstand the moments when you're not feeling so good and 0:53:49 that has to be an architecture of ideas and and and proofs but it's built out of the experience it's a lot it's it experience love all objects in your perception right on so yeah i mean i don't think i'm anywhere there near there personally i i believe but you know whether that belief uh still is enough to generate action is uh intermittent 0:54:52 at best i must say but i have to also have faith that and that's what keeps me going

that's what keeps me funny thing is fukuyama was correct it's so funny that people say he was wrong fukuyama was right it's just that uh what that meant what end of history meant is not what people were imagining because i think because of uh the normative assumptions that we have where you know if you're a guy like fukuyama who was a conservative and you're arguing that this is the end of history because of capitalism's uh victory you would sort of assume that that meant there and that's a good thing and that that's going to be good for us and we're going to thrive in that situation and that's the part that of course and that things are going to be peaceful and that's the part that got roasted by events in the 20th century but if you 0:55:54 remove that assumption that this means that he's means and therefore that's going to be good for people the argument completely is completely persuasive because since 1989 there has been no existing uh global center for opposition to capitalism and therefore since there is no center of opposition since it's since capitalism is one in every place except in you know like the ***** what like the back country of uh of uttar pradesh where the ***** naxalites are and like capitalism rules everywhere and that means that history has ended because that battle between classes has ended the 0:57:7 the ruling class has won but in the sense that uh in the sense that history did end and that the struggle for history cuba i would say is the best thank you for reminding me of cuba actually i would say the cuba really is if you want to have like a a a word to use for like that little flickering light in your heart that you've got to keep stoked that tells you you know that there is a new there is a different way to be there is a different way to relate to the world that can allow us to act differently and not be overwhelmingly enslaved by the algorithm pulled by like ***** iron filings by the algorithm and and it's hard to believe that practically i mean you have to have like that's why it has to be spiritual but you know you also need uh examples in the here and now to click to to to draw solace from if nothing else and cuba has 0:58:15 got to be it cuba has got to be the name of the fire because like my god after the soviet union collapsed their economy went into complete ***** free fall and the kind of thing that caused every other communist regime and they did it and the thing is there's no way they could have done it if it was a dictatorship i'm sorry they couldn't have done it the math is pretty clear when you have a brittle dictatorship on top of that degree of social con social uh crisis they collapse it is an x and y problem especially being pushed over by the united states on the outside at the same time are you ***** kidding me that is a textbook example of uh everyone every time you 0:59:18 have that situation you cannot say uh because of no dictatorships fall under much much less dire uh economic circumstances there is democratic uh there is a broadly felt democratic participation in government they feel like they're actually part of the thing that they're not passive spectators to the thing they feel like they're part of

it you can argue whether much they are but they feel like it and that means that in a crisis they will pull together a little bit and not push outward against uh the perceived cause of the problems of course i'm sure there's repression too but how could there not be there isn't every ***** society but it is socially expressed to some degree or it wouldn't have wouldn't have survived and then it's then they came back and ***** fidel died and everyone assumed that when fidel died it would just be instantaneously there'd be mcdonald's on the ***** beaches of havana and nope and then they even passed it outside of the ***** castro family it's uh yeah it's gotta 1:0:22 be you gotta protect it you gotta protect the flame and that means of course which sadly for most of us isn't much we can post about it but who knows something might occur there's international so we need more solidarity that's for damn sure but keep an eye out bye

the festival was over and the boys were your cameraman was quiet except for the they're clear if you had been lifted and the gambling wheel shut down anyone with any sense had already left town he was standing in the doorway backstage molly was playing five cards studs by the stairs lily had two queens she was hoping for a big jim was no one's fool he roamed the town's only he made his usual entrance 0:1:8 looking so dandy and so fine outside the streets were filling up with his diamond line and silver cane in every walking place he took whatever he wanted to and he laid it off the waist but his diamond mines and silver cane hi folks so tomorrow we're going to do uh the chapters four through six of uh the black jacobins which is a cracking read i hope everyone's enjoying it it's a lot it goes down smooth doesn't it uh we're talking about the uh the rise of the slave rebellion uh and also the rise 0:2:9 of tusson louvature who uh james is making a case as one of like history's great historic figures which i would agree with and uh i really do think that james does a great job of contextualizing like the romantic appeal and and sort of the intuitive sense of like the man of history you know the great men like there is something that is narratively soothing and and uh engaging about the uh imagining history as uh actions of uh embodied selves and therefore concentrated the forms of like these great figures and therefore and that they have a uh they have a role their individual will is able to count more than other peoples in a fundamental way you know the consent of all the actions of all make up a social corpus but some people get to make more important and then when history starts cracking open and crisis emerge 0:3:13 they throw up figures who would otherwise have laying dormant through the social strata and like one of the great tragedies of capitalism is that it as it overwhelms all of life and destroys initiative destroys the capacity for human initiative for human action to actually affect a change capitalism and technology literally strips humans at every level of our autonomy and that means at the top too the feudal lords of europe did not want capitalism to emerge they acceded to it in an exigent need to compete with each other for resources and power in the closed socioeconomic system or the closed uh the closed order the westphalian order and we're literally stripped of 0:4:18 our ability to affect the world around us now we don't accept that fully that's what ideology is there for that's what our superstructure is for us is the culture we enjoy uh live in inverts all values and takes all that's bad in terms of good and gives us an explanation for why things why we have less power why are we not able to do what our uh what our forbearers have been able to do why we couldn't turn the wheel and they had some explanations that they carried with them but there's a fundamental sort of uh dimming of one's connection and eventually you become overtly aware that you're not in control of anything anymore and then you are defeated then you are made into a slave and it destroys your belief in the system sufficient for you to motivate yourself yourself morally and intellectually and energetically like you you are not able to fix yourself with with any uh investment behind a position and 0:5:19 then you are you are literally and that is where we find ourselves where everyone at every level has been stripped of autonomy but these sys these jobs still exist they're still filled with people we're still here we're still here we're filling the same roles but with less uh belief in them than ever less self-motivation than ever and that is the crisis of americans social fabric it's why people cannot do anything other than the most selfish thing because they are uh fundamentally unable to engage with each other uh in anything other than uh the the marketized relationships that have been enforced upon us by technology no you can't go come up down too hard on the romantics they were that was a necessary response and like they provided necessary 0:6:20 uh friction i mean it wasn't all great obviously but you you can't blame it it is a humane response to dehumanization it can yes it turns into things like fascism and uh uh and nationalism uh it has to that that heat has to go somewhere because capitalism is in control uh but no that the tragedy of our age is that it is a romantic there is no romance there is no sense that you can affect anything but there is no belief in anything but the south and its most narrow construction as a as an agent of economic uh inputs yummies and yuckies that is what we have become and now we're trying to make sense of a world where we are supposed to fulfill these social roles that had historically encoded with them uh a rituals of a firm affirmation of 0:7:23 belief in a system affirmation of belief in something beyond the self that's something that was worth honoring that goes away because if you're not building anything that matters if you're not actually responsible for anything that's another big part of this this is highly underrated is it one of the reasons that the system does such horrible things to people is not the the other side of the equation of these decisions being made by the algorithm what that means is that the people associated with the decisions who have to execute them as a moral question have to make the choice they are making a choice to execute and even if they and yes you could say but they could resign somebody else will do it yes but everybody has to make a moral choice and the fact that there's somebody else who will do it means we can avoid responsibility for doing it and i will implicate myself entirely in this this is it this is not nobody gets to choose out of this this is like the dunning-kruger effect this if i don't participate in this machinery of death someone else will therefore my involvement in this system is superfluous and that means i don't have any responsibility for what the system does so that means that i can benefit from an unjust arrangement without ever feeling like and i'm an exploiter because the system will go on and we all know the system will go on regardless of what happens to me and that feeling is associated traditionally with like higher high being high in the hierarchy where you feel like you actually can control something the idea that if i didn't do this it wouldn't happen you need to have that sense that something else can happen to make it a real world question for yourself like because we're all going to be a verse from self-sacrifice if we don't have connections other which we don't we have had them stripped off of us we can only believe in ourselves and our pleasure so that we participate in these systems and we get sorted really demographically and by chance into slots in this machinery and then we are asked to make choices and the fact that the choices aren't real allows us more and now we have a system where the logic of capitalism the algorithm of capitalism drives everyone to doing the wrong thing drives everyone to universal uh immorality because responsibility has been taken from them because responsibility has been taken from them and that is not anyone's fault to feel that it's real it really will keep going if you don't stop because remember the dream of a general striker a mass uprising is a coordinated one and we can't visualize those we cannot live in a world where those are things are possible we live in an era that has killed those possibilities the same way the 19th century people killed god we killed the capacity of there to be an overwhelming spiritual uh uh overlordship of the individual self uh no then there was the hope that there was a species consciousness which is god in another name that could envelop the self and integrate it and nope the answer is no that's how well that's what we come to uh understand the world to be when we observe it so we cannot imagine acting in uh universally we can only act independently and so our independent refusal to do something will by definition not change it so why don't we just get the benefit rather than somebody who's a jerk i mean virtue mongering on the liberal on liberalism liberal virtue mongering boils down to the fact that these people are accepting hierarchy accepting perpetuating hierarchy and have rationalized to themselves that they deserve it more than others morally that's that's because these people are the that's the lingering sense of internet uh connection uh to other people that that that exists in the residue of the death of uh of the search for a species consciousness uh that's more that's just uh our guilt our sense of guilt our not any sense of love connection our sense of guilt which is mediated by that big other that dominates us and it was god and it was then the possibility of a class-based uh humane revolution uh a a synthesizing of capital to the needs uh that feeling that was associated with that is gone and what was left is liberal guilt the conscience the the self projected outward the other that must exist to observe us and to make our it was god it was the the race maybe this the human race no now it is just the self 0:12:34 because of the domination of capitalism and it's dehumanizing effects literally and so we're all trying to live in this world how do we make choices that we can really strip to their essentials because we're all going to make compromises everybody reading this everybody listening this uh we're reading this everybody listening or watching this including myself everybody participating in politics at this level is of course participating in capitalism in a way but to greater and less degrees of individual uh importance which means greater or less degrees of leverage that could be utilized if it was expressed outward in solidarity and not individually but that requires staying in the system enough to you can't if you can't quit a job because because of the 0:13:35 company that you work for and keep the connections to the other workers you have to make an end you need jobs to live we need to work to live in this system at least for now we'll see if they fulfill the ubi where we can just be pure consumers which honestly might be what ends up happening to those of us on one side of the of when the when the final walls go up when the when the laser motes and the drone uh perimeters go up if you're on the good side if you're on the lucky side of that you'll probably see a ubi where where act uh where livelihood is at a certain degree uh detached from labor so that everybody can consume even though our labor is uh totally because of in the interior because at the end of hyperexploitation at the at the inside technology uh our labor is superfluous to the system now we can just be 0:14:37 the consumers because our consumption is what drives it our consumption is what keeps the wheel moving so as long as so it's a perpetual motion machine of dis of greed of individual desire collated by the price signal there was an actual article by some ***** demonic christians about how the price signal is proof of god's design this perfect system for distributing uh uh understanding of this this is their idea of the human mind a demonic selfish uh um uh self-consciousness devoted entirely to self-pleasure the the vision of all seven deadly sins cohered into a will that's their idea of god's will the ***** price signal but for now you got to have a job and then what about what job is it going to be what obligations do you have to other people all these negotiations you make about what to do inform every decision that 0:15:39 you make even though you take many of them for granted as i do as we all do and so our challenge in life really and in this thing is to strip moments to the to the bear and then evaluate what work where our chain of interests really lie and the thing is we can't do that logically you need to be honing in on other people honing

in on other frequencies to collaborate your instincts because you're when making decisions you are battling your own body sensations which are independent of what you think is happening and that is where you get feelings because feelings are the undigested and unrationalized uh first like pass of stimuli from the outside that is what you do to make up the world but it is not at some point there is an inflection of self-consciousness that arises and that creates a barrier because an inflection point cannot be by definition at some point symbolized symbolized and then symbols come later and symbols therefore come and that is why our feelings are this undigested thing that we try to give words to and our whole like the human search for meaning is echo locating our our symbols and our and our our hearts and minds are symbols and the feelings are generate our symbols into one another and then harmonizing them and creating symbols that that transcend rationality and they convey truth that convey truth of human connection of of the systemic nature of the universe of our integration our fundamental integration into a a cosmic fabric that means that our notions of like self-interest that we think we carry with us from our genes or illusory it is a fundamental misapprehension of the universe that is caused by that gap in perception from a feeling to the ability to express feeling which makes up civilization that we then live in that builds this black iron demiurgical cage that we are trapped in and then we can only echolocate against one another and we are all therefore obligated in every moment to be present enough in our decision in our bodies in this in the time of crisis that we are harmonizing our feelings to the words we're using to express uh what we really want to do because we're always as rational beings at the end of history we're always rational consumers we're always looking for our best interest defined delusionally as some sort of uh individual interest a pursuit of pleasure that is by definition illusory a pleasure that is never attained this is the important thing the the rational pursuit of pleasure is irrational because pleasure can only this is basic buddhism lacan talks about it in in continental philosophical terms it's to my mind it is undeniable never seen anybody argue that this is incorrect desire cannot be fulfilled so a society based on desire of the individual will never run up against any uh uh natural boundary we'll dissolve it in the pursuit of this thing unless our desires are tethered if the thing we desire could be can be pursued because we're going to desire things if the thing we desire could be pursued say it's a communion with all like actual communion a sensed communion with the with all the a sharing of the hive mind now we can't have that in life you can have moments of it but they are forgotten as soon as they occur because they cannot be symbolized but and that is why we are always struggling to understand our own feelings and our own relationship to the to the divine and ourselves is because we don't know where these things come from but that can be pursued beneficially because all that energy that drive towards the desire that is motivating you why it can go towards building something it can go towards building a thing that involves the uh thriving of other people whose condition you care about as much as you care about your own condition that can drop that that that is everybody moving in the same direction in a way that does not require a state this is what marx talks about when he talks about the withering away of the state the state is there to enforce transactions and interactions 0:20:49 marx's conception is that if you get a situation of post scarcity remember this is post scarcity this is we have accumulated enough capital to work technologically our will on the world with minimal human labor input which we have absolutely reached by now the industrial revolution and then the technological revolution that came after the the uh the silicon va uh information revolution that came after it have given and they've given us the cultural tools uh to to comprehend a notion of like uh collective identity if we all believed in each other the way we believe in ourselves in a social context where we're born into no real danger of precarity never really feeling threat from outside never having those spiky adrenaline fight-or-flight relationships established at a young age we never get that because for them i mean of course we 0:21:50 don't get none of it but it isn't it is absorbed into an otherwise uh calm universe of humanity which is allowed because technology is doing all the really bad work and the remaining alienating work the remaining unfun stuff is shared or if there is some sort of division in time it is paid for in time like you got to do there's shitty work to do somebody does it one four hour it's like a volunteer shift because enough people because there's enough technological uh uh carrying out of the system what is left there's way more people than there are jobs there's way more people than there are jobs so you rotate people through the jobs at low levels of commitment well most of the rest of the work is done uh technologically if you get to that point the coercions of the state will be unnecessary you will have returned to civilization the pre-historic um 0:22:52 uh police force of mutual consent you will have you didn't have there was no cops no formal police force no formal state in a hunter-gatherer band because if you didn't do what was good for the group you were censored culturally one way or another away from that action over the course of your life because people were paying attention you're bouncing up against other people you aren't just flying uh uh frictionlessly through a plane of consumer capitalism where all this technology is destroying the world around you and hyper exploiting people all around you without you being able to invest yourself at all and in that context all the mechanisms of state coercion become superfluous the state withers away and as marx said you the final state is a 0:23:53 formula a social formula instead of being towards capitalism towards profit from each according to his ability to each according to his needs meaning what people need they get and the thing is you can't the reason people don't get that when they're trying to conceive outside of marxism why it so seems counterintuitive and wrong to like libertarians who say well that means that all the lazy people just sit around well all the people who have ability the smart people like me will do all the work no because they're imagining individuals living in an isolated capitalist social order instead of people living in a communal social order there will everything you need will be provided because the need can be socially filled the need and the capitalism can never be filled and so you have to have a hierarchy there has to be a if i'm smart i have to there's got to be something in it for me to participate in society to give you my labor to give you my smarts i have to know that i'm going to get something and sure it starts as stability but then it becomes uh i want a boat i want two boats i want two houses and look at these other rich people who are getting even more i want more of what they have and that cannot be extinguished that fire was and so that fundamental uh fact of of the of the innate suffering that comes with life the unquenchableness of shows that that action is either being channeled towards humane ends because it is it is it is a definition of self it is a definition of desire that is socially defined or is it a definition of desire that is can only imagine personal pleasure either in the direct sensual form one way or another or the pleasure of relative ease and comfort compared to others the the uh the bene the uh sensation of cl uh of hierarchical uh elevation over others the fundamental idea that i am higher than other people because if i'm seeking uh life to be only pursuit of individual pleasure then i have to define myself individually and that means i have to hierarchize myself and i have to ask myself do i deserve this power do i deserve this position so i can feel safe in it that's also a sensational pleasure liberal masochism is a sensational pleasure of capitalism and all of us are operating out of one or another of those to the degree that we are captured spiritually by these ideas how have we translated our feelings in our lives and so the challenge that we all have to face is how do we change fundamentally how do we fuse our notion of desire our libidinal energies to a felt emotional connection to others that transcends the barrier of the liberal subject of meaningful revolutionary action and i have to say many people either don't get to this point because they're stuck in liberal pieties and ideological blind spots or even if they think of themselves as like rigorously marxist they get to this point and then they lose heart they say you know what i can understand the logic here but this is this doesn't feel like the world i live in or can live in i would argue there is a counter example of this and of course it's not ***** perfect it's not fantasy what it is is it shows that the market is not the ultimate solvent in all contexts with humans now that there are humans now who can coordinate actions and of course you could say it happens everywhere and every day yes and our lives are peppered with humane action generated by a felt connection others it's just it's we don't feel it enough it's too it's not there are places that you that show that given a social context that encourages it you can create this and i would say the example now is yes cuba the fact that cuba survived the fall of the soviet union to me proves proves that between 1959 and 1989 built a system that then was turned into a mass political organization put into place structures of power uh and democratic control of economic uh forces and distribution of labor and alienation through the system in such a way that when 0:29:4 the time came when the crack of doom came and the and the f and the subsidy from the soviets dried up under the most immense pressure imaginable pressure that broke uh regimes that were much uh more uh economically viable and much less close to the united states and its wrath and much less uh attacked by capitalism and isolated from capitalism uh it didn't ***** fall and the thing is we would have if they had done it through violence if they had cracked down on like this collective revolt of a desire for freedom that you saw in like the eastern bloc it would have been a ***** bloodbath it would have been tiananmen square on a countrywide scale and the same way that neoliberalism was installed in china at the point of at the barrel of a gun in a country that thought it that by that point was trying to build socialist uh relationships meanwhile without massacring everybody did they use violence did 0:30:7

they use state authority of course they put people in prison the uh the most the most the most alienated people left went to the united states they have a high prison rate in cuba relatively high uh and not just political prisoners just they have like they have a lot of common criminals who they put in prison because it's a very ***** poor country but there is a degree of social of day-to-day social enchantment consent absent the machinery of the state that keeps people working together and it's under attack and it might be destroyed we've been trying to destroy it for 60 ***** years but if conditions this is what i mean when i say this is possible if you would if if 0:31:10 conditions in cuba in the sense that they got like brought into supply chains but not in the capitalist supply chains they were brought into a socialist supply chain the way that the russians thought they were going to get hooked up by the germans after their revolution that never happened if china if china if cuba got hooked up to a conveyor belt of like economic development from outside that system that was not predicated on neoliberalism that they would turn into uh the closest thing to like a scandinavian fantasy social democracy without the uh inherent racism that is born of being in the colonial center like general multicultural the real synthesis the thing marx said would happen the thing that now feels like a fantasy it is in my mind the germ of it is in cuba and for my ma and to me anybody who says i'm wrong on this explain how communism didn't fall after the father soviet union when you 0:32:12 see what happened in every other ***** communist country and you see places that did way more to crack down on public even vietnam who ***** shed their *****

lifeblood and did build it like a genuine esprit de corps out of the nationalist they made the choice to to to to give up the long-term the idea of being motivated by something beyond selfishness and the thing that and i and i and maybe the reason for that is because the united states didn't strangle them so much like you could obviously you could honestly argue that the fact that the united states embargoed cuba is what saved the revolution it was the ***** fist that made the diamond now that doesn't mean at this point that we don't need to get in the ***** uh embargo because it's literally they're getting to an asphyxiation point and uh you know the thing about vietnam is you can say well cuba was which means that they they were more engaged in the market anyway even before they went neoliberal and therefore they had established relationships and then like a way as a short-term mechanism of of especially and the other thing is when you're when you're vietnam if china ***** neo-liberalizes you basically have to because china and vietnam historic enemies uh it was so hilarious how the domino theory which presented presided over american uh the uh cold war policy in asia goes into uh is what dom uh says that it's supposed to lead to the communisation of entire asia meanwhile a year the north vietnamese take south vietnam they invade cuba they invade cambodia and then china and so no matter what you want to do with vietnam if china's is going to liberalize you have to liberalize because you are still in a conflict because those both of those communist movements were based in a nationalist movement and the nationalism in my opinion sort of transcends the communism over time as as as the system of asphyxiates uh under the capitalist global system that slowly strangled communism everywhere and it was the re-emergence of a potential conflict uh a competition with china if china was gonna develop faster and everyone knew by this point knew that capitalism whatever else it will do will help you develop faster because it will alienate all of the violence of the system into the market and therefore give create a system where people are uh consenting to their own destruction responsibility so the world system cranks everything up and it pops off and there was no resistance the vietnamese acceded to it because there was no more belief there was no more real belief or not enough not more or less it's never it's never binary it's always gradations there's always fellow feeling there's always a transcendent understanding of the self in every uh government in every system in every social uh relationship but it is to greater or less degrees felt it to greater or less degrees is symbolized in the mind and given uh as a name to the feelings we have and maybe the fact that cuba didn't have that he didn't have that uh cuba was a nationalist project or i guess you could say that the nationalist the nationalist stage of the cuban uh in the initial bourgeois cuban revolution uh had extinguished itself had exhausted its capacity to enchant over the course of the machado and batista dictatorships meanwhile the communist movements that took power in vietnam and in china were part of a overall nationalist struggle the nationalist phase had already been extinguished in cuba the people who had dominated cubans on the island had been cuban for the entire 20th century by 1950 by the 1950s the idea that there was some nation that they could serve that they should be serving it didn't have any kind of uh emotional weight by that point meanwhile service to the nation was a fundamental driver of both chinese communism and vietnamese communism and post-colonial communism all and that 0:38:22 meant that decision making and so when the time comes to make those decisions what do we do about the market what do we do about the western wolf banging on our door they they choose to uh to unleash the virus to unleash the pathogen that's going to dissolve the social fabric that has undergirded their entire project communist nationalist it's all going to fall before international capitals dissolving grey goo ***** uh singularity scythe stripping human agency out of human relationships replacing them with the machinery of an algorithm of ***** sorry it's whatever my favorite 0:39:24 thing people say on the internet it's whatever it's united my it's my united states of whatever is what it is it was my united states of whatever still sounds like a robot well i don't know what to do i don't know what to do i hope i hope you can hear it because i so if you want to ask yourself like well why do i why do i commit to this 0:40:29 why do i commit to this belief this new belief that there is a there is a frequency that there is a homing there's a homing device in all of us pulling us together that we can hear if because the world is organized to dim that it is organized to make us only hear the most the most selfish and self-destructive uh siren desire the carnality and i don't just like i said i don't just mean lust i mean uh that is not connected to like a greater good and that is also going to always be there like i said that's not going anywhere i mean we're not going to all be booties bodhisattvas if we were we could all just close hands close our eyes and we would literally transcend we would 0:41:31 er we would wink out the universe in a moment if we could do that we ought we aren't though we're regular people we're still driven by desire but what desire for what that is why we must all put ourselves in positions to act meaningfully from a awareness of that homing sql signal because if we do that at key enough points in our lives and key enough decisions we can start driving the truck because we can start cooperating cooperating which is what the only thing that defines anything meaningful nobody has politics nobody is a political actor to the degree uh unless 0:42:32 they're acting this is not acting this is indulgence but if you can imagine our degree of technological sophistication and a social order that at key points is dominated by people acting from a felt spiritual connection to the species as a whole you could move things in a direction that yes you would still have oppression you would still have violence you would still have conflict as as the various forms of domination that have been inscribed by the malforming effects of capitalism are resist but you will have a movement in a direction but what would make that happen it's not those people changing their opinions it's not everybody having a thing and then acting at once coming together to move the ***** thing to believing in the thing enough to move it and the reason to talk about something like cuba is just to give another form to our rational symbolic understanding that we need to have to keep thinking this way because this is all about convincing yourself this is all about hypnotizing yourself and i gotta say if cuba does go the way of vietnam if somebody smarter than biden does decide that the way to smother the revolution is to just turn on the ***** charm and turn on the money hoses they might i think over time they would win if there's no other um resistance outside the system you know or if the system doesn't collapse without without some other i need somebody else for cuba to ***** stand up and resist this thing it would be but look at how long it took look at how long it would have took i think i've understood uh fundamentally like fundamental cuny and incommensurability between two intellectual factions of the left i mean i don't think the left exists but there are people who engage in leftist intellectual discourse it's all online it's all monetized it's all parasocial it's it's very gross but it really is revolutionary france that's sad but it's true times change things technology changes things more than anything and there are people who all use the same words that mean different things by them like marxist or socialist or left uh fascists all these things people are arguing over definitions because they genuinely don't think the thing means the same thing but they cannot convey the difference in words it's it's a deeper connection that transcends the logic of their position and i would say that a lot of friction within the left online is predicated on to one big fault line in the united states let me say the u.s lab people trying to understand how to do there are those who think that the constitution of the united states generated by the people who made the country or you think it was the product of emergent finding a political sanctification for the rule in the context of common land ownership rather than feudal land ownership of free real estate rather than feudal uh feudal divisions where that where where the peasants could not get the land because land was power so you can't give the peasants land here land is distributed relatively freely to any white settler so power concentrated differently and they created a system to concentrate to give democratic consent to aristocratic rule to tell the hordes have them walk around all day thinking that they were participating in these decisions that they were making decisions they get to go through the system and think that they're doing their best interest when in fact they're inscribing the power of an immersion capitals class they don't notice at first because they're getting the free real estate they're getting to be their own boss they're getting to be their own little baron and so they accede to it and over time that the form of that deal changes once the land runs out it becomes what you can do in the stock market you can get a small business and you can get a home after world war ii it's you can get a home you're you're a ***** wage slave now you sell your labor you are alienated from your ability to reproduce uh your ***** life you're at someone else's will but hey you got a house that means you have some degree of investment in the system and an independent of power even though you're fun you've been cut off from the land you didn't notice though you didn't and i do think that that might seem like a pedantic point but i really think that if you see a lot of the arguments between people who seem like they should be on the right the same side and are arguing about a lot of the times about definitions 0:49:50 of things because remember this is all abstract nobody's speaking from experience this is all hypothetical this is all as a hot dog a sandwich because nobody has is that the difference ways that people see different issues boils down to do they think that the constitution represents anything other than class rule now there are other divisions that fraction off within those divisions but i think that is one of the most fundamental and i honestly think a lot of people call themselves marxists if they got to put to them black clearly would be like oh ***** yeah you know what i do and it's like i'm sorry i don't say well the thing is i don't get uh you're not a marxist i don't care about that my now my the way i understand history built on a bunch of different 0:50:53 uh intellectual foundations one of them i think marxism so i don't care if it's if it's socialism or not i don't care if it's populism or progressivism or whatever the ***** i don't think it's true now that doesn't that doesn't imply necessarily that i'm going to be like well i'm going to say ***** the constitution and ***** america and i'm going to piss on the flag all the time no because most people do think the constitution ***** means something that's one of the transcendent triumphs of america's ***** propaganda structure and political superstructure was getting people to believe that ***** is that bribe that mean that is the residue now and people who say yeah the system's ***** rich people are in charge of it and it's all uh the class we need class working-class people to come together they have missed it and you don't get at them 0:51:54 though from saying you're wrong that is where i s that's why i say so much of online disputation is harmful people trying to make these points through debate all you're doing is solidifying sides because you're not arguing about the real distinction and even if you came at it like that you're not going to argue them out of their belief that the constitution is meaningful because it's deeper than a argument it's deeper than rationality it's deeper than reason because america has a national that had a nationalist movement yes marx did support the american revolution as a fundamental development of capitalism correct but it was that's what that but what that means in practice is that it makes a bourgeois government unlike in europe is able to gain a greater degree of public ascetency to that among the important classes the white 0:52:56 people close to positions of power the white people on the hands whose hands were on the machinery able to buy them off enough to solidify it and generations of people prospered first is yeoman that is pioneers all of this at the expense of black labor and and indian land obviously that's that's the whole thing of capitalism it puts all the externalities off the and one of the ways it does that is by having these people within the bubble who think the thing works away that it doesn't who have seen in their own lives the system work because it's designed to work for them of course they think it works and so then when things start breaking down as they are worse and worse because the system is breaking down the ability to give those treats the ability to make people think the system is working is wearing away and people are asking what's the deal and then you get responses and if you start from the premise 0:53:58 of well the constitution's good therefore these guys are against the constitution who is for the constitution republicans are for the constitution these are deeply welded things they might get disillusioned from the republican party but that's deeper than the republican party in their estimation republican party they support it as a vessel for their deeper national fusion of the notion of their best interests the constitutional order the patriotic regime of the united states the identity of an american but once again this doesn't mean you can just argue people out of thinking the constitution is good or saying i don't like the constitution or because this is deeper than those arguments you can't argue them out of that what has to happen is struggle at the 0:54:59 level of labor that self-interest where at the root of my life this thing isn't paying off for me because it is in the root of the experience that you that other people who have a different understanding can say hey i am in the same six experience look at my experience look at where i have put my finger of play and then watch if enough people come together under this is how ***** unions are formed i'm just describing class consciousness formation it is a comparing of notes and so all we can do as consumers and producers of political media is treat it as the entertainment it is and only take from it a greater will and desire to apply meaningful action in our lives day to day i would love to join a union but that would be a ***** joke what i like i said i'm a ***** artisan i don't know and i'm sorry any union i would join would be like 0:56:2 what podcasters i don't know if somebody and the thing about this like fundamental what i like anyway about this like take away from all this stuff is as an action call is that it does the least amount of harm if you're wrong because if you do this what happens and and oh no i should have been online one you'll never know you'll never know if you were wrong it's only in your head and two you're going to find yourself waiting for moments to act uh and being driven by a desire to help that is going to be hard to overwhelm because this is the important part you have withdrawn your libido from this spectacle you have stopped imagining yourself to be an actor within a political struggle you have castrated yourself before you've gone online you put your dick in balls or your vagina in a jar and you went online to entertain yourself the same way and you did not tell yourself that you were being a uh that you're but if you say i'm gonna participate in all this stuff i'm gonna i'm gonna i'm gonna make these i'm gonna have these arguments all day and i'm gonna fixate on these things these hot dog sandwich arguments uh if you're wrong about that if you're right about that you'll never know because everything's just gonna keep getting worse probably and if there is anybody who fights against it you're not going to be there because you're going to have convinced yourself that anything that actually happens isn't good enough because you'll be too scared of being wrong to invest in anything because in the process of engaging in this battle of ideas you will have invested yourself in these hierarchies sufficiently to fear more than anything falling you will have the precarious paralysis of the fascist working class or fascist so every actual eruption of meaningful uh uh action will be uh you will scoff at it critique it maybe support it but only from afar because you don't want to be wrong uh mad projection i'm describing myself what are you talking about i'm not projection when i say i guess when i say you i just should because i'm still doing this i'm not in and the thing is i feel that i feel that i'm not politically active and so that sensation and my association of that feeling with that thought it changes the way i interact with the world changes my uh it changes my decision matrix but here's the other thing is that if i did do stuff outside of it i'd still do this because i do this for reasons other than a sense of i'm doing things politically this is for me something that has its own reward but participating in this ***** like at the level of of content consumption of of consuming the arguments the arguments that make up the news cycle that is that is eating cheetos for dinner and you gotta you just have to feel like it and if you if you hook up your dick to this thing if you hook your genitals up to this thing it won't feel like it it'll feel like a delicious nutritious meal a balanced breakfast and the question of what to do is predicated by your skills uh your interests and your position your fixed position in space-time and of course your entire suite of illusory individuating personality traits and traumas both conscious and unconscious you fuse you bring together the two halves of your mind because there is the body-mind duality is is perc it is a perceived thing but it is a perceived separation that hides the fact that it's it's one being the mind and body are the same but there is this line between the two that is my opinion generated by the literal distance between the exterior of the body and the central and that like the transcended state we seek what we imagine the mystics imagine what we hope happens after you die and what is just what is always there but is not perceived is of that being one thing and then that one thing being connected to the other thing of the ***** universe but there is a there's a screen there's a ***** dividing there that is defined by the physical distance it takes and that is consciousness that is assigning symbols to feelings without a direct line to where those and we move through life trying to negotiate that uh barrier time try 1:3:23 trying to tear the veil and you can do it you can feel that but it requires conditions of will and and concentration uh and and emotional palate and self-restraint that are only possible in certain conditions and we the strive i think is the stripe to create the conditions where those feelings can be experienced and we're traversing that barrier and trying to will our way to action with incomplete information is what it is because 1:4:25 at the end of the day we're guessing at the end of the day we're leaping into a void every single decision every single decision on what is around us is a leap into the void because we don't really know what we're experiencing and our consciousness is shrinking its perception even further in order to make it easier to sort everything like we're less perceivers than win over is down of information as it gives a body we can perceive vastly more than our brains taken consciously to make up our world hear more smell more but it would be too much we have to differentiate and those differentiations are made arbitrarily in the mind and the thing is we know that we have to paper over that awareness we have to leave beyond our ability to describe what is going on which is what our symbolic after current of accumulated it's not 1:5:48 it is it is arbitrary to our consciousness there are reasons for every decision every decision at every point has a reason for it but we aren't aware of them we can't pin them down and if we can't pin them down we cannot follow to a a uh we cannot get a feedback loop that is perfect there is a signal there is a noise that accumulates in the signal over the yes of course it's part of the physical state these things these decisions are the body and mind there is no distinction like you're thinking mind you're thinking this thing there is something below that that is still mind it's just separated by they're saying it's not arbitrary see this is this this is the difficulty of 1:6:57 talking about this stuff because in the sense that there is a cause and effect going all the way through yes obviously it's not arbitrary but to the point that their mind from within a veil of ignorance is also true so that means people are arguing about a damn robot you guys are ***** nerds all right whatever ***** you ***** all y'all i ain't scared of you i don't care that i cease making sense i realize i'm getting to 1:7:58 the point where i can't just explain myself anymore because i see it my head i don't necessarily have the words it's very frustrating had problems yesterday apparently it was a little tinny i don't know what that is someone asked this is actually a very good question to start with somebody asked if i have trot brain am i a trot at the heart of it and you know what having certainly after having read deutsche biography of trotsky i absolutely feel like at a certain level i have to take the claim because i really do feel like trotsky is the lens that everyone looks back at history with which is not in a position of action but and that is why he refused to ever really choose between contradictory uh courses of action where 0:4:29 one thing had to happen but at the cost of something else but i res i but the thing that paralyzes him is not so much it's that he is always seeking the transcendence of the conflict he's always seeking the third pole that should historically be doing the work of resolving these problems that is why he took the riddle of how to be a convinced marxist in russia which was a ***** uh feudal backwater being integrated into capitalism as an essential a medieval country you still have to like if you are 0:5:32 a marxist and you believe and marxism is the belief that replaced christianity at like within the the liberal cosmology that followed the death of god as well it had to something has to fill that gap and marxism was good but tenants its its guiding principles in a situation where you do not have a revolutionary role to play you only know the development you seek has to come through capitalism not through a 0:6:33 revolution from above which it would have to be because of the unorganized nature of the peasant masses the mature communism is about building a a self-conscious class into a majority through conflict with capitalism not through conflict with uh

the and none of them none of those bolsheviks would have gone through with 1917 if they thought they would have had to have done that they were assuming because they were all listening to trotsky some uh intervention in the form of a a european-led global revolution that would start in germany and there was a period there in 1918 specifically when those they thought it was all coming together they were just even though the whole country was falling apart they were in the middle of a civil war and they were doing brutal violence they felt like oh my god this shit's coming together because of the the german revolution of 1918 and the like the strikes in in throughout 0:7:36 german cities throughout 1919 but the tide rolled back and then when russia was defeated on the field of battle in the in the soviet polish war which hilariously you could blame on stalin and people have blamed on stalin for not deriving his forces directly towards warsaw uh when that tide rolled back new conditions observed and people had to decide okay what are we what are we more committed to the marxist project the socialist project or my place in it what are we more protective of and that was the conflict that defined the question of how to deal with the peasantry because in my mind bukharin the bourgeois could not defend itself in 1917 it would 0:8:39 have been overwhelmed by counter-revolution from the reactionary they were not there the only part of the political structure of the class structure in the cities uh was and saint petersburg specifically was the ***** and so of course the people who ended up winning that question about what to do with the peasants were those who said collective eyes at the point of a gun because that was the way to save their position within this new uh new world they made and their conviction that they were right they were historically vindicated which is the thing they cared about 0:9:41 more and trotsky was paralyzed by the question he wanted industrialization but he did not want and so he sought the revolution he was perpetually seeking the third thing that would and according to marxism should eventually emerge it's a ***** global revolution which is like supposed to be on its way and so that puts them in a position the trot at heart of being horrified uh by the prospect of uh actually holding power because they can only imagine holding moral uh like personal moral uh uh decrepitude personal uh uh violation and so like the posit the trotskyist is the person 0:10:43 who flees from power because they don't want the responsibilities it entails because they don't have their conviction is of something that is not in the moment they're not convinced they're not convinced but how could you ever be convinced and so you will always flee from power and that's why you gotta split in every five minutes because you have to flee from power and its responsibilities even the responsibility of supporting other countries that oppose the united states in some abstract sense that doesn't even matter in your day-to-day life because you're in the imperial court who the ***** cares what you have to say about well how is this the most important 0:11:46

thing in the world that you've weighed the heart of this foreign foreign government against a feather and found it wanting like there's a context but the the the idea of appealing to uh the other to rise up instead of asserting power is i say i would say the the default state of leftists in the west essentially everybody is atrocious once the soviet union ends and the people who like cling crazily to supporting the soviet union in the history or current communist regimes no matter what they do like china uh they're doing that because they have uh they're trying to deny their essential trotskyism they're trying to deny their uh phobia of power because of and 0:12:50 so you can hold off and hold a position where the only uh political formation you can really support is one made up of people of perfectly like mind because that's all it is it's mind there is no material interest binding any of these people any of us we are not members of a class of of a labor class in relation to a means of production we are consumers first and foremost and so we cannot imagine we cannot conceive of power and so its most abstract expression of violence is abhorrent to us and so everybody is a trot everybody is either embracing it and going ham sectarian style and denouncing every other uh every non-american regime that does anything that 0:13:52 they wouldn't do in a platonic ideal of a ***** socialist system that his nep that could not exist in the current moment and so even as we come together in what we think is an imitation of mass politics on the left we're really just a bunch of trots bringing together our splinter groups and that will persist until there is a genuinely materially fixed working class socialist movement in this country forget working class like i said that's a meaningful phrase now just people organizing not on not in political parties not in interest groups not in a third like pressure groups but as workers and building connections to other people that are like politically infused 0:14:58 but socially dense that are forged by mutual experience and that define our action out of the clouds and into reality where a lot of the seat of the questions that seem paralyzing from the heights are clarified because a lot of them don't even ***** come up because we're all arguing about things that are theoretical we're arguing about conditions of what would who would i let my movement there is no movement you are asking these questions to have these questions to ask you are fleeing from power the very prospect of it which begins with submission which begins with submission of time and energy submitting to others will and the decision of what to do with your time when you're not being compensated for it when compensation is the sole mode of drive that we have built into our uh our like what we know the only way 0:16:3 we uh the market defines all uh in all actions that we then like associate with being productive like if we're not being paid for it it doesn't feel like real uh we don't feel truly motivated to do it that is the libertarian thesis and it is what they try to turn us into and we're pushing against that we're swimming again upstream at every moment trying to pull together in the face of that because the work that needs to be done is not going to be remunerated or remunerated however the ***** you say it is not going to be uh compensated for in the only currency that matters currency because everyone's trying to keep their ***** head above water very few of us think of us ourselves as having time to spend not keeping a roof over our head when things are so goddamn scary so it's a lot to ask people to do work that's not going to be immediately pleasurable or compensated for and what's going to make them do that is not an idea it is not a theory it is not a side that can then take that fire hose of of selfishness and fear oh i don't have to just be anxious about this oh i don't have to just be angry because other people who know what i'm going through who are not compete who are not com who are not condescending to us from a cultural uh height which is very much what the online left is by definition this is true of all cultural expressions like it doesn't mean that there isn't it isn't necessary and it doesn't mean that ideas that end up by percolating into grassroots work don't start there or aren't rather i should say communicated there but there is a barrier there especially since a lot of the things that these people talk about me included are not relevant to people's direct uh strategic and tactical questions those strategic tactical questions uh are only answerable at we are all uniquely alienated we do not have a shared language of alienation that is perfect and the word language is the most important part there because when we say we experience we all get we are all mutually alienated by capitalism but we experience that alienation differently it means we have different words to describe that feeling that we use to for ourselves and among ourselves and that means that we build and forge definitions of terms in our intimate relationships now that now the terms we're talking about are are brought down from a cultural firmament all the expressions and language of culture and politics that we share we are having imposed on us not from around ours from those around us but from this this colder cultural superstructure but the definitions of those words the inflections the the unspoken uh shared emotional connotations of the words are forged into uh are forged not on the internet and we all still have some social life and even if it's more impoverished than it used to that's still where we get our definitions and so the sterility of a post-working-class politics or post-class politics at all is that when we feel this alienation we have this huge gap between what these words are used as currency in the culture and what we what we think the words mean and that means that when we're picking and choosing the words to describe our exploitation and misery we are uh not reproducing a relationship uh between like our material conditions uh and uh what we blame for it but we're picking from this gumbo this cosmic gumbo of you well of ideas that are coming from above and that don't relate to my direct experience because there is no working class counter hegemony to express cultural ideas this is what grouch this is essentially gramsci's entire conception of how this works is that you do not get a working class that can vie for power with capital through uh just organizing uh at the base what happens is that through organizing on the base you create cultural institutions that do not answer the capital that are generated from uh the collective will the decisions of these people that are made outside of considerations of profit and compensation they're doing this ***** as it were for free and it's the degree to which they will do things for free that gives them the power to act as a social organism against capitalism i could draw this as a graph i swear to god and the and that used to be in 0:22:12 this country there was a working class that had a organized structural uh pathways to power that gave it corresponding cultural influence and political influence in the form of its veto control over domestic policy in the democratic party on on many issues that were negotiated over the course of the and that was generated by this connection this this thing that connected grassroots people working in factories with union organizations that then confederated and then had relationships to a political party that was infested at every level and and staffed at every level with people moving through this with capillary motion through this machine and then getting into positions of authority within cultural creators and and policies that were directly 0:23:14 uh associated with maintaining the structures of of working class expression now the thing that a lot of people miss about this arrangement is that you don't get to a point i don't think anyway where capitalism is essentially culturally overwhelmed in this way the way that the revisionists would imagine the point of this the the point of creating this structure or the point that the rather i should say this the purpose this structure serves in generating revolutionary potential is that you have people who are self-aware as workers and there are more of them over time and they make up a bigger percentage of the of the unorganized masses so that when a crisis of capitalism comes that cannot be negotiated that can no longer be negotiated you 0:24:16 are now negotiating terms of surrender they they will go to war they will not sign terms of surrender without seeing how it goes on the battlefield we've seen that time and again there is a limit to the reform that any system can take and then either uh two things historically have happened either the ground collapses under the feet of the ruling class before they can declare war like in the french revolution or uh they declare war and usually honestly win because the working class isn't ready and i would argue that there were several points that called for the uh that strategically called for the and i would say that obviously the big one was 1914 but the the the 0:25:22 work of creating a transnational working class had not it did not happen it needed longer it needed longer who knows under stable conditions uh how how long it would have taken for uh solidarity in europe among internet uh working class parties across national lines to overcome nationalism i think it would have but world war one happened and they weren't strong enough to stop it or risk their positions and so and then of course after world war one and the russian revolution you have another moment of conflict after world war ii is a huge moment when stalin backed down and you can say that he had to but again he had to do it to save the soviet union but that's not the soviet the soviet union is a ***** vessel we're not supposed to ***** uh care but you could argue that the the conditions meant we would have lost and so we stood down and that that fight by the way extended to the united states where there was a huge explosion of strikes immediately after world war ii uh the biggest strike wave in american history at that point uh and this was in conditions of you know relative prosperity following the great depression but all labor conflict had been muzzled during the war uh and there had been the popular front with the soviets and so a lot of the most militant workers in america were convinced that they were getting ready for a push after the soviet nazis were defeated to confront capitalism in alliance with the soviet union either overtly or uh you know as sort of a situation where the united states and and uh uh the soviet union agreed to a sort of leveraged buyout of each other after world war ii and that they could coordinate that from below through their mobilization within labor unions uh these are the cio communists and such and there was a huge huge uh strike wave part of the strike wave involved harry truman nationalizing or trying to nationalize the steel industry until the supreme court told him no but of course and that wave broke and with it came a counter reaction from capital in the form of mccarthyism and the red scare which was used to root out the real motivated people who will do ***** for free uh core of the labor movement and replacing it with people who and with that taft-hartley which is a stake in the heart of the labor movement absent just as a self-preserving bureaucracy and and uh and mechanism for patronage distribution short of ideology uh just as part of like the the organ system of capitalism it also killed that too the red scare and tapped hartley killed the body and soul of the american labor movement of course nobody knew it at the time they thought okay we'll get them next and at that point the working class had been so thoroughly political vitality that when it came time to restructure the deal essentially between uh peop workers and capital have been struck after world war ii there were no actual working-class interests at the table there were only bureaucrats there were only bureaucrats of structures who were totally adhered to the state and had loyalty to the state not to the we've been living in the aftermath of and what that means is that there is no there is no counter hegemony there is no left-wing counter-hegemony there is a leftist strain within culture but as part of the broader liberal a new left must be built through struggle i think that's the first principle that's the first principle i operate from and people wonder how the hell can get people get mad at the government and feel alienated from the government because they have to pay taxes and they feel like that's oppression or that the government tells them that they have to wear a seat belt or or they have to wear a mask that's oppression but their boss can tell them you know how much time off they can have you know what they can eat for lunch whatever the hell uh they can determine the the vast majority of their life and they don't see them as their enemy and it's because they're the ones who pay them and in a culture that is purely and fully from the point of view of capital that is that is constructed from the milwaukee and eye of capital at least the head the stuff that we all react to the same way the parties concentrate this and then we all react to it and and and uh revolve around it but the main the big stuff that everybody sees not the little stuff that micro sex see is hegemonically liberal there's no counter culture counter current within it and so we can only operate as as and that means that even though we're all experiencing capitalist exploitation and alienation more keenly every day because the most direct expression of that is compensated for with money we are paid for it it doesn't feel that bad and so consequently we vent our alienation at everything except the cause of it because the cause of it has been compensated for and if it's not enough money that's really your fault for not hustling hard enough for not having gotten the right degree for not standing up to your boss and asking for it's your fault you're not having enough money there there is like a god-like dispenser of value because value is determined in the market value is determined in the market and we absorb that and then we operate from those assumptions and that colors our entire approach to politics our entire conception of ourselves as citizens as political subjects and it means the class is washed away class is not perceptible in our expression there is an article in harper's about the bessemer alabama amazon union drive and they followed this young guy who worked who worked as amazon he was a young african-american guy he worked there and he was a self-described like uh entrepreneur like he thought of working at amazon as a stepping stone you he was going to end up selling to amazon he was going to have his own cosmetics company and then he was going to be a partner of amazon he identified with amazon and if he didn't make money he felt ashamed if he if his thing wasn't going to succeed he would have felt ashamed he would have because and so he didn't want a union because the amazon amazon told him and the only people in the neighbor in the the majority of people in the plant in the factory that wanted or the fulfillment center that wanted a union where the old people who remember when unions union jobs existed in the steel industry there before it went away their kids don't have those memories they don't have that experience of sharing grievances against the person giving you money the person giving you money has their entire life been the dispenser of value in every element of society and now that doesn't mean we're all doomed to it but it's what you have to fight against and you have to assume that we're in a condition of prostrate institutions i would say that crisis is accelerating pretty rapidly even if it doesn't always feel that way uh the dispenser basically is going to disrupt 0:35:43 our expectations enough to bring us sort of out of a trance bring us more into the moment of our lives bring us more urgently into connection with each other over these crisis conditions what do we do what do we do at the end of the day you can only ask the computer what do we do so much because they don't know because they're asked we're all just asking and then our ask our us asking the question just bounces off each other and then we pretend that that's an answer you gotta you ask yourself and again this is not to blame anyone like one of the big things that makes 0:36:45 it so hard to communicate because of this is the emotional content of these terms and in the absence of material interests all politics as we experience it through media social or otherwise is moral it's all moralizing because there is no material dimension as i said that is all getting steamed off through self-loathing and so if questions are moral questions only then holding positions is of um holding positions on anything 0:37:46 is a moral act having opinions becomes the only moral act because it's the only public one it's the only one that we enact and so that means that these questions become totally colored and our ability to answer them throws goes out the window because we're ***** defending our very self-conception as virtuous people which is all we have and the thing about marxism and this is forgotten because we just can't process it is that marx was a moral deflationist unlike all the other socialist leaders who were emerging and thinkers who were starting to to write opposed to capitalism in the mid 19th century marx did not object to capitalism on moral grounds this is very important to understand marx was not saying that that the exploitation of capitalism was evil and the capitalists were evil because they did it which is different 0:38:49 than all the other uh utopian socialists and christian socialists and anarchists of the period defined it to him capitalists were acting out their historic role in disrupting the feudal order and creating the conditions for a self-aware working class to emerge which would then act in their collective self-interest which would abolish bourgeois morality and would abolish all of the petty questions of of uh good and bad that consume us and consume our and make us neurotic with doubt about our ourselves oh uh is it moral to steal a loaf of bread to feed your family well nobody's needs to feed nobody's everybody gets bread everybody gets bred you don't have to worry about it all these all these questions become meaningless these questions that we fixate over if we can push through and so marx was more marx was morally deflationary 0:39:50 he wanted people to think of politics less about morality he was a is an opposed to rousseau he wanted it to be thought of not that way so that you could view every situation dispassionately so that you could view the contours and because we live in a post working post-class culture we live in a post-class society in a real meaningful sense not that there isn't class exploitation but that it is no longer processed as such and therefore like the culture does not have within it the strands the the the expression of a working-class culture and with it is anything other than a moral basis for politics so all of us even marxists even people who believe in their bones 0:40:53 that that everything mark said about about the dialectic of history and materialism uh is true they still argue even if they don't know it on moral grounds and invest these and like if you want to understand the culture war as it is and the liberal cr ratchet towards a more and more strident multiculturalism the ***** that the post left always talks about as though it's a conspiracy between raytheon and bank of america it is not it is the subconscious collective spasm of conscience of the urban liberal class these are people who are in a system with a benefit from exploitation and misery where they get to live lives of unalienation unalienated labor that is alienated 0:41:55 by that is motivated by their ***** guilt and that guilt must be excreted somehow and that is where the the moral uh grandstanding and and uh and that means that more and more liberals as as conditions get worse as as anxiety and politicization of culture become more and and the urge to change something becomes more felt by they have to express it and if you feel even if you are not even if you are being exploited even if you are a working cl per a worker even if you are precarious you still feel guilty because you have conditioned yourself to view the world through a 0:42:57 lens whereby the world things aren't fair and it's capitalism's fault but you're still benefiting from it in your mind because of the cultural uh because of your cultural expectations it's not about any actual class position and it is people almost it is almost exclusively people who are feel guilty who are making the decisions about where the contours of the culture war should go both uh what politicians should say uh opinion makers online in social media uh people in uh trying to make a a job out of it like ***** robin d'angelo and and other ***** racial uh water diviners these ***** racial uh rainmakers and then even at the very top you've got very 0:43:58 guilty liberal billionaires because this is this this thing has absorbed everybody it's declassed everybody including the rich the rich are being declassed the rich are being lumpinonized but of course capitalism doesn't need them to uh be class oriented to orient to for capitalism to work to their benefit because it is a machine of extracting profit and pushing it upward and even if the people who it's being given to are horrified by the machine and would like to stop it they can't and so they figure out explanations in their head for why they should still have all that money even though it's being wrought by this horror and the answer liberals come to is well you know it's the racism it's the racism it's it's white maleness we gotta defeat that which is of course most like they're it's a white male paradigm they're just trying to extract that part of themselves that feels guilty and then extrovergate that guilt through uh 0:45:0 cathartic and then on the right conservatives think oh it's uh it's the blacks fault it's uh it's non-hierarchy's fault basically because black people form in the united states this other this racial other that is not fully within citizenship and that is the escape valve for class conflict within the american polity always has been that's why fundamentally northern capitalism could not accede to the end of the s uh racial caste system in the south after the civil war it couldn't do it because it would have destabilized the the uneasy data that was currently existing between workers small holders and capital it might have tipped things in the direction of class war class conflict because my god what if the poor whites and the poor blacks get together 0:46:1 after the civil war what if they what if they uh compare notes they will be in an unbeatable position they will have leverage that will be undefeatable by by the the shabby trappings of post-war american capitalism that had not yet turned into the mighty dynamo and so that racial caste system is at the basis of american capitalism not as the founder the foundation which is what and i think that literally is where a lot of the confusion comes from is once again this is moralism creeping into objective questions it morally feels right to think because you get to talk about it in these terms that are amenable to the discourse and amenable to politics which is racial we can monkey around with that stuff we can't do anything about capitalism we can monkey around with the order of hierarchy and who gets to get in and who gets to 0:47:3 go out we can diversify our but we have to not be uh you know moral we have to be morally committed to that now racism gets built in it gets it gets deeper than any other experience so for a lot of right wingers yeah throughout history they have been motivated in their mind by racism even though that racism is built on top of this machines need to perpetuate itself i think talking about it in those terms and saying that the capitalism came first is important so that you can see the mechanisms in every moment that need to be pushed you can see the real uh pressure points and not get caught in moral questions that aren't meant to be resolved that exist to keep us perpetually battling at so the war the the the war between conservatives and 0:48:11 liberals that's heating up now the the the genuine drop in investment in institutions of democracy is a civil war between america's liberals essentially the boomer going to war over woodstock over the cultural revolution of the 60s and 70s one end the urban finance end of capitalism in collision course finally with its uh with the tail end which was the formation of uh local extraction economy based uh capital formations in the slave south and they've been banging and they've been uh they've been in conflict their conflict has driven american politics for a period there was a working class element that became a try that became a third uh poll and you had a sort of tripartite political structure for a minute there then that broke again back to the two 0:49:12 back to the dynamic between these two parts of capital petty and small urban and uh and rural bourgeois basically now international and national bourgeois they're having their partisan war that is becoming deeply charged one part has completely at the grassroots given up on investing in any institutions or norms and that goes through the entire organization meaning yeah they'll ***** cancel an election if they can of course they would because democrats would let them because democrats are even more comfortable they believe themselves to be even more comfortable even more snug the reason they're liberals the reason that they're happy to put the rainbow flag of things they believe on their yard and um and endorse theoretical diversity is that they feel more secure in capitalism's bosom than the uh the national bourgeois do and again we're talking about the people who actually make decisions and who 0:50:14 things are generated around not the regular schmucks who are just responding to them they think they're comfortable national bourgeois they're all terrified they've convinced themselves of the boogeyman because of their racism or but all that even is driven by the fact that they're being crushed they are being crushed they will be absorbed into the **Music playing** international finance and they will personally either become cuckolded rich people and therefore lose their identity or they're going to keep their uh keep their identity and become poor that is something they feel and that makes them terrified and all of their fears get manifested in things like race they are afraid of being dominated they see the way black people are this country that are treated and they imagine that in this new global world where they're on the bottom they will be but at the lightly higher levels at the levels of hollywood at the level of the ***** tenured academy my god where people live in these tastefully segregated 0:51:17 uh integrated neighborhoods or gentrified neighborhoods or in inner ring suburbs where they get their diversity mark and therefore they don't have to have fear or their fear can be transmitted into uh anxiety about the bad white people they get to sublimate their racial anxiety onto the bad white people which is why they freak out about trump they're sublimating their their anxiety to this other group whereas the conservatives know exactly who they're afraid of because they're they haven't inverted it they haven't sublimated it they're they're operating out of their wild it unlike the the suppression of the superego of fixated democrats and both of them are imagining a future that's going to get worse they don't imagine anything better but what they imagine is their enemy suffering and so we aren't getting to a point 0:52:19 of crisis if things get much worse i mean if supply chain disruption really becomes a thing if the ***** tap of mountain dew runs out if the economy drops again if there's another if they try to do uh mandatory vaccines if uh there's another attempt at a lockdown or a first attempt at a national lockdown who knows if there's a close election this is all being generated by and because we're all experiencing politics as this our categories get confused because most of the people on the left they're on the same cultural side as the liberals they have overlapping values at and so they feel the need to address those in their lives and they do but there's a conflict at the heart of that that can only be pierced by piercing the moral fog around all questions that so i am all about demoralizing our historical analysis demoralizing our opinions taking away the sense of uh of self-worth that comes with watching something or listening to something or reading something or telling something or posting something now you say that's rich coming from you of course but you know hey i'm also being compensated for this remember so that's going to make it much easier for me if you're not being compensated for this in anything other than like a psychic wage of moral virtue if you remove that energy if you remove that uh force behind your engagement things become clearer you regain you get something like a post not you have nuted yourself of your uh your morals uh backed up uh anima your your your repressed reikian uh orgone that you have been sublimating into this mind battle this ***** you're putting this energy see someone says if people logged off no nobody'll listen to you i've said this before but nobody's logging off logging off is not a possibility because our social i there's no such thing as a person right we are a cloud of influences we are so and beyond the fact that we're made up of that we've encountered we also cannot define ourselves by anything so that means we are we we we experience ourselves by experiencing the world and that means experiencing other people other other people who can pose a reality that we engage with and fit ourselves with him and that is that used to be inhuman for most of human history that was a direct experience the entire time of other people over time technology has taken over uh the media sphere has increased and our degree to which our notion of others comes from this uh diffused technological sphere increases now of course this is good i mean in a dialectical historical sense this is necessary you have to create class consciousness across geography and that requires being able to engage with ideas about personhood that extend throughout all of humanity so that's necessary but as it increases our sense of self becomes mediated so if everyone logged off it would leave you in the same life you lived i mean presuming you live the same life with essentially a limb removed you will you would find yourself unable to uh navigate the world because of how much of your understanding of what the world is comes from this this zone this abstract zone so we're all we all have to do it to now i think some people could cut it off if they were going to change their life in a significant way like if you join a commune you probably can log completely off if you re if you are able to create a situation where you are able to replace have that cut off limb if you start organizing you can probably cut off completely but you know well but if you still are where you are and most of us are because we don't get to choose that you know we can try to direct the ship but we can't just redirect we cannot dictate terms immediately we cannot take a moment of clarity and try to re shuffle the deck completely we're still constrained which is why you can never talk about someone being in you know about you know you cannot talk about there being some like mute moment of immune illumination where we all come together and we all have uh an understanding because every moment we're being jostled away and directing things differently takes time so shrinking you know reducing the size of it reducing the vitalness of it as an organ of self-conception is is laudable but i stopped telling people to log off a it's more about reorienting your uh emotional relationship to it because then that will dictate because if you do not invest these questions with more moral energy you know what if somebody's just literally pitch crypto that's very funny you know what blockchain the beauty of this thing is is that if this is true if the resistance to capitalism is within our like technological infrastructure is finally coming into fruition through the blockchain and crypto if that's true it's going to happen when no matter what i think about it i will not be contributing in any way because i don't know ***** i must focus i must accept i must emphasize that on this point on the question of technology i mean i don't know much about much but i know ***** about ***** about ***** technology i understand the arguments for blockchain the way that it could keep money from being it would be able to prevent capital flight and mutt and tax evasion and stuff okay you know i read that in ministry for the future uh but you know all the crypto currencies seem like speculative assets of an economy that's run out of profitable uh investment that definitely seems to have been the motive forget anything oh we're gonna be stable whatever libertarian crackpot notions undergirded it's building and i bet that was the motivation because those people were motivated they really believe that ***** because they have aligned their politics with their sense of self-interest they think libertarianism will get them rich so they'll work for free because they've convinced themselves that they're gonna this thing's gonna work for them even though for most of them it absolutely will not they will be destroyed spiritually and financially but they really believe that shits and they have the technological those guys have technological respects man that that's one place that the right has the left feet 12 ways to sunday is that those ***** nerds those libertarian nerds they love the computers and they know how they work and the left is a bunch of ***** self included so whatever those guys were thinking very quickly it became first a money laundering uh device for avoiding taxes and buying things illegally which is a tax issue at the end of the day and a currency issue uh like they're basically the government basically says you can't that money is no good for that thing uh you can't buy that with this and i mean honestly i'm wondering to what degree is bitcoin still used to buy stuff considering how volatile it is value is and how much interest people have in it as a long-term investment opportunity and as a short-term like uh shake the money tree type thing it just seems like the profit motive has dominated it completely and that you would need that counterweight of people within it all pushing in the same direction out of not self-interest not financial interest i should say and i don't see the structures within it to uh so once again that's about as much thought as i have to put into it because it would be dumb of me to have a strong opinion on bitcoin or cryptocurrency or to spend much time talking about it because i'm i know with the time i have on this earth i'm not going to be i do think that the amount of ***** energy it uses is monstrous and i do think that the basic the the phenomenon of of cryptocurrency and nfts is the market looking for speculative assets where they cannot be found because even speculative profits are now like long-term profits which of course are always been trending down since the 70s are now such that you can't even and so there so the thing i can't get over with this ***** is that they literally take economic growth which is supposed to be uh what investment creates like you invest money so that work is done right and that work then creates more value that is then profit that you get to take now that work is involves human labor it involves technology it involves natural resources of some kind some sort of input and it involves externalities in the form of pollution and energy used for the transaction at the end of which you have a thing in some way in some respect you have a thing that is then that then contributes to like the built economy and can then serve as the purpose for more growth bitcoin removes the productive part of the investment cycle leaves the creation of energy the weight the use of energy and the ex uh the uh exhaust of externalities in the form of uh of these goddamn bitcoin mining rigs using electricity and and pumping carbon that is just that is the death that's the death spiral man that is capitalism at the terminal point where the profit motive has outstripped all signals from the ***** uh the system all actual contact with it have been stripped there is no more human to animal to biome connection to the imperative for ***** uh uh profit and at the end of that you have a situation where there's no more this thing cannot uh innovate anymore this thing cannot be a progressive force it is it outlasted its historic purpose like i said marx didn't think capitalism was evil he thought it was and it and this is one of the another place where moralism gets confused is that at the time right marx was writing capitalism was serving historical purpose he thought that that purpose was coming to an end and that's when he was that why he predicted but colonialism and the united states basically saved it colonial uh domination and super exploitation of resources in the periphery saved capitalism in a way that marx could not have predicted capitalism has fully exhausted its historic role its progressive role of creating innovation of concentrating capital of creating cultural superstructures nostalgias of no uh ideas and uh and institutional knowledge that could be used to direct a technological society towards social ends to to take the machine and reprogram it to turn the terminator into the child protector and that was the historic role of the working class was to was to do that was to change the programming and they failed and we live in the aftermath of that failure and so now capitalism is deeply immoral in everything you can't even say it's it's progressive anymore it does 1:7:49 not even serve a historic purpose it is ju because obviously it was also immoral and marx used very scornful language uh to condemn the immorality of the ruling class but they were also fulfilling a historic role now they are just evil consumption is evil if it has replaced uh morality which is which it has a fully in consumption is a part of life but it is like anything supposed to be fixed in a matrix with other parts of life meaning other things other stores of value let's put it that way the value form in 1:8:50 capitalism overwhelms values and and exchange value is the only value but those are of course the difference between those two things which is an illusory fantasy and if we've and we live in a culture and a society we live in a society that has reified that into a principle that dominates all others to a way that is not sustainable i mean it's going to destroy the world not end life on earth probably but destroy what it thinks it's creating destroy the thing that it's supposed to serve which i mean my god you 1:9:58 have this ***** going to space saying thank you to the amazon workers as if there's any deal we could make with him that would make that uh that would mean we won like you can talk all day about oh i got 500 socks and uh i clicked a button i got 500 socks to my house in two hours okay congratulations you got that convenience you got that consumption but what did you give up for it and what you gave up for is every other part of humanity and your own ability to determine your life like at a basic level you've given yourself over to a machine and we get to watch this guy go hey i'm going to pretend to go to space i'm going to pretend to go to space i'm going to do something that isn't even ***** space travel something the russians figured out in the ***** uh 50s with two tin cans tied together nope sorry someone 1:11:2 on twitter pointed this out and i think it's it's true it said he clearly sat down with his his space dudes and said okay i want to go to space how can i do that in a way that doesn't require me to train and isn't going to kill me and i said we'll just take you up and like show you the curvature of the earth it's just it's just a big boy goes on a ***** plane ride and then he comes down and says we're gonna take all the factories and put him in outer space which is such a should be an in such an insult to the mind of anyone how anyone can hear them say someone say that and not instantly be disenchanted from capitalism astounds me this man has more money than anybody in the on earth he directly benefits from the exploitation of people and their labor at every point in a global supply by any any system of value that 1:12:3 is wrong unless he deserves it and that is capitalist morality he is there because he deserves it how could he deserve it now the old days hierarchy was upheld by saying he deserves it because god put him there shut up liberalism came along rationalism came along the enlightenment science it became harder to convince people of that and so that became they're there because of a meritocratic process that put them there as they should and that was the liberal revolution to take the industrial revolution and replace orders of superstition with rational orders of merit that was the french revolution that was napoleon marching across europe that was the 19th century was the imposition of those ideas that by the 20th century were hegemonic and then 1:13:5 eventually overwhelmed the world so now you have a situation where we have this so-called meritocracy that of course a lot of people don't believe in some people say leftists say it's not a meritocracy because meritocracy is fake but liberals would say no meritocracy is just not perfectly implemented the multicultural liberal project is the attempt to impose a perfect meritocracy through affirmative action through redistribution necessary to get to that point we are going we are more meritocratic than they used to be but we're not meritocratic enough the important thing is that we're meritocratic enough so that every individual liberal deserves to be where they 1:14:6 are in the system if they're benefiting from it if they feel like they're benefiting from it said yes there's a lot of white people who succeed but shouldn't a lot of white men am i right ladies who now there are a lot of liberals though who say uh you know it's not that racist uh calm down but there are also conservatives who say who aren't full race warriors who do think that you know what even though there's affirmative action and and the media and stuff we still basically have a fair system of capitalism so like i would say the center the center the vital center of capitalist belief in this country says we have a system that is meritocratic enough that the richest man on earth should deserve that through some sort of genius some sort of uh ability equal 1:15:7 to that amount of money and that ***** came back from space and said we got to shoot all the factories into orbit and if he really believes that he is a and he does not deserve to be up there or he's lying to you which means that he is not a meritocrat but a fraud and certainly the fact that he believe he thinks you're going to believe him is the should be the ultimate insult more than anything the fact that he ***** 1:16:8 thinks that some portion of you are going to believe him either agree with him or even he does not have any uh but yeah no nobody who says something like that after blowing all that money and then telling people yeah this is your money i'm blowing goes up does that comes back has that result can possibly say that capitalism has not failed in that it has fulfilled its historical ***** destiny and is still hanging around we have to rebuild some sort of workers resistance to it that can contest for power as it i was supposed to talk about black jack wins today but i ended up going off on a 1:17:9 you know what next week i'll do uh i might just do the whole rest of the because the thing is it's much more uh it's it's much less detail-oriented than um the historical ones anyway like uh reconstruction it's it's much more like sweeping narratives so uh how about for next week bye uh show me the way to go home i'm tired and i want to go to bed i had a little drink about an hour ago and it's gone right to my head and wherever i may roam by land or sea or phone you can always hear me singing a song show me the way to go home i'm tired and i want to go to bed i have a little drink about an hour ago you 0:1:2 can always hear me singing a song show me the way to go home pump show me the way you do and or see your phone you will always hear me singing a song show me the way to go **Music playing** or phone you'll always hear me singing the song i go do it on my phone it's taking too can't spell the name of the damn website hey 0:2:4 there oh boy what is going on here do not auto correct that please criminy i walk along the city streets we used to walk along with me don't know and every step i take reminds us how in love we used to be how can i forget you when there's always something here to remind me i was born to love you but i won't and i will ever be free always be a part of me whoa **Music playing** i passed a small cafe where you 0:3:6

and i went i would dance at night boom boom every time reminded me all it was to kiss and hold you tight how could i forget you and there was thank you yes i'm doing the dion warwick version there not the uh not the one from the 80s it's amazing how many new wave songs were like 60s pop uh covers it really does make you when you look back at a lot of the stuff like punk as a recapitulation of early rock and roll and then like the creation of like uh solon r b being recreated through new wave you kind of see how very quickly uh the creative cycle breaks down and you have to start over again and now we're on like the we're at the and yeah there were some motown 0:4:9 bands that were still performing like the uh the pointer sisters jump for my love that song was huge that's an 80s song anyway i don't really know anything about music so i shouldn't talk i'm not going out enough on a limb on this ***** that i should not be going beyond my embarrassed competency i just know that i like the dion warwick version better which is uh it's not the only version because it was originally a bert bacharach song that was recorded by a number so next week we're going to 0:5:15 talk about the rest the second half of black jackman i guess the second two thirds but it reads very fast and uh i think it's better talked about uh it doesn't really require the granular uh focus and if you really do want to talk granular for uh the haitian revolution in general and luvature uh as a person i highly recommend the uh recent three-part uh haitian revolution uh addendum to the age of napoleon podcast uh that is highly recommended one of and if you want to like get into the muck on like the what happened when that's a good way to do it but like talking specifically about what james is talking about it's a little more abstract uh and i'm finding that 0:6:18 like what i'm getting out of this is are very abstract uh tangents so we don't really need to break it up into specific sections because it makes more sense to talk about them as they develop throughout the whole narrative but anyway uh the last time i tried to talk about this book i got completely off track did a whole hour and a half that was not even directly that wasn't even gesturing towards the book so uh i don't want to let that happen next time so i i was reading through and i hit a paragraph that i thought was so perfect in its description of the french revolution from which the haitian revolution emerges uh and which it is part of which is why it's part of the narrative of the ancient napoleon podcast uh it sums it up in a uh the the uh the fall of the end of the revolution the thermadorian reaction that ends the forward progress of towards social equality that the um that the revolution was and i felt like 0:7:21 this paragraph would cut if people just absorb this paragraph it would cut through a lot of the morass of uh of weird like emotional reactions and and investments people have in the figures of the french revolution because you know these are these are the titans who broke free of their chains you know so we we have this there's this charisma around them uh but we have they have to be understood not as protagonists but as emo uh historical actors you know what i mean they need first and foremost to be viewed is in their historical role not through the role of what values they personally embody because then you end up having to defend things uh and can uh conceptualize things historically around those assumptions so anyway i wanted to just have a little bracket here to talk about robespierre and the french revolution coming off this paragraph that's on page 177 of uh my paperback copy of the black 0:8:22 jacobins uh in the chapter the white slave owners again which is one of my favorite uh chapter titles because it's after the uh the fall of the the slave-owning aristocracy the uh the declaration by even the the uh republic in france itself of abolition uh saw the dispossession of from power of the sort of uh royalists and independence scheming uh slave owners and by by this time they've been owned but then there's an attempted resurgence to uh regain power and he titles the chapter oh the white slave owners again god damn it i thought we got rid of these ***** guys so in describing what's happening in france while the uh while toussaint is rising to power uh in haiti uh 0:9:26 james writes robespierre and the mountain that's uh the j the left-wing jacobin uh faction that ended up overthrowing the girondists robespierre in the mountain had maintained power until july 1794. the terror had saved france but long before july robespierre had gone far enough and was now lagging behind the revolutionary masses in the streets of paris jacques varela and rue were preaching communism not in production but in distribution a natural reaction to the profiteering of the new bourgeois robespierre however revolutionary as he was remained rub and had reached the extreme limit of the bourgeois revolution he persecuted the workers far more workers working men than aristocrats perished in this phase of the terror in june 1974 the revolutionary armies won a great victory in belgium and at once the continuation of the terror was seen by the public as factional ferocity and not a 0:10:27 revolutionary necessity right wing and left in the convention combined to strike at this sinister dictator and when he sent out to the call to the people he could not get the old response some of the sections came but there was a delay rain fell and they went back home again the revolutionary order which had inspired them since august 17 92 was gone killed by robespierre himself he seems to have been in constant fear of a split between the extreme revolutionists of frank paris and the rest of the country but destroyed his own left wing and here we have a perfect encapsulation of the how the french revolution ended it was because the uh the interests of the workers of paris and the bourgeois who were challenging royal prerogative in the feudal order were in alignment for a while at the start of the revolution but as the revolution took its 0:11:28 own momentum as the window of possibility opened the workers started demanding more uh pressing needs an assertion of greater democratic control of the economy so that they could but the bourgeois revolution which only seeks to use working-class power to the degree that they have to to gain power essentially puts the brakes on it and that is because at this point historically it is not the workers of paris it is not the sound cool out of paris who are the true revolutionary class it is the bourgeois class because they are the ones who not only are radicalized against the status quo but have the organizational capacity and the access to power to actually push for their agenda and they used the working class of paris to that end but then a point 0:12:31 came especially after the grandus decided to try to offload this tension in a war with austria that uh passions grew greater the sense of uh of uh lost liberty felt more tangible and the workers pushed for more radical demands which in the first place could be uh in a bourgeois framework only accommodated with blood because remember the bourgeois is not trying to create social equality here they are not trying to do a communism they are trying to do a capitalism in their mind capitalism and freedom are the same thing this is the founding birth of this is the explosion of modern capitalist the modern catalyst capitalist dominion right here it's bursting forth from the french aristo from the french and so their domination of the uh of the national assembly their domination of all of the political clubs in the city of paris and 0:13:32

in the surrounding cities of france meant that popular uh uh popular agitation by the working class who have a different interest than the ***** bourgeoisie uh which is hey how about we eat how about we we and the bourgeois state would now in the hand or the the state mechanism now fully in the hands of the bourgeois remember there's no real working-class participation in government in this new structure it is lawyers basically through and through lawyers and and progressive landowners that's it so those are the ones making the decisions and are wielding these forces because of the insufficient organization of the working class it wasn't even a working class it was a bunch of artisans who were out of work basically like it was not a working class in paris it has to be remembered it was a post-feudal remnant of the ***** 0:14:36 uh the craft system you had artisans the sankhulat were artisans in paris who just didn't have enough work so you don't have a working class you have a movement towards one but it's not coherent there is a coherent bourgeois class and look at that they're in charge of the power to take power are the uh gerondists who squeeze out the fulantis the royalist bourgeois when it becomes untenable to support the system anymore because if you cannot change the conditions at the base which the bourgeois cannot do the redistribution of power and resources what they have to do instead is change the political structure in such a way to validate that to the people who they are aligned with keep the mob at bay with spectacles of uh of political uh in the political ritual performance of the power of the people let's say that like 0:15:37 we cannot give you pure you people you cannot have real power what we can give you is the performance of power publicly through you will fill the bellows but we will be the machine because we can do that for you and that means hey you guys hate the king he's gone uh and so that means that the royalist uh the pro-royalist constitutional democrats get to get our uh liberals get bounced by by bernoff then you've got a brasso and his boys in the geron they're willing to go to kill the king cut the king's ***** head off damn right uh hell you know what they'll even go to war with austria to have a good cleansing patriotic nationalist uh ritual that will make their power uh conceived of not as a class but as a nation-state or as members of some nation state in a in a patriotic war uh that they will then go and fight it and 0:16:38 not be in the capital for that's great but the very the fact that the war didn't go well in the first stages meant that panic exploded and fear of retribution and reassertion of royal power became greater which means that the bourgeois structure had to do more performances of worker power of of of sankulat political desire only in the form of ritual sacrifice they couldn't give them land this marx said this too they couldn't give them land so they gave him heads and robespierre rose to power in that moment because he believed that this was not just some cynical appeasement of the people he believed that this was going to create communism robespierre thought that he was going to turn the bourgeois state into a russoian perfected state not by changing economic relationships because he is a liberal the first liberal in many ways one of the first real liberals uh because he couldn't do it through redistribution he would do it through the use of the state to assert a public virtue a internal uh motivator this is what i'm talking about the thing you're supposed to have at the end of the process of class formation where the working class takes the rule takes over the machinery of capitalism puts it to social use and creates a social being right the new man of the soviet vision like it literally is a different type of person with different relationships that are defined by their different economic conditions the conditions of production that they live within robespierre thought he could get that within capitalism even though capitalism is based on this exploitation at the center and this coercion at the center that rips apart consent who wants to consent to this system the consent has to be reaffirmed and reforged culturally in the form of politics in the form of laws and uh and it will be by assertion of a public will to punish that you will instill in people virtue they will be scared they will be scared of the state from sinning the same way that the medieval uh peasant was scared to sin uh because he was afraid of god sending him to hell if we now are going to have earthly institutions now that they've been brought to earth by the emergence of capitalism and the engagement and the alienating effect of the market if that's the case are we going to let the market destroy us are we going to let the market dissolve our humanity and the radical uh bourgeois are those who because of their personal collection of uh of of abilities values encounters with the world i refuse to accept that and want to defeat it and those become your liberals they think public application of fear will reproduce god will will like the way bentham reconfigured the penitentiary to be away from imagining the uh penitent in god's eyes but to have them imagine themselves under the eye of a fellow person in the form of the panopticon within the uh the and so then if that happens if everyone within a system is in the system of capitalism is self-regulating if their decisions are self-regulating towards the good in an abstract sense and not themselves then capitalism can work no boss will exploit a worker nobody will will uh maximize profit over human values they will be prevented from doing that by their own virtues this is the difference between ray kroc and the mcdonald brothers and the founder ray kraft the mcdonald brothers had enough because they were satisfied with their social endeavor ray kroc was a ***** uh heartless demon because he's further along in the alienating process that jacobins and ***** bonaparte or i'm sorry jacobins and uh and robespierre saw coming and wanted to stop and they thought that public virtue would do it that is why while there was mass confiscation of church lands and persecution of the church and a lot of the uh the future redditors i would guess of liberalism who wanted to tear up the ***** uh church rooting branch from society uh robespierre being a more humanist in a many in a meaningful sense liberal than them said no no you can't just replace god with absolutely nothing you have to consecrate their relationship to the state which is replacing god and that's why he created the cult of the supreme being which led to one of uh his real downfall 0:21:48 in many ways came from his his conducting of this attempt to enshrine the this new revolutionary liberalism where the state is still under uh operating under the machinery of capitalism which is stripping all human bonds stripping away towards uh selfishness but but and therefore people's lives are worse they're pissed off this guy robespierre says we're gonna all worship this uh this concept of reason that is the collective understanding of our of our people uh and that that will guide us the way that god used to guide us and he had a big festival in uh paris and it was a cringe fest he had this big float he was incredibly happy and everyone around him was muttering and he got heckled at the thing and shortly after that he had a one of his many nervous breakdowns and he was off the public stage for a few weeks and then he came back talking about how he was going to finally clean house uh and everybody who was terrified that their corruption was going to be exposed got 0:22:50 together to ***** uh nerfed him and there was nobody there to defend him because this is the important thing about robespierre in his pursuit of public virtue imposed from above on the principles of the bourgeois capitalist state that meant yes cutting off the head of a bunch of royalists and the old chirondist and anybody who uh looked to scans at the revolution but it also meant cutting off the head of a bear cutting off the head of danton cutting off the head of anyone connected to the actual streets and the actual demands of the workers uh uh from the machinery of state anybody who was even if they were crooked and danton was a crook had a public he was he was seen as a legitimate broker for the desires of the people so was a bear and they were also chopped up they were also fed to the machine and doing 0:23:51 that broke the the conveyor belt between the bourgeois state and the sankhulat they were no longer able to uh within uh they could no longer marshal the people because the people no longer had faith in the mechanisms that they had used to pursue power and so they lost heart oh we're no longer actually in charge of this thing because when we say things they're not heard because the people who used to hear them and take them to power and press our case are now dead it's very similar to what happened uh in after the 1970s in the less fraught environment of you know just the post-war uh cold war state liberal state eventually there becomes a point where it the crisis is too great the material uh disruption of capitalism is too deeply that you can no longer afford to let the workers the the unorganized the proletarians in the room the plebeians in the room you can't let them in you got 0:24:52 to keep it among the bourgeois to prevent uh them from turning them against each other and because the bourgeois class is a progressive class at that point they were the progressive class of the moment they were able to defeat the workers the fact that the workers lost proves they weren't ready to win because the progressive party was and what that meant is that the thermidor is the system stabilizing itself away from the maximalist fantasies of robespierre which were going to keep going until they hit a reaction because he was trying to totalize something he was trying truly as william f buckley used to say to immunize the eschaton he was trying to transcend the the arc of history and because he's a liberal idealist he was going to do that until the system stopped him and the thing is it did he found the limit everybody who was really truly connected to the working class anybody who had any real uh convictions about the revolution that transcended personal interest they were all dead by the fall of robespierre everybody who cooed robespierre on the left or the right shared one thing in common they were essentially more interested in saving their asses than in maintaining their commitment to the revolution ironically robespierre's pursuit of virtue squeeze squeezed virtue out of the system anyone with the virtue of their convictions got their heads cut off the only people left were the non-virtuous and that is what capitalism will do over time and that's why this undermines its own social foundations that's why it sells the root the rope and so what happens with robespierre is he essentially gets beyond to the point of his historical relevance and then he's ***** uh he's he's removed because uh he is not he is not structured by the the demands of the bourgeois state which are towards stability not civil war with the bourgeois over who is most virtuous while virtue is squeezed out of the system by the machinery of capitalism giving lie to every revolutionary belief the the revolutionary uh faith in the in the in the uh in the state that the masses used to have is every day being drained as it fails to make things better to their lives and of course those people who's like i said the si when i say that they uh value their lives more than their principles that doesn't mean they were bad people most of us value our lives more than our principles the point of having a society is to encourage people's best selves to encourage their of themselves to when given a choice between the right and the wrong thing which they can feel in their heart they choose right and that means that they give people the social context where it doesn't cost to be good where there's actually a social benefit of being good because otherwise you only you create a system that is incentivizing sadists and martyrs masochists and sadists are the only people who can thrive in that situation i meant that when uh the the third reaction that uh that took over after uh roamspear yes these were these people had less uh literally less virtue than robespierre who was filled with virtue he thought he could impose his virtue on others but you can't that's the reality of life no we're all built different we all have different capacities for different things based on our individual experiences and that's why we need intervening structures to guide our day-to-day activity and to reproduce socially beneficial actions and minimize socially negative ones and that is a functioning state that distributes without or minute with while 0:29:0 minimizing and moving towards an elimination of alienation instead of maximizing it and increasing it by the moment which is what capitalism does and in those early stages it's incredibly painful that's why you have revolutions and ferment and throughout all of europe in the 17th and uh 1800s is because this is the moment when these societies being ripped in half and there's this big explosion but in the explosion the bourgeois party is always the progressive force because it's the most self-aware it's the most self-conscious and they are able to use that self-consciousness to assert power now 1917 rolls around everybody involved in the russian revolution was keenly aware of everything that happened in 177 1794 they viewed they they in many ways viewed the french revolution as the first as uh the model for the russian one in that you were facing a similar situation where the crisis of an order had occurred and classes were now in revolt against the status quo uh but in and and 0:30:2

at the very beginning of this process both the uh bourgeois and the working class have the same uh interests for a while but then they start to get in conflict but in this in the what happened that time and what guys like lenin and trotsky assumed would have to happen historically is that because in the russian context the working class party the working class was more organized and was more progressive than the bourgeois class that they would win and they did because in the specific context of russia the working class even though it was a small fraction of the population uh was more progressive than the bourgeois because not because uh but but and i think that there was an assumption uh that because this was true in russia it was true 0:31:4 throughout capitalism but i think that if you understand uh if you understand the the input the inputting of capitalism into the system as a as something that occurs in stages and across geography and time which means that development happens in different places at different rates even though the general trend is moving in one direction and you have capitalism moving throughout throughout the systems of different states as they all compete with one another but at different rates because of different conditions and what that meant is that the uh the working class which had just emerged uh in the late 1800s brought so many people in russia so close together so quickly uh and hooked them into a social network of political parties and uh mass media that had been created by a bourgeois that was a fraction a sliver of the size that it was in more developed historically capitalist regions like central or 0:32:5 like western europe where you'd had this the the ***** bourgeois had been in the cat bird seat ruling capitalism in the in in in the in the stirrups since it began basically whereas you were uh the the crisis of capitalism in the emergence of capitalism in late 19th century russia is essentially capitalism showing up on the doorstep of a funeral regime and telling an uh a feudal autocrat that he had to institute capitalism if he wanted to keep his ***** country together and that meant that that it was all instituted by fiat by the state it didn't emerge from social relations and the existing networks of trade that formed the basis of bourgeois social order in uneven and combined development as they say and so in the specific case of russia yes the 0:33:6 protection was true the the working class was more organized because there were more of them they had access to basically the same social structures as the as the bourgeois class and therefore they were able to overcome you know the fact that they generally had less access to education with numbers and effective technological communication of those numbers into power that's the important thing all the french revolutionary soundcloth had was the jacobin club or or the kaye or the uh uh what the ***** it called the club to cordelie so like you saw what i said what happened in 1905 was was the closest thing they had to a bourgeois revolution but it didn't take because the working class the bourgeois while obviously running at a higher temperature than the um the working class at that time had so few numbers that 0:34:7 their ability to assert control was dissipated in very very quickly and was autocracy was able to reassert power because it wasn't a powerful enough current in that in that structure in that specific context of capitalist development and so a lot of the things that people predicted were going to happen western europe in in the in the gap between the first uh social revolution of bourgeois power and then the second or the first revolution of the bourgeois revolution and then the social revolution that comes later in that interval the bourgeois complete the process the bloody and horrible process of asserting uh this new uh detoratorialized humanity capitalism is basically supposed to uproot the human race grab it out and uproot it and then 0:35:8 that uprooted human race through the fact that now it uh is able to interact uh cybernetically in a way it wasn't before because of technology and mass are able to build working-class counter counter hegemony that then takes over the machine but the uprooting is to be done in that interval between the bourgeois revolution and the social revolution so that the social revolutionaries can take over a state capable of redistributing labor through the system in a way that is unalienating and prominent or less alienating and promises to decrease alienation over time i think if you want to explain why why the cuban revolution has been so resilient a big one is that in its immediate aftermath things got dramatically better for poor people dramatically better of course it's it's stagnated and it hit a uh that progress was stopped strangled by the united states as much as it could be but you know there's 0:36:10 still social progress it's just but the initial sense of momentum coupled with social institutions that don't alienate people because they seem to be to their benefit like

democratic um democratic norms hot not multi-party ***** like we have but you know like the direct democracy of this the direct like community involvement and the thing is you say oh they're not really voting for anything but the thing is if it feels like the state is working for them then they feel like they had something to say they feel like they participated so they are less alienated from their democracy than we are because we know that what we want doesn't matter and yet we're still supposed to invest ourselves completely in this political contest far less democracy here because we believe in it less and that's because nothing has made anybody's life better in any way since the uh end of the free real estate uh bonanza of the 0:37:11 post-war empire since they started to have to redistribute the flows and of course these bolsheviks were all very well aware that if they took power from the bourgeois in 1917 because they were unable to hold it which they were they were unable to hold power that it would be a monstrous counter revolution and probably some sort of uh genocide because if the black hundreds had gone hog wild in the pale of settlement after 1905 what would they have done so that's why the bolsheviks felt they had to seize power and they had been in unseen uneasy alliance uh through the provisional government with the bourgeois class and then they betrayed the bourgeois the same way that bourgeois had betrayed the french proletariat in uh or proto-proletariat in 1794 and the way that they betrayed them uh but the the tables turned because 0:38:15 historical forces had changed but the tragedy was is that what the bolsheviks had put in ins put in to fill in the problem here because they haven't done ***** to uproot the russian people the russian people are rooted as ***** that means that they would have to do the uprooting and therefore delegitimize the state into mass numbers of people they are delegitimizing the state to the people who suffer and you say oh no but uh that's just because they're koulox or something it's like if you're a regular person some new power takes place they say we're on your side and then things get worse for you you don't believe in it anymore and it's like they had to do it to keep the state right but they undermined its legitimacy what was supposed to fill that gap of legitimacy was the world revolution that's going to start in germany and allow them to uproot more slowly to ease out of the root but you can only do 0:39:17 that with a vastly more uh developed capitalist uh structure technological structure concentration of capital left to themselves in the competitive state framework they were going to have to uproot the same way the capitalists had only not in countries across the ocean to people of a different color and god to your own ***** people to the people about and that happened because not everybody was uh more developed and the working class never developed the uh in the west they were they were always kept too comfortable they were kept too well fed and that's not their fault this is 0:40:18 the decision everybody is going to make and this is why robespierre is fundamentally wrong and why you cannot maintain virtue in a political system people's definition of virtue is in not removable from their self-interest there is not a virtue there's not a conception of virtue that is outside when someone is imagining what the right thing is what the what they're going to do what they're gonna how they're gonna respond to the world around them the good and the bad are built into and wired into self-interest personal sensual self-interest and when i say central i don't just mean erotic ***** or gluttony i mean security safety not having to do unpleasant physical activities like filling uh digging a ditch or standing behind a donkey building a ***** and our preference for some activities and feelings and sensations and emotions over others defines our idea of what the right and wrong in any situation is and so if we're in a social order like capitalism that prioritizes individual gain that does not allow one to have any investment emotionally in the idea not only that other people matter but that if i help them it would do me any ***** good i would only be punished for it i would have to do it out of virtue i would have to do it out of pure non-uh self-interested desire which is we think to be superior somehow to fleshly desire they are in uh completely inseparable and the thing is is you want to say oh yeah but i'm uh i'm a calvinist i'm a self-flagellating calvinist uh i i hate sensuality of all kinds guess what ***** you have just erraticized your super ego you're getting pleasure out of it the same way that a hedonist does out of their gluttony because you've rewired your pleasure center around your uh idea that you can represent goodness outside of yourself and therefore be uh be um put in the sight of god who you imagine as these abstract things un connected to flesh and earth sorry these things are all one even the most virtue loving liberal like robespierre look what happened he allowed himself to be overtaken by uh by cynics uh by by self-dealers by by the lukewarm who should be spewed out of the mouth uh because he couldn't read the ***** room at the end of the day and he couldn't accept for himself that he was a presider over a bourgeois revolution which means at the end of the day he was more committed to a prince a a a society based on exploitation than he was on trying to uh resist it any further he was going to with the limits of his interests and their coordinate and and his interest connection to a group of people that he was not connected to he didn't live among them he didn't live in their conditions he didn't have their social reality he was a ***** country lawyer like all of them were basically and so he did not have the experience to anchor him so he fought for this unmore liberal virtue until reality caught up with him and he was destroyed by the cynics who then presided over a state that had been delegitimized and it could only be reconsequested in blood but it couldn't be the the p the blood of the people anymore it would be the blood of europe in and the form of napoleon's wars that solved the social problem through colonial neocl like uh sort of pre-colonial like i should say like what was allowed in europe

before uh they all decided hey you know what we're going to do all that fighting in the in the in the colonial world we're not we're not going to go after our own territory you can kind of see the the congress of vienna is that is napoleon is an attempt to turn the liberal bourgeois project into a self-sustaining one through conquest but within europe and they all decided okay no that's not gonna work uh we have too much power basically these concentrations the british the russians the prussians the austrians they couldn't be reduced because you couldn't colonize there's no way you can imperially dominate europe for geographic reasons uh and so this this stalemate 0:45:26 uh occurs and so the stalemate is solved with the colonies the stale the stalemate is solved by competing for resources in the third world to sustain the bourgeois state in the face of its mounting contradictions and so napoleon is the first one to say hey we'll do it in-house but then was tamed by the anglo-consent the anglo-sphere which said no no we're not doing it in-house we're doing it colonial style and that's why if you want to point to where capitalism was doomed it was when it was unmoored from the continent it meant that it had because it had gone from a progressive engine of social change that was necessary to a cancer vector when the ***** anglos beat the french because the anglos connected capitalism in europe which had been limited by the social uh friction that was created by its creation that was created by its its 0:46:28 development could be soothed with the blood lubricated with the blood of other people in other places and then and then the people could just be soothed out of their angst and that's what has been happening to the western uh proletariat ever since i know that someone's saying oh that's smallest they're royalism you sound like jesus guy no because those people attach all of it to this wheel of of uh frankly liberal moralism that says these are all this is all a tale of who who is good and bad wrong wrong wrong wrong this is a tale of where people end up the point what communism does is it doesn't make people better what communism would do is it would allow regular people who are not good or bad who would lead them to make 0:47:31 the good choice more than the bad one because it would not just be the right thing to do abstractly it would do their lives better by doing it it would be the logical the rational the self-interested thing to do and that is what that's what the entire marxist teleology points to because what that is is a machinery to make humanity work as a species and not as a collection of individuated consciousness which is not it that is a lower level of development that is a lower level of consciousness it's an alignment of incentives exactly and under capitalism the alignment of incentives is to strip virtue out of the system and so that is why liberals within this thing cling to virtue more and more as the vice infiltrates is untroubled by these questions because 0:48:34 to them gluttony vice has become the virtue because their underlying uh economic press is not that they deserve it because they're good people they deserve it because

CUSHVLOG 178. GRAND THEFT AUTO - VIRTUE CITY

they're strong people they deserve it because they are hierarchically better people stripped of any sort of ritualized uh uh consecrated meritocracy that is all smoke and mirrors all who do a literal social ritual for bored people sitting in offices to do to feel less bad about being in the system they are have turned vice into virtue have turned the enactment of their uh every selfish desire and like basically selfish like what whatever allows it so that i i have to spend the least amount of my time uh uh in like a starbucks drive-thru like absolute selfishness that to them is virtue 0:49:35 they don't have a ***** superego it's and now we have this civil war at the end of a extinguished liberalism an extinguished capitalism that should have been destroyed by now and has not we have this machine that is running itself while we're all freaking out inside of it because we might have passed the point where the machine became self-aware honestly and so we're all freaking out in the hall of this is this uh uh we're all freaking out inside the the 2001 ship hal has decided to shoot us out of the airlock to make things more efficient and to make more profit in the third quarter even though there's nobody there's going to be nobody to ***** and our politics reflect that it's a bunch of people in a ship that's slashed the mass has been last or the the uh in a big spaceship but we still have to sit around in here and like pretend 0:50:39 that our councils of state and our political rituals matter and so we decide all right i am strapped to this wheel am i going to enjoy it and what way am i going to enjoy this am i going to enjoy it by pursuing indulgence give me the app platter give me give me my give me all my treats i want to dry i want to roll coal roll i want to i want to i want to use a air conditioner in every room i want to be as physically comfortable as possible and feel good about it so i will create a political culture around hating people who think i'm bad for doing this because i know i am and i'm trying to deny that and so i had to have to displace my hatred of my of my revolution of myself onto others uh or are you a ***** sicko lib who has decided that um that they are the the only people who deserve power because they're the only good people in the country and that if if bad things happen it'll be because they are willing them to happen to 0:51:40 bad people and that's the fantasy of power that we cling to as as we're just strapped as the bourgeois should say cling to and the rest of us just have to passively watch the psycho drama play out because the working class never came together uh the effort to do so broke on the shoals of capital uh in the late 18 the late 19th century the late 20th century that's the thing we are we are living in uncharted territory i would say people will talk about what's late capitalism what's neoliberalism what are these terms how are they different from the regular capitalism i would just say that they are chronological in the sense that they document capitalism once capital capitalism has ceased to fulfill a progressive social function which for a long time it did from its birth in late middle ages and europe to uh i would say mid uh the first

CUSHVLOG 178. GRAND THEFT AUTO - VIRTUE CITY

the first half of the 20th century maybe later uh it actually did fulfill a social role that 0:52:42 it was progressing it was creating the structures of uprootedness and technological uh transmission of information and resources and labor-saving devices and techno technological sophistication of industry and cool and the ability to coordinate i think once you get to the microchip revolution you're there but the very forces that built this thing also created a technological structure to capitalism that is different from its political structure that is no longer in human hands in a real sense and it is that the media the superstructure basically everything that you would call a super structural process because those super structural processes have been automated they are now the actual skeleton of of coercion because they're sending us around and everything 0:53:44 we're doing all the politics we're creating all all the all of our civic action is stuck in the backdraft of this we are only able to react to uh the simulacrum of politics because all of the real politics is not political it is technological it is central banks it is uh uh fiat currency it's uh the it's the fire sector it's the entire global marketplace all of these are automated transactions that are carried out by the price signal being detected by technology and then distributing orders through currency uh this is the kind of structure that put a new type of human in in a stupid uh lame cringe way of 0:54:46 talk putting it a new type of ***** person and the poc and liberalism is apocalyptic and nihilistic because it seeks to do that absent the necessary transition away from capitalism and into socialism which they resist because their best self-interest is still pleasure they have of course have a ritual of wanting to deny it and some things they do deny themselves but they will you know that you know what they don't deny themselves unalienated labor they're not alien they're not ***** doing that the idea of doing work that could be unpleasant that could be uh exhausting that could be not creatively rewarding that could be physical that could be physically alienating they're not giving that up and since they're not giving that up all of their politics is a ***** performance to obscure that fact and that's all we get to watch because there is no working-class counter hegemonic uh culture to to transmit to people 0:55:47 who see themselves no longer as workers but as consumers because they have been brought to that point by a system that answered every political conflict with more consumption every politic every meaningful political conflict in england in the united states results in uh increased consumption now in europe for most of its history all met all the really big concentrations of political uh conflict erupt in violence in the form of wars and attempts to conquest the united states that only happened once the rest of the time it was pushed off into uh border wars against non-subject people that led to increased consumption decreased liberty in the way that the yeoman imagined themselves to be uh possessing which is that unalienated sense that the the the the sense that i can work myself on the land like this is the peasant mind

CUSHVLOG 178. GRAND THEFT AUTO - VIRTUE CITY

uh the dream absent the the the landlord is to be my own baron because that's the 0:56:48 only model for and so they come to america and they all try to be barrens and every time the con there becomes a thing where they might not be able to be not even be the barons but imagine that they could be the barons somebody else dies somebody else is uh is uh colonized uh another regime falls uh europe blows up oh boy that's sure convenient for us and we become the the the globe the striding colossus and instead of capitalism trying to meet local needs as they emerge the way it did in europe capitalism after the war develops according to the needs of this centralized system that has politically directed all the the machine of capitalism towards one aim 0:57:50 surplus yes the extraction of surplus value but then that surplus value having some of having some percentage of it funneled into the non-productive class to keep them from gaining sufficient revolutionary class consciousness and now and that meant that there was no coherence to the working class of the world as they came into being uh in the the bloody exploitative colonial context of the post-war cold war which meant that their social movements became entwined with nationalism and with these uh like warlord political parties that that meant that they could not pers and especially in a context where the us was a total economic war uh with the communist bloc there was no hope for them to spring up because the central force was dominating and was using its resources to do so and it's technological sophistication and there was insufficient technological ins uh sophistication among the soviets because they were 0:58:52 not supposed to be there they were supposed to be the beneficiaries of this global system they weren't supposed to be the centers of it because they what were they supposed to direct it towards there was no central objective in america there was a central objective cap uh uh the maintenance of these structures and that meant you have a problem give them more to eat give them more to buy give them more dreams that they can become rich first the stock markets in the 20s then the the uh the good union then the uh the more importantly than anything the the second uh the second or the gi bill and the second homestead act basically which is what created the uh the suburban working class homeowner and of course things like that were happening in europe too uh hell it was the american uh the american state that broke up the large uh concentrated feudal landowners in japan after world war ii uh and then gave everybody a little thief and gave them a chance to conduct this sort of phantom 0:59:54 economy of exchange within a system where all the real work was being done outside of it and all of the real uh resource exploitation was being done outside of it all that was really happening at the center is consumption and then the economy that has to exist to facilitate that consumption that has to circulate the capital through the system to keep all those signals up and to keep the machinery moving things through the shoots and so the tragedy of robespierre to get is that he was he embodied his

moment but so much so that his belief in the moment transcended even his ability to perceive his immediate interests or his own his own conviction in his material interests rob robespierre probably didn't really care if he died because he'd been hollowed out by his belief but that's a very rare dude they got thrown up by the time but the machinery the incentive structure that is always there under capitalism 1:0:55 means that you're always sorting towards the most soulless the most cynical towards the top because the people who uh who care about something that might allow them to resist capital's encroachment are being eaten away literally they're being their heads chopped off they're failing to advance what it remains are those who have an idea of virtue that conforms to success under capitalism and we're all operating under those conditions and that's why virtue is is a is a is a furrago and something that can't be uh uh nobody's it's not about people being better than other people it's not and and it's not like i said it's not even to say that that subjects under socialism would socialism would be better people they would be people who would be more likely to do good things because the system rewards it and here's the important second part of that is that having that happen over and over again changes at a 1:1:57 fundamental level what you would have done in a given situation gives you more pleasure to see the affirmation of this system than to get a narrow self-interested point and that is where it becomes self-generating and turning people and and changing the conditions of life it like it's it's the alchemy at the heart of of uh of the socialist vision in my opinion but it is not done because people become better it's not done because people look inside themselves and have a transformation it is not millennial or pentecostal it is that the system incentivizes them to make good decisions good with a capital g not good see we have that nudge system we have guys like cass sunstein saying oh we need to nudge people in the right direction but they're not talking about good with a big g they're talking about small g economic 1:3:0 good which of course is bad is destructive is suicidal and it is the contract it is the cognitive dissonance of trying to figure out the fact that we have literally labeled good for bad socially and reinforced bad behavior exclusively while still believing that we're upholding a system that generates virtue means that we have to continually create greater and greater fantasies in our mind and jump through more and more uh mental hurdles to justify ourselves and i really think that the hysteria of the hysteria of virtue mongering among liberals is this process playing out so yeah you can't you have to change the you're you're operated by an algorithm either way like 1:4:1 it really the singularity does occur like the singularity the technological singularity is real the only question is when the two fuse which one is uh in the driver's seat and which one is in the back which one is which which one provides the which one provides the feedback that creates the conditions that will operate the technology is

it us in the form of human need expressed through the social institutions uh and uh religious and civic concepts that move us through life that nudge us in a direction as we're we follow the orders really of a technological uh technological uh neural uh superstructure that pushes us through a maze what's going to push us through a maze no matter what the dream that there's not going to be a maze is the dream of the yeoman fan it's the yeoman fantasy it's the pre-capitalist the landed dream and that is not it's not compatible with humanity as it exists we have been uprooted come from the earth we could not re-establish ourselves in it without destroying so many of us without killing so many of us that the structures that would be left from that would be ***** monstrous and would only bring about more destruction would only eat up everything until it was gone that is the that's the carcinogenic model for a human civilization and it was strapped to this social order that became uh eventually obsolete and it is now programming our entire uh technological infrastructure and if it continues to we'll get to a point where there's no people left except for some ***** strapped to a ***** uh like duct taped some guy in a in a in a giant tower uh strapped to some uh vr headset with a goddamn flashlight on that he thinks is the in internet and he's there getting like paced uh uh fed through to him through a tube and he thinks that he's living immortally in the machine until some you know they just there's a there's a uh there's an energy pulse in sector four and the ***** uh the lights go out and he just ***** dies and then everything else is a machine that is still grinding off that is still where the where it's still where it still is power through it is still moving things back and forth through still sending drones in the sky still protecting borders that are no longer acknowledged by any living thing in the year 2525 a cheesy song but if they they knew that they knew the score or we stick around and the machines fuses with us in the sense that it does it becomes an extension of us not an individual person but an extension of a will and that's the that's the cap i think that uh kim stanley robert i haven't read his his books about uh or like ian banks too this the society or the culture but of course all that stuff is just purely theoretical we'll never see any of that we'll probably see we'll probably never see any of those outcomes but in some universe they got they happened because in some universe everything happened probably not this one but in one universe out there that happens both of those cases we're going to be somewhere in the spectrum and what that means is we're going to keep collapsing breaking up in this cycle until we either run out and uh and are no longer viable as a species and then something else happens we get cephalopods in another hundred thousand years and maybe they go to the boomers they go to the space they become whatever or it just cycles through low-level non-intelligent species until the sun explodes that doesn't do anything to the human consciousness it doesn't do anything to the to our understanding of the world because because we're here now i know that i don't know i can never really articulate it i just have this weird i really should know more about astrophysics because i've heard about this stuff about like times time going backwards in some direction or time going backwards in some instances and like being detected is going backwards and and and like causality being reversed uh and i think about the idea 1:9:11 that if the universe is like one consciousness slash substance if it is one thing and we are like within it experiencing it subjectively then it it really could be the fact that it is the it is consciousness it is perception of the universe that i'm not going to learn anything someone says learn civic engineering i'm not going to learn anything dude that time has passed i will i mean not anything that exalted like i'm maybe i'm going to learn some stuff that like might help me you know do a ***** garden i'm not going to learn anything it's just you know some vocabulary words is basically what i'm looking for yeah i'm going to build a ***** bridge and i count with my fingers 1:10:12 who the ***** yes but yeah the universe exists because and so maybe that means that no matter how hard it imagines to believe no hard no no matter how hard it seems to believe that this could be the world where we pull it off man maybe the only reason we're here experiencing this is because somewhere it did get pulled off somewhere we can connect to and if that's the case then you are absolutely obligated by every sense of self-interest personal sensual spiritual you are incentivized to do the to do the right thing yeah i'm gonna go off i'm gonna go off i'm gonna go get 1:11:17 one of those home correspondence courses to learn about astrophysics i'm gonna like read some wikipedia pages yes bye wow in 1814 we took a little trip down colonel jackson down the mountain mississippi fired our guns and the british kept to come because it wasn't as many as it was a while ago fired once more and they took to run mexico please mr kennedy oh i don't 0:1:4 wanna please don't send me into outer's place please mr kennedy oh oh please don't please don't send me please mr candy oh oh i don't wanna please don't hey folks uh so there's another dang article about chapel in this ***** new yorker they love doing this it's weird and you know what if you put an article about us that gets people talking on the wheel of samsara that is twitter conversation topics along with men be not having a bed frame and david foster wallace is toxic uh and ***** there's a 0:2:5 bunch i'm not even thinking of uh should there be slurs in dsa that people can argue about all day long and then wait a few months and get another one it's on the wheel of pain for sure it's and it is very funny to me that uh that media the media is so incestuous now it is so cloistered now obviously they're not all rich a lot of them are ***** like broke freelancers but i mean it is so culturally cloistered like there is no real money for uh media anymore like the infrastructure of making content it's much easier to do it through the lens of uh all the media is bad is what i'm saying 0:3:30 that uh it's it's shallow it's shallow because that's all they can talk about all the all the people who are making culture they're not having independent lives right it used to be that the people who can who made uh mainstream like cultural media you know tv movies that kind of stuff the people who wrote about that stuff and wrote about politics all of them lived separate lives and had separate personal sort of uh frameworks of life you know they've they have fixed positions in a world that builds their identity and then they uh they go to the media to express it and then we all 0:4:31 watch the result and it is it is a a personalized uh uh context right like we're getting obviously capitalist propaganda but filtered through the individual perspectives of these individual people but now everybody doesn't have a life that they bring to their art to the media to culture to politics those things have replaced their lives because that's where they feel agency our lives have been drained of agency sociality and agency which means that we we we put our real mana into our online experiences

CUSHVLOG 179. NUDE DORKER

we pump our orgone into the social media cloud and then what comes out is the result of that it's a cloistered little house instead of everybody individually you know coming together it is one hive mind of of anxious of anxiousness of elite that segment 0:5:32 of those who are being advantaged by the current apocalyptic conditions who feel bad about it who have sublimated their desires into and who would need to perform culture of uh of abnegation of that responsibility without challenging the situation that is the uh that is to say it's bourgeois but it is a bourgeois that is now been truly homogenized everybody is living in the same mansion like mentally and therefore their concerns are so measly and miserly a lot of it is because like i said they're not 0:6:35 experiencing things outside of the place they're just content creators in mills they're not living jobs that aren't part of the media that like inform their lives they're not coming to media from other experiences no college and then directly to so uh so they're just these uh bundles of neuroses of liberal neuroses because it is the guilty rich the guilty successful the guilty lucky however you want to put it and that might be the best way to put it the guilty lucky the ones who feel bad about being lucky are the ones most likely to want to do culture work and not work in the actual machinery and those people staff it the meritocracy is powered by people who believe that their 0:7:37 luck can be consecrated by that will mean that they don't have to feel guilty anymore that's what liberal politics is and liberal culture is enacting your difference enacting your non-uh culpability in it and the thing is you are largely powerless in the face of this you are we are all slotted where we are through the happenstance of of birth of the the the guilt that that creates like this is the thing is i say this that we're all guilty we're all accomplices we're part of this machine and people and the response is oh 0:8:39 god no that's the that's the neurosi that's uh gonna ***** people with this neurotic need to uh you know destroy themselves to to negate themselves and i'm saying no uh that's what the liberals do with this reality they take it as a hair shirt and then have to expiate that but it's all indulgence it's all to their own gratification they're still comfortable they still are economically secure and now they don't feel guilty anymore they feel elevated and therefore they feel okay with being where they are it is a ritual consecration of their uh of their innocence and that's what the cultural liberal left is is a ritual denial of the reason this is important is not to reinforce that neuroses but to point out that it's beside the point we're all where we are we still 0:9:41 have to live and if we are living to scourge ourself of our personal guilt we will never be able to directly address the world around us because we will still be trapped on the on the hedonic treadmill you we will still be oriented around self gratification this case abnegation that's liberalism though that is progressivism absent power that is the ant in the attic of the victorian mansion the left the socialist project grounded as it is in daily experience and motivated by a increased sense of connection to others

CUSHVLOG 179. NUDE DORKER

uh solidarity as it were that neuroses is not less prominent and can be assuaged away 0:10:44 now the thing is some people say that means we should all be culturally reactionary no because that's just a nervous breakdown of the other lucky people who want to maintain their power the right wing side of the culture war is just the reverse erotic display it is the indulgence of the senses and of domination insistence that one cannot should not feel guilty about the power they hold the position they found themselves because it was ordained by god or nature but in a condition of terminal decline just not only personally in that good things don't feel as good over time they wear out their pleasure and you end up noticing everything that's uh unpleasant instead to like create a just a zone of distinction the ability to indulge is going away or the 0:11:45 ability to induct to to both have a life of ex of total uh consumption and then also pass it off to your children as your legacy that's going away and that creates its own psychic outcry and that is that is the conservative culture war class politics is orthogonal to this conflict and this is the central absurdity of that new yorker article this is its assumption is that that the podcast creation and consumption can be meaningfully political in the current context and i submit that people like to point about talk about podcasts and the internet and talk about gramsci but gramsci was talking about the uprooting of a peasant society into a work working class conscious of itself to the creation of cultural structures around uh the working class and the 0:12:47 peasants that would generate their own cultural superstructure independent of the capitalist one nurtured from the roots of struggle funded through the people's share of profit that is our uh socialization of institutions like newspapers and political parties and uh and radio stations and culture and culture and they compare that moment to ours and say podcasts and stuff are that they're not we are within the culture capitalist superstructure we're fully generated by it because there is no more grassroots uh uh connection between working-class people as such and any kind of cultural production they have been declassified we have all been declassified and 0:13:49 we re-entered the market as monads as atoms reconstituting ourselves along and so the culture we create even outsider culture coming from social media and not con traditional media forms something that isn't subject to uh the market because it's provided for by uh by uh user uh subscriptions that this is counter cultural work it does inject left concepts into the the slurry of ***** that people encounter every all day and allow them to take political concepts from the left and add them to their consumer identity but they can only do it from there to a position of still that 0:14:51 the the kind of things we're talking about culture we're talking about that would really be challenging would emerge around struggle around specifically labor struggle and we haven't seen that yet doesn't mean it's not going to happen i predict it will but it's not yet present which means talking about what type of political podcast is the morally right one to listen to because it's doing the most and best politics and by listening to it you're going to contribute to the best politics is delusional fundamentally it is trapped in the matrix it is stuck chapo and the whole online left created a new consumer identity for people now that consumer identity could be useful in getting some people invested in the actual struggles happening but it does not generate counterculture power and the proof of that was the 2020 uh primary 0:15:52 when the decided the the center of gravity of the democratic primary electorate was so far removed from the cultural eye of the the mores and concepts of left twitter that got consecrated into things like chapa that they were completely it was completely irrelevant to the question those questions all those hair splitting arguments about is this good for birdie that this guy endorsed him and oh my god what about uh what about come town and how how's that going to make uh bernie look with african americans and oh what about bernie needs cutting edge uh bernie requires cutting edge positions on things like sex work uh and uh reparations uh and prison abolition to keep to excite the the the people who have already embraced these positions no 0:16:54 matter what people's discreet opinions on any of these questions is the matter the thing that mattered is that nobody who was captivated by that language no one who is engaging politics through that lens uh was meaningful to the process because they were already overwhelmed they were already self-segregated because they were cut off from people who were worse off than them more alienated than them but less likely to have ever encountered any of this ***** because this these are different worlds we're creating these little bubble realities within the capitalist uh media sphere they're all just bubbles it's like a buckyball and they do not interact only be to experience them from inside and outside is a fundamental different reality because it is now boutique reality there is no monoculture and that means it comes down to numbers and that 0:17:58 percentage of the people politically agitated young uh downwardly mobile young people broadly was a was uh a fraction of the total number of young people the most have completely detached from politics as a part of their identity and therefore aren't encountering this argument through the lens that you would need to understand it they're only maybe seeing it and not engaging with it and then everybody older and better off is completely outside of it and has created their own reality that is generated by the mainstream media that they still believe in because they have not yet been fully broken away from that even if they're they now have like a partisan view of it where like there's two mainstream medias a good and a bad one and you affirm your goodness by watching the good one and being mad about the bad one but it's still fractured away from like what you saw even 40 years ago but it's not as fractured as what younger people and those people are going to the both po the 0:19:0 voting booth those people are engaging with politics earnestly and there are way way

more of them than there are of you and and there's no conveyor belt to get outside of that bubble because you have to opt into it and who would opt into it if they were not being pulled there by some demographic magnet did you go to college did you expect to have a professional job after you graduated were you forced to take work that you never wanted to uh or are you forced to delay are you prevented from maturing in a real sense are you stulted in your development because you cannot uh actually exercise power in your life basically but because she went to college because 0:20:4 you had bought into a certain package of assumptions about uh what a responsible citizen who deserves a middle-class lifestyle and an alienated labor should be doing and that means having a political identity having political morality and voting or if you don't vote voting as like trying to prove a point which is the same thing as voting you have you have enchanted voting as a meaningful act it is it is identity for me to you that does not happen to most people now and certainly most people who fall outside of the lucky zone for whom the state's compact has always been a fraud for whom there has never been a chance to invest yourself in belief in these things because it was never going to pay off there was never a bargain said that if you do x y and z you will get treats it is you will do x y and z and if you don't bad things will happen to you but if you do bad things will still probably happen to you and so the question of how to consecrate my dedication to the state never occurs 0:21:5 that means you're not encountering this political argument within this bubble and bernie's campaign passed through you like gamma rays by and large if it brought working-class people to bernie it was through the lens of the mainstream media it was what they saw in commercials and and even though it was all biased against him he's such a powerful figure and and he has such a clear message that he actually did win a bunch of so this to me renders the question of the political valence of podcasts or anything on the internet moot this is not where the action is in terms of moving forward a project to save the human race distraction but not in i would argue the 0:22:6 pure negative sense of uh you know there to prevent a revolution to prevent energy from going towards uh uh saving the the people i would say that in the absence of any class formation which is what we have now there is no way that you can argue that uh the media screen that we view the world through is inherently a distraction from people recognizing the their the condition and then acting in a revolutionary fashion and that those sum total of revolutionary desires will be channeled into a socialist current that could challenge capitalism and isn't happening because people are being distracted by media i think that absent class politics uh uh the immediate that in the current moment everybody has increased alienation that they wouldn't be able to distract themselves with by political engagement the the the idea that 0:23:7 they actually do have power uh would not go towards revolutionary anything it would go towards self-destructive nihilism like actual self-annihilation in the form of drugs in the form of suicidal extreme actions of one kind or another in the form of increased hostility to the world around you to the point that you create some sort of confrontation just because why the hell would we assume that this misery that we're now distracting ourselves from if he felt more keenly would have us be able to do anything useful part of the reason that we're all so anxious is we feel how powerless we are which means that if you say oh yeah the very few things you do have a ability to imagine yourself in charge of like what you watch uh who you vote 0:24:9 for what positions you hold what things you'll fight for what demonstrations you'll go for go to uh what organizations you'll form if you're telling me that none of that uh if you're telling me that none of that matters well then what am i supposed to do i'm morally obligated now to essentially uh begin guerrilla warfare with the state to actually do the revolutionary ***** that we're all talking about i have to do that now because the current machinery is out of our hands and we have to reclaim it and only through violence because we are no longer capable of asserting power through organs of law they will simply rewrite the law and it's too late for anything else because of the closing walls of climate catastrophe so we have to try but okay say 0:25:12 you say i'm gonna do that you have to do it even then what do you do even if you say i'm willing to forfeit my life you still want your life to mean something right you don't want your life to be like the the glass of water that's just poured on the floor which was hegel's metaphor for a life that is ended without purpose a life that just ends when somebody isn't intending to do something water even if you're ready to die what are you dying for because what do you do there's nothing to do what do you attack who do you shoot what do you blow up what do you personally do you're not you can't join a group there are no groups to join how would you even go about doing that are you going to go on the internet and start asking around until the fbi entraps you and then you get to ***** die on uh adx florence writing scrawling spirals in your own ***** so only the most extremely agitated will do violence at 0:26:16 first everybody else will just try to distract themselves with something else all right fine if it's not politics give me something else that i can indulge as a consumer i'm still have that freedom and that will keep me from the point of terror that oh my god this is getting worse and there's nothing to be done and that will lead to greater self annihilation you have you're going to have to keep upping the indulgence to make up for the increased sense of fear as as the as the end rushes forward and you feel uh un the existential horror of life under capitalism as the winners which is what we are if we're on here the existential terror of of the winners which we're all trying to 0:27:25 exploit through politics indulged it has to be distracted because it's essentially your body trying to call you your mind trying to call you into accordance with you're

under the reality of the world around you which is oh there's a lot of stuff that i ca i prioritize above being more like active politically because i like it more but i don't recognize that because i get to i have the privilege of that and that is not to condemn anyone morally that is just a fact we are built to be pleasure seeking robots and we're fighting the programming because we're human beings who are embedded in reality and embedded in connection to one another and we feel it every day we just have no way to express it through any sort of uh uh in any way in our lives because we so most 0:28:27 of us are gonna prefer to stay alive and to maintain our position even if it's tenuous even if it looks like it's gonna get worse and even if we can only hope for worse in the future and even if it's gonna be worse for our kids there is still is pleasure in the moment there still is security in the moment there still is most of anything anxiety about losing it in the moment that has to be assuaged and if you can't imagine that politics can change anything then you have to get busy living basically and how do you do that without and so you either destroy yourself or you either implode or explode and either way there might be some people who do it with a political mind but there can be nothing good could aggregate out of it because it is the stochastic 0:29:28 social violence uh created by capitalist alienation as it just hyper so there there's no sense that culture with large is preventing revolution it's only pro it's only soothing us through essentially hospice like it is as marx referred to as religion it is the opium of the people but not in a pejorative sense in a medicinal sense it is allowing us to maintain our sanity as it were to to prevent ourselves from pulling ourselves apart in the face of the the overwhelming uh horror that living and every moment in this hyper-alienated world that we see collapsing around us and feel no power to be able 0:30:29 to stop is engendering so we all still have to live because most of us are going to stop short of self uh purifying violence against the state and and the ones who do are going to do it without coordination and end with the aid of the fbi and so what you'll be left with is a bunch of people even more paralyzed even more commitment to indulging at least imagining themselves as political beings means that when they are confronted with the conditions deter as they deteriorate around them the changing conditions the reduced circumstances that throw into uh uh uh disarray sort of the the hedonic bargain we've struck with the world and make us reassess our priorities say you're or as a tenant in a building and if you have a political consciousness that 0:31:34 is a that is to say politics forms a visceral part of your identity that you've been encountering in the culture but nothing said there is going to provide any basis for change it's just it's a star in the firmament that we're all and so they wrote a whole article just to preserve in their mind the propriety of caring about podcasts when the world burns it boils down to the fact that whoever wrote that piece that i didn't write really wants his podcast preferences to mean something even though we are at the end the last stage of american uh democracy i mean obviously it's gone but it's 0:32:35 been gone for a while but like even our ability to maintain basic faith in its existence half the population already doesn't think the election the last election was real so when the republican wins next time with another minority of the vote it's going to be a universal sensation and that's going to create its own crises that are going to ripple out and it's going to be accelerated by the the collapse of the increased and so in this moment caring about podcasts to the degree that you're writing a goddamn article in the new yorker preferring one to the other because one of them is more polite and it's more convenient it's more aesthetically preferable to you it is more aesthetically pre preferable and that is a contribution to the the the uh the political culture that 0:33:44 is on its face motivation but it's it's the drawing room antics of versailles where a bunch of board aristocrats who'd had their power taken from them by louis xiv had been gelded had to just run around versailles of giving each other uh uh mental uh that's doing mind combat with each other uh for for favor within the court as like a as as a distraction so i i do like to remind myself that there's no use getting mad 0:34:48 at any of this stuff because hey it's all it's all just grist for a mil it's all grist for a dynamic that is built into the system at this point we're all stuck in one way or the other because we can't really opt out our identities are too enshrined and it's we're only going to get knocked out of these things one by one as our relationship to the world changes that there's not going to be any uh mass organization through media that's going to turn the turn the page because everybody is still operating as little hedonic uh tardigrades just thrashing towards but this is the guilty bourgeois 0:35:50 trying to uh trying to have a bridge party uh while while the streets are running red with blood trying trying to tune out the sound and once again not anyone's fault within this because i'm doing it too we're all making compromises at some point for pleasure because we see no point in acting that would be anything other than self-annihilation because there is no hope that's because this is through the veil of of this uh this media sphere where we're just communicating to each other through this screen of alienation that that confounds any attempt to build anything outside of it that has any real size or or uh uh coherence and it's because so much of it is in the language of culture war that is dominated and created by the media itself and that this is just a subset of that's the main problem is that the things that defines 0:36:53 this political current the left political current can only define itself and the terms within it through the lens of the liberal conservative culture war because those are the only issues that get reinforced culturally that aren't just being referenced in the goddamn uh internet tube things like elections and television shows and politicians who say things those people are all outside of the left uh twitter culture creation network they have to feed off of something else because they cannot generate any

actual initiative you're only reacting to the real contest between the political parties so that means that they're all they have to sort along these access related to these culture wars because those are the only reinforcing things and so as much as we have invested time in it and energy and passion and we have made our lives better and this is very crucial made all of us who have i think contributed participated in one way or the other better equipped to handle the moment we're in not by their posts or their consumer choices but by the more pressing issues of how do i get through this and and their engagement with this stuff is going to give them a lens to act that is superior to other things you could be listening to and reinforcing yourself with all day highly preferable to to uh giving your brain over to one of the political parties that is a dracula machine giving yourself up to the the uh puritan nihilism of of violence for its own sake or uh the absolutely pure isle infant if you're marinating in that stuff and the world changes around you your encounter with it is going to be filtered through what you've been marinating in and i'd say the stuff that we've been brewing up is better to marinate your brain in than other stuff that's all i can say though i cannot say that we're we have any definiti we have any real uh pop power in any sense we sure ***** did not prevent liz warren from uh uh endorsing bernie and even if she had outcome like we all have to live and and like i said mature uh the reason everything's everyone is freaking out no matter where they are in this thing from from bezos on down the reason everyone's freaking out in some way or another acting out like i'm not saying everyone at all times i'm saying in the main most people in most positions throughout most cultures are freaking out and it is because wherever we wherever the the totalizing touch of of capitalism has really dissolved social uh identities and replace them with the we are motivated by our desire to consume in the market as an expression not just of pleasure and this is the important part we're all wanting to the idea the the quest for identity the quest there's two kind of axis of of of motivation there's abalone and died icy and you know uh we're getting into the nietzsche stuff but uh like we all want some degree of actual sensual comfort but then we also want to feel like we are in control of our surroundings which is part of pleasure because it reduces our sense of anxiety and fear because that is related and what capitalism has done is that it has removed the capacity for action to such a degree that people have had to subsume all of their sense of uh that sense of control of themselves because an identity stabilizing the world and therefore mastering it can now only be channeled into consumption because all that but one of the things that that struggle that struggle is the real conflict it's class conflict working itself out throughout all social strata that is that friction that's being generated and it has to be resolved in one way or another unless it can be consumed away and like the pressure gets vented off into most people choosing

to indulge over destroy that's not anyone's fault it's not it's about like degrees of sensitivity of like of uh of like emotional and and sensual sensitivity that are built by happenstance they're not created by anyone's will you end up on a bell curve of decency and it's related to and it has nothing to do with anything you did and over time most people in most positions will choose to indulge and we have now created a situation where the entire global uh economy is fixed around persuasion conflict through consumption well that's only useful that's only workable if you have infinite growth we cannot have infinite growth on an infinite planet and we are hitting finally the biological limit but our social order still necessitates venting off uh conflict into consumption because our actual ability to control the world around us is gone in that we have given it over to capitalism we have given up with the way the reins of our sense of uh assertive identity we all have to feel like we have some will to power and it's been totally uh neutered and that's nobody once again no one's fault class conflict emerged the working class lost and we have all liv we were all living in the backwash of that none of us were there when it happened now and so that means though that because we're all just pushed in the consumer direction by crisis and by anxiety because we can't imagine using our political uh our will our will physically like to actually change the world we have to consume because if we were to uh if we were to actually take power or try to take power in our hands it would involve violence it would involve a breaking of the fake piece of capitalism which was uh which was put over the whole globe after world war two and said that said we are subsuming conflict into into a political battle over resources in order to maintain the the conditions of the game and maintain the actual bio but once that battle was won by capital there was no more resistance to it and it overloaded as the ability to continue to offer consumption as an alternative to action goes away people start doing action people start acting and now that violence is is is undermining our friend the non-existent social fabric we already have and is being met in response by the creation of this techno uh industrial military panopticon surveillance health state that we're all going to be living that we're all that exists to keep us from expressing ourselves from expressing a will to any kind of but that alienation has already hitting culture and is only going to hit it worse and i think that the candy is going to stop tasting good enough to keep you hooked to it and uh and things are going to start shifting and that's scary because we can only imagine any change we can't imagine a future with a lower standard of living as superior to this time and the fact is there absolutely absolutely is a world where people are eating the bugs and living in the pods and it is not worse than this in fact it is better and it is salvation it is if the buds and the pods are what a socialized instrument of um government representing a truly democratic will chooses to do to meet the real uh crisis created by capitalist

over consumption and the i won't eat the pods i won't eat the bugs thing is comes from a fact that people have no faith that the anyone giving the bugs and pods could be anything other than an agent of goldman sachs and of course because we can't imagine an alternative but honestly one of the things holding us back is that even people who uh aren't you know culturally neurotic about those issues and about masculinity the way that those people are and that want fully luxury automated space communism or like no actually don't tell people that because it's the future it's going to be like now only there's going to be robot butlers it's going to be like the jetsons but everybody it essentially says the consumer-based identity of a late 20th century american subject we should universalize that through technology but 0:48:15 you cannot do that you would have to squeeze the the poor end of the human race into a pulp to do that and at the end of it you had just created the ***** decadent monstrous elite of zardoz who would destroy themselves from neuroses from within as their pleasure it's just that when we imagine the future we imagine no matter what the regime is no matter what the uh what the powers that it will be good or bad to the degree that allows me to continue being me as i understand myself but 0:49:16 that conception that identity is a that through struggle would be broken down by definition because none of this could be imposed at this point capitalism is run out of runway there is no more deals to be struck there are only conditions to be imposed at the barrel of a gun because there is no the deal the cheap the cheap food the cheap ***** uh consumer goods the the uh the inefficiency allowed into the heart of the system is going to be squeezed out one way or the other is it gonna be squeezed out by people negotiating us away from planetary suicide or by the uh the reptile-brained 0:50:17 monsters who want to who imagine themselves as like eternal god emperors in space as they gallop us to extinguishment following a a fantasy into annihilation the ***** crimson king jibbering and jabbering it's because they view the bugs in the pod uh and and the soylent and they view all that stuff through the lens of their consumer identity well if i ate that stuff i would be uh i would be uh cucked composed most 0:51:22 almost entirely of our of our coping mechanisms to deal with living under capitalism and that would be fundamentally different and differently arranged under socialism or under even the pursuit of socialism the earnest pursuit of socialism we need all of these creature comforts and we grasp them so tightly because we can only imagine losing them we can't imagine gaining anything by because we have no faith in a project and that's because our only encounter with the project is through this gauze of media anxiety which is the winners the people who are going to be the last to do 0:52:25 anything meaningful to people who are most enchanted by this thing because they're able to spend time away from truly physically painful and alienating labor they're able to pursue some sort of vision of a life of the mind either through grad school or

an attempted a media career or even just going on twitter and having a uh having opinions on things and then investing those symbols with real emotional energy and emotion and investing the spectacle of it with real power and other people this is the more this is the most important part other people near us and around us that's why 0:53:26 we they get pulled like magnets to the cities to work in uh to work in the knowledge economy those are the people whose family has been kept in the golden egg of post-war prosperity long enough to allow regular people access to the same heights of education uh and sophistication that had previously been reserved for aristocrats we really we did create a democratized uh america in that we democratize the which means people who are not going to encounter too much trauma in their lives such that they fall out of some sort of arms length of comfort like even if they're working a tough job in the city and they are laid on rent a lot they know they could call their parents if they had to even if their parents aren't rich if you've got a piece of that 0:54:27 middle-class prosperity say a house in the suburbs equity family's been sitting on you're within arm's reach that allows you and the fact that you probably had a dirty decent education and access to the the mores of uh school and the more a's of college more so even than learn anything so that you could be accepted there and learn the rules there and even if you're poor even if you're poor broke and working shitty jobs you still have your hand in the ***** thing you you might be precarious completely but by having your finger in the pie of online uh politics filtered through activism and voting and cultural consumption then you could progress maybe we build uh socialism and they do something about these student loans maybe bernie gets in there and i don't have to pay for ***** medical insurance anymore because i can't 0:55:28 i'm not still on my parents plan like everybody who has a podcast and those people are going to always including myself given any any increase in crisis any any question of what to do in the moment are going to defer to something that concretizes the possibility of politics that says we can vote we can demonstrate we can organize we can do something other than put our bodies in the gears of the machine because it has an effect but we can only believe in that because the system has shown itself to have some rationality to it that could benefit us in our lives because our parents you know someone in your life who went to college and got a good job and lived a middle class life somebody who got to do unalienated work or less alienated work 0:56:29 didn't have to work dangerously or fear lack of uh security because they couldn't find work wasn't as precarious and so you carry that belief with you going through life and it's not going to be disavowed just by events happening because your and so as politics continues to not work the need for politics to be more baroquely intense in its emotional satisfaction becomes greater and that's why we see now all of politics being consumed by culture and vice versa because these are people including myself

at the end of our rope needing something to mean something that allows us to not take the next step and we can only hope that opportunities arise that are outside of 0:57:31 that matrix of hey here's what we care about this week these are the questions that matter right now these are the vectors of meaning in these political contests this is what matters while this ***** is going on other things are happening and if those things interact with the other things that facade will shatter that is that is the hope of it that i think is the marxist uh dream there is a spirituality i think suggested by marxism that is often ignored and i think it boils down to the belief that if you did present a orthogonal coherent counter-cultural challenge to the dead uh political contest of an exhausted bourgeois which is where we are a historically exhausted bourgeois presiding over a collapse that that whether we have the conditions for one 0:58:33 to emerge here and now with the humans we have is a separate question and one that i am fully agnostic on but i have to be because the same way you have to assume free will you have to assume that you live in the world where that's possible because the other choice is nihilism which is what's so funny about people who say that we're nihilistic now after burning lost i fundamentally put it to you that anyone who says that there is meaning value in the question of what podcast people listen to the strategies of consumption around political media is the most black billed person on earth because they have accepted that they are going down with the ship drawing on their spirograph they're going to encounter oblivion having learned nothing they 0:59:37 will have failed to uh undue and the reason and to get back to a point i was trying to get to earlier the reason that this is is because the process of maturing as a person is a process of letting go it is as you come into self-consciousness you create an identity that becomes fixed it is illusory but you require it to move through the world and that process is a creation of assessing threats and hazards to one's existential life but then eventually reading reaching equilibrium with the world around you to the point that you begin to realize as your uh stabilization with your environment comes as 1:0:38 your adulthood flourishes that you are not really alone that your life really isn't the only thing that matters that there are other things beyond you that have meaning and so therefore you don't have to hold on to life as much as you did before now this is in ideal conditions where you haven't been fighting for your life from the time you're a little kid and that's the thing that damages maturity but on the other end to be brought into uh the anxious bosom of consumer based um identity among the bourgeois is also uh to be ***** traumatized away from that recognition because you are kept in a state of childhood that that sense of precarity where the only pleasure can the only meaning the only meaning can be derived from consumption 1:1:39 where there where you cannot confront your powerless you are not you don't get to reach the limit of your personal power that's what happens is that maturity part of

maturity is coming to the limits of your ability to assert individual reality you hit a bump you hit a border and once you hit that border you have to come to terms with it if you want to keep living and that means giving up some that's the other end of it part of it is is coming to see other things as meaningful but it's also to seeing other things as different and as able to impose upon you and to prevent you from just asserting whatever and if you are brought up in the bosom of the civilized post-war america uh post-war america there's nev you never hit a limit donald trump is of course the ur example of this someone who never faced an obstacle in his life 1:2:41 and therefore never gained any limits to himself we are all on some continuum with trump having had that experience and what that means is once you get adulthood you just keep taking because you haven't hit a limit you you you have not hit a limit of your your ability to assert your identity and so even if you might be constrained uh financially in a way that trump isn't you aren't constrained mentally and you can consume like trump but at a lower level which giving you the same satisfaction and you can miss and you can compensate for your felt lack of power in your life with consumer indulgence and you can keep doing that but it requires you to deny the reality of others because it's hurt it's hurtful of others and it's exploitative and you are aware of it and that awareness fuels anxiety and guilt and you have to 1:3:43 deny the meaning of anything outside yourself to keep that feeling good and that is to maintain the sense of childish selfishness throughout of all of life and so we are at the end state of capitalism and everybody is having a temper tantrum because nobody all babies one way or another traumatized into traumatized by uh either uh indulgence or punishment at an early age and people expressing their powerlessness 1:4:44 the way they can and the thing is is that in order to express your powerlessness you really need money so you get the suburbs you get this the cult the middle class consumption uh habits that become fixed but then at the lower end of the spectrum where people are poorer people try to get money and generally in a way that is illegal because it's the only real way to access capital because it's it's because the process in america is one of and has always been one of cutting people off from an from a market and so that expression of powerlessness at least some sort of conflict with the state that the wealthier powerless powerless person doesn't have to resort 1:5:46 to because they have access to more money and politics is now the temper tantrum of all of these babies once again nobody's fault and this is why it's impossible to engage in these questions through the lens of the online argument because it's just a moralizing moralized argument that is totally beside the point because you're trying to just describe something if it's all encompassing and all i'm implicating then there's no point assigning uh blame to anybody there's you just have to move you have to go through it you have to assume it and then you work from that assumption but we continually go into chess beating denunciations and we continue to argue the point because we have to renounce our association with something that we find morally abhorrent the idea that we're immature we only have to ourselves the responsibility to act differently to let go to let go to the ego associations that we have with our spectacle to let go honestly of our expectation of living a long time expectation of living a long time comfortably expectation of the world being but that ex letting those things go contributes to an ability to live more in harmony with the world around you because letting that go means letting go the urge to do all the indulgent nihilistic ***** that makes things worse it's being caught in the in the in the stirrups that gets everybody crazy to consume it's being it's having your leg in the if you have let go of the need for every moment to be pleasurable in a certain way well then ***** you can maybe act politically stripped of the need for your politics to feel good in an immediate way stripped of the ability of the need for it to be uh paid labor basically just the the the strip of the thing that prevents people from working as i have said for free because working for free is the key to building socialism and when i say free i don't just mean paid money with money i mean emotionally the concept of emotional uh labor is real but the attempt to put a ***** price on it is the end state of neoliberal hell it is emotional labor that is the only thing that can defeat capitalism because emotional labor is what gets you the question is what is the desire what is the emotion that's being served that allow you to let go building connections that allow you to offload the neurotic self reification that a critical end state narcissist suffers a child detachment is cope correct life is cope the fact that cope is now the enemy really does prove that we have fully assimilated the ***** the death drive we've eaten you thinking that you're going to do politics thinking you're going to post your way to anything isn't cope thinking that your memes can have that's why of course being based is the most cringe thing possible because it assumes that there is some authentic you whose expression is the uh is the consecrated endpoint of western civilization that's what being based is based is saying yeah you know uh my dumb ass that's why this thing exists that's why the human race pulled itself into uh into existence so that i can do what i want to do whatever i want to do whatever i want to do whatever i want to do okay cool what do you want to do oh wow looks awesome we're doing a great job everybody is operating off that principle you ***** dumbass all the goddamn social justice warriors are doing it too sublimation yeah everybody everybody is is just doing that everybody is doing that and look what it is it sucks it sucks so bad that you're only the only future that you really imagine and i think this is the actual when you say like these people don't believe in the future i think they do we all have to we all do to some extent it's just a question of our emotional uh relationship to that like what we what it means to us when we imagine it uh and i think the best case scenario the optimistic scenario for for the politically engaged at the level of culture uh is some version of seeing their enemy annihilated before them before them and the only question the distinction is what that enemy is and i would say that for the uh for the liberal side of it they want to annihilate themselves because of their loathing of themselves because they are based at the end of the day on the principles of calvinism because they are 1:13:7 trapped in a prison of uh of individualism that does not allow them connection to the outside world god anything they are frozen from connection but they do believe that the other exists and so they are failing it and so liberal project is is continuing capitalism but taking alienating away from the people who make up liberalism piece by piece to destroy whiteness maleness all that stuff patriarchy of course it's all just uh symbolic and ritualized because they they don't really because their politics is completely symbolic and ritualized but bad things are going to happen to people in those categories as capitalism accelerates and their project is paying attention 1:14:9 to those bad things and being any rooting for them and then the conservatives are those who believe that they are that are as isolated as the puritans believe that they are everything but believe that everything else is nothing that they are now of course the gods in rotting human bodies so that creates a shrieking cognitive dissonance that has to be it means blaming all of this on the other and then trying to punish them because of the cultural coherence of conservatism and it's able it's the ability of it to manipulate the constitutional framework that was left behind after 1:15:10 the civil war they're able to actually do it a lot they're actually able to direct the fire hose towards the other but if the water is pooling around their ankles too and their project is watching it happen first and that is the punitive sadism that fuels the actual political uh contest that that the left is only responding to on its terms and cannot provide a a genuine uh uh a genuine resistance to because it's premised on the the the social divisions the consumer-based social divisions of the greater conflict between the parties a synthetic humanity will emerge from struggle like conservatism 1:16:19 emerged after the cold war and it has now taken over the republican party uh is one that in the aftermath of the war saw the necessity like the democrats like the liberals like wall street with confronting communism the soviets were giving terms good terms for capital that would in the long run allow capital to triumph and so the managers of capital made a deal permanent war economy eventually encircle and eventually overcome uh the soviets a good deal but to do that certain things had to happen the u.s had to take over a global capitalist order replacing whatever national bourgeois 1:17:20 function structure we had before the war which has already been changed uh been permanently altered by our intervention world war one as cap as which pulled power towards the united states but it also had to extend power outwards it had to do the

marshall plan it had to prevent macarthur from going to nuclear war with china it had to let china go communists in the first place it had to make a deal that gave up the the iron curtain and later it needed to get rid of racial segregation because we were fighting with for hearts and minds in the developing world that we needed access to the resources of in order to continue to continue our encirclement of the soviets this 1:18:23 all has to happen but to the smallholders at home who don't see that side of it all they see is culture changing all they see is power devolving away from the united states and all they see is their basis for for their security at the top of the pyramid being removed their precarity being felt with robert taft in 52 with goldwater with reagan before he became president if this is the cost of containing communism in the long run to preserve this thing before it is dissolved now the thing that they are thinking is being is this dissolving it is communism right because they believe communism and capitalism are the same thing at the end of the day it's a usually jewish conspiracy that's the end point of all capitalist critique are all right-wing critique of capital it 1:19:25 has to be there has to be conspiracy at the middle uniting capital and therefore that whatever those capitalists are building is going to scot squash them it's going to be some wall street moscow bolshevik capitalism which is now and to stop it they want to go to war war of course would have annihilated the earth except in its very early stages if the united states had continued to fight or had initiated a fight it would have been catastrophically but it also would not have preserved anything that those 1:20:26 uh stupid national capitalists thought they were doing because it would have and now that that republican party which was moving its way through the machinery all the way reagan took power in 80 there was still enough institutional control by uh by wall street by big capital within the party structure within the people who run for office within the american bourgeois generally that the leaders of the party by the time they got to uh uh that the leaders of even the conservative movement once they got to power they largely played ball they did not escalate with the soviet union in fact they uh negotiated arms control and the conservatives felt they got like 1:21:27 reagan had gained a lot of his uh national uh head of steam running into 1980 on a campaign of resisting the panama canal treaty that gave up american sovereignty over the canal in uh in 1999 or whatever he got into power he didn't do anything he revolution he neoliberalized the economy but he was just continuing what carter did and what clinton did later he was doing what was to be done and he was heading off the suicidal imperative of american uh fixed capital but now 40 years later they've worked their way through the system they hope they have the entire thing conditions are drastically worse in all ways precarity is felt everywhere throughout all of the social order including at the top of even the american uh like upper bourgeois they 1:22:28 feel that whatever capitalism is it is now going to destroy them not sucker them anymore a lot of them at the middle of level are probably right their kids are going to get squashed they're going to be proletarianized and so they want to fight before that happens but the war they want to fight is the suicidal war of the bourgeois it is the suicidal annihilation of the bourgeois on its own terms the death drive of the bourgeois and anybody on the left who thinks oh that we're going to follow this current in order to resist capitalism it's only along for the ride because the working class is totally not is totally absent from this picture composed think of the role that the nuclear bomb had in per saving capitalism at every point technology has stood in because at a certain point technology and capitalism became inextricably linked it is now capitalism it is now technology more even than the capitalist relations that it fosters that actually asserts capitalism's cold but of course this technology assumes the open system assumes that within it our answers to all of its crisis that oh we're warming up this we'll just in bring this into the uh equation but it's it's breaking down because it is only serving uh profit it is it is rerouting all it is sending us all towards the platonic crispy chicken sandwich at the expense of every other at the expense of every other structure of human order that allows capitalist uh interaction market interaction to persist and it's us versus the machine now but we have to re define us we have to refine us and we can only find us by letting go a little bit of confronting the real sober reality around us and letting go of our own virtuously that is out of a felt communion that is outside of of the pleasure principle or the pleasure denial principle wow yeah like that's a perfect example we have the solar power now that we could that we could make free energy but that means solar cannot be adopted because that there's no way to price it there's no our hope the hope that exists is is whether any shred of this technological infrastructure can be socialized can we get any of it from within from the center from the edges can we bring together some social coordination of technological ability that can coordinate human action that can create like a harmonic reinforcing tuning a fork effect throughout social organisms the thing is is that i am the least qualified person on earth to talk about that because i don't know anything about ***** technology i'm a hostage to it so once again i reach the edge i gotta bump my nose and say blockchain spyware i don't ***** know somebody does hopefully and maybe they can get their ***** together no i'm not a luddite because this stuff is all has to be socialized it cannot be destroyed then we're back to not if not square one we're back a lot of spaces and with way worse conditions to uh way less um forgiving conditions than humans had before although you know we all came from 5 000 people emerging from the bottleneck maybe the people who come out of that bottleneck no matter what happens will have had the technology and its discontents that we can hope some of that made sense catch everybody on the flippity flop all right uh blackjack bins maybe either

it's five o'clock on saturday it's a pretty big crowd for a saturday and the manager gives me a smile because they know that it's me they've been coming to see now john is a real estate novelist talking to davey who's still in the navy the waitress are practicing politics while the businessmen slowly get stoned they're sharing a drink they call loneliness people say he's bad the songs are undeniably catchy which means 0:1:1 that in a certain base way he's good like he's a good songwriter and that the songs are pleasing in some way to listen to at least a good chunk of them at least to the point that your brain wants to hear them you know but lyrically he is a very insipid uh musician the one thing that's very interesting about his songs is how he is always the protagonist the voice of the song his perspective in the song is always yelling at people uh making demands of people criticizing people uh and is above them like he's 0:2:3 either if he's a character like in piano man he's literally too they put they sit at the bar and put bread in my jar and say man what are you doing here you're literally too good for us and then like so like moving out my god just like a bratty teen talking about how everybody else is working for the don't go changing to try to please me just finger wagging and uh and superiority and then if you and if there's a song that like the character is being criticized it's always from outside like angry young man you may be right i may be crazy but i just may be the lunatic you're looking for or 0:3:6 he's doing some very pretentious attempt to do a novelistic like character study like allentown but you know the songs are fun and honestly the chutzpah to write and then release um we didn't start the fire once again all-encompassing narcissism it's glorious but the interesting thing about joel is that joel hit his limit of talent and then tried to exceed it which is pretty rare because musicians tend to flame out early there's few there are fewer like long-term success stories or who are who get to a 0:4:8 point where the pop format is no longer uh is no longer worth it like they've they've exhausted all the their uh all the possibilities of it from their point of view and so then they have to try something else if they're still you know challenging themselves if they haven't checked out like mick jagger who's happy he tried to do uh classical music he tried to release uh uh like i think it was like actual classical you know no one liked it that's like oh yeah there's that's actually the limit of your ability billy and i honestly think that might be why he keeps trying to kill himself with alcohol because he has not given up his fantasy of himself as a great artist that like justifies his torpor and said look i'm a great artist look look at all the stuff i've done but then you know he he ran out of stuff to do in pop and he tried to do some stuff in a more challenging more complex larger format art form and he was mediocre and so what's he going to do stop being a celebrity stop being resistant no just going to dial it in at uh at madison square garden and should keep wrapping your bentley around trees another guy who did that uh by going to chris gaines thing uh and and honestly garth brooks's uh status is like the most well adjusted uh musical genius of american history his predict is proven by the fact that he got to the edge of his talent his ambition met his ability and he just said oh okay and then he retired when when went to oklahoma and hung out with then he did like a comeback a few years later a few years ago because you know he missed the big crowds but like he didn't feel like he had to be an artist anymore unlike billy joel who's cannot get over it so he keeps divorcing younger and younger women and drinking more and more because if you're not going to come to terms with who you are after a certain point of hedonic pursuit it's going to destroy you you're either going to turn into a piece of jerky uh like the siberic rolling stones or you're going to just be a big weepy drunk like uh billy joel uh or you're gonna keep pushing yourself uh until if you're good enough you know you don't you you you find yourself uh finding satisfaction in the pursuit of a deeper art like the reason kirk gave cobain killed himself is because he knew he didn't have it in him i just like emotionally to carry on the hard work of being an artist to what would be necessary to overcome the torpor of being a ***** rock star and so what are they going to do i mean the answer is for these people who are that pot successful and huge uh just do something else or don't do anything but you have to have a certain degree of ability to just be with yourself to uh to ex to handle that and you know people like we explode out like our consciousness explodes out like big bang style and especially if you know as we find ourselves as like a total alienation at the end of history uh and our and what we're doing is we're fleeing from quiet we're feeling from emptiness because emptiness is the true the one true reality is the is the fundamental emptiness of the universe which when confron if you confront that fact and you like really live with it it makes uh living much easier it makes you need a lot less but if you're escaping if you're fleeing from that emptiness if you're always trying to not be in a room alone with your thoughts if you're always trying to have a earthly um pursuit to invest emotionally in a career a skill a hobby an ability that you can pursue artistic athletic business you could pursue and then on top of that personal pleasures you can pursue you know consumer uh the the things you can only get from from buying a giant house and having a ***** yacht and having a helicopter that goes on top of the yacht and if you're a musician and you are living by that relationship at some point you have to mature you have to let go enough to not need but you're not getting that reinforced anywhere if you're a success you just keep pushing and nothing and it all gives there's no resistance and so you press until you find resistance either by indulging yourself to the point of physical annihilation or pressing yourself uh demanding something of yourself and of course none of this is to 0:10:25 blame anybody like if somebody has adhd and they say excuse me i can't sit with my thoughts it's literally impossible that's because that's how we have been acculturated we live in a world where where we have been so stripped from our bodies we have been so disembodied by engagement with a pseudo-reality of mediated uh identity that we cannot be in our bodies there's there's a constant panic because we live in a material world where we are finite beings but our brains are separate and eternal how are you supposed to live trying to reconcile that every moment of your life your brain is the world the universe all of time and space you are god because remember it is a soul consciousness that has no connection to any other consciousness but our bodies are the same material as everything else the same flesh as everything else 0:11:27 governed by the same laws of thermodynamics as everything else in the universe and it is trending to death it is trending to decay physical pleasure is trending towards uh redundancy and so we indulge the fantasy of immortality which requires distracting ourselves from our actual bodies our actual lives our meshed physicality that means we have to press the ***** pedal to the metal on making our encounters with our body purely pleasurable like when our body is going to be noticed it's going to be new notice doing something fun in tasting something feeling a a way uh having a 0:12:28 urge satisfied feeling a sensory experience hedonic pleasure otherwise we don't want to hear from it and that means like you either take command of the world's resources and try to destroy it to the extent that you can in the world of business in in the in the struggle for control of the machinery or if you're born lucky but you don't have the stomach for that you pursue the arts i will be meshed in the system i will benefit from it but i will not directly contribute to to the the carnage of it and the thing is that's reasonable why would anybody give up and then they compensate for the fact that they're doing all this indulgence by the fact that but i am also doing this artistic project i'm i'm making people happy i am you know there is a social affirmation there 0:13:32 is a combination of that artistic integrity and then the hedonic poll and there's this push and pull between them and the people who make it to old age and in rock and roll for example have been just where their humanity has been just totally vestigial but that means that they you know have to keep have to keep pursuing this hit this lifestyle that killed everybody else in so yeah being a pleasure lizard is the best you can hope for because if you're here for a finite amount of time life is only going to get worse over time because you're losing time on earth and your brain can't handle it 0:14:33 and you're being panicked about that emptiness that you cannot and the pleasures that you seek only become commonplace and become banal so that you're not even getting the pleasure out of it the only pleasure you're getting is the pursuit of of a fantasy pleasure and the sadistic thrill of seeing others that's the best case scenario turning into donald trump that's the best case scenario you're miserable but you're comfortable and miserable physically comfortable and miserable even if it doesn't give you any joy pleasure uh any comfort at all even that you're just screaming rat in a cage brain uh none of this has been to your benefit none of it has actually contributed to to your happiness this is why the libertarian idea of the self of people 0:15:34 motivated by self-interest creating a good society or just society is insane because that self-interest is not our self-interest it is our self-destruction and if we and our society is destroying itself precisely because everyone is pursuing that the market only responds to people's death drive which is to say give me momentary pleasure in the here and now for uh oppression admiseration uh uh carbon emission misery dealt somewhere else to someone else and that the that that is the we imagine capitalism as transactions right freely arrived at transactions they're not freely arrived at and 0:16:35 the thing that makes them not freely arrived at the coercion is the violence done to the biome and to people that is not calculated into the cost of the transaction and that is a negative feedback loop that undermines our ability to uh sustain ourselves meanwhile denying like your body denying your connection to anything outside of yourself pursuing just hedonic pleasure rich people are not happy this is the important thing if anyone is watching the white lotus on hbo it's very good this is what it's about they are comfortable they have these things that we connect to some degree 0:17:36 with a basic you know quality of life maslow stuff like food shelter security they have those things but their subjective subjective experience of it is of discomfort anxiety misery which they could have had if they were poor and we wouldn't have to have a world that is choking on their ***** consumption the excess of their of their pursuit of something that they can't have and all and the algorithm of capital is is psychologically wrapped around that impulse and that means create a machinery of of of surplus value creation that can be monopolized by people who need greater and greater con indulgence to soothe their alienation from their bodies and from the world around them so to get to black jacobins this perfectly describes the situation 0:18:38 and it describes slave uh slave social more of these people were able to just sit around and enjoy luxuries with people literally being whipped within earshot the more luxuries they needed the difference between capitalism the difference between if uh slavery and the more efficient labor uh regime the capitalism developed and refined out of contact with slavery uh is that profits under northern capitalism as as as it was devised in the cities of england and then in new england uh reinvests profit certain percentages kept for for for the capitalists but beyond a certain amount 0:19:40 profit is reinvested in the company that is where the growth comes from that's the engine of the whole thing under the slave regime and this is why slavery is a less efficient system and why once it comes into conflict political conflict with uh labor capitalism it's gonna lose as the north law as the south lost it's because that profit gets privately consumed nobody you don't need to reinvest beyond a certain amount there's only so much land you can realistically hold there are only so many slaves you realistically need to hold it and if it's cotton you have very little capital investment rice the same thing the diff sugar is different and sugar helped create sort of a uh the closest thing that the slave agri economy had to a proletariat because it was relatively capitially in capital intensive you had like little miniature manufactures on plantations in order to take the sugar cane and turn it into the paste that could 0:20:41 be stably shipped you had to do that on site it couldn't just be shipped to another processing place the way that but even then there's a limit to how much you have to invest once you've recap once you've made that capital you just have to maintain it because there's only so much sugar there's only so many place things you need what you do with the rest of it is you consume it you sit in the you you either uh go to paris so you can have more fun in the in the temperate regions or use if you don't have that much enough money to do that yet you spend it all sitting sweating in your ***** uh uh living room trying to find more and better wines to drink more more silks to wear all the while terrified of being ***** brought to justice by the people that you're exploiting to make this happen and as our global ruling class begins to 0:21:44 have the same relationship to us emotionally that those french planters did to their slaves you're going to see and you are seeing this insane explosion of consumption billionaires now aren't at the top unless they can go to space they have to bid up experiences among the rich because thanks to our global village that we live in they are as aware intellectually of the exploitation that goes into their consumption as a haitian slave owner was to his fortune you had ***** bezos say in this stupid cowboy hat thank you to all the amazon customers and employees who paid for this those stakes are only made possible by the amount of money involved by the amount of misery caused by that money and the amount of misery that these rich freaks 0:22:45 feel themselves and can only and that's why we're at the end of this thing we're now because this is not anyone's individual choice because these decisions are made below the level of choice by the by the profit extraction mechanism that is carries out through the technological structure and you know when i say technological i just don't mean computers and the internet and ***** uh container ships and factories i mean governments languages the entire human apparatus of extension of human will wrapped around one human will the abstract human desire abstract human hedonic desire all of technology wrapped around that spoke and it's pulling the skin off of the earth and so these rich people at the top who are basically along for the ride 0:23:46 and have to spend all this money and and and create all these fantasies of eternal power to make up for the fact that they all know at a certain level that they're not actually in charge they have been disabused the 20th century was one big psychic break as every class everywhere came in contact with capitalism in its final form and reckoned with what it would mean for their identities and they fought back one way or another and then they were accommodated into the system one way or another and now we have a ruling class that used to have a a basis of power in land that was only constrained by other humans and god which just meant their conscience that was power that was power through human history but in the european struggle for dominance these earthly powers unearthed the demon they dug too greedily and too 0:24:47 deep and brought forward this machine that they wielded in battle with the other european powers to preserve their position but then over time saw their position overturned saw their power evacuated democratized into a bourgeois state structure that would carry out the will of no individual person but also not the people as early liberals thought they were going to do who didn't understand what technology would do to it marx understood what technology was going to it was going to not be on behalf of the people human beings it was going to be on and that has been what has driven politically the structures of liberal uh uh and there was strike against 0:25:48 that there was a fight against that everybody fought against that the old ruling elite fought against it from the ***** english civil war to the french revolution they fought against it in 1848 they the workers or or the former peasants being pulled into industrial relationships pulled into a proletarian either pulled from an artisan class or two uh to a from the artisan class or from the peasant class turned into a new urban proletariat who could only sell their they fought back too from the peasants wars to uh their sides within all these conflicts because you know they they often supported 0:26:49 the immersion bourgeois because they were the most coordinated and organized and motivated they were the progressive historical force they took power they seized controlled the state mechanisms on behalf of a notion of democracy that had that was theoretically in in their minds at that point encompassing of some group that was beyond themselves some group that was composed socially but it was never the case it was always the individual id of the unorganized lump and middle class operating as independent beings without a coordination the way that the working class was able to create coordinated mechanisms of asserting power through labor unions and political parties and through the soviet union the china the and all the uh post-colonial uh nationalist and communist movements wars emerged millions died 0:27:51 in the fight between these three forces and what emerged was this new social order governed by no human consciousness no human will and you can call it technology or you can call it capitalism it's the same thing in the end because if it's just a machine it is a machine that is programmed by people and those people operate through structures of political and economic and legal power that are created by this machine or by this social uh formation but they're essentially along for the ride they're there to move money around they're not there to actually enact a will the closest thing we have to a will is the is the uh outcome of the democratic process 0:28:53 in the form of the collective desires of the middle class which in america thanks to our free real estate and the fact that we could create a subject cast that was outside of the realm of pure of full uh that middle class included a lot of the workers included a lot of people who were workers and had a relationship to the means of production that under marxist orthodoxy should have pulled them towards class consciousness but the creation of that the fortis compromise shattered the the uh conveyor belt that led working experience to working-class consciousness because instead of living in tenements in the packed streets of europe the way that marx imagined uh working-class people and that american working class had been like in 0:29:54 the early 20th century they were pulled out of those relationships and put into the gentry life of a low landowner they were given the yeoman dream minus subsistence which is the important part they have lost the subsistence that yeoman had that gave them freedom and independence from having to sell their labor now they have to sell their labor but in exchange they get land and they get an investment instrument that gives them the same material interests in the uh up in the continued health of the capitalist economy that and so when the crisis of the 70s happens by this point the working class can no longer express itself as the working class in the political realm all you have instead are a bunch of working-class people voting subjectively as their along allegiances to a fake pseudo class of middle of of yo of homeowners that 0:30:55 had the trappings of class because hey honey i am a little bit of a capitalist i have a capital asset if i have a home so like i'm not the same i'm a still worker but now i also am a little bit of a capitalist so that means that that's part of my understanding of myself and my interests that i put alongside my working class identity but as long as there is a political structure that allows me to express my class interests my working-class interests i will vote for that but aft but by the 60s the two parties had headed off the threat of populist revolt from below broken the back of the working-class political uh power through taft-hartley uh and so and and suburbanization the carrot and stick of the red scare and taft hartley plus high wages and so that because the 0:32:0 democratic party essentially strangles its own connection to the work or strangles the working class within its coalition replaces it with this new consumer identity where the working-class people are now they are still part of the coalition of democratic voters but where they were a coherent working-class project within the democratic party they are now just more voters along with the urban professionals who vote for democrat democrats uh and the southern rural types who vote for democrats at that point they're all just part of a coalition of individual voters who perceive themselves as capitalists because that's what's on the agenda now taxes and social policy they've given up hope of control of actual production which is the end goal of union organizing and the working-class movement the teleology and all movements 0:33:3 needed teleology uh of uh the teleology of the socialist movement the working class movement the labor movement is control of production not extracting higher wages not getting a house in the suburbs control of production but taft-hartley the red scare had broken the back of the labor movement made it so that it couldn't grow as large grow at the same speed and wouldn't have the same active uh ideologically committed leadership so since the democratic party is a bourgeois party controlled by the bourgeois always was even during the great the new deal it reassert that that the uh the bourgeois interests reassert themselves completely they no longer have to contend with the working class within the democratic party and so politics becomes a question of responding to social ferment that is created by uh structures that have 0:34:5 been deemed beyond politics and so when the crisis of the 70s comes to answers that the working class should have been demanding like okay this is the point when capitalism has reached its full it has exhausted its social role its progressive historical role but where is the working class it's gone people in the middle class people in the uh who are responding to politics through a cultural screen and caring about things along the lines of their cultural uh conception because now they are middle class which means they are consumers because you're either the the the the dividing of the old socialist division of the world between makers and takers is correct there's 0:35:7 those at the top who eat on from the sweat of the brow of those on the bottom that's always been and always is the case the difference is that this subjective experience of being in that relationship differs depending on what your job is there are a lot of people who technically are exploited in that their surplus value is taken by their employer but who don't really feel that way because the job they do is pleasant the job they do gives them meaning the job they do provides a sense it is not alienated from them the time they spend doing it isn't fully alienated the way the time that a 19th century laborers time at the line was fully alienated no brain no choices to make no will to assert just carrying out a mechanistic uh act mind numbing time on life time on earth that you'll never being at the center of the ***** post-war empire this thing made of technology that requires all these super structures within it to function this this architecture this cultural civic architecture gives a lot of jobs that 0:36:8 can provide meaning because they don't involve a lot of physical exertion unless it's met with uh independent ability to decide what to do with their time on the job so you need some combination of that and that is affordable under the fortis compromise because all the real exploitation is being done at under the auspices of local local bourgeois powers that are essentially and even those factory jobs that the the guys that the the relatively alienating factory jobs uh that the early these new home owning working-class people had they were it was it was uh you know the alienation 0:37:9 of it was undermined by the fact that they did have access to a home they did have access to conveniences of course it topped out and there was a lot of alienation very quickly building up because hey everybody everybody else gets to hang around in cities drinking coffee and writing reports and and they get to have the same lifestyle as i do but i still got a whole i got to still ***** press this button and the levittown or uh the lordstown strike uh which was part of the big labor crack up of the 70s uh was a strike that expressed that reality uh young guys who were brought to this new state-of-the-art facility and given good paying benefits and houses struck because the work sucked if you create a society around people sitting around having leisure people whose work is not is alienating are uh their enjoyment of that life is made less by seeing other people have better and so they get resentful everybody gets 0:38:11 resentful that's the middle class existence is precarity being stuck between isolated with no class no solidarity and that is why the middle class in control of politics leads to annihilation because it is miser it's this social misery that doesn't have the ease of that wields the machinery towards annihilative ends because it's just a machine of resentment from everybody feeling and the thing is is that on the other side of that divide the people who do get to sit around on their ass they are feeling misery because they're seeing all the people who don't get to do what they're doing and they're feeling guilty about it and they feel responsible for it and then they have to build up castles in their minds to understand uh why it's okay that they're in this and that involves them being better than other people it involves them being better 0:39:13 than the retrograde better than the the spoiled factory so is either guilt or resentment in the middle class when i say middle class i mean not an actual class homeowners precarious homeowners let's put it that way precarious homeowners not in the sense that they are either at risk of losing their home or they know they have uh kids who aren't going to be able to have homes and who's and and that their home that they if they sell it is not going to provide for their kids or the thing that's wrong with the pmc discourse is because it's supposed to describe just these people and i think that 0:40:14 the the the professionalism of it is beside the point what matters is what is motivating their politics and the answer is it is it is a expression of their alienation from within a system where they perceive themselves as receiving the benefits of capitalism but are still miserable and that means the pmc it is people in the middle section who do not have the comforts of solidarity uh or and therefore power their politics through a lens of resentment like everyone talks about how you know people pointed out like the republicans have more fun because they get to transcend norms and they get to trigger the libs but the problem with that is that it means that they have to like get genuinely upset when colin kaepernick kneels that's not fun like these guys talk about how like they hate football now it's like of course none of them they all said we're going to boycott it they still watch football but they like it less they have less fun watching it but they have to to sustain their identity as as republicans as as good people in their understanding of it means pissing off liberals and that means being pissed off at what liberals do it's resentment politics across the board it doesn't matter if you're in the cities uh working as a graphic designer or you're a ***** uh uh adjunct professor or you're a teacher or you're a nurse none of these like oh are you a working class or none of this none of these fine grade cheese whether you're some sort of urban whitish worker or you are a landlord in in lubbock if you're a ***** uh beautiful boater somewhere in the hinterland your politics are not motivated by attachment to material interest they are motivated at base and at at the level below consciousness of a desire politics cannot change material conditions you believe that if you're a ***** homeowner you have benefited enough from the system over the your life that you are committed to it ideologically as in so you're not looking to rock the boat you're not looking to change capitalism you're looking to make the system more amenable to you and that means sure in your in your conscious mind i'm gonna if you're if you're a pmc liberal we want to raise up the poor benighted minorities but in practice you know they're not going to rise up because of the racist whites so what you can do what you can root for above anything is the racist whites to suffer same thing goes for the boat owners petty bourgeois whatever streamers anybody who is at the capitol whatever they are motivated by a desire yes to defend america and to be able to consume all they want and drink all the beer they want and eat all the the burgers they want and not wear masks and trigger the libs but once again their ability to make that decision is going to be uh squeezed by forces that aren't political what they can do is they can root for the suffering of the libs it's a pure resentment politics that is driving the system towards uh collapse because you are talking about a situation where there is a fundamental uh dissolution of the social uh basis of of the fiction of the united states of america the only question is it will there be enough uh uh material uh intervention in people's treats to break their balance because right now they're happy to just post they're happy to vote for politicians and observe this thing through the lens of of uh of uh the pure removed spectacle but if actual privation enters the period if they don't don't they go from actually being afraid of losing uh like basic stuff not freedoms abstractly but actual pleasures and and then actually losing them they're gonna need to enact their politics more and more but again that requires a larger economic crisis that i don't i'm not smart enough to be able to predict but like you that's how it would happen 0:45:26 if america cracked up it wouldn't be a civil war i don't think it wouldn't be divided along those kind of lines because it really is an urban suburban rural conflict it is fixed it is the small it is the centers of in the the interior of the united states versus the concentrations of finance capital in the cities and the cultures that those two and like this creates competing realities people seem to be very i'm kind of baffled by how much inc has been spilled talking about um the ***** vaccine and why people 0:46:28 won't take it and what to do about that and how to get them to take it first of all a lot of people aren't taking the vaccine because they don't trust they they have no trust in the system and it's a non-ideological non-branded distrust of the system uh and that is absolutely understandable because if you have not gotten a good deal out of this thing like you didn't get a ***** house in the suburbs out of this thing then maybe you don't want to hear what they have to say and like people who just don't believe it's free or believe that's not safe but then you've got people who are as part of their identity as part of their brand have decided that they cannot uh they cannot be themselves if they get their rejection of of the system is very selective like the basic premise of capitalism the basic premise of the united states and its structures the constitution they absolutely absorb that's what they contribute to their their uh happiness that's such that they have it and their comfort and security but it is the 0:47:31 use of those structures by others that renders them corrupt what that means is that as things get worse as their property increases as their sense of control over their life drains as their even ability to get all their treats under kova gets compromised uh their distrust and hatred and alienation from this system uh intensifies and by now to them what that miss system means is the cultural expression of the system because what else could it be that's all we have what do we see through the looking glass and what the alienated conservative sees what the alienated landed homeowner and people in those in the cultural jetty created by those structures uh what they 0:48:33 see rather through culture is this culturally alienating display of values that have nothing really to do with economics no matter how much they talk about communism goes down to identity because this is all about individuals trying to see themselves affirmed through the they see someone of a different race and they see that affirmed as above them in the zero-sum game winner take all hellscape of america they say no thank you what that means is is that whatever they get from that apparatus things like and and when i uh things like analysis of a vaccine awareness of or or uh the the media the government specifically agencies like the cdc bureaucracies when 0:49:34 they come together and say something is happening and assign values to things they reflexively reverse them they reflexively reverse it so when science and the media and facts come together to say there's a virus that's very dangerous they hear either there isn't a virus at all or if they can't accept if they can't uh believe that anymore the virus is not dangerous because it's being said by their enemies so it cannot be true the virus therefore cannot be dangerous and then when they say hey here's a vaccine for that uh virus by the way it's safe there's nothing it's nothing more complex than that what is said by all the things the reason it's baffling to people is because they see these institutions the cdc the media government facts science they 0:50:37 see these things as the expression of an independent structure that is not political that has an objective ability to differentiate itself from interests and then tell people the truth which is the liberal fantasy and this is the end fantasy of liberals the liberals are committed to the illusion that there is such a thing as a non-political uh structure the conservatives have lost that illusion they don't believe that if they ever did liberals believe that these institutions are transcended of politics in a way so they are baffled this is a why do you think that a um a dangerous virus isn't is safe and why do you think that a safe vaccine is dangerous and the answer is because they think 0:51:39 that those institutions are on your side and that you are in charge of them and these largely write about that when it comes to the aesthetic showdown over culture the people who make up these institutions are disproportionately liberals so you there's no strategy you can coordinate from within these institutions that will reach them because they are reversing the meaning and you wonder why are the liberals still believing in institutions why are they because of course there is a the critique of of 0:52:41 that argument is not reactionary it's a heart of the socialist critique of capitalism that there is no such thing as a non-ideological non-uh partisan institution within a within a government government is the standing committee of the bourgeois that carries out the bourgeois will through its organs so that means all of its structures are organized around that and so socialists have disabused themselves of these fantasies at least a lot of them some of them still hold on conservatives reactionaries have fully given up the idea that there's a non-political institution why are liberals holding on well amongst politicians amongst in within the political class they're holding on because 0:53:42 the fiction of independence of institutions is central to the democrats argument for themselves we can work through these institutions to achieve these ends because our will can be shift our will could be expressed your will can be expressed through us and then through these institutions but of course it can't be their will is disconnected from the machine the machine operates by the will of capital because now there is no working class to pressure from below there's just a bunch of working-class people who think of themselves as either homeowners or republicans or democrats but they don't know that they think their class interests a lot of them think their class interests are still being represented but they're not they can't know that though so they have to be validated in the idea they have to continue to validate the idea that there is an independent structure because if there's not then the democratic party shouldn't exist the democratic party is a rent seeker in the political structure because it literally says i will help you fill out these forms if people knew that it doesn't matter what the forums say that there's no reason to have the ***** democrats there to fill out the goddamn forms but for the liberal voter uh in large the generalized liberal voter someone who thinks of themselves as with it with the people someone who's someone who thinks of themselves as vaguely progressive in some sense why do they believe in these the independence of these institutions it's because they can afford to because they amongst the people who actually make up the party and make up its media representation and make up its uh party apparatus that actually coordinates how it's gonna run not according elections are beside the point the parties decide who is going to fill they have to believe that these because it's they're participating in them that makes it work that makes them worthy of being rich makes them worthy of now there are plenty of working-class people specifically working-class people of color who vote for democrats genuinely out of a desire to see their interest fulfilled their material interests fulfilled but that's because the republican party by definition cannot allow them to see their benefit their their because they because a lot because black people have the closest thing to class consciousness we have in this country because of the of their relationship to the fact that they never got the deal they never got the post-war deal they never got bought into the system uh by and large of course except i'm talking about like the center of gravity that's the that's that's the real generator of racial disparity into the 21st century is that they were not brought into full but they keep voting democrat because they think there's some reason there's some institutional validity within these structures and that and that by voting for them i i but the people who are better off who actually staff the the party provide the majority of the money for the party write about it and our media members are well off are comfortable and therefore are able to devote a lot of their time and energy to soothing their neurotic guilt of their wealth because remember the distinction between democrats and republicans liberals and conservatives is geographical it is the republican worldview has been generated by landed power in this country either in the form of uh plantation agriculture or the financialized uh fully capitalized capital portfolios of the people who followed in their footsteps the beautiful voters the franchisors the was based on intimate association with the rituals of capitalist exploitation uh northern finance capital was conceived and uh executed by people sitting far removed from capitalism carrying out ritualized exchanges in abstract symbols that kept the reality of capitalism at bay and that's the very thing that allowed them to treat george fitzhugh was a uh southern theorist of slave power a slavery apologist from before the civil war was the only really intellectually coherent uh and and thoughtful person to ever argue in favor of slavery uh because he did not distinguish in his prescriptions between races he said slavery is not only good in the south it's not only good in relations between africans and the europeans it is good in all relations between men because the abstraction of capitalism allows capitalists to let the market do the violence to their workers and then not have to not feel guilty about it and therefore not have to build politics around it wasn't just that that uh owners had a stake a literal investment in the health of their slaves it was and that would in his mind create obligation bonds of obligation and what capitalism would do does is it you are no longer obligated because it isn't you doing anything nobody is doing anything supply and demand are doing the work so urban laborers can live in monstrous conditions of filth all through the 20th to the 19th century you saw a stunning uh trajectory as as america's wealth exploded after the civil war americans average americans uh life expectancy uh average size general health number of teeth in their how could that happen in a nation of free people because it wasn't the act of a tyrant it wasn't the act of overlord and we're living at the end of that now where our politics is completely dominated completely dominated by this because these are the actors the politicians are the actors the companies are the actors everyone else just gets to react which means we don't get to create meaningful counter culture we can't do detour mod we can't do ***** we can spit the battle between the parties is sterile that is why anybody who says you need to commit to one party or the other is delusional or a ***** fraud because there is a genuine belief that because the democrats are are are squatting on this tradition of being the party of the people that they no longer hold therefore we can try to make the republican party the party of the people because one of them has to be the party of the people like no there hasn't been a party of the people for you could argue 50 ***** years and there barely was one when so the idea that one has to be part of the people that was a historical anomaly created by the great depression we now live in the in the aftermath of that where the working class has to somebody says if the dems lose that's bad yeah it is but what does that have to do with any of us we cannot coordinate our votes enough to matter we are all ***** remainders in these goddamn equations when i say we might i everybody reading our ***** everybody listening to the ***** podcast we are so me caring about who gets in doesn't matter obviously there are butterfly effects that affect every decision but at the level of who's president i think 2020 should have proven that this whole thing is beside the point it is a busy box for the anxious downwardly mobile children of this home owning class who aren't going to get the home yeah i do keep saying the same thing over and over again i've come to terms with that what i appreciate is that i i feel like i am refining my conception of it so that i can now of course that doesn't mean everybody my god now the whole point is that we're dealing with populations demographic tranches and within a demographic trench it's a big some people feel some part of it some people feel other part of it but they overlap to create is culturally enacted to them the republican party the project of like national ravanchism that they represent the middle class revolt the petty bourgeois revolt that they represent is culturally anathema and it's not going to not be some people are going to trickle over but it's just it can't because like these are deeper like i said these are deeper than your knowledge these are deeper than your conscious thought of who you are and what you care about so by and large they are anathema to the republicans so it's not like they can go over there like everybody moving to new hampshire and becoming a libertarian that's the principle is the same either way it can't work because the thing that defines these demographic tranches is that they are just a exposed facto description of a group of people there is no coordination between them they participate in culture together but they do not meaningfully coordinate action they just expressed the same preferences through voting because of their general demographic trend trunks yeah you go you won't get that trunks oh you won't get one damn tron ***** you getting one of them tranches oh yeah you gonna have a good time i'll guarantee so they can't do anything with do what they do which is respond to things vote don't vote but the the decisions are being made by voters groups of voters demographic groups of voters whose commitments are completely different who's whose understanding of all the words that we use to describe politics are different it means that they see politics differently they respond to events differently uh hollowed oh what do you call it middle class politics is a holodeck bunch of people worrying about losing their homes worrying about their kid not leaving the house but fully committed to capitalism fully aware that the system as it exists benefits them and see change to it as a threat to and they're the ones having this argument between the democrats and republicans that's playing out in policy and it's playing out in culture we can only respond to it until we build something orthogonal to it and that is the hope that is the hope that lies at the end everyone has to take the black pill it's like getting chickenpox you have to accept that there is no hope because it shouldn't be about your long-term interest in the future that you have to sever that connection you have to make your so you gotta take the you take the black pill you still gotta get up in the morning and everybody just decided to be a doomer that's ***** miserable they're miserable that is the ultimate rejoinder is that these people are not so you reinvest out of in my mind the contingency of history and also the duty to leave a mark that others can follow to leave a trail to leave a trace in any way and i don't just mean by posting or doing what i do i mean organizing making decisions in your day-to-day life putting out more good than you take from it and so you metabolize oh okay this isn't real politics oh that died 40 years ago oh we are just rearranging deck chairs truly on a 1:10:26 titanic where the the the uh the captain has lashed the wheel to this to make the the lash of the wheel to the side uh has nailed has nailed the door shut and shot himself and if counter hegemony is the only thing that can challenge capitalism it can be built the rudiments of it can be picked up later by other people even if you aren't there's two things you can be if you really want to stay on the treadmill you could be a pleasure lizard and the pleasure lizards are the beautiful boaters are the are the are the villages people are the resentful petty bourgeois white suburbanites and the pain 1:11:29 pigs are the urban and if you stay in the in the on the holodeck you're gonna you're gonna destroy yourself trying to conform to so yeah i had for i talked about how is that don't be an ***** don't be a ***** party those aren't very catchy slogans and also as people pointed out it's vaguely derivative of uh south park uh i'm sorry of uh team america although i would contend it's different because that idea the team america thing by creating ***** as like this third category sort of allows americans allows americans to like transcend uh the cynicism it is it's the most ideological part 1:12:31 of it the ***** part of the triumph uh of the triad there uh is is that's the the same thing as the uh as the sheepdog in the american sniper cosmology it's made up it's not a thing it's a fantasy it's the reactionary fantasy that goes with the institutional fantasy that the but anyway for those reasons get rid of don't be an ***** don't be an ***** party are the pain pigs and the uh don't be a ***** party are the pleasure lizards but they're all miserable none of them are happy for a minute even though they get to do whatever they want for the most part buy whatever they want for the most part have whatever fun they want to have for the most part but it is that most part that drives them insane they're denied everything they ever wanted and even if that's unrealistic and impossible they're going to keep pursuing it forever and then 1:13:32 as their misery increases their desire to see their enemies punished will eclipse all other considerations in politics purity versus superego with the poor ego the poor the poor people themselves being destroyed being strangled being broken away until all we have are these these monsters who have lost their humanity the human part will have been broken off when the walls go up and we get the little compounds based around these identities that we are going to call governments and they're going to have their little techno feudal uh armature of a coercion everybody inside that circle is going to be a monster because the real human thing that kept them connected to to a a full human consciousness was the people who are on the other side of that

***** wall who've been dissolved and the real fear i think that a lot of people have 1:14:34 not everybody but a lot of people who really invest in online politics have and the thing that fed it they and the reason that they are terrified of global warming and its consequences in the future is not because there's going to be a climate collapse that kills them or makes them have to live in a mad max world i think they say that i think that is actually their pleasurable fantasy the thing they're really afraid of is ending up inside the circle and having to live as a monster in order to preserve their comfort and i i am way more afraid of that than i had of the system breaking down and me having to fend for myself free of the of the shackles of of so once again i 1:15:43 did not really talk about uh black jackets which is fine because i didn't really finish reading it and i said it would so either friday or next week we will talk about the rest of blackjack events **Music playing** catholicism i think has its virtues because it does it emerged from a a social context that involved human relationships you know where there was actual power in human hands and therefore responsibility in human hands so that's why capita and one of those technologies that wiped it out 1:16:45 was protestantism which was a spiritual solvent that dissolved the bonds that had kept up the feudal order and allowed the market logic of capitalism to arise what that means is we can't go back to catholicism it's got to be something else something that is as universal as our imagined understanding of humanity is the benefit of technological uh intimacy is that we do know that we're one p one species now we really do know that we're one species now and so that means that our religious conceptions should be emerged from that awareness instead of out of the parochial fixedness of our previous pre-capitalist religious formations we need a new one we need a new religion we need blockchain we need a new religion so the challenge of the 1:17:46 moment is letting go in a time of terror because comfort i talked about how comfort breeds neuroses but a certain degree of comfort is necessary to prevent the emergence of deep neuroses around the fear like i don't think buddhism works either buddhism is just as geographically and temporally fixed as any of these other religions none of 1:18:48 them are going to feel natural to people outside of certain frameworks they're going to feel alien it's going to have to be a a a religious vocabulary that encompasses everybody and that's not true of any of the conditions the existent religions because they're all forged in fixed pre-capitalist social relationships that persisted through and that means that they cut that they were instrumentalized by the ruling power of the time and have been instrumentalized there's a reason that the ideal is one 1:20:7 where you don't really encounter anybody it's either a hermit in a cave or a part of a monastic order where you have self-sufficiency and stability and no responsibilities minimal exchanges with strangers with non-intimates with people who might bring heat might clash with you and i think every religion understands most people are going to have to live with a portable version of religion they cannot be sustained in uh in the frictionless ether i think somebody says zen priesthood zen because 1:21:8 like zen seems to be part of that uh tradition that says you don't actually have to withdraw you don't have to deny yourself these emotions you just have to process them as they occur and extinguish uh like their clouding of your of your consciousness instantaneously it's just it's a very high it requires a lot of mental dexterity to it's in many senses easier to withhold yeah the new religion must have thrown consumerism 1:22:16 it must reassert an emotional value around the social at its base which we do not have no matter what our religion we carry around with us every day our calculus our our sense of uh our motivator is wired towards a very narrow because our vocabulary has been impoverished because it's all been run through the machinery of capitalism and been drained of sacredness it's been drained of meaning all these forms are dead in our like religion the reason people fear theocracy is because the idea that it would be um it would be authoritarian because they imagined themselves being compelled by 1:23:17 the state to do things the vision of a theocracy is that you wouldn't need that because everybody would do things because they believed in them and they had a similar understanding of what the good was that they would act towards that would be a a perfect theocracy it also describes the condition of the state having we need new terms and new religions because when you say christianity to it is understood as one more identity that is an expression of a consumer preference just like all the others and so rule by people thinking that they're that is going to be rule of the so of course 1:24:18 it will be authoritarian and people who aren't of that and don't like those words are going to resist it so it becomes an obstacle it has to because to have a free society in in a free technological society people have to have an internal governor of how much is too much people have to say and that means throughout the entire business leaders whatever you have this is the virtue that rob spear was trying to impose this is the virtue that the mcdonald brothers had that ray kroc didn't the thing about capitalism though is that ray kroc will always beat the mcdonald brothers over time 1:25:20 he will always win so that which means you cannot have structures but that means people acceding to a limitation on their consumer ability hey you don't get to buy everything you want you don't get to hypothetically have any experience you want in order for us to redistribute things if you perceive that only as a domination of your freedom and identity you will resist it and you will have to be unless you accept it unless you understand oh yes there is a greater value than me but people are only going to get there if systems don't exist that allow them to have that power and that 1:26:23 is why the early stages of revolution because you have to keep people who want to consume from grabbing the reins of ***** uh government and they're not going to listen to you because they believe deeply that their freedom that goodness depends on them getting whatever they want they have to be physically disabused of that notion but over time as distribution is equalized as people see that there's a benefit there's a actual benefit to participating socially to abusing social relations with meaning that there is something that you get in exchange for that lack of consumer choice oh my god i'm not just giving up consumer choice i'm getting all these other things holy **** then you create a system of true and what's going to get people to live 1:27:24 that every day is going to be some spiritual understanding of vocabulary symbols rituals that they wrap those beliefs those those behaviors around and that make them that inform their choices as but the thing about that revolutionary element of that moment of authoritarianism is that you you would not have this being carried out by some fragment you would be having this carried out by the organs of the actual working class so there would be a social underpinning guiding the actions of everybody within this structure and because of that they would give up the power of course this is where people say this is ludicrous this is a happy talk this is fantasy never has happened and that's true because every revolution is tipped over has tipped away from the point of and so the regime went into self-defense mode but there's nothing else to believe in so you might as well come to terms with it all right next next time i promise we'll talk 1:28:25 of tech support with oh i think this might be it i think i might have fixed it okay 0:6:28 great i'm a genius guys folks i'm a genius trouble has been shot by a super hacker i'm practically hugh jackman in the film swordfish over here very pleased with myself uh so we're going to finish up black jackets i think maybe tomorrow or wednesday but today i wanted to talk a little bit about some stuff that's been in my head about uh the good old cultural superstructure and and how it's generated and i think you can 0:7:30 really map out uh a a historic trajectory that kind of shows that uh we are living in a in a situation where culture is the thing that determines politics like politics and our laws and the real to the extent that there's human agency in this system it is being generated by that it's it's it's that political structure that we all invest ourselves in because it is the laws that keep us doing the things we do and i mean obviously the law is not uh outside of our politics it's carried out by politics we make it and unmake it according to power's desire but uh it is what tells people what to do because you're not operating internally you're being manipulated from outside by the system and it has to tell you what to do and laws and politics are how you do that it is the deliberation that gives human agency to uh its decisions to to to its 0:8:31 actions on the markets or on and the law is bending to the algorithm because there is no human resistance to it because we're all pushing no matter what we think we're doing we're all pushing in its direction because we have lost the war over control we are no longer in control of politics the 20th century the violence of the 20th century was essentially the human race in its final attempt to assert control of the machinery of capitalism and losing the war humanity lost world war the human humanity lost the 20th century war the long 20th century is one big long war between humans and 0:9:33 the machine and and what that means is that a lot of the assumptions that underlie politics in the 20th century are no longer operative and that of and that means that our analysis has to be updated or else we're not and the main condition is that the assumptions about politics that are around that that we're operating under the ideas of elections the ideas of cultural production pushing public opinion public opinion forming into action you know the things we can actually do to feel like we're affecting things in a market economy where we aren't for the most part operating from class and the explosions of socialism and then fat the counter explosion of fascism and 0:10:34 then the through line of sort of imperial domination that knitted them together is all the human race in revulsion to the depredations of capitalism which on the one hand are creating this horrible destabilization and uh undermining of understandings of the world and human autonomy and uh like the the soul you know you want to get goofy about it uh against this force that's pulling it away from them or pulling out your ability to be a person and the reason technology won the reason that the 0:11:35 machine won is not because it was uh necessary for it to win because it wasn't for human advancement it had to lose the final class war where humans come together to overthrow the it won that war not by annihilating us all a lot of people died but we also built structures of social order that allowed for a lot more people to live lives that were much more comfortable than had previously been possible and that comfort made possible by their technological control of space and time in the form of laws and we acceded to that because a lot of people got essentially bought off the closer they were to the machinery center the more they could be bought off when that technology is used to do direct exploitation away from power in through the empire and that solution to the contradictions of capitalism uh pers was pursued as a way to ameliorate the anxieties of the of the lower and middle classes which then formalized into socialism and then fascism as conditions deteriorated even as the and that created a situation where first there was the uh the hobbesian war over uh access to imperial markets that made world war one inevitable and then once that happened uh made world war ii inevitable by allowing this uh defeated germany the capacity to create a social engine powered by middle-class anxiety that could literally uh like seize control of capitalism and direct it to its own ends the same way that the and they extended their power to the extent that they could until capitalism contained them and the way the capitalism contained the fascism was not by defeating it in world war ii it was by absorbing it in world war ii it decapitated the nationalist sort of id of national socialism but it incorporated the structures of power that had been developed within it the actual he people the human capital with the institutional knowledge who had built it were brought into the american imperium to administer a global empire that would have at its base the job of hyper-exploiting from the undeveloped areas of natural resources uh for the benefit of everyone broadly across class lines uh in the in the europe first and then in and that meant that as all of the the crisis is within national capitalism erupted uh like popping up throughout the 19th and 20th centuries uh you see over and over again capitalism absorbing the energy of its opponents to further its goals of extending itself until you get a situation after world war one where you have finally a a geopolitical conflict between capital and humanity in the form of the first the russians and then and then you know the common turn and then the third world movement after that this coalition of forces resisting capitalism and then coming together to put down this like cancerous eruption from the middle that is fascism but then doing so by absorbing it now the path not taken after world war ii the one that maybe henry wallace or fdr would have pursued could actual cooperation with the soviets after the soviet fall of uh after they filed the nazis might have theoretically created a new a a a a uh a world system that could slowly bl drain the fascist strain capitalism out it where they're out of it where sufficient uh cooperation between the conscious working classes of these various nations like the the new the popular front basically persisting now that would have caused more war we still would have had huge conflict in the 20th century in fact we would have had an extension of conflict into a probably a third world war but it would have been one that could have been winnable for the people for humanity and i think the upshot of that and like i said the reason they lost they destroyed who they had to destroy with the technology that had been created but those who could be bought off were incorporated into the structure and then you have a superstructure created around that a cultural superstructure that incorporates these or these groups of people including the self-conscious working class of these advanced nations that it formed along marxist developmental lines exactly as he had predicted these europe had these concentrations of people who thought of themselves as workers and they were everywhere through the world and the hope of after world war ii is that they could all come together but because stalin pursued this cover my ass save my ass strategy where his well-being as ruler of russia and his regime's empowerment is more important than the his duty to the working classes of the world allows to create the conditions that make communism defeat inevitable because as soon as the bretton woods system of global trade is commissioned after world war ii and the then the the under the the wildly underdeveloped and then recently war ravaged soviet union and then its allies in the underdeveloped third world and by going alone they were going to have to try to compete within the global system within capitalism on the and that required the state capitalist uh alienation of the labor of workers for the state's benefit which is why late the the stalin estate did not create a worker state it created a state where workers were in the same alienated position from their labor as they bet under capitalism but there was a socialized utility there was a socialized decision mechanism free of capitalism that apportioned their alienated labor which is of course superior in every way to capitalism but still contains alienation that has to be socially solved the only way to socially solve alienation if you're not going to to to alienate further with repression is treats is goodies which is why cruise ships turn to a consumer economy in the 50s was not some sort of betrayal it was the only logical next step it had to happen in order to get people to work you needed to give them incentives and those had to be market-based incentives and they were going to be less efficient than capitalism and so capitalism beat him in the fight for resources in the third world so that they could they beat him in creating the the global currency and that means that in the late 80s when the final crisis came and there was no more treats to give out and there was no more repression that could be exerted effectively the whole thing shattered because they had not built a new soviet person because the people in the soviet union were still alienated the same way and that was that was made inevitable and stalin decided to fight it out in material to to fight it out on uh uh economic grounds after because he had basically forsworn a real challenge for power on the field of battle but also uh a uh pressing forward of creating a coalition beyond russia's uh borders because they uh gave up on the the greeks they gave up on the greek communists in order to solidify the warsaw pac line the iron curtain line uh and then they uh they uh did not do any significant work to reach out to uh post- 0:20:48 colonial regimes or or colonial resistance movements that were fight fighting to push off the last so as soon as the soviets have to fight us on consumer happiness as an index for uh can for building and maintaining a set a consensus reality a consensual reality capitalism has coercion in the form of its cybernetic network of but they also have social consent in a mass spectacle of of mediated existence that is generated by all that surplus that they get to play around with they have a dream factory we all get to live in the matrix we all get to live in a fun house version of reality because we're living on the surplus extracted from others now i'm not saying stalin would 0:21:55 have won that fight by the way probably would have lost i'm just saying that we know he didn't win by not doing it we know he didn't win by by he the his position was not favorable to do what he did because soon enough what do you have the though the chinese gokami this but they were they were more social they were just as much a feudal backwater if not more so than russia had been vastly more uh they they had no developed capitalist mechanisms no social relationships to create it through the uh the intensification of economic you know they were absolutely it was it was a it was a 2000 year old empire for christ's sake and so there's this massive crisis well how the hell do you get them to compete and what do they do they had to 0:22:56 kill like every system of accumulation does had to kill massive numbers of peasants and then they had to exercise the guilt from that with their uh with the cultural revolution just like the bolsheviks had to exercise uh the crime of uh the famines through the through i'm sorry not the red terror so one way or another this system is uh it has it has won the one in the 20th century of the fight then the final terms of of final surrender of the human race were laid uh there in in the neoliberal order which is what the deal we got which is all right this is the final crisis moment to set in conditions to move forward as we cybernetically uh our control to our ability to 0:23:58 technologically control outstrips your ability to resist it and so all we really have to do is provide as minimal basis as possible for you to keep fulfilling your necessary social role without us creating it making it too big of a headache to put you down and to use repression to prevent you from doing that how much social coercion do we need to give you and uh and because the working classes of the world had been scattered to the winds by the 20th century there was no coherent response and so the institutions dominated by capital as they were made a deal on capitol's behalf and that is the neo-liberal deal the washington consensus what you can grab in the market will allow you dignity uh humanity it will be it will be the final uh hobbesian descent but it will be buffeted it will it will be buffeted and prevented from just being a free-for-all collapse into chaos that doesn't serve capitalism's interests will give you 0:25:0 enough treats basically to make it go down smooth but of course those streets are going to be dwindling over time and so all of our post uh ritual ex exercising of all of our anxieties about the fact that we no longer control our and so we're all freaking losing it but and the reason we're losing it is because none of us can have identified where the enemy is because of the fact that we are all grasping for meaning through a miasma of post-class identity formations like we are declassed in a way in a 0:26:2 fundamental way and what i when you talk about the gramscian model when you talk about superstructure as the place where you build power through counter hegemony you're talking about an assumption that was in the context of gramsci in italy ants trying to answer the question how do you take a country full of fearing peasant hicks uh and make it uh an effective and guide it towards socialism and his and his answer is well you have to allow it to generate uh it has to generate through the the lives of these people uh in the form of their interaction with culture because they do not and cannot experience the other more clarifying conditions of a working-class existence and so gramsci spoke to was trying to speak to the question how do you try to get to socialism from there and it was build these counter institutions that can give you the 0:27:4 legitimacy that the experience that you're not getting uh because people not enough people are in labor relations it's what do you do with the serfs these questions always come down to what are and i think we're in a situation now though where because the conditions the terms of conditions of human surrender that happened in the late late 20th century were such that human control of institutions at all levels would be ceded to the market it meant that the culture that we're going to absorb will not contain actual working-class perspectives actual working class values concerns the kind of things that people would interact with in a culture and then use to clarify their actions in life because we're even though working-class people still make culture 0:28:6 in their day-to-day lives in their interactions with uh elite culture uh and in their folk culture their technologically aided folk culture your tick tocks and stuff unlike in the 20th century uh throughout the world this culture is not those working-class people do not experience their lives as working-class people 20th century people across the world when they thought of themselves they thought of themselves to some degree as a worker it was a meaningful coherent sliver of their identity and it had a defined meaning and that was a notion of solidarity notions of democratic control of resources to that was always there and that was always that means that people in all of the highest levels of our uh structures that the labor union heads people who wrote for 0:29:8 television uh people who ran for office people who got stock jobs in the bureaucracy

uh people who were living in the culture were living so were with an understanding of what the working class was who was in it and what its interests were and that made their actions in the public stage like who they voted for coherent and it also gave coherence to what they said when they were uh part of the superstructure like the working-class people who made it through to hollywood to write to write and to direct and to produce or and to act working-class people who who made up uh the the people who wrote on newspapers because that was a working-class job at first that was like people started on the streets selling the paper and then they started writing for it um and then of course the politicians like they were they were people 0:30:9 who uh had in many cases come through labor unions for example so they had an understanding of who they were and what it meant to be that and but we've given over now to the reagan revolution we gave over to that turn worldwide we all came to some conclusion we are giving up control of our lives in exchange for treats and that was because that was the best deal anybody thought they could get at the time and the ones who didn't think that were crushed if you thought you could fight on and you had integrity enough to do so you did and you lost you were shelled out of the out of the uh the russian white house by yeltsin you were cooed you were sanctioned you were embargoed you were assassinated you were fired your movement was destroyed from within or if you were willing to take the deal you got treats if you 0:31:14 were a post-war american worker you got and you were white for specifically you got a house you got a little quarter acre lot that was yours it was like your homestead even though you couldn't grow crops on it and you couldn't live off of the land and so you still had to be a schmuck working every and things and that meant that over time you act that there was less of a coherent uh working-class element to this culture because the working class were feeling themselves their lives their lives were defined not by the work they did but their inner their interaction with the market as homeowners as members of the capitalist class and that affected the way that they interacted with culture and it meant that by 1980 uh the the american working 0:32:15 class was sort of bought off and repressed that way because remember there was a big strike wave that also happened and it was defeated and that was the stick and then the homeowner republic was the carrot and everybody was everyone made that decision on an individual basis they were everyone it was every man for themselves and that's why when reagan said look you can't ask any more from the market but we can gut some others the state fat that we're giving to these other people that aren't you we're going to let you compete more effectively in the market and you have a head start so let's go and they took the deal and why wouldn't they it was the logical thing to do everybody made the logical choice which is why we're headed towards disaster because the end result of everybody making the logical choice under

capitalism is apocalypse it's the end of the world is our uh it is our illogical choices that bind us together it's our illogical choices that that define our relationship to the world and allow us to act not as individuals but as a part of a greater whole that can cooperate beyond compulsion and what we have to reckon with now when we're talking about what's the role of culture in politics and and what's the difference and that means where is the power where can you assert influence i would argue that there is no place you can apply uh apply power to the culture now that can meaningfully interact because everybody including everyone who is trying all of their hardest to to affect change at that level can really act as a working-class person so that means this is not assist the situation where you're creating counter gramsci encounter hegemony you're only powering the dynamo of the capitalist uh war uh the capitalist because the center of gravity among everybody if the the voting public who is going to vote the most is going to be the most comfortable the people who are going to go through with earnestness the ritual of voting are going to be the people closest to power hell the ones at the very top don't just vote they extra vote by putting money in and that's because they feel like there's something that they're getting out of the transaction they feel like this civic ritual can gives me results my my contribution to this thing and my er the earnestness of my contribution for this thing assumed in others is going to assure uh that we all move in the right direction but our experience of class is only post-modern we experience our lives as consumers we are we are a consumer nation and you uh array your your politics around the symbols of these that we get from the culture the mediated landscape that replace the practical realm where we used to define our world now everything is coming through this gauze this this this veil of maya that were that were and so when we interact with politics it means we are we will always be interacting with it on the conditions on the terms created by the most comfortable amongst us which is then going to be divided into two big camps because the beauty of the system is that it will always create this binary opposition this polaris this polarization along two widely understood groups now in cap marxism this polarization is supposed to go workers and uh capitalists and uh in a in the in the bernstein revisionist model that's how it's supposed to work eventually you get a system where there's two big political groups within a democratic uh uh structure one of them is a party of capital the other is the party of workers and then they go at it and guess what the workers win because there's more of them that is the that's the uh sdp form form formula for uh reform and what we have seen is that the the the combined and uneven development has made it so that all of the alienations within some capitalisms that form up nationally can be bought off with the pain of others elsewhere because you are getting you're not getting class consciousness untainted from nationalism they are stuck together

at the same level because they are also experiencing their lives through meaningful structures around these nations that they live as realities the same way they um and so our we are getting to the point of like honestly we are getting to the point of critical class conflict in every or i would say not class but sect conflict because what i'm saying is in all these societies where you have the format of democracy with some sort of flexibility within it to contain political uh uh alienation shy of like revolution and and con and violence uh you you're going to develop into an eventual situation where at the final moment of crisis there will be two groups two broad groups and that they will then come to violence over their inability to use the system to resolve the the the at that point one or the other winner take all them or me contest for survival which is what everybody thinks they're in right now they're not but it feels that way that's our that's the frequency we're vibrating vibrating at because we all understand that that's where it has to end when it ends that way we don't know but it has to end at some point in the near future and that's going to be true in every country but what that alignment is and right now we have a situation where we have two sides shaping up along universal suffrage where the most comfortable are gonna vote and then that most comfortable is gonna break along one line of recognition into two others it's not like it's gonna all go to one end it's gonna stay in the middle because this is this is not a this is not the conflict remember this is the conflict being resolved this is humanity being bought off from its own youth its own destruction this it's the it's the um it's the fent patch as we're being and so that means even though we are all still have a relationship to a means of production that means that we are that we experience those concepts class from a remove from a from an emotional connection from a from a level of reality that puts them on par or or actually no far below other more visceral attachments around nation around race around gender around all the other axis that make up everybody's personal sense of self that is not just defined by material interests that's only one that's only the basis for it once you have a material interest once you have a general interior interest everything that is built on top of that is is all based on all the other things that you're experiencing in your life and those things over time as capitalist technology overalls civilization humanity our lives become less social and more mediated and so our understanding of words like class and ideas like solidarity and and what politics can and should do like the entire note the entire structure of our of our understanding of the world through like a political lens uh is shaped more and more by what we view not what we experience what we experience is class exploitation that over time coalesces into class consciousness as we cooperate as workers now as we cooperate as workers we do things like create a newspaper or have a political party and those political parties do things and those reporters those newspapers write about those things and that

creates a context where we're acting and we're defining ourselves and through our interaction with the world and that and that is being generated by this working-class movement but once the working-class movement is destroyed where every every working class was put down everywhere from the soviet former soviet union to china to uh to latin america uh uh of course in the united states uh in the form of paul volcker just putting a stake in the heart of the working class there was no sufficient 0:42:35 formation uh anywhere to defeat it because we were all too comfortable the ones who were the most crucial to this system were too comfortable and had been made so everybody all the suffering was was scattered the the deepest pools of suffering were not touched by political power they were they were uh they had never been allowed to to uh let sufficient capital formation or for stay to allow for uh the intensification of those cultural production that could interact with these structures and enforce a voice there was only ex there was only the the vulcan shock was uh because remember 0:43:36 so stalin thought he was at his best you want to give him credit stalin thought that at the end of world war ii he was giving he was doing a temporary armistice with the west he was saying look we're beat we're in trouble uh we got our asses kicked during that war we're they have a bomb now let's just play on their terms until we recover a bit and that's the under the best uh the best faith the the most charitable reading of stalin's thought process was that's what he was thinking if he cared that much but uh in hindsight we can see that uh no by cr by seating to that contest the and so by the late like the the eastern block had been kept alive through the 70s by high oil prices and then uh western loans to try to create more uh com more efficiency 0:44:38 in their economy uh and in so doing they uh became debtor nations and once you ratch and and of course the latin american countries that tried to do uh export or import substitution industrialization uh had done that basically at yankee credit uh and there that meant that all of those working-class parties that had emerged and had pursued power and had fought against the reactionary tide of uh the generals uh such power that was able to be concentrated was done so under the auspices of uh of this uh investment that was all that was all borrowed and as soon as that interest rate went up it just shattered uh the uh it shattered the political legitimacy basically 0:45:39 of all of these less efficient exploiters and so as soon as it became a contest for treats and there's no more uh the the west was going to make it harder to dispense treats uh under those econo with that political order well then the people would make the logical conclusion that the political order needed to go and so the legitimacy of these states collapsed and what happened is that all these people uh let the doors open to the trojan horse of capitalism that then just showed how much how little it had any concern for but what this means for the culture question is since we're 0:46:42 all interacting with the market uh interacting with culture as as consumers who are

related to who the more we matter in the cultural discourse the more likely we are to vote the more likely we are to participate in political uh contests and volunteer and and participate uh by talking about it to each other and and we are people who have a faith in the system that was bought off by the middle class boom and that is being undermined and that is being eroded every day but because of the uh accelerating pace of the technological coercive power of capital our ability to resist that is never been lower there is no reflection in our lives of effective class resistance to capitalism there's a democratic party but the democratic party does not represent in any way a class project no one experiences that way there used to be a class project associated with the democratic party and it's through that lens that people still assume there is one and that structures their relationship to it but it's fake and what that means is that those comfortable homeowners who might have been a professional person might have been a factory worker they view through the spectac spectacle of politics through this lens of credulity and that leans them to either be democrats or republicans and to accept one or the other of these frameworks of of blame and and and virtue that is uh the political system acting out the question of who will be sacrificed to the god malik and the democrats and republicans fight over who is more worthy of molex extinguishment and so politics becomes a shadow war between these two cultural demons that we're trying to exercise because we have given up control of the system we do not believe in it which means we do not believe it bends to human ends so we enter we're still in it because we have individual interests that we need to concern ourselves with and so everybody at every level participating people making art people making posts people making podcasts people running for office people making tv shows people trending topics people donating to campaigns people volunteering for campaigns are all operating from this level of belief in the system born of the fact that they were promised something their parents got something they were promised it and therefore they think that there's now i would say that even if all the socialists in the world who say they're socialists now really understand that and have full clear understanding of themselves no i am a worker sir i am a worker i will show you how i'm a worker even if they're fully uh even if they know what that word means and they're using it correctly and it's not just like through the the lens that they've been observing it even if they are uh absolutely aware of themselves as workers all they can do is act alongside everybody else because there's no collective thing to do except things like vote and we vote for parties made up of and voted in huge numbers by people who don't think of themselves as workers think of themselves as americans or taxpayers think themselves as entrepreneurs or would-be billionaires think of themselves as white or black or trans or male or female or anything things that everybody feels to some extent but for these people it's all there's no lived experience of class that is expressed through the culture it was killed because the conveyor belt from the working class to the creative class was cut because they said we're gonna get a deal to you humans you guys who got a house congratulations you keep your house you have that little bit of equity you're not gonna be ground up immediately and fed into the slurry you're not going to be turned into paste and bone meal congratulations but of course you know over time you're not all going to be able to uh live lives of luxury but we're still going to have to figure out a way to to dole this these treats out that keeps you mutton heads in the game and the answer was the knowledge economy college the idea that everyone believed at some basic level in the way they acted that the deal was now everybody for themselves but there is something you can do to ensure at least a minimum level of safety and 0:51:49 comfort in life and that go to mother mother in college go there the way they said in the 19th century horace greeley said go west my son and grow up with the country the 21st century answer after the extinguishment of the frontier the end of plenty the end of the myth and the need to start cannibalizing the human race the answer became go to the go to college get a knowledge job there's no more working through you're not there's no more clearing land there's no more struggle to be had your labor in most ways is superfluous it's getting more and more superfluous to these productions because we're doing it elsewhere with greater exploitation and greater uh uh uh profit but that's just because we're develop we're uh we're going to where the profit is as profit declines we're going and sucking up and hoovering up all the 0:52:50 profits that can be extracted through exploitation through sheer gun to the head exploitation stripped of political legitimacy or political uh uh but we don't live that way the ones who vote don't live that way so that means that us born into this world we want to be socialists all that can mean is interacting with the issues of politics as defined by the democratic and republican parties which represent two formations of middle class nervous breakdown around failing uh the dying american dream and they are cosmopolitan uh cosmopolitan capital and provincial capital the brahmanas and the merchants as uh thomas piketty has called them that's it and everyone else 0:53:52 is along for the ride because with the death of the working class as an engine of politics uh after taft-hartley and and and then the neoliberal consensus and then the breaking of the labor movement and no more forward momentum in labor uh uh organizing and then offshoring removing labor's leverage because oh we're gonna close the the plant you're gonna go on strike good yeah that'll make it easier for us to so that had been broken there was politics had no working class in uh input from the late 70s on it was gone you and so the culture that we're interacting with is one that 0:54:53 has not made by working class people some of them are the children of middle class homeowners who are in the middle working class but they went to college we all went to college whether you're the son of a forklift driver or a electrician or a uh ad man or a cop your kid went to college and the idea was if you follow the rules absorb the etiquette and social mores that were imparted in these this finishing school and then gained some technical skill that could be priced into a market interaction then that you could get your own semblance of what of the of the upwardly mobile comfortable consumer based happiness that your parents had aspired to now the 60s had seen the kids rebel against that and say oh no i don't want that man i don't want your 0:55:55 gray flannel suit man but then at the end when the other when the alternative was was high gas prices and uh and inflation uh and and unemployment going up and higher taxes and and less fewer uh fewer they were happy to be able to buy in at the ground floor of something because they didn't just get bought out at the uh at the level of you know you got a a university tenure track position or uh you know a job in a uh like a think tank or whatever the uh the other part of that was that 0:56:56

the cultural uh restrictions that had been implaced uh by sort of the middle class uh morality of those comfortable people in the middle uh their parents uh that was negotiable that could go because hey you're the guys who have money now you actually matter you set the terms and so people came around to the idea that okay i can affect the liberation i want which was always a consumer revelation because i never really lived a working class life i lived in the suburbs i lived as a homeowner's child as a little squire on the uh mansion the a squat a little a little squire uh in the uh the countryside a little little a little font leroy with with crushed velvet culottes skipping through the little suburban and the jobs you got out of college that first generation those were jobs that were relatively intellectually rewarding gave you a 0:57:58 degree of autonomy and uh uh some degree that some degree of belief that you chose your profession and they were well compensated but that was all predicated on this search for profit that was being funneled over to the extent it could be and as increasing uh crisis reordered things the the treat faucet went down that's why everybody post world war ii is part of one generation we're all boomers the only difference is over time our relationship to technology and our uh understanding of the horizons of our personal uh autonomy are different and that explains everything because everybody is seeing themselves as a consumer because that is what they were brought into the world they were brought into post world war two was one of for the people who went on to do politics the most and defined these things not everybody but for the ones who were the center of gravity of american culture it was a non- 0:58:59 alienated time that's why they got instantly nostalgic because they were the only people who ever lived non-alienated lives and college is the peak of non-alienation and everybody who came out of that machine went through a process of finding that on the other end of that was not the liberation that they'd been promised but just

the same exploitation that and so you see the disaffection and cynicism of the xers then you see that just the the anxiety fest of the millennials and now just the dead-eyed nihilism of the zoomers it's and politics that means everybody participating in politics is participating on those those terms the terms of of uh people who are 1:0:0 were promised a thing believed in a thing and are seeing the thing fail to deliver and are having a crisis one way or another of confidence in democracy and a uh and the systems that they've been uh consenting to participate in their whole lives and now they're starting to question them and what that and the way that they question them is defined basically at the wholesale level demographically and so you have capital funding both of them but then the top level of one being finance capital in wall street and all these college-educated uh fancy types with very developed uh moral codes and and and very advance who consider themselves progressive who are the end result of the puritan cult of virtue because they have defined virtue and they are cosmopolitan capital and then there are people below and they set they fund out this whole shooting match but at a personal level they are more favored to 1:1:2 the democrats and then hollywood another formation around the creative types who didn't really want to do the dirty work of watching this machine sausage make itself they needed more express they needed more than mere money they needed a sense of creative outlet they couldn't do a political outlet they tried and failed but a creative outlet so hollywood and then science and technology like please just let me try to make the world better make let me allow me to express myself and so you had silicon valley and these formations all take and they create a vision of uh human liberation through the market that becomes the democratic orthodoxy and that is also world capital consuming the world and from the the the eye of the storm that turns into liberalism because these are the people who have been living most comfortably the longest and whose faith of the system is most deeply ingrained and then lower than 1:2:3 them you have the people in the super structural relationships around them they're kids usually like people in academia and politics which is also uh for working class the the the children of working class people uh who uh also want a middle-class life and think of themselves as middle class and then pursue it joe biden is the perfect example of that joe biden is a guy who's like okay my and that's my way of feeling like i'm in charge of something and so that is that's who makes up those strata and then the voters at large are the lower level versions of that like k-9 like uh teachers uh and of course there's also other people voting but at lower levels people lower at the totem pole are voting at lower levels but even within that you have like in the black community it's still arrayed around comfort the most comfortable black people vote 1:3:4 and participate in politics the most it's true with any kind of group you everywhere you want to uh define it that's how voting is is structured and so our elections are

just these coalitions of different people with different levels of affect for government participating in politics and the main thing you get out of that is democrats and republicans duking it out but now we're getting at one level at one end of the hysteria of q anon and the dream of uh the day of the rope and and uh all that and then the other you have the liberal ragnarok around creating like a a new like having a new cultural revolution around uh like and those are both expressions of these this middle class breakdown this nervous breakdown among people who self-identify as beneficiaries of the system no matter what their job is or their background they self-identify at a basic level as beneficiaries of the system who are trying to get a better deal and then you have people in socialist counter movements and even if they do believe that they have a class interest and they can only do they can only respond to the political structure that is being generated by this this end state of uh neurotic breakdown like we're witnessing this this breakdown among the middle class mind and we're enmeshed in it in one way or another and we can only participate in it we can't stand we cannot participate in it without aiding it is what i'm saying we are all providing energy for this this process but we can't not do that because there's nothing else to do it just means that we have to put our gaze lower to the ground when we ask ourselves what is to be done at every point at every point the vet the usefulness of this critique in my mind the usefulness of this line of thinking the usefulness of my whole approach to politics as a as a as your we all still have to make the exact same question uh decisions that we had to make yesterday no matter what we think about what's gonna happen no matter where we think politics is grounded no matter how we analyze any of these questions we have the same and they pose us always a question of what to choose to do and we choose wrong a lot of the time because our understanding of what's happening in front of us is in some critical way misaligned with reality and the the baggage we bring to our lives from our pseudolife in this uh winchester mystery house of uh middle class neuroses ruling class i guess you would say neuroses either actually move ruling class or self-deluded ruling class neuroses it makes you able to answer the question do i need to care about this a lot easier and when i see how much and i know in my own life how much time people spend preoccupied with questions that in the real scheme of things are irrelevant is that knowing that or being able to ask that question do i need to care about this can really free up mental real estate for other things like what to do about your direct life and how to apply your political uh anime your your your self-directed need to assert yourself in the world to assert your humanity in the world to express yourself as a being how are you going to satisfy that and i think a lot of it gets misdirected by a sterile engagement with these so yeah that's where i'm at with the whole thing is that that our understanding of the gramscian counter hegemonic dynamic is not

CUSHVLOG 181. THE SUPERSUCCTURE

operative in the current circumstances in the there has to be an emergent working 1:8:14 class counter hegemony that breaks out of all of these structures that cannot come from these structures so it can't be the democratic party it can't be any of the issues that we're always arguing about because to get people to act from class consciousness they have to take those moments when there's a conflict between their class interest as they understand it and their individual identity interest there has to be a certain degree of uh of thickness of belief in notions of solidarity to withstand a real uh attack so you can't participate in these questions without assuming that most people are 1:9:17 going to put you in a file on one or the other side of this great divide we have between the the cosmopolitans and the provincials uh the pubes in the grays if anyone's read uh is as a bystander we can only participate in it as either aloof bystanders or as people who have invested in one or the other at the level of fandom but then the point where fandom becomes self-identity like we have fused fandom to identity so that we care as much about how we define ourselves in what culture we consume as 1:10:18 who we vote for and they mean the same thing and the voting has to be on the terms of this this nervous breakdown it has to be on the terms of this sterile culture war because that's the only game in town it's that it's it's what the people in congress are voting on and it's what culture is producing so an emergent working class identity is going to form around practical questions of direct tactical use which means that these big structures of sorting that break us apart it will not emerge to challenge 1:11:20 and break apart uh trust because everyone will be in good faith working towards the vote the local goal and they will put all that other stuff aside one way or the other they will put that other aside and come to a consensus and then move forward from that and then that will create counter hegemony within it and we can all participate but for now we are in this we're suspended in this goo and it's our job to not go crazy in the goo it's our job to not decide that we love the goo and that the goo is real and that the goo is life and then if we care enough about the goo that it's going to push us in through it we're going to be able to move through the gu just by sheer willpower we cannot we cannot will our way to anything we have to cooperate we have to humble ourselves and i'm not i'm saying i'm not doing a great job i don't think a lot of us are but that's because we don't have anything to do and it's and it 1:12:22 is action that brings clarity and then it's the lack of action that so we just have to not necessarily try to push to the very barrier of where we're gonna get resistance but maybe just ask ourselves where can we put energy that will leave us feeling less shitty all the time it could really come down to that because i honestly believe that if you're aware enough of the world and and and uh ideologically aligned enough with reality to understand the source of pain and alienation in your life and not to allow the the the specters of of middle class bourgeois breakdown to that you are seeking the best i think that if you are on that side you're trying it's just you're also trying to pleasure yourself we're all trying to pleasure ourselves and those two things 1:13:24 and by denying ourselves easy indulgence to distract and we have we we can put ourselves to the task of like saying okay what and of course the question well okay help how emerges and the ego wants that to mean how can i do it in a way that is going to make a difference but you have to get rid of and if you get rid of that part it really focuses things because if you're going to act in spite of your you can act from the heart because you're severing yourself from your selfish devotion because 1:14:29 you will still feel better as opposed to always wondering what it was and it requires the leap of faith that's why it can't be predicted or prescribed that's why it's the realm of art more than politics and that's why i find myself in this weird position as a podcaster straddling the line as everybody turns culture and politics into the same slurry of of uh indulgence and distraction that i am a just a a part of that process that i am an avatar of that of that happening of the the podcast uh eruption is is people who have a desire to live at the pleasure of a system that benefits them but 1:15:30 to be exempt from and there you can do that by trying to affect political change or by expressing yourself culturally and artistically and part of the problem for a lot of people is that politic the political horizons got so sh uh were constricted so quite fast that all faith in that avenue collapsed leaving only the pursuit of art by the by the way by the canny you know by the ones who didn't want to be cringe but not most people aren't very talented and it'd be one thing if you wanted to express yourself as a hobby but having to make it your career means having a deep investment in your 1:16:31 ability to do it that makes doing it less fun and more scary and then people just get paralyzed i know i did before that choice until a new thing comes around where hey i could just talk about politics and it'll be entertaining and that's like artistic right it's like art adjacent it's making people happy which is better than making them sad and people get to acknowledge me and i get some of the validation that i can now only seek virtually because our conditions are pretty much set unless you get wildly lucky and become an so that's why i find myself now having to refine and be like all right if this is gonna be worth doing it has to be meaningful because otherwise it just 1:17:32 makes me feel bad and i can't distract myself anymore from what is the source of that because i know it and that is the power that's how real class consciousness and right action are formed is that you get stripped to a sanctuary awareness point and an interaction with reality that is sharp enough and you maintain and you retain that association and it becomes this plangent chord that your brain plays as you in order encounter the world and it keeps you grounded in a truth that you use to identify everything that and so now i'm like i mean am i i probably have to make something that's like more labor-intensive uh more risky than whatever this is and 1:18:33

that's what i'm trying to do and i think that yeah the degree to which i feel any anxiety right now in my life it is in trying to manage that uh that tension between the the manifest indulgences that i can uh pursue and my drive to to actually do that and i'll probably just walk that i'll probably end up walking that tightrope for the rest of my life one way or another unless there's a big phase shift which very well could happen but i just trust that i'm walking it for now i trust that i am holding a balance between and not being pulled from one way or the other and that that's all i can really go on is that but i do think things are going to change for everybody in a relatively uh the relatively near future not catastrophically necessarily but in a way that when you look back on it you will kind of be like oh damn i mean hasn't that been true of the last year and that's of course the the dread the poisonous mushroom that uh felix identified when he says everything stays the same but gets worse and that's the perfect description of it but that's still motion and you and you don't get motion all at once you get motion through a a a and we're all going to have to act in that moment and the decisions we make are going to be guided by what we've been doing until that moment comes and the other thing is is that moment's not going to be the same one for everybody that's not going to be the same one for everybody that moment is going to be the accumulation of moments everybody the the the twig is snapping under everybody but it is doing so at an uneven rate but it is happening to everybody in and so that means that we are getting more and more opportunities to confront moments and not to try to bury our head from them or try to incorporate them into our fantasy narratives which is another bad suffusing your action with like the will drawn from conviction and that is what we lack the best lack all conviction because there is just so much information isn't there and there's so much of an expectation that we can come to a logical mastery of the moment that will justify our action because there's no other reason to do anything that more than anything is what we've been taught there's no other reason to do anything other than it is logical and what logical means is in my self-interest in the broad scope logical means to my that means nobody believes in any institutions that means they cannot believe in working within them or resisting them because that would be involving themselves in other institutions that but i just i i keep myself at the moment balanced on the beam because things are good for me largely i am pretty content and i do feel like i am moving forward and then it's only when i kind of start self-doubt kicking in and sort of sloth that it gets bad but you know then i i kick myself i pick myself up and get back in the race i pick myself up and get back in the race that's life i get cocked down and i get up again so yeah stick around if you want more of these nuggets of content that i'm trying to craft into something beautiful for yes jack black jackman probably wednesday i did finish it so we'll talk only one morning the sun was shining i was laying in bed wondering if she had changed at all if her hair was still red some folks said all the eyes together sure were gonna be rough never did that and when my son was dressed headed off to the east coast you know so i got a job in the great northwoods working hardcore 0:1:17 for a spell never didn't like it all that much one so i have a new microphone set up hopefully i can use this one most of the time and i uh somebody did me a trevor troubleshoot or chris thank you chris did me a troubleshoot in the uh oas so now i have a mic that is set up so i don't have to hold it because that is kind of goofy it doesn't really feel right for these yes the oss the office of strategic services forerunner to the cia while bill donovan alan dulles all those guys uh yeah yeah like you kind 0:2:18 of wonder if like that whole group of people and then the structures that they built in government after world war ii if those people were not essentially like the final archons like they were the the people who most grasped the real implications of a worldwide capitalist order headquartered in the united states and they saw what it would mean to maintain that and the answer was they would need to wield this uh this um mixed economic uh sort of hybrid system that vent off social pressure in the 0:3:20 form of democratic activity uh rule of law all that cute stuff that the humans like to have fun with all those adorable little things that they like to distract themselves with from the reality that they are now trapped in a machinery that they are only participators passively in and so if that's the case then the only positions of real power in the world are going to be in those extra uh extra democratic structures to private ends specifically the social ends of this class of people who are unified in being the scions of the ruling class this wasn't even up striving uh this was not upstriving 0:4:21 uh middle-class guys these were the rulers of the the elite of the elite looking at the world seeing how it has changed and recognizing that capitalism in winning had dethroned and so the only place that you could even hope to put your and therefore your classes interests forward is in control of those structures of government that are going to be able to move this ***** thing uh and override at every point any theoretical democratic checkpoint because as long as there was a time when the capitalism that was being born with the american state was weak enough that that state could have really challenged it for power but that moment you can't hear me 0:5:23 god damn it maybe i need to turn up the volume on this thing does this help i've got a volume tuner over here is i hope you can hear me because i feel okay and i think all of those weird rituals that those freaks like to get off to is really them who have gone to the end of history they are do not believe in god like guys like alan dulles or george bush these guys have been absolutely hollowed out by by being in charge for so long because we know that that's what idle wealth does in the imperial centers it liberalizes you it abstracts you today's fire bearing in new england the first generation of capitalists there were fire-breathing uh uh calvinists these are literally 0:6:24 the the direct descendants of puritans people whose grandfathers ***** uh pressed giles corey between boards to get him to ***** uh to plead guilty or not guilty to charges of being and that by the time so you get the atoms is by the time those guys seize power in the executive branch in the you've already got john adams being a congregationalist which what the ***** is that and like flirting with deism and then john quincy adams is just fully post-christian like we know that from his diaries like he he he was a unitarian so you go from ***** calvinists to unitarians in only a few generations in the same conditions and those conditions being the very soft center of urban comfortable so that means these peoples the blue bloods of the of 0:7:31 the 20th century who not only had had that like civilizing uh experience but that then had gone through the civil uh civil war world war the labor war on behalf of capital that they carried out uh and against the workers that then the working wars against fellow bourgeois in in uh the in germany and in japan over the spoils of the world they saw the 20th century and all its horribleness they were and they were cultured and sophisticated so they knew the the they had a a cultural vocabulary for explaining this that is the same one that marks counter culture this is the same one that marks proletarian counter culture because it so these people have no religious belief what they believe in is that this thing is the real power on earth this thing this 0:8:32 imperative prophet motive whatever you want to go whatever you want to describe it in the form of a giant suction machine that takes resources from one end of the globe and brings them to the center of it and then provides comfort and power in that relationship these are the ones of those now deracinated ruling class elite who looked at the world saw it as it was and said i will consecrate my bonds to this new god and then carry out its will and in so doing i will be of the priestly class i will maintain my position as a ***** brahmana and these are literally boston brahman in some cases and though so the state they built the national security state which then bloc and you can't just that's not just the cia that's the rand corporation uh that's uh the 0:9:33 nsa obviously it's it's the uh domestic intelligence bureaus like the fbi uh and then

CUSHVLOG 182. BLACKJAC FOR REAL THIS TIME

it's it's uh technology ***** it's darpa it's the internet it's literally the internet it's the nuclear uh it's the it's all of these things that are carrying out america's oh and let's not forget financial institutions like the and uh the uh brettton woods system constructed after world war ii that then distributes like a global currency imperium courtesy of the world bank and the imf none of these things are permit permeable by through politics and all of them operate on along the axis of doing the disinterested 0:10:34 uh aim of capitalism but they're in conf they're in conflict with these institutions that have within them a popular participation we do vote we do have elections we do administer the economy through laws which are technology and is a necessary technology to keep this ***** thing going and there is a dynamic by which the social pain created by capitalism is then met with some punishment and some amelioration in some distribution and the entire american post-war project is distributing that pain throughout this new global uh uh economic order and you could not do that demographic democratically by definition because you cannot you you um it goes against profit and you will you will you will give up to the degree that they make you give up that human instinct humans be acting through human institutions like 0:11:36 political parties like cultural expression those things press the case on behalf of the human ***** race but these institutions at the top are manned completely by people who have consecrated themselves spiritually to capitalism and will never give it up until it's destroyed everyone but them they have to be dethroned and that means that they have to be uh resisted by humans through human cooperative action and the reason this matters is because so much of what we call political commentary and action in this ***** country is moralism we are tr we are operating on the assumption that people are making decisions to make the world this way and that means that there is this ability for us to convince people and mass to act differently people 0:12:37 are going to act the way that their incentive structures their individual incentive structures uh tell them to act it's not going to be through decisions now people are going to change their minds and they're going to be radicalized but it's not going to be by those encounters it's going to be by encounters in their lives that are then filtered through culture and the reason this isn't a pedantic distinction is that which way you understand that dynamic determines how you interact with the world how you interact with politics how you emotionally invest in the spectacle of online political participation how what what you bring to uh what priorities you bring to in-person organizing these are all determined by do you think that this is a materials struggle where people are going to have to cooperate along a desire to improve their material resisting these structures these dead-handed structures being carried out by people 0:13:38 one way or another are zombified and if they wake up they will be replaced with somebody else who is zombified you have to create a counter pressure among people

acting that way together if you think it's the other way around if you think we're all just making actions out of our own free will and then eventually enough of us just see how wrong it is in some abstract sense and then act that way vote different get a different job behave differently in any way not coordinated to a material aim but to a moral position you're pissing in the wind you cannot affect change that way you will provide fodder for the people who are going to do the work but you're only going to be spitting into a ***** windmill so that is what the central point that i've been trying to make about all of these questions about how to engage with the world in the imaginative space of politics like what is how are we supposed to fill that gap that we all have and it boils down to this that it is humanity versus a abstracted principle carried out by people not because of their individual choices but because what is what power selects for within its own structures committed to it they might one by one decide that they can't live that way anymore and they will be replaced because they are not acting in because many of these people are benefiting from the system because we don't have class consciousness when we're all consumers they understand themselves even if they feel guilty they understand themselves to be benefiting from the system materially and that is going to commit them to their material ends so that means that no matter what you think your beliefs are depending on where you find yourself in the social strata you will not you individually but you collectively and over a large population will choose this which means that these organizations are all filled with people who have made the moral choice that is going to keep them where they are any horrible thing they see they will be able to rationalize away from exposure to moral exposure to they will perform more ritual politics but they will do that to distract from the need for material politics because they feel threatened at a way belo and the reason it's hard to talk this way is because when you hear things like you do this you make this decision people think they're talking about you're talking about me saying that i am fated and structured no individuals can choose against this and they do all the time but there is no cumulative effect that actually challenges power that emerges from that everybody after god died and we had to bring heaven to earth everybody basically has had the same idea everybody no matter where they are uh politically if they have an id like some people don't some people have bigger fish to fry but people who are modern subjects enough to go through life imagining heaven which we now are to be moral uh required to strive for right and it has to be a material heaven because remember we got rid of we got rid of we cannot all imagine the kingdom of heaven because we all have to live together now and it's more real over time as we break from the land it is less real the heaven we cannot feel an ineffable heaven and also we live longer and it's we spend more time sitting around there's a lot of things that make it so that we cannot imagine heaven collectively and express ourselves politically through that lens we have to imagine making the world a certain way and everybody from arch capitalists to communists to uh uh everybody like i said who is trying to engage with modernism and is not trying to you know be reactionary to the point of wanting to return to like hunter-gatherer society or something like the non-reactionary progressive face of all political uh expressions from the left to the right including fascism is a place where at peace where robots do all the work everybody gets to hang around and robots do all the work that's what that's what all the mid-century visions of modernity whether they 0:18:45 were in the soviet union or in the west were about they had the same iconography and they had pointed towards the same goals because if we were going to increase if we were going to keep developing technology and then having that technology's uh resources distributed broadly through a population so that people can participate in creating a culture around economic activity uh then eventually you get enough socially controlled technology that you have an over abundance and then what do you do the answer is you go to space you keep building but not in the uh in the death spiral way that our program of capitalism is pulling us towards one where we solve all these problems because we're democratically deciding either because we've purged 0:19:46 the world of non-uh aryan uh or we've used democratic principles like in the west to bring about this consensus reality through reform or in the soviet sphere the working class has fully overthrown capitalism and has socialized the means of production which is what marx was dreaming for and which i think is really something that is possible whether we're going to do it is a mother much different question but i think given the raw material of humanity i think it could have been built or and could be built and because that's what we're imagining modern subjects trying to live together what do you make you make a world at peace filled with robots doing the work whether it's because we killed everybody else off or because we overthrew a system of capitalism we are doing that so everybody is pursuing their political aims to get to that point through institutions the institutional logic is not pulling you 0:20:47 towards this because there's no human ballast to it there's no humane social reality there is no conv conception of like the human race as such that can survive the the logic of the thing it's it's part it's one of the many things that is conditioned out of and so everybody thinks they're using the tools of capitalism to direct us towards this uh this utopia whether it's hitler stalin mao uh with a great great leap forward uh or the ***** uh new dealers uh you know or frankly even uh the like neo the uh the taft republicans if they weren't dreaming of you know and so they're all using 0:21:51 capitalism to make this thing happen and what they're getting is the technological development but the technology developed technological development put to the the goal of coercing labor out of people because you have to extract profit and that means uh alienation and that alienation has to be stored somewhere and it is stored in the surplus profit that is that enjoyed by the people at the top and it starts off as a social uh programming but it becomes a transcendent sentinel that motivates human behavior over large populations and the historical role of the bourgeois is to take technology this thing that is being used to compete between these ruling classes that are like not recognizing the fact that we're all human beings and then technology 0:22:53 creates gets to a inflection point where we understand humanity to be a different thing than we did before and and the technology exists to coordinate labor and reduce labor inputs that's the important part now there's a point though in capitalism where if you use too much to uh if you do too much capital investment in technology you you get a crash you get a terminal crash uh because what are what's everybody doing you know that boiled down to what is everybody doing when they're not ***** working and so they're put to work while profit is extracted and democratic deliberation is removed from the system so by the time you get to the 70s and 80s after the high point of like space exploration at a point where everybody thought we'd be on mars in 2020 absolutely you ask a person on the street in 1971 are we gonna be on mars in 2021 they'd be like of course we're gonna have a ***** embassy on mars there's going to be there is going to be a mcdonald's on mars and that's because nasa was 0:23:56 part of our folk collective dream be it popular front left wing or uh like small town babbitt republican to build it or like walt disney the fantasy like tomorrowland we're all gonna use capitalism to get there use use market logic to get there meanwhile you're building a machine that is sufficiently advanced to no longer need the human inputs and therefore can distribute less of that profit to them and therefore increase the profit that it's the the profit accumulation where it's supposed to go it makes the system more efficient it rationalizes the system towards total profit extraction and as pockets of humanity that have been able to band together politically to make some sort of social demand on capitalism as they lose their ability to resist uh they lose 0:24:59 their material comfort and they become precarious the giant drop in life expectancy in the soviet union 30 something like 20 years over the course of a decade the largest peacetime and that could happen because of uh the relative honestly the relative lack of comfort there that could have bred like social rebellion the united states got because we've been because we were more developed the united states was more developed in the center their their workers had gotten a better deal longer because they were always the headquarters they were the most advanced part of capitalism they were not a backwater like the russians were russia was not supposed to be where the ***** soviet where the communist revolution began maybe only as a spark not as like the so by the time the system comes into equilibrium uh with the oil shocks of the 70s it's like okay we're repricing these exchanges now because we've reached a certain 0:26:1

point of connectivity uh and and over production frankly that we're gonna have to start redistributing this stuff we're gonna have to start redistributing things away from certain populations and the less represented you were in government through the bourgeois the expressions of bourgeois politics the less able you were to resist it and so that's why in america when we had the shock therapy of the 70s which came before the shock therapy russia had in the 90s uh the people who felt it most most viscerally were of course the urban african-american population the war on drugs and the the uh was a direct response to the uh the destruction of the economic base of the uh black working class in the american cities uh people think of it uh people think of deindustrialization as something that started after nafta uh and some or maybe 0:27:2 they think it was the 80s with the japanese it started in the 50s internally and then throughout and then started to really ramp up in the 60s and the first places to see industrial employment really collapse were uh the pop were in the cities that uh black people had moved to from the south during the great migration all the way through to post world war ii uh to work in factories uh and they were able to build enough sufficient internal political will to do the civil rights movement the civil rights movement is an expression to which degree the black community once it was in the condition of like urban life was able to build itself into a coherent class response to exploitation it really is you get to the cities and it's like it it's it it super accelerates the process by which a coherent resistance to exploitation can be expressed so that's 0:28:3 why you went from you know uh the imposition of neo of apartheid after the civil war with relatively little resistance from the ex-slave community because of their lack of political organization because they had been or lack of uh social uh sophistication because they've been ***** slaves and then that they and then during through the 1890s there was a languishment in uh in the sharecropper economy but then with increased efficiency in technology of agriculture there was a lot of extra hands and unfeedable mouths in the south and it led to the great migration and so those black populations got access to those jobs but those were the first jobs to go because these while they would have been able to press the civil rights movement which was a sort of the bourgeois revolt like the it's equivalent to like this essentially what you 0:29:5 got is you got a 1789 revolution you got a bourgeois revolution uh in the form of the civil rights movement and its apogee but then there was never a kick over to uh like the next level of radicalism uh and it's because the engine of that resistance which had been these emergent urban communities began to unravel in the face of de-industrialization and so the pressure went away and what happened was is that those uh black work leaders who had made it sufficiently advanced into the system we're given a deal go along with this in exchange for your own personal security within this new uh system you are now going to be a winner you're going to be able to have a house you're going to be able to find employment in the system and people took the deal because there was nothing else on the table there's no blaming anybody for selling out because at all of these points in america there was nothing else on the table because we working-class coordinated response to capitalism and so everybody's community however they understood it and so that means that the conditions of uh austerity implied on america are going to be endured first by the people who have the least amount of political influence within the system some people make it into the new strata and then can reproduce themselves with thanks to affirmative action but most people are going to fall into the maw of prison system uh and and uh and the welfare roles to the extent that those existed and uh low-wage labor uh and the reason that this was allowable is because other groups were spared if you had gotten a home by the 1970s you were consecrated in your in your property you now have an investment instrument that will ride the market and guarantee you uh security forever congratulations you now get to vote like a capitalist and they did it's like when thatcher uh one of her biggest coups was in allowing people to buy their flats from the council estates that they lived in because unlike the united states the uh the british went in a huge spree of public uh housing manufacturer after world war ii they cuz they didn't have to ***** be the the um the army of the world anymore we could do that we're gonna spend we're gonna our keynesian engine of post-war prosperity is going to be our ***** defense industry it's going to be uh every bomb we build now and every ***** uh b-52 bomber and and this bill what we're gonna do that's gonna be our uh uh thing we're gonna subsidize housing for people uh in order to give them access to the middle class but it's gonna be through private enterprise that's just uh subsidized whereas the british because they were handing over to us the money they had they could spend on public housing but uh thatcher in the 80s offered people the option of buying their flats and a bunch of them did and then they started voting tori a lot of the older anti-corbin labor people who torched him in 19 in 2019 didn't do it because of anti-semitism they didn't beat him and they did they did it because of brexit but not because they understood that brexit is in the working classes best interest is because they didn't vote as working-class people they were homeowners many of them weren't working at all and in any way they are homeowners living on their and that's what the whiter working class with more political prep representation got i mean these are the people actually make the political structure who make it up who fill it there is a certain understanding of best interest there especially since these people all think of themselves as americans you got to remember this these people everyone here is thinking of themselves as an american so their best interest their understanding of their self-interest does have a social element and now our current crisis of faith and institutions boils down to the fact that as uh our instruments of government are more and more carried out are the actual uh the actual meaningful decisions made about our economic destiny are not democratically arrived at in any way let's just get that that is an axiom that has to be accepted as a first principle there that they have been there's no more human hand in this not that humans aren't doing it people are in these institutions they're not all algorithms but they have no they cannot be influenced by the public is what i mean the way that anyone in the political system really can be to some extent or theoretically could be that was true and that's been true for a while now but most people until like 2008 didn't really notice because if you had a house you were pretty much set and those are the people who voted so they understood the economy as this thing that's going up meanwhile you're gutting uh these inner cities you're gutting these uh rust belt towns white people in the middle west are now starting to have the same cultural pathologies that black people in the cities had that you used to say was uh actually what you used to say was uh genetic and all of a sudden you've got these poor white people acting like poor black people what what's going on but these are people are they either weren't in the home owning class or they fell out of it individually so they never contributed to the discourse their pain was drowned out by the general prosperity of the land owning class but now since 2008 which was the beginning of mass dispossession mass uh evictions after uh they just decided to in the one of the most single crucial decisions of the entire obama presidency uh to bail out banks instead of letting people keep their houses which they it was a choice made not democratically that no one if you'd said hey we're gonna put that on a ballot initiative re do the banks or give people their houses you what do you think would have won with about 95 percent of the vote wasn't on the ballot because those decisions are not democratically arrived at even if the what we can do is fight about ***** uh and ever since then people have been aware not all the same amount but in growing and growing amounts holy ***** all this stuff is ***** all these promises are lies there is no future where we're all living together in the robot paradise now there are some people who still live in the believe in the robot paradise but there are guys like elon musk who believe that the robot paradise will be on the other end of a genocide and i'd say like your hardcore nazi dumbass types think that too they think we're gonna do a genocide not a not a um formal one we're not gonna do ovens or anything we're just gonna put up a wall between the place that has food and water in the place that doesn't have food and water and then you're just going to kind of wait for the noise to die down meanwhile you're building your little now of course that's a fantasy and it would break down and these guys would all die screaming too but they would be the last ones to go because they're the ones most entrance to it and they will go at the end because their position is too compromised for anyone to who to enter it to be a human person i think that's the most important thing at a crucial spiritual level these people are not human that doesn't mean that they should be killed or that it's morally permissible to do so they are they ha they were human but the way that they view the world the way that they're emotionally wired to understand the world around them is not what human beings understand it i'm 0:38:28 sorry about the balance somebody's mad about the balance so yeah they're lizards that's why david ick was very good it's worse now it is better okay uh you guys are gonna have to shut the ***** up about the balance i don't even know what that means i'm sorry so let's i i promised black jackman's and god damn it i'm gonna try to get there even though that is a hell of a diversion ***** sorry uh so in a very 0:39:31 similar sense uh the the white people of san demang were not human beings the way that even others at the time would have thought of themselves uh and that is why the treatment that uh james gives of desolene's massacre of the whites after the expulsion of the french is so well considered because he acknowledges uh he acknowledges that it was a mistake and that it helped kind of doom haiti to um uh under development but he does not shed any uh any ***** tears for the planters and it's because to live that way while believing yourself to be a civilized person is to be a i don't know 0:40:32 what's the word for a dybbuk or something a demon something that has the form of a human being understands the world in human terms but responds to the world emotionally in a way that does not recognize like a dimension of humanity it doesn't recognize others as the self in any like at a visceral level and of course that's a process that has been happening over time and is intensifying as technology allows us to intensify uh and it's being distributed more broadly but it's like it's not just being distributed like culturalization also makes people more empathetic what this is it's it's the culture plus the proximity to horrifying violence it's the it's the listening to 0:41:34 your ***** uh your your chamber music and watching moliere next to a goddamn yeah so uh i just wanted to read this part that uh james does talking about that um early in the new year 1905 the whites in haiti were massacred by the orders of desolene all histories are full of this whatever and he says the massacre of the whites was a tragedy but not for the whites for those old slave owners those who burnt a little powder in the arse of a negro who burned buried him alive for insects to eat who were all well treated by toussaint and who as soon as they got the chance began their old cruelties again for these there is no need to waste one tear or one 0:42:35 drop of ink the tragedy was for the blacks and the milados it was not policy but revenge and revenge has no place in politics the whites are no longer to be feared and such purposeless massacres degrade and brutalize a population especially one which was just beginning as a nation and it had so bitter a past the people did not want it all they wanted was freedom and independence seemed to promise that christoph and other generals strongly disapproved had the british and americans thrown their weight on the side of humanity desolene might have been curbed as it was haiti suffered terribly for the resulting isolation whites were banished from haiti for generations and the unfortunate country ruined economically its population lacking in social culture had its inevitable difficulties doubled by this massacre that the new nation survived it all is forever to its credit for if the haitians thought that imperialism was finished with them they were sorely mistaken you guys are killing me with the audio here i'm going to go paddock mode on myself what is going on 0:43:37 what do you guys want i allow you people are dogs i will go how do i no ***** hell i don't the thing is i don't know i want people to understand what i'm ***** saying i'm trying to be to communicate something what the hell is wrong with you ***** what are you listening to this ***** on do you have like ***** bose headphones do you have are you listening to this on that format that neil young insisted on 0:44:38 because it's a super perfect uh sound are you all ***** christ so what's i think is really good about that segment and it is very indicative of uh james in general is that he understands like narrating history like morally and individually creating uh you know uh a human response to events but also grounding it always in what was conditioning those events so that you can kind of drain them of the residual uh uh sort of bourgeois sentimentality that accumulates because there's a lot of romance in this book the way that uh james describes toussaint louis tour is incredibly romantic i 0:45:40 mean that's very intentional he's trying to build tucson up to the level of like a great historic romantic figure like napoleon or simone bolivar and when he talks about like the power of the masses of slaves when he talks viperous uh evil of the planter class or of the maritime bourgeois or of the british ***** empire there's always um it's always but that's always in the service of highlighting the real stakes the real responsibilities who's really doing what to who and there's no way that the massacre of the whites in 1805 can be understood out of the context that not only have these been the people who'd been slave owners before the war and the revolution they were the ones who had happily uh lived under toussaint and then gone to watch dogs rip 0:46:41 slaves apart with rochambeau when he was descending into his ***** kurt's ass uh heart of darkness i i it's too low on phone i don't have so who is responsible for that and how is haiti supposed to go on as a society not try to compete as a nation among nations and therefore have like a productive economy in which the white slave owners are back there in charge of them now what ended up happening of course is that they were replaced by black rulers but that is more socially convivial it is 0:47:42 less of an affront to humanity because of the specific experience of slavery but there was another path that toussaint wanted to go to sant's vision because he was at the end of the day one of these enlightenment figures he was a guy who was as much a embodiment of the moment as napoleon ability vision coming together with ability who after deciding to fully commit to this to the project of after i would say so at first i think he was moving from and james talks about this he moved from position at first when it looked like the slave revolt had petered out he was willing to exchange his freedom and the freedom for some of the other leaders for the slaves going back 0:48:44 into slavery which is you know a betrayal but for someone who didn't want the country to descend into total bloodshed who wanted to see it progress socially and that was it there was the offer wasn't accepted so he said ***** you he joined the spaniards fought for the king because the french were trying to reimpose slavery but then when slavery was abolished first by santa knox and then for toussaint that was a lifeline that was the lifeline uh that honestly that like trotsky and ***** lenin were hoping would be extended from germany after the bolshevik revolution they this was the thing that was going to allow haiti to develop through the stages of non-racial 0:49:46 capitalism to socialism now maybe he wouldn't have thought of it in those terms but that's where he was pointing himself which is as progressive as you can be at that stage in history because of the the lack of development of of class relationships is there a thing i could press to all right i'm going to turn this back on what about that people talking about on to one side you have zero sympathy with me i am half 0:50:48 deaf i can only hear out of my left ear i don't ***** give a ***** about what side it comes out of ***** there's only one side you are being i don't need to hear you whining about not being able to hear out of both ears ***** i can never hear out of both ears just like you can oh shut the ***** all right nevermind never mind you're trolling me and i'm enjoying it too much uh and the tragedy of toussaint is that he was marching towards that direction towards that vision of of a revolutionary 0:51:49 france dedicated to human principles of human equality uh extending the hand of uh of uh brotherhood to the new multi-racial revolutionary bourgeois of haiti the tri-color bourgeois of haiti creating a new uh rationalized market-based relationship where people worked for money with no racial discrimination at all and then were able to express themselves through the chain channels of popular politics eventually and who and you know what if you got him if you got them like an ayahuasca haze and let him see it to the end of that he would prefer he would prefer to see a final communist pace but only but he knew that that could haitian uh social structure sufficiently to do that and what he was pulling against was the fact that after having been ***** uh slaves for so long uh there was very little economic incentive that uh 0:52:50 the ex-slaves could be given to go back to working in the cane fields because you paying them doesn't really exchange the experience they're working to make sugar that somebody else is going to ***** eat and even if they get a portion of the profit which was the the uh deal that toussaint tried to give them small recompense for that labor what they would have liked to have done was work way less and like a communist subsistence economy could have emerged there like there's especially after the revolution my god you could have had a collaborative experience towards that but haiti isn't isolated haiti isn't all by itself haiti is enmeshed in a modern world surrounded by modern powers and a subsistence communist haiti would not have had the sufficient economic uh activity and capital formation to resist being overtaken by any of those other powers they wouldn't be able to put together the structures of government that allow people in the modern world to execute uh control in their borders and outside of them the machinery of state that emerged out of capitalist development and so that is why toussaint always tried to sucker the the the uh the planters it's why he resisted calls to declare independence from france uh and it's why he so vigorously reimposed uh discipline in the plantations so that people were working similar conditions as under slavery but you know less punishing but uh but still not what notions of like uh of collective uh enterprise that would be necessary to keep a state together had to come out of people becoming and having and then james points out that the fatal flaw i mean as much as this might have never been possible and the reaction of napoleon indicates that it was never possible uh but that was a contingent decision and could have gone the other way and like up until that point tucson had every reason to think he might be able to get it done uh but once that happened once once napoleon decided to reimpose french control it became impossible and toussaint's big uh failure according to james is that he failed to recognize when uh it was too late he failed to recognize that his dream was not going to be possible and that he was going to have to organize the the people of haiti for freedom whatever that meant or else slavery would be attempted to be reimposed and then that would lead to a race war which it did and he didn't want any of that he didn't want to race war he didn't want massacres he didn't want the country to descend culturally and socially and economically he wanted it to progress but he thought for too long that that was possible basically that was his great tragic flaw and so he did things like suppress workers uprisings and execute his popular nephew moyes and refused to rally people in advance of a french that was his great flaw and and the thing is is it was a failure of his it was not even a failure was a it was a weakness of humanity it's that he didn't want to do what he was going to have to do he wanted to create civilized structures of exchange which meant employer-employee relationships in a market that was human liberty in that moment there was a vision shared by all these guys rob spirit and napoleon and that meant that you guaranteed that the person who would end up taking power would be someone like dessaline who i'm sorry i know it's epic and base that he killed all those white people but and of course he wasn't he'd had a much more traumatic life experience than he had been tooussaint had been a a a well-treated uh driver and then had been free for five years desolene as james points out had the lashes on his back so desolene didn't have like this expansive vision that toussaint did but what he did have was an understanding of the moment more and an understanding of the french more and what they were going to do and the irreconcilable of them the irreconcilability of them and so he was the one who won and the thing is is like what he was willing to do to strike back at the british or the french uh indicates like it's just a absolute coldness like he suppressed french anti-french uh rebellions uh on behalf of the french on behalf of rochambeau 0:58:58 while he was torturing people in the pits he alienated enough actual haitians that uh his uh he was foiled at his attack on port-au-prince by a maroon band tipping but that isn't but like you get desolate not uh toussaint because of frank the french decision now there's there's two there's a couple of interesting questions here though so let's say napoleon changes his mind and says let's let's let's let toussaint be uh enshrined in power because he's the only one who can rule it like napoleon was super racist obviously uh and that was a thing that influenced his thinking josephine his 0:59:59 wife was a ***** planter like he had that and he also didn't really care about that's the colonial policy as much and didn't know as much uh but there was somebody there should have been somebody who could have argued to him uh that it was just not possible to hold the island without tucson because that's what every single one of his ***** uh french uh officials who came back from uh haiti had told him over and over again and he was just i guess too ***** racist to accept it and but anyway let's say that he changes his mind which he could have he did write a letter uh giving to son command when he thought he might be able to join with russia to attack india but let's say he says fine we'll give it to you and toussaint gets to carry out his experiment what he's going to have to do because remember enshrining 1:1:2 property rights is at the foundation of the modern state and modern and modern notions of legality that he's trying to impose that means that the people who are going to be getting the majority of the uh surplus of this sugarcane operation are going to still be the white planters i mean not all of them a lot of the but some of them are going to be generals in in tucson's army now but there's also just going to be the there's going to be this continued alienated condition of labor that is going to continue to alienate people uh and the question would have been how will tucson handle that and it really is why the only thing that makes sense from napoleon and toussaint's position is to join together to launch a ***** invasion of from new orleans it's the only thing that makes sense because when you have a situation where 1:2:4 you have a developing social uh relationship or a developing capitalist economy um you have a developing capitalist economy you have a exploited proletariat that ex that exploited proletariats anxiety alienation has to be directed somewhere and it's some combination of inside and outside through repression reform and war those are the three ways the state can respond to social alienation of capitalism and it's some kind it's never all of one usually it's some combination of the three internal political reform that redistributes socially and not rationally pulls away from the commandment of profit just the repression of the state against those who resist it 1:3:5 and then the outward venting first in in america colonial war and then uh and so that means if you have mounting alienation among the uh planters of haiti some of it would be directed towards uh there would be some rep repression of course some of it would be directed towards uh reform towards democracy but there would also be this desire to create a project for everybody and that project could have been marching through the underbelly of america to help turn the uh caribbean into the french mediterranean because at this point napoleon is basically ***** in england or in the uk europe rather because uh the mediterranean is at that effect by that point effectively a british lake and if he gets a crescent he is able to exert uh maritime 1:4:10 power which he has to be able to do to compete with the ***** british because this is basically a fight over who is going to be in charge of capitalism the french are the english that is what the napoleonic wars were who's gonna get the stick who gets the stick whose ruling class gets to wrap their hand around the stick of power and slowly be turned into reptiles and of course the british win for a number of reasons one of them being that they are more but a lot of it is because we speak ***** english because they got and held north america the french had fought for north america they had a bigger chunk of it than england did until the french and indian war when they lost canada and then it's the loss of uh then they lose that and it's over at that point the english have it and they're gonna they're gonna win and they that's why 1:5:12 you know your romantic counterfactual dream is to go back because they had the french revolution because the english had instead the english civil war which is a bunch of ***** freak-ass puritans doing a giant uh self-mortification ritual a bunch of just sickos filtering this this rightful execution of a uh of a tyrant with with some religious horseshit about uh about the key people who carried out that people there was the english civil war was won by a q anon there are these people within the inner circle of the post uh stuart protectorate the people who'd cut the head off of the king 1:6:15 who were called fifth monarchist men who believed that england was destined to be enshrined like the uh a monarch who would then usher in kingdom on kingdom of uh the kingdom of whereas the french revolution is liberty equality fraternity ***** those are some ***** words man but that's why they lost if you wanna if that's why we're where we are because that was never on the table really because there were never going to be more efficient so i'm going to wrap up now but i just want to say 1:7:17 one more thing about black jackman's which i hope everyone enjoyed if they read it and i recommend they read it if they haven't uh a really great paragraph that i think says something very important about the structural incentives i talked about earlier to bring it all back to like how we're in a system where once you are within a once not even once you don't put it that way not once you are in a position once a position exists within a bureaucracy it will be filled by people who will do what it wants it wants because it has an institutional prerogative that is independent of human will and the person who is in that job will do it if they don't like doing it anymore they will stop doing it somebody else will start doing it and it's because the people within these structures overwhelmingly will always filter everything they experience in life through their best material interest which is to keep the position they have if they care about it which most of them do because of we have nothing else to do but sell our labor and this is talking about uh a french officer who had served under uh toussaint for a lot of the period of the war with the british who like many of the french white uh officers who served under tucson loved him and thought he was a goddamn genius i mean that's really the thing that james likes to point out because this book is historically contingent on it's historically situated his he's writing in the 30s as a direct response to like the racist understanding of the war like lothric stoddard the guy who wrote the uh the rising tide of color against world white supremacy wrote a book about the haitian revolution about how it was basically uh the white race destroying itself uh and allowing itself to be destroyed uh to be massacred by by savagery basically um so he was directing he was directly responding to that and one of his big pieces of evidence is of of the of the sophistication of the haitian revolution and how it represented the humanity it expressed the humanity of those who participated in it was the french response to tucson so anyway this guy even though uh his toussaint's uh office toussaint's soldiers during a rebellion uh had put him in jail and he got knocked around a little bit and he still loved tucson but uh so tucson is starting to realize that the french aren't going to allow him to maintain his position and let him do what he knew he needed to do to keep things on an even keel uh and vincent before he sends him away is begging dussan to ex to just uh to go back on his pledge to create sort of a unilateral dictatorship on the island because he believed in his heart that they didn't have anything to be afraid of he was one of the voices telling tousant that they didn't have anything to be afraid of because there's no way france would ever try to bring back slavery because they'd won the goddamn revolution so yeah so he leaves for france uh he's telling him don't do independence whatever you do uh and he wrote a letter from philadelphia on the way to france telling toussaint don't do independence vincent did all that a man could do even in trying to detach christoph from tucson he was acting as he thought in the best interests of france and of san domingo to him the restoration of slavery was unthinkable he expected it as little as millions of british people expected the intrigues of baldwin ***** and eden with laval and mussolini after the denial of arms to abyssinia and the grandiose promises of fidelity to the league of nations and the idea of collective security many an honest subordinate has in this way been the unwilling instrument of the inevitable treachery up above the trouble is that when faced with the brutal reality he goes in the end with his own side and by the very confidence which his integrity created does infinitely more harm than the open enemy that bit about the confidence in his own integrity and that is true there are so many people who do daily murder to the earth who believe in their hearts that their values align with human goodness they are not the dead-eyed musk nihilists who want to drink everyone's blood they really believe we can get to that democratic uh uh post-war jetson city vision future they really think that and they think the fact that they're in that system and they think they believe that is proof that the system works is proof that their commitment to the system that keeps them in it is worth maintaining and keeps them making these decisions that are always the least bad ones that anyone could make yes this is a bad thing it's going to hurt people but it's going to hurt fewer people than something else and other people are doing other things that'll make it all okay we're all participating in our own way and we're all making the world a better place and the fact that we're in means that we will stay there and that means that when our superiors who remember are higher up and therefore literally less human whose blood runs colder who do not believe the fantasies that you believe because they can't afford to they cannot allow their decisions to differ from the coldest decision that the machine would demand so they cannot amuse themselves with morality and that means that they're going to operate according to the machine and tell you what to do that will help the machine and then you carry it out thinking you're helping people because you think people are telling you and people have not been telling us what to do for a while now and our whole civil breakdown is people coming to terms as their ability to affect the control of their environment goes away that they this is not black pill i know it's dumb but it really isn't because we are using the people who exist within it but the system is evolving and every day is responding to the increased entropy within it entropy is entering the system in ways that is producing unpredictable outcomes and we are all still human beings within these systems who have as long as we're going to be alive the imperative the unchallengeable imperative to make sense of what we're doing here and why we're here and what's good and what's bad and then move from there we have to all make those decisions some of those and those decisions and we're making them every moment we're like as i said black pill is not a thing that you uh don't take it it requires to then it must be taken as soon as possible honestly and then digested because it doesn't tell you what to do now and if you say no it tells me to do uh hedonism and nihilism well how's that working out for you as sarah palin would say well i'm gonna definitely talk to chris about what to do to fix this maybe i wasn't close enough to the microphone i don't know i hope people could hear it alright bye louder very apologetic sorry i am not okay it's now under talk shows and podcasts there we go all is right with the world and it sounds a little louder does it sound better i was getting all frustrated and i realized oh i'm no longer just on my laptop with the laptop microphone i have an external device over here with knobs on it you so i turn the knob and i think it's louder i turned off the other thing so it should 0:4:7 not be echoey any so i'm going to turn it up a little bit more how amazing is it that the taliban very well could take control formally of afghanistan's government on the 20th anniversary of 9 11. can you just get your head around that and even if it isn't it'll be close enough for government work 20 years all of it a chosen war of aggression we know this because we know that the taliban offered in exactly what we have now 0:5:8

or what we're going to have now which is a taliban as part of a government at least but without el and al qaeda and uh bin laden handed over on a ***** plate to the united states or at the very least like executed in afghanistan and instead we got this and it you cannot say that it was a mistake this is the important thing that it was a bungle or a ***** up or a missed opportunity we were we've been ever since the fall of the soviet union the united states had been blindly groping for agenda that could fit the underlying economic necessity of a continued war economy the united war ii was premised on military military spending in order to maintain a military hegemony that then undergirds a economic hegemony a global capitalist system that is not distributed uh evenly across the globe but that is concentrated in the united states where the entire global economy acts as a ratchet pulling towards the united states like the big black hole and it's the and that regime is a imperial regime and that regime is undergirded by imperial relationships but thanks to technology more than anything that imperialism no longer has to be formal so that means no more colonies instead you have trade networks and the us dollar and then after the 70s the but it's also upheld by the military it's upheld by this force projection that makes the american dollar the safest place for value to be stored because we have the ***** capacity to assert our ***** will which is what is the actual basis for the value of currency it has nothing to do with intrinsic value of precious metals or anything else transcendent notion of value it is the the power of the state to affirm the exchange that involves that currency and thanks to our military the united states is the world currency that is most affirmable militarily so therefore the most stably store value so we get to be the consumers at the end of the supply chain our consumption gets to fuel the entire machinery and the context whereby we affirmed that after world war ii was in the context of a cold war with the soviet union a conflict of values between democracy and totalitarianism or freedom and uh and conformity whatever ***** we wanted with the soviet union that prerogative failed fell away and the nakedness of american empire became uh clear and there was a crisis at first there was a lot of talk in washington about something they called a peace dividend at the end of the soviet union all that money we spent in the military should come back but that would require but that would undermine america's consumer economy would undermine the so there had to be a new modus vivendi george h.w bush started it off by essentially tricking entrapping saddam hussein into invading kuwait they entrapped him like uh like ***** marion barry so that they could affirm the america as the global policeman after the global policeman of the new world order but that doesn't really have the same uh persuasive power of a civilizational crisis so we just kind of drifted even after that hell that war couldn't even get ***** bush re-elected for christ's sake and then clinton spent eight years uh struggling for something hey what if we some kind of argument were why we have and then 9 11 happen and this for me is why we will never get rid of uh the sneaking suspicion that 911 was an inside job because it fulfilled a historic role that seems outlandish to have just occurred exogenously to the system but of course the thing to remember is it wasn't it was the outcome of 0:10:15 all of this it was the outcome of america's imperial power play it was blow back but when it got we received the blow back from 911 there was no accountability there is no danger there's no concern oh no people are going to realize that we've made we brought this on ourselves because they have a new story to tell now and it does not involve making a deal with the taliban to hand over bin laden and then we all have to sit around and say hey why did that happen why why did these guys blow this place up no because where does that lead sure ***** doesn't lead to another argument another tale to tell to justify a globe spanning empire ***** no and if you have both parties on board and you have more importantly than that you have the military industrial bureaucracy forget even just forget even the money involved just the sheer weight of bureaucratic uh momentum and then the specific desires of the freaks of 0:11:17 the in the bush white house no one is gonna take that deal they're gonna ***** put pedal to the metal hell they went to iraq more than anything in order to keep that energy going somewhere they ran out of good targets to blow up in afghanistan that uh rumsfeld was pushing iraq from day one because they wanted a ***** project and afghanistan even though it's crucial in like geostrategic terms uh uh in central asia you know uh where it's positioned especially related to things like opium and ***** pipelines compared to the ***** middle east it's a total backwater they needed some place at the center of the great game and the great game had moved south and west and also if you're going to keep this new war footing it requires continued pressure and continued threat because eventually people are going to normalize that 9 11 0:12:18 happen so you have and it's like the joke about like bin laden said that the point of doing 911 was to make america destroy itself through imperial overreach and people say ah he's getting exactly what he wants well it's no it's what he wanted but way more importantly than that it's what he wanted it's what the system demanded it's what was neces it was what was required for the system to continue and the system will continue because it can no longer post-soviet union be resisted or is resisted in the current moment in any coherent way we have a broken working class a broken humanity and we are at the mercy of this thing and we have been for a while by the time 9 11 happened we had been declassified we had been atomized and the last 20 0:13:19 years has been only the continued acceleration of that process as the the systemic shocks the ex the the environmental the truly the environmental and resource-based shocks are accumulating in the system and creating this spiral of destabilization that is now reverberating through our entire political structure and it's undermining the

system's ability to uh to continue and that is what makes it so hard sometimes to understand nobody actually in charge wants things to be the way they are like that's why people have to invent lizard men who want to eat babies because you ha there is no human desire for where we are and where we're going nobody wants the world to cook nobody wants it maybe there's a few nihilist psycho billionaires i think they're going to mars but they are a fraction of a fraction of people and they don't really they 0:14:20 have no power their money is what nobody wants this but we're getting it because we have lost the fight for control of the technological mechanisms what we lost it to was capitalism was and so the thing that would have been best for humanity by any stretch including the ruling classes of america after 9 11 would have been an inward as is always the case it would have been an inward look towards you know actually creating democracy just like it would have been better after world war ii if we'd had a henry wallace-led reproach mount with the soviets and in a mutual uh progress towards decolonization instead of the cold war and if we had gotten a real reconstruction and after world war one after the civil war and if we'd gotten a german and at 0:15:22 every turn the wrench moved the the the human intervention in the system became less our ability to actually do our regular lives and make it mean anything has has changed has reduced we don't we still have power and this is why this is beyond black pill we still have power we're all humans we literally are in charge of this thing still but we cannot be humans the way we are now and stop it if the incentive structures that are built into our social relationships if followed if l if rationally followed will prevent us from ever meaningfully resisting this thing until it's too late so the hope is 0:16:32 that we become different people and that the changes the changes that are going to come to our understanding of our material relationships and more importantly than anything our faith in the existing structures that we operate under are going to be fatally compromised and once that happens we aren't the same people anymore we respond to different stimuluses and different uh different motivations and respond differently and so we have hope but the reason that it looks like we don't is because we are trapped in structures that were created uh at the at at the dawn of the of the mot of the of the modern moment the high modernist moment of of the cold war like everything every structure we have is design was designed to facilitate existence 0:17:33 in the context of the post-war world which was an extensively uh infinite progress that will always be able to create new avenues of profit by intensifying and that that process will be overseen and we're going to utilize structures of science technology to be able to figure out the correct thing to do and then we will use democratic means of governance to figure out what the what the collective interest is and then pursue it using these technologies now this system contains within it inherent class contradictions racial contradictions al all sorts of social pathologies that come from the fact that it's an unequal society but we can manage those that uh pain manage that alienation through a redistributive redistributive process we redistribute wealth 0:18:35 to the working class first the white ones then after black self-assertion to a greater degree uh the black ones than other uh groups as they assert their uh rights also and and are accommodated into a uh a and that we will all be deliberating through the lens of a mass mediated culture where we all have certain understandings of what america is american interests we have a certain credulity uh to the best interests or to the uh we have a credulity about things like the media and things like government we assume a level of honesty uh we assume a level of trust because if we're in the center of this thing if we're people who are who have succeeded enough to be citizens to vote then our experience with america has only been positive we won the war 0:19:36 and now we're creating mass comfort and con in a consumer society where we all get to be we don't get to express our individuality our humanity through control of our work but we do get to express it through control of our environment in the form of consumption so we have sublimated away all of that class conflict and we get in return material comforts we get the suburban home we get new and better appliances that make our lives easier we get dreams of greater and greater uh uh uh consumption bigger cars bigger houses trips uh to disney world fantasies we never knew could imagine we create and and it functioned for a while but then first the social uh conflict started heating up in the 60s but at that very moment the environmental constraints the material constraints started to kick in the one of those big key 0:20:38 of that equation cheap energy inputs blew off there were a bunch of uh warning signs that the system was going to seize up in the 70s uh and nixon tried his damndest to try to keep the thing going with pushing every button uh that keynes has but it was the ***** uh oil crisis that permanent made it permanent and that put us in a new permanent position vis-a-vis all these inputs and what that meant is is that the treats couldn't flow the promise of treats would would dry up and instead of confronting that because by then the democratic party had become a husk with no working-class imperative and all it had was more uh liberal moralism to sell people wear a sweater and stop wanting so much reagan was there to say with a pitch honed by uh 40 years of anti-new deal uh uh reactionary uh ideology being formed hey you know what there's still hope if we cut regulations and taxes if we make you pay less 0:21:40 for the state then you will be able to have more to use we're not going to give you any more money we don't say that out loud but it's the obvious outcome we don't push these points anymore we just push taxes and regulations and people do make some money if you had a home by 1980 they protected it you were in under the gun if you didn't you were ***** and if you were in an urban area that had been de-industrialized early you got the drug war shoved up your ass but if you were in the suburbs you got home equity that you could borrow against you got cheap credit that you but what that means is that the number of people who are invested in this thing who believe in it who do things like vote and care and participate civically starts to dry up and the only ones left are those people who have succeeded through it but over time there are fewer and fewer of them and their kids don't have access to any of these deals and so all the premise the structures of of government the structures of belief and compulsion that had been forged in the post-war era are still there still all we have cannot be interfered with because we don't have a political uh um counter hegemony to it but no longer hold any persuasive power to people fewer and fewer people participate and the ones that do are now participating through a lens that says these uh collective structures these things that we believed had like a universal character like we're americans in this together those are gone now the outside is not not america it's inside america and that's all because things keep getting worse and the ratchet of misery keeps uh going up and the ratchet of precarity madigas is talking the other day about oh actually everybody has it great americans have it so good and of course if you put it on paper yeah everybody has it good but that's not how people experience the world the world experience is experienced relatively and subjectively and the relative subjective experience is being my wildly lonely and miserable all the ***** time and if not wildly precarious and terrified all the ***** time some version of that some version of of anxiety and alienation felt and un that cannot be subsumed by pleasure by uh consumption because one the consumption is less satisfying than it used to be and two so everybody is miserable you can put them on a graph and say their lives are uh by relative measure to other countries great uh and there and uh things are john shade said that the other day he's like he's saying why everyone's mad is fox news and he eliminated all these other options and by any by pointing out that the math the science didn't work and for him it's like hey things are getting worse and shade says actually things are doing fine things are actually getting better wages are slightly increasing and you know uh all these people are earning uh uh wait uh you know middle class lifestyles sure it doesn't feel that way and that's where people live people live their lives through those felt associations and politics is an expression of those feelings not rationality not some coherent ideology very few people everybody's ***** miserable i was looking at uh this amazing thread that alex loan option uh fym god curated of the police blotter of the villages in florida and a bunch of people driving drunk in golf carts but one that stuck out for me was a woman who was arrested at a burger king in the villages for losing her ***** burger king employee because she didn't like the tomato in her whopper and she called her the n-word and i think like a black ***** or something and was actually arrested she got probation now obviously this is a racist bitter woman uh who just saw a a black person who was not subservient enough to them and was enraged by it but just imagine the idea that you're gonna get mad that your ***** tomatoes in your burger king aren't good it's burger king man it's never been good you live in the villages how could this be your last straw i can get somebody whose life is a misery 0:26:48 getting a bad tomato in a in a whopper and then they don't get a nobody helps them and they flip out this person's life is sim has been a gossamer hammock but it feels like misery because they're getting old because they know they're gonna die because they have to displace that anxiety somewhere and they put it in these culture wars they put it in fixating on not any of the pleasures of their life but the all the ways that the pleasure isn't sufficient so that they can build up uh resentment which is the only kind and people call that a karen or whatever but everybody is doing that to some extent or another everybody is trying to find somebody to yell at for the misery they feel no matter where they are on the scale it's universal misery and it is expressed through a universal desire to yell at someone because fundamentally we 0:27:50 are consumers we're not workers we're not pmc either uh we're not bug men i mean we're not any of this ***** we are ***** consumers i mean i guess that is bug man fine but we are all no matter where we are on the spectrum no matter what our edgy political takes are no matter uh what chan we visit we are ***** consumers and that means that when we're confronted with a bad customer service experience which all of us feel we're getting from living in the united states right now everybody feels like they're getting a bad consumer experience they have only the resource and recourse to yell at someone to make it change because the assumption that we all live with and don't speak of is that we have no power over anything we individually people have no power over everything there is somebody else somewhere who does though and if we yell at them we will get somewhere the same way that if we uh yell at or we i mean somebody says mad as hell that's one of the things that's so 0:28:51 perfect about network among other things is that it's understanding of like someone trying to galvanize the alienation that is accumulating in that other moment of crisis the 70s by the way that's when the great reset happened everybody freaking out about the great reset the great reset happened in the carter administration and it was solidified by the by reagan's election that was the great reset everything has been reset since then now and what that reset was is the end of the equation the end of that post-war order where you had a political system fed by this economic system a political economy we built a new political economy but we didn't talk about it we 0:29:52 didn't notice it we didn't actually debate it or fight over it it just it just happened well we kept all of the same structures and we've been using those same structures to try to govern ourselves and try to imagine that we're participating in a political process while the actual political or the uh economic machine restructures our lives

completely without our consent because it's being done undemocratically it's been abstracted out of democracy it's being done at the fed it's being done uh where in the wtf wtf the wto and the imf is being done by uh the federal reserve it's being done so every decision is made every crisis emerges and a decision is made and the decision is made at the expense of people in favor of profit that is chincy but it's true 0:30:54 and of course there are people associated with those profits but they are really just at this point along for the ride none of us are actually in charge of the and so the reason everything looks hopeless is because we have structures that exist that are no longer connected to power in any way but we have no way to act differently because there's no counter-hegemonic uh structures that we can involve ourselves in we used to have that we had a working a a conscious working-class political counter hegemony in this country that it right it reached its apogee in world war ii it was beaten and destroyed and broken after the war with uh the counter-revolutionary forces of the american uh bourgeois coming together to carry out the second red scare to pass 0:31:57 taft-hartley and then it carried on as part of this executive committee of capitalism along with you know uh the corporate boards uh and and the the deep state and all that stuff uh the military industrial complex all of it the the whole deal they were they were at the table of power and they were making sure that working-class people got more uh got better wages got more respect we're invent we're allowed to move through and up into positions of cultural power and influence and therefore make art that was informed by a working class a self-conscious working-class experience that saw the new deal once you change the economic structure once you break class power like was broken in the 70s and 80s that conveyor belt to culture is broken 0:32:58 nobody more and more working-class people cannot expect their kids to be able to uh take the risks to enter the arts or to be able to compete on an even playing field with the richer children of the upper classes for the meritocratic spots that they're all going for and they get squeezed out of the system and the ones that are left have been exposed their entire life to a culture where they were never a worker whether they're working is not something that they understand they were only ever a consumer because they've only encountered culture that was created after the death of of the labor uh movement and but the hope the reason that there's wild hope in 0:34:2 everyone's hearts or should be these structures are of course doomed to be destroyed by the changing uh material conditions that they deny but that doesn't just mean you know climate change it doesn't just mean uh ocean action if acid ocean acid acidification or any of that ***** it's also uh that it no longer can persuade people to go along with it it can no longer persuade people to keep and if it can't persuade them to keep reading their jobs keep doing their jobs then the thing can't operate because it still needs people for a while we'll see but right now we're all stuck at the 0:35:8

end state of of consumer panic where we're just complaining the capital complaining to the going on the internet to to complain to the uh the helpline of the united states on twitter uh anywhere else but no one is paying attention no one is actually manning the lines your and that's why it feels helpless but that just means people have to are going to lose faith in this thing if you don't get enough calls if you don't get enough responses you will decide to do something now the thing they're going to do isn't necessarily going to be great not everyone is going to be spontaneously moved towards communism but the window opens the historic window opens there's a reason that toussaint breda which was what he was named called for most of his life when he came to prominence in the haitian revolution started calling because 0:36:10 that was a haitian phrase for where where possibilities emerge and he was that he was the opening that like and draw with the changes but of course this requires a certain degree of faith a leap of faith that we haven't gone past the point of no return 0:37:11 that skynet has not completely con but that hope is the same hope that carries you through the day the hope that makes you think that opening your eyes is going to be worth doing and that spending any time on earth is worth doing and that is that is not a rational thing and it's certainly not a prediction that you can confidently make through the missive absolute bafflement that make up our and yeah that's why i think it's going to be religious i think there's going to be a religious element to it just keeping my i'm right now i'm doing my best although probably not my best 0:38:12 i'm doing i'm doing an attempt at keeping my no my keeping my ear to the ground to hear the tremble of i do think there is something heartening in the fact that at a terminal point aristocracy which is always what the ruling class is becomes uh so interbred uh and so uh decadent that it can no longer exercise power i mean that's one of the that's what doomed feudalism is that the aristocracy lost its vigor like there there are potential kings who could have handled the conflict the the crisis of 0:39:13 like 1789 or 1917 but they sure as ***** weren't the kings produced by hundreds of years of in and i don't mean inbreeding literally i mean inbreeding class wise of idle aristocrats the places where ca uh where power was able to stay uh in stable hands were places where the uh aristocracy handed over power to the bourgeois on some conditions the stewards had a hard time coming to terms with it and they had to be several times disciplined and then eventually removed because they could not accept the reality of bourgeois rule in europe in england they had to ***** import the dutch to do it they essentially the first two capitalist economies of europe did a merger they were no longer competing they were and it and out of that became a 0:40:18 ruling class that essentially gave up power in exchange for privilege wealth uh and uh a big hat and so the dutch and krauts who came after the stuarts were a new house broken ruling class but in countries where that process happened differently

like france like russia uh the ruling the uh aristocrats held power until they had lost their control over uh the rest of populous and were ruled by incompetent dullards whose ability to intervene in events from a position of information and and will and authority leadership have been attenuated by their lack of struggle that their lives 0:41:20 have been just as fat little babies sitting around and that would have been true for their because capitalism is also class rule just as social so just as feudalism had been it must also be ruled by an aristocracy but that aristocracy has to have a different cultural validation feudalis feudal the feudal aristocracy was validated by their uh first their warrior prowess and then later more abstractly uh their the will of god through their ability to uh win at battle basically god's will is determined on the battlefield whoever wins deserves power because god is willed it that is the evangelical christian notion of right that persists today into uh america's ideology america's 0:42:22 national ideology which is at war with its uh in the international ideology of but a new era requires a new justification uh people didn't believe in god that same way uh democracy was more insistent people at the base had more of an ability to articulate their uh their wants and desires and rights like the urban hordes of uh paris and moscow and in that context a new validation for aristocracy had to emerge and it was the meritocracy and that's why the signal figure of liberalism the the godhead of liberalism is napoleon bonaparte the meritocrat of meritocrats who seized power from the decadent and decayed uh bourbon dynasty through sheer will and ability 0:43:24 replaced one monarchy with another where the premise was not god but of one's ability napoleon when he crowned himself emperor he literally crowned himself emperor he put the ***** hat on his own head pope ***** off and under napoleon liberalism is vital under napoleon liberalism is a fighting creed that gets people to ***** fight and die in thousands on the battlefield march into russia and freeze to that because it gets results because he but then the meritocrats kids you're not going to let the kid go out and and compete on an even playing field with everybody else they couldn't if they wanted to they're absorbing ***** at a level that gets them and so the kids of 0:44:28 the meritocrats are slightly less meritocratic than their parents had been their kids are less meritocratic than theirs had been some are so unmeritocratic they fall out sometimes people from the working classes move up in to the top through being so damn meritocratic but then guess what their kids less meritocratic than them until they either fall out or stabilize and it is a decline that cannot be interrupted and now our meritocrats are absolute ***** habsburgian incompetence they are dull-eyed slackwits the president of the united states the last two are demented old men and so that's part of the reason that this machine is this ***** plane is crashing into the 0:45:29 mountain is that they have no ability or will to work against uh the impera imperatives of capitalism even if they even if they wanted to even if they desire something

different they can only express it through the most idiotic way the ***** rich the the there are billionaires in this country who believe in q a basically or i think his brother the guy who owns the cubs one of those ricketts is a billionaire uh has had their emails leaked and it's all denise de souza ***** that's supposed to be for rubes that for generations was for rubes but now rubes is all that's left and that goes for the liberals too the most slack-witted sork and true believing ***** are all that's left or people who are a little more uh a little more practical understanding of our gerundocracy they hang around because they're the only people with everybody else grew up in little pods and this system and as i said the system is doing things against the will of those in charge of it these people see their kids are worse than them they don't want them to suck they see the ways that the system makes them suck but they can still only do what the system tells them to do and so then they have to explain this and they can only get the same fake delusional cultural explanations that used to be for the dummies because they're just as dumb they don't have any more insight into the world because they are experiencing it as just a far removed from power a guy like joe biden he has faint memories of his hat in his head of when government meant something and he's been living in that echoing that's why these old ***** are in charge of their democratic party because there is no will to take power from them among those younger than them because power doesn't mean anything to them so eventually even though your ruling class has all of these tools at their disposal to wield power and the working and class has nothing but their uh their cooperation eventually their misery and alienation becomes so acute that they are able to come together and assert power that the decrepit ruling class i do believe that we will get to a point of of organizing among the the dispossessed and the question that is still open though is to what degree has technology filled the gap of human experience and intelligence and initiative that used to be the thing that undermined and there is a hole that we can't see into because it will only prove itself one way or the other through the passage of time uh and the intervention of events which we can't know we can only participate in them uh in good faith and that is that is our task to participate in good faith in in the life that emerges around us and not to deny uh somebody asked for an example of the demiurge if you think of if you think of the the demiurge as as this uh as the will of humanity's uh the nightmare mind of humanity basically uh that is what that is generated by our alienation from one another and that we then inscribe in the world to reify that alienation because we need it we need to be alienated from each other in order to exploit one another and our will to exploit has been traditionally stronger than our pull toward away from uh towards each other because at every point those in power are using their power to create structures that reinforce alienation one way or another and then everybody

CUSHVLOG 183. FRIDAY THE 13TH - JASON TAKES WELLBUTRIN

who's born into that world is experiencing it through structures that inhibit and uh uh that inhibit human interactions that can uh be a wellspring of of uh of solidarity 0:51:49 and i would say that the american uh road network our automotive infrastructure is a that has the lived effect of imposing this false world on us where we are alone and where we have to orient our desires we have to orient our values around solitude around isolation where we have to privilege our own sensory comfort and pleasure 0:52:51 over others even others close to us because it is the only real thing we feel and our interest our uh automotive infrastructure ensures that our felt day-to-day lives are isolated that we spend time away from each other time like the time in our bodies is alone and if we live in a in a in a house if we got a part of that post-war dream it was in exchange for living more isolated lives instead of living in a walk-up good news instead of living in a shitty uh walk-up with two kids in one bedroom uh you get a nice piece of land in the country and the kids can run in the background that's great but what you're giving up is the fact that you had ***** neighbors that you had you could you spent a day walking amongst people living amongst people the that suburban ease and comfort and convenience is at the expense of time spent with others now if people say do new yorkers talk to their neighbors of course they 0:53:52 don't now this is the next step of that our ***** uh computer infrastructure our media infrastructure are our mediated lives generate that are now uh pumped to us through wi-fi are another lattice work think of how much time you spend online think of how much ***** even that how much time you spent just watching television or did before the internet that was time that you did spend i'm sorry commiserating building notions of value building notions of the good building feelings around ideas 0:54:54 and symbols that are forged in a social context we receive these symbols passively and apply them from a in a apply a solipsistic lens to them and that is not a choice we make it is not us moving towards sin it is us being that is yelled about swooping in and severing us towards the light of uh the light of unity which is where we are always living but i think yelled about somebody says does yell to both dumb or 0:56:17 does yell to both get off on human suffering i think if we conceive it as in human terms which is what you know what it all comes down to these are all these concepts are just metaphorical and symbolic structures to talk about the human mind the collective and if there is a evil god in intervening through a assertion of will and power uh into our affairs as humans it is not individual poi it is not the choices of individuals it is the combination of uh the and i think that's the real uh symbolic value of of you know epstein ***** and uh and bohemian grove it's the it's just a it's 0:57:20 a it's a sociological observation that people of us of sufficient acuity of mind to know what they are doing when they're presiding over this system have to ritually invert human values in order to continue living consciously subconsciously they do this the

more self-aware they are the more consciously they have to do it and that means now the problem with this metaphor and the reason it's dangerous just out there as a way to understand the world and why it leads to things i think the way people understand this process is as powerful people doing rituals to affirm their power and to uh make us miserable i honestly feel that these rituals are better understood you are trapped at the apex of a power structure that you are fully invested in it's given you more it's giving you pleasure but more importantly it is giving you the anxiety of losing that pleasure but it's also making you carry out monstrous acts and and preside over monstrosity well if you feel that you cannot leave that position and you won't remember if you do and leave somebody else comes in who's in that spot who doesn't have those qualms then you have to do something to to make hitler did that these through his uh racial occultism and our rulers do it through whatever ***** weird now not all of the ruling class has to do that remember i said they're mostly dummies and dumb people never have to worry about this stuff dumb people are so fully propagandized by their own ***** that they spew out culturally that they it doesn't even occur to them like the rickettsis like those dumbasses like the ***** koch brothers who think most of them are ***** dumb by which i mean they are propagandized by uh truths that given their uh exposure to reality they shouldn't believe basically is what it boils down to like we as regular people can be forgiven for believing the propagandized notions of american uh the values that's why we live in the black iron prison that's why we carry out evil even though we're trying to do good it's because we emerge into a culture we're told certain things we can only live a life and then and then compare it to our experiences or compare our experiences to what we're told and then we have to if you are at the apex of power you have a different experience of existence you see different things that undermine all of the ***** that you tell everybody else so there's a sufficient system of power you should have no belief in any of this stuff you should understand it to be ***** that's why they do ritual stuff to fill but if you're just a dumbass who rises there because all it needs is a body and a chair it doesn't need will it doesn't the system at those points it doesn't need human initiative it just needs a ***** body to fill a gap in a chain of reaction they need somebody to complete the ***** uh um to complete the circuit they need a warm body to grab two uh hot ends together they actually think this stuff ron johnson senator from wisconsin uh my cousin knows his family and has been to his house and he said that every room of their big ***** mcmansion has fox news on at he's a ***** you should know better but he doesn't need to know better because what do you need to be to be a senator you need to be a warm body in a suit who'll vote away same way in all structures of government there are a few places at high at high levels of uh sensitivity and intricacy that you still need intelligence and

that's where all the sickos are that's where all the people who have some freakish inverted consciously evil understanding of the world live because you still need to be smart but everybody else is just believing the same ***** that we all do obungler is a pure narcissist he believes only in himself and completely to him in himself to to of degree where he has become god which is of course the ultimate sin and makes him satan and trump is the same thing but trump is also trump isn't really dumb 1:3:34 so much as he doesn't care he is so purely self fixated that he doesn't care he has no intellectual vanity obama has trump just wants everyone to be paying but that's who's going to run for president and a glitching old robot like uh joe biden who still thinks it's 1975. someone says trump is pure id but obama has a bit of superego i would say that trump is pure id obama is id transubstantiated into superego by an 1:4:36 and that's why i really have to say that uh if i have a candidate for like archon of arkhans right now it would be biden what did i say by name and obama archon you 1:5:42 know what trump is an archon trump is a demiurgical archon trump i'm sorry obama is a demiurgical archon trump is more like one of those gods of chaos from warhammer anybody know about this warhammer you guys are aware of warhammer paul paul you know warhammer warhammer there are these gods of chaos who emerge from like the the soup of consciousness like the residue of human experience and they and these gods are sort of risen up by like human uh human civilization so you've got a god of war obviously there's a god of uh of uh of disease and then there's a god of just pure vanity and it's it's him like with with obama i think there's just too much uh self-consciousness there like he is trying to embody a system trump is pure 1:6:44 will to be seen like the collective desire the reason that he is loved and worshiped like no american president ever has been is because people who love him he is a media personality he is a big he's a air ballon filled with the collective narcissism of the white boomers basically no i see someone says you think you'd have a beautiful 1:7:45 god of vanity no no no that imagines that there is an objective my existence is self-validating it's not because i'm beautiful it's because i'm me that's why people love trump because he asks nothing of them so he doesn't have the the directed desire to wield power or at least assimilate power so that it going through him he gets to imagine is his will like obama because obama he knows that he's not really in charge of anything but he feels like being in validates him and infuses him with this structure because he worships the structure he he is invested in the structure and 1:8:46 he validates himself in relationship to the structure trump just wants everyone to be paying attention to him he ran for president for people to pay attention to him and then he accidentally won he didn't want to win and then he accidentally won and then he just wants hey now everyone is paying attention to me and every act of his entire presidency is only understood that way which is why by the way there is no revolutionary potential there is no socialist uh radicalization potential there is no useful political potential in the trump movement because it is an expression it is certainly generated by how miserable everyone is and alienated from the system they are but it captures that the form that it that captures that feeling is a form of pure nihilistic narcissism it is looking in the mirror and being bewitched which is the opposite of the uh perspective that needs to be asserted in the political stage in order to actually create people willing to work against their own most narrowly conceived of pleasurable interests like i said be willing to work for free trump has never worked for free he's never worked period he's never for a second thought what can about doing anything that wasn't in his most narrow selfish interest and that goes for everybody who votes for him not that that's all they feel but that when they vote that's and even if they have some sort of vague populist resistance their votes aggregated are simply this this monstrous un uh or unshackled it rather unshamal that's so anybody there's so i see the people like oh man like he he he triggers these bad libs who really are bad distrust of all these institutions which really are bad if we could just turn them towards a project as long as it is trump as long as the form is trump and if it's through the two-party system that's the form it'll take because that's all there is it will be this narcissistic project and the reason people don't want to admit that is because it means you can't post your way out of it you can't oh i'm going to i'm going to epically meme trumpism into being socialist and then all these dumbasses are going to vote uh for what they think is trumpism but is actually socialism no no now these trump voters could be part of a future coalition that challenges capitalism that's the thing and that is a thing that a lot of leftists claim and they are wrong if you vote for trump you're you cannot be uh part of the uh pro the solution that is absolutely incorrect bernie understood that and it's key in fact it's important and it's crucial to any progress because there's a lot of them and a lot of them are genuinely getting ***** by capitalism and could be useful against it but they will have to be appealed to from a political uh project that is orthogonal to democrats and republicans but that means you can't meme your way into it you can't just argue culture war stuff and hope it has the accumulated effect of pushing us towards socialism it only advances this sterile culture conflict that benefits the machine that's whirring in the background the whole time and doesn't give a ***** about the outcome of these contests that means we gotta do hard work that we got to give up on the idea that we're going to have a vested interest in presidential elections or uh what happens in the house and senate we're going to have to put our noses to the grindstone and and focus on local power which is not glamorous or fun it's going to take a lot to push people off of that hedonic treadmill but it's happening it's happening in bits and pieces person by person across this country and eventually

you get enough popcorn kernels going off and you have the potential for something to emerge not the necessity that it will not the guarantee that it will this is why in my mind marxism doesn't have to answer to any question of teleological uh it 1:13:59 doesn't have to marxism doesn't have to answer to the charge that it is excessively teleological because right there in the manifesto it says you have a conflict between classes one common ruin is on the table common ruin common ruin uh is a 14 point favorite going into the but we can't say that's happening now we don't know that's happening now saying it is happening now is indulgence to get out of the political commitments that morality uh requires of you both options are on the table you've 1:15:0 got to fight the second half it's difficult and we don't know we don't really know what to do because we're all talking at a level of abstraction that cannot answer our we only have to think more deeply of those questions and ask more of ourselves in answering them that's not satisfying but it is it's a course yes dumerism is absolutely bourgeois it is a it is a decadent attitude and everybody is going to be indulging it to some degree or another because we're humans and we're treat addicted and we 1:16:1 are solipsistic we're not going to change that overnight and if we do try to change it overnight we'll probably end up becoming destabilized but we have to every day try to adjust try to hear the voice try to hear the uh to sound like a hippie here but to hear the vibrations in the air and to don't not over run them with our own uh uh hedonic nihilism because that's never going to satisfy it's only going to feel bad it's going to feel worse over time because that's the that is the real rejoinder to the argument that just be uh is that black pill is the logical conclusion is okay fine how how do you feel your black pill how does it feel feel good so what are you gonna do about it and i and if and if it feels fine if you're like grooving on uh on 1:17:2 dumerism and it's like you've got a balance where you're not miserable more power to you i don't ***** blame you but i really don't think that's true of most people i think most people are are are not satisfied with the hedonic calculus that but the important thing to remember is that nobody knows anything nobody knows what's gonna happen no one knows what's happened no man shall know the hour or the 1:18:3 day and i'm sorry that's you it doesn't matter how many posts you've read it doesn't matter how much analysis you've done it doesn't matter how many google alerts you have for climate disasters or whatever the ***** it doesn't you don't know you do not know because who the ***** are you who are any of us but giving up giving up the certainty that we're seeking is is agitating and i think in a good way because if you're agitated you are aware something is wrong and you have to address it there 1:19:4 might not be a reason but i really think that if you search for a place to put your energy that you'll find it if you're pursuing in good faith whoo all right i didn't do a chat all week so i guess okay so next week i'm going to try to uh maybe on monday 1:20:18

about biden is that he is he is a puppet he is a a senile declining man whose ability to assert control over a uh administration staffed with democratic lifers who pr who pulled him up to use as a as a necessary uh vehicle he's still got some ability to assert independence because it really does not seem like this invasion this withdrawal was his people wanted him to do now of course that could all just be stuff they say after the fact to cover their own asses because you know he's the old codger and maybe that is it maybe he is the one who takes it because why not look why not have him 0:7:58 take this there's nobody committed to biden he has no long-term investment with the party because like he doesn't really have a network outside himself so he can be the sin eater for it he can be the sin eater for the whole war on terror because he is the judas goat but then again that does mean he's going to uh lose his popularity right i mean he's still alive at all is still kind of amazing to me i'll admit that i was 0:9:2 one of those people who thought that they were going to swap out cuomo for him at the convention just because it didn't seem like he could make it through a whole general election and then during those at least a couple of those debates with trump he looked genuinely adrift he looked genuinely at sea and unable like you look at him he would try to answer a question like because trump would get a question and he would of course just ramble on with gibberish but he would push through like whatever crazy uh stream of consciousness connection he made to the question that he decides to riff on which has nothing to do with the actual content of course at least it's like a coherent story biden would start responding to trump and he would get a head of steam along a a point and then he would just take a breath and look around and you could tell that he didn't know what he'd been saying and then he would have to try to find so that was you know and he's looked very checked out 0:10:7 at a lot of the more recent uh public appearances and so that makes you wonder did he actually insist on leaving afghanistan was it him asserting his prerogative as a guy who had gone to the white house as vice president as the foreign policy guy as the experienced guy in the obama white house and who was the one who told obama get out don't listen to the generals the generals are full of ***** they're lying to you they say 40 000 that won't be enough no matter what happens and ***** obama did the perfect emblematic obama thing of saying okay you're saying we need i wanted to get out and i promise to get out you're saying we can get uh 40 000 we can stabilize things with 40 000 more but that's politically infeasible that's 0:11:10 too much the opposite of what i uh had promised i know we'll do 20 000. we'll do 20 000 troops which you are even saying from your incredibly optimistic uh ***** uh averages is half as much as you would need and oh biden was the only guy in the white house who said point blank just get out take the hit it's not going to get any better over time and he was right and maybe this is his assertion you know

he's back he got there after an entire lifetime of doing things like carrying water for obama with no real stake in the administration now he's going to actually get to do something because foreign policy is the president's prerogative in a way that so he can't pull out and you could say that but trump did make withdrawal within his term basically uh inevitable because of the the momentum generated by the p the treaty he'd made with the taliban and the fact that the taliban had because of that 0:12:12 and other reasons made so many advancements in the countryside in the last three years that basically got ignored by the media and lied about by the generals that's the real context for this quick collapse but it seemed like the uh the mo of the deep state and the blob was very much accepting the terminal decline of afghanistan but playing for uh the moment keeping them there as long as we could afford it and since there is no political pressure to end the war in afghanistan because there is no uh there is no organization that can catch anti-war sentiment because the two parties are in lockstep on occupation so they can keep going as long as the checks clear and the checks keep clearing so they would say sure we have to leave but we'll just keep talking about standing up the afghans securing the peace all the ***** that they've 0:13:13 been talking about for the last 10 years that was never being prepared for that was never being prepared for they said we need to do x y and z and then those things did not get done instead they just cycled money back to northern virginia from the pennant the money just went from the pentagon routed through afghanistan and came back to northern virginia like 90 of the money we spent there we didn't build any durable forget ***** physical infrastructure social infrastructure we just so it was going to take a politician who did not give a ***** it would have to take someone in yolo mode to actually pull the pull the trigger which is why you know that trump 0:14:14 is at the end of the day a ***** uh and not based and if you think he is it just proves what a ***** you are that you look at this guy who at every critical moment buckled when the uh establishment told him to that did what was expected of him as a regular politician even though he hated these people and he knew that he couldn't trust them how come every time he would fire somebody and then afterwards he'd say he was never good i never liked him and yet you did what on syria on afghanistan everywhere domestically he did what they wanted up to and including stepping down from the white house instead of ***** trying to actually do the coup that uh you know the people who really thought he was based was thinking he was uh going to uh uh uh go for and what the liberals now think he went for they told him to leave and 0:15:15 he left uh and he was clearly preparing a withdrawal from afghanistan as a populist uh agenda item going into the election he thought i am i'm a breton circuses guy i get people on my side by doing what i know they want me to do in big bold ways that's why i pushed for the wall so hard because it was a tangible thing that you could point to that was i did this similarly getting out of afghanistan satisfied that sort of nativist anti-imperialist thing that has existed in america ever since pitch pork ben tillman uh protested the annexation of the philippines because of his horror at the prospect of of asians running around uh the senate so he was going to try to do it and he made a lot of progress he made a group he made a deal with the taliban they 0:16:17 were going to pull the trigger and then he didn't and he didn't and i i don't know if there's any record of this yet but i'd be willing to bet that if we ever find out the conversations that went on to prevent him from pulling the trigger on a pre-election because he's a showman last ***** flight out of kabul right before the election hey look what i did and they told him that'll be a disaster and uh he said oh no i'll look like a Biden they did the same thing to him and he said ***** you who cares partially because he just got elected whereas dumbass trump was waiting to the last minute to do this thing and yeah when we left it would have been like this no matter what of course trump now gets to pretend if i had done it it would have worked it would have been great and it wouldn't have been any problem which is hilarious uh the fact is they probably just would have kept scaring him away from it until he 0:17:18 left office but especially before the election they said hey instead of you're gonna get instead of getting this big uh victory for the people you're gonna get this this uh spectacular military debacle that's gonna make you look like a loser and Biden as we talked about on the show yesterday doesn't give a ***** about lose being a loser he embraces that that's he loses on behalf of america and then america rewards him with more power Biden is causing suffering but he is suffering with us remember when Clinton said i feel your pain that was his pitch in 92 and that was the democratic pitch that's been the democratic pitch since the neoliberal turn when they can no longer promise any kind of uh improvement in conditions they cannot really promise anything that will improve people's conditions in a way that they can feel confident they'll be able to enact and therefore worth putting out there as a promise they have 0:18:21 to just to to feel the pain with you and Clinton said it and he was very charismatic but Biden ***** lives it Biden literally feels pain which fits because liberalism in terminal decline which is what we're seeing now expressed in the two-party system and our political conflict is a conflict between uh sadists and masochists at the salo party we're we're in the terminal freefall of this system uh and those who are dedicated to maintaining it like in intellectually uh and existentially in uh invested in maintaining 0:19:24 the structure of capitalism as it exists so that they can main their maintain their positions within it their positions of wealth influence self-actualization identity deep ***** and stuff that they consciously and unconsciously connect to the presiding capitalist system now doing so in conditions of planetary uh collapse and uh and resource crisis the kind that come at the end of any empire any system of uh of extraction uh built around castes and built around uh exploiters and exploited will find itself at a point where it is no longer the structures that were created under one ecological conditions can no longer function given new ecological conditions there and now that doesn't mean that humanity or those civilizations were ever doomed what doom them is the incapacity of the systems to adapt because they were fully 0:20:28 in the hands of people who to one way or another were committed to the system as it existed which means they could never uh never correctly identify any problem or address it democratically they could only displace their uh because if anybody moves to undermine the thing they get got and replaced by somebody more committed to their position than to addressing the problems it filters out at the keyest points of power any commitment to a thing outside of capitalism like previous systems this is true of the slave owners of the south it's true the feudal lords of europe it's true of the uh the empires uh of uh of ancient of the ancient world and uh and africa and ***** the americas and southeast asia power persists until the conditions that 0:21:29 allow it to persist uh no longer obtain either because of an exogenous ecological shock when the system creates the system is no longer able to function given the inputs it's receiving which happens over time because you're no longer once you've created a structure that is built with an interface with the world around you it is no longer uh after it gets going referring outside of the structures that have been created so no social order that is based on exploitation is ever acting in crisis or uh uh in moments of flourishing on behalf of the entire social order they're acting 0:22:31 on behalf of the one half that rules it which means they are disconnected from the actual conditions that are being created by the system of exploitation that they have arranged the technological order that they have constructed and there's two things that i said there's there's two things that can interrupt one exogenously two an emergent class from within rising to challenge for power now the thing about that is is that traditionally the form that that internal uh challenge to the ossified system comes in is some sort of alliance between the lower half of the ruling class the exploiters and some percentage of the and the thing is though is that throughout all 0:23:36 of human history because of the relative lack of social organization that occurs in the rural idiocy of peasant existence which is where the people who actually do the work live once you get a point of social crisis all of the social uh organization effective like force multipliers of numbers and structures that allow for deliberation and action at a coordinated level are hoarded among the ruling class and that exploited class misery is only channeled effectively by this upper class formation and what marks the moment that marx was writing is a moment when emerging onto the scene from history is this new thing a new class that had never previously existed this is a class 0:24:38 of people who are as crucial to the product the reproduction of the system through their labor uh as the agricultural laborers of slave societies or feudal societies were they they were not making food the process of food make manufa of food production was being technologically intensified what they were doing is building the machines that allowed for technological intensification to continue and in doing that emerging from their new social relations which are closer to the social relations of an urban bourgeois than they are to a rural peasant you create a new worker a new exploited person who is not just an exploited person but who is able to perceive themselves as part of an now the lower up the roller the lower bourgeois the smaller bourgeois when they get alienated and they begin to understand themselves as oh i am being subject to capitalism i am not uh benefiting from it either because of lowering uh economic conditions or cultural disruption and alienation they answer the question through the lens of the middle class so they're not saying oh i'm i'm i'm uh suffering as a member of a class that is exploited because they imagine themselves as the exploiters they do not imagine themselves as exploited through their labor because their labor is not alienated the same way that a worker's labor is and they therefore as individuals are more likely to identify with capital than with labor subjectively because there is no class experience to organize them towards a shared understanding of what middle class means like that's it's not that the working class is smarter or that their oppression itself the misery they feel gives them some extra insight what it is is that they are living conditions of exploitation together that are shared as opposed to the exploitation felt by a middle-class person which is totally individuated a small the the people who own uh small businesses or small industries they do not work in a shared condition of exploitation they live in and work in a shared uh uh and like your urban uh urban intellect your urban intelligentsia their labor isn't alienated they're basically living in this post-scarcity world for christ's sake but they're still alienated by the system because they see how much misery is created by it and they see how much of value is destroyed by it every day and how do they express themselves through things like nationalism the lens of the nation the idea that there is a national interest that we can and an individual identity that i can use to make sense of the world and to and to fight for and that this will defeat the the alienation of this system which i can't identify as being capitalism because i benefit from capitalism but some of those alienated urban middle class people especially the intelligentsia they're also going to recognize oh ***** there's uh this economic thing here yes i benefit from it but it's bad or or rather it now has within it the capacity to organize social goods collectively to truly transcend this bifurcated social order because the technologies that we've created to exploit can now be collective collectively held because we can for the first time as humans imagine ourselves as part of one group that could command power over a technological sophisticated civilization and the working class because their group is the most numerous and because its interests cannot be uh divided against itself the way the interests of the rulers can always be used against workers in any situation where they're allied in a that they will therefore become the and it begins the way that any of these revolts against the power structure begin as an alliance between the progressive small bourgeois and the stirring emergent working classes and what we saw through the 19th century was the emergence of this new powerful bourgeois that used the working class essentially as a stepping stone to power that directed their alienation from this system as they were pulled from the land and turned into proletarians and and had their and if they were artisans thrown into proletarian labor from a position of autonomy seeing a real death of the human the human i mean they were being redefined their ability to assert their humanity in the world was being ascribed away from them because they were being thrust into a wage relationship that alienated them from the vast majority of their ***** lives in a way that had never been felt before but in those early stages you have not yet developed coherent structures of class power and that emerge counter hegemonically from working class life because it is only in its infancy and what ends up winning is nationalism uh uh in the in the mantle of the uh bourgeois classes which a lie temporarily in the 1848 revolutions being the most uh crucial example of this uh nationalism uh post-napoleonic european nationalism a working-class response or i'm sorry the middle class response to the traumas of capitalism erupts and and seizes the agenda of politics in europe that define the next ***** century and that caused world war one on the back of an uncoordinated working-class movement but these new nationalists also believe in these liberal nostrums of individual autonomy the nation is their solution to the problem of how do we come together if we are all individuals with individual rights and and these and and natural rights all these enlightenment notions and the solution is a nation now the solution has to be national or racial as it became later in some places because it cannot be economic it cannot be about exploited and exploited because these are emerging within the middle class with an assumption an assumption metaphysical in nature that capitalist uh that class exploitation was the the economic engine of their society which meant all they could do is find nationalist explanations for the misery that they continue to but then after the fall after the suppression of 48 you had the moment which marx was there to witness when working-class people started organizing counter-hegemonic institutions labor unions and then parties emerging from those unions from the ground up that mirrored the power structures of the states made by these nationalists made by these triumphant bourgeois nationalists and able to challenge for control over the state mechanisms of power and technology that these uh nationalist and that they would be able to uh challenge for power in a in a context of crisis but even this thing it must be pointed out is as it develops a class alliance between the progressive bourgeois and the workers it's just that the relationship is flipped and now the uh energies of the uh bourgeois the energies of the progressive bourgeois are being filtered through the structures of a class counter hegemony and through class institutions which are led by which are uh uh filled with and commanded by uh working people they are tailing a working-class movement as opposed to in the 19th century and during the first explosion of this uh the working-class movement was tailing the small bourgeois which is why they were betrayed and the july days in france as always in france 0:33:55 being sort of the textbook you really could say that like france is the modern country and that france is the the european country where capitalism emerged in a national context for the for its for the longest duration capitalism of course first emerged in the low really really emerged uh post black death in the low countries but that colonialism once it was headquartered especially after the uh the seven years war in uh london was expansionist and imperial and of course french capitalism began imperially too but over the course of the 18th century it lost a huge chunks of its territory and 0:34:57 then over the course and that and that meant that once uh it emerges and once capitalism emerges in france you have unlike in europe you have or unlike in the uk you have capitalist uh capitalist um contradictions intensifying in conditions of crisis and uh and trauma emerging from this new relationship without an ash without a a significant uh release valve without anywhere else to put the energy so that's where you had and and it happens as it does you see uh the emergence of a of a revolution in paris the the the the jacobin uh the jacobin rule the reign of terror uh the ***** 0:35:59 reaction napoleon the restoration the 19 july monarchy 48 to the paris commune you see these like ideal conditions of of the emergence first of bourgeois uh bourgeois self-consciousness emerging on uh piggybacked on top of uh of like peasant and early worker uh uh anger and then eventually uh the transition to the social revolution with the paris commune where you have again workers and uh the bourgeois allied but where the center of gravity has changed and therefore the the radicalness of the and that was the conflict that was the that was the eschaton that uh marx predicted 0:37:1 was a final conflict a final battle between the emergent cultural forces and like or uh social organizational structures that the working class was be able to create uh unions political parties then state power against those institutions in the hands and we had that war and the reason that the working class lost is that it never created sufficient power projection it was stuck in the back woods developmentally and that is the thing 0:38:4 is that like yes marxism is marxism is the in fact is the completing of the project of liberalism like it is it is teleologically and eschatologically the the transcendence of liberalism it recognizes that the liberal subject created by capitalism is the first human being capable of socially organizing production and reintegrating the human race into a homeostatic ecologically uh stable relationship with our biome without the cyclical misery of uh pre-capitalist social formations where we were all separate 0:39:5 from one another exploiting one another smashing into one another and seeing our social progress destroyed when ecological conditions changed it was things that were happening without our ability to reckon with them because we and you can chart history as this movement as class as as social order is defined once you get civilization and division of labor you have so society divided by those who enjoy surplus and those who uh produce alienated surplus as like as subjective social experiences they live their lives working for others or live their wives worthy working from others and 0:40:7 when i say working i mean doing ***** that sucks doing stuff that's not fun and that is in almost no conditions possible to be made as physically pleasurable now it's not necessarily alienated when it happens in a pre-social order but it's still not a fun time people want to have and so alienation when you have a social structure where decisions are made hierarchically there's going to be every incentive at the top of the hierarchy to maximize your distance from stuff that's not fun and sucks and they're not and the other people at the end of this uh transaction the ones who you are using your control of the technology of the social order to compel to do things doesn't get a ***** say their misery while it is part of the system and which uh is an externality that has to be dealt with just goes off and is unregistered and becomes just one more thing that echoes back and undermines and destroys 0:41:9 and so society is defined as mark said by class struggle between an exploiter and an exploited but as i said the real conflict social the real conflict politically and socially does not occur between exploiter and exploited classes it occurs within the exploiter class between people oriented uh depending on where they're oriented uh to capitalism are they direct exploiters of it are they slave owners or uh or later on factory owners or small business tyrants are they uh college professors who are essentially the people who live a life closest to that imagined a life of labor that is of the mind and unalienated and and well compensated this is of course talking about 0:42:10 that small handful of tenured professors who are it matters if you are uh somebody who sees themselves as a beneficiary of a national hierarchy of like consumption where you get to consume even though you feel like you are exploited by work and that your boss sucks you feel more that you benefit and all these people are pulling in different directions and that makes up our politics as an attempt to try to coordinate this nervous breakdown that cannot express itself coherently or effectively because it cannot address the real conflict because we have reached a point at the other end of that range of that parabola where we go from a relationship of uh exploitation between classes carried out by technology over time where cycles of civilization and 0:43:12 collapse happen because of unstable economical conditions underlying them but the thing that happens is over time there is a buildup of civilizing uh technologies that allows for the creation of an abstract social subject who can imagine himself part of a human race and have that mean something to them and also technology that can radically reduce the amount of shitty unpleasant labor that anyone has to do and you can bring those things together and and the emergent social forces that marx and marx both recognize and help call into being uh we're all erupting from that peak moment when we now have not we had something before which was this cycle because the working people could not intervene it was always just a civil war between the ruling classes that led ended up with something breaking up and a new 0:44:13 ruling group within the previous uh groups coming up to rule with a different mode of production maybe but the same process this is the first moment the 19th century in the emergence of modern capitalism where a third social force headquartered in the working class could assert itself coherently and effectively and challenge and marx predicted mark's thought like the teleology of marx is that you could tell marx thought that the workers were going to win but and so that means we're now on after that war has fought and and the working class loses it and we go back to a situation where uh the the political question is one that is fully uh obs fully uh sealed away from 0:45:15 real input from below because now we have a sufficient technological sophistication to rule groups of people who identify as things like americans as abstract concepts like like members of a racial group and that that can powerfully motivate them through media mediated reality not lived and so now we're on the other end of where we are still now we are once again a society defined entirely by class exploitation a social a political order that is simply uh a civil war within the ruling elite and an oncoming ecological uh reassertion uh or a oncoming uh disruption of the ecological balance 0:46:19 that undergirded the system and that it can't operate without like that's why the ***** the anker civilization of cambodia had an insanely developed social order an incredible uh physical infrastructure that in medieval cambodia that involved among other things some of the most impressive systems of water control canals locks uh and dams and it ever were any ever created in a pre-modern world and it was able to distribute water through uh through irrigated uh this it was able to distribute water to irrigate uh uh crop or irrigate like uh rice fields and to accommodate for rises and falls in in river conditions uh like it was a perfect machine that could deal with adapt 0:47:21 with any conditional change within a band of assumed responses that's all you can go for like what what if the what if the water is this high will we do this what if the water is this high we do this what if the water is this high we do this and that's how you design it because the water has only ever been here here and here and so you have a structure designed and assuming that the water is always here here and there and if it has been for hundreds of years why the ***** wouldn't you think it would continue that way but then somewhere else in the world a little ice age starts the the wobble of the earth on its ***** uh axis or uh a burble and some sea ice and you have conditions that radically change and instead of it uh it floods three years in a row it floods 10 years in a row or floods 30 years in a row and then instead of it being dry for two years in a row it's dry for 15 or 20 or 30 years in a row and all these structures are now useless now during that time of crisis once you realize 0:48:22 conditions have changed you could be able to adapt and keep your civilization going but it would mean redistributing labor it would mean redistributing shitty labor upwards and nobody who's making decisions is going to make that decision and so it collapses marx imagined a movement the fulfillment of liberalism that would allow for the but the thing is those previous civilizations didn't have the technology to do it any any so they're always their their revolutions were always their peasant uprisings were always sort of romantically doomed always brought about new forms of uh exploitation because they couldn't not there was too much shitty work to have to be done we didn't have the technology to distribute it significantly enough were too 0:49:23 connected to the land to allow it now and then in the 19th century all this is thrown up we're creating liberal subjects but we're also creating a technology of control that can hypothetically remove the rest of lower classes from the equation but it takes a massive amount of violence as all of these things do they're not smooth like you can look at the the monstrous horrors of the 19th and 20th century imperialism uh the world war culminating in the world war uh fascism these are all parts of that conflict it's a three-way battle between the old landed ruling class the the new urban commercial uh ruling class uh and the the newly self-aware working class and it is a three-way war that that uh ends with the merger of a new emerg the emergence 0:50:25 of a new synthetic ruling class out of the conflict between uh old and new money basically and they rule over this new decline we have the sufficient technology to endeavor to create this sort of fulfilled liberalism that this this social world that can allow for productive labor and for actual human um self-expression and actualization to commence for the first time not individually but for the first time collectively we can pursue this project and live and create history and i really do think that that was possible i think that the ingredients that existed on earth allowed for that and i think that that is a fundamental schism that people have to reckon with like where 0:51:26 are you on the possible i think there's another thing to say that it's inevitable i think that is a relic that's what the way that the early christians were like jesus is going to come back before i die i think there's a very similar millennial yearning in the idea that it's an inevitable victory of the working class and it's and it's necessary to get people motivated to do the work you know when everything looks so ***** hopeless but i would say now we have to reckon that we're and so now we are reaching that decline phase of an empire where ecological conditions are undermining the old social orders like in america for existence the social order that we've created after uh world war ii was social conflict diffused through consumption which is that's a great deal to make when you have a uh essentially infinite input there's no even theoretical limit on but now because of that faulty assumption that that that presentist fantasy that undermines all of our rational political pursuits we've created conditions that can no longer accommodate that social order and so it's breaking down our faith in this thing is breaking down our ability to invest these institutions with meaning is breaking down so we have a ***** vaccine for a virus and we cannot use it to uh reduce the threat of the violence the way that previous uh uh pandemics have been uh tamed because through the failure of the institutions that comes from starving them because the money's got to go elsewhere the money's got to go to profit because there's not enough to go around anymore because that's we have to we have this new multi-polar so that means we don't have the capacity to get needles into arms of people who want them if they're uninsured or poor or not connected to infrastructure and then there's a huge other chunk of people who because of their deep investment in the tribal ***** the frantic neurotic saint vitus dance of culture war between republicans and democrats that these ***** delusional petty bourgeois psychos on both sides are fully invested in as an alternative to under uh to recognizing the ***** ground falling away beneath their feet because doing so would mean we can't keep doing the things that keep you fat they won't get it because it defines it it's against their sense of self uh self conception their identity which is all we have we're fighting to to to to protect our tribal identity from the rising tide and we want our enemies tribe to be ***** dissolved in it i know people get mad when you talk about tribalism in america but this we're talking about a decline phase here we're talking about a capitalism that has fulfilled its historic role and is now staying out its welcome because it broke the human resistance to it and now we have a exploited class a global exploited class that is so separated by nash by nate by geography nation by by and you do have the fact that for many many years the center of the colonial empire imperial system benefited at the expense of its periphery which means people have a deep investment beneath their own consciousness in protecting it in a way that they and that doesn't necessarily determine their political uh points of view and and what they're willing to do it certainly informs it and those things that it's this lattice work of of of alienated uh mediated cultural identity that override any sense of one as a worker at least in the center because we did so much consumption instead of uh controlling our labor we ceded our work hours to the boss in exchange for a greater intensity of pleasure that we could experience in our off hours and now that pleasure comes from feeling like you're in control of your life feeling like you're doing what you want but part of the reason that capitalism won is because it was able to build sufficiently sophisticated technological uh systems of of mediated uh reality transmission that you can essentially just oh we can just tell them what they want to do and then they'll just do it we tell them to do things that that they spend money on and then they spend the money on them it's great but there has to be things to spend money on and there has to be more things to spend money on and there have to be continually more things to spend money on because it is a hedonic treadmill and we've been great at and at uh innovating but innovation has slowed as the inputs have changed and now we're in a situation where like look at what we look at what's happened in the last two years to significantly reduce the uh enjoyment that the average american can have in their life uh the degree to which people have been increasingly alienated from this system now again i'm saying that doesn't have to turn into anti-capitalism or socialism or anything it's just hey this is ***** and i don't like it and the powers that i used to think were invested with meaning are actually lying to me and have no real uh influence and their access to treats has been disrupted now we've gotten some money you know there was some money there was a there's a a a per patetic spirit spigot of government cash for people to spend things on but what are you going to spend things on half the stuff you want to do is closed or uh it's just a bummer like wearing a mask at like six flags looks like the most depressing thing on earth like it literally just taking away your ability to enjoy the things that used to be what you did instead of feel like uh you uh were able to control your life but what have we gotten instead we have gotten in the last 12 months at least six new cut of the uh state of the art cutting edge spicy chicken sandwiches from different that is the only innovation left in the system that's the only place where there is any return on investment in streaming services and chicken sandwiches that's it and then everyone has to pretend like oh my god i'm so excited to eat this chicken sandwich because it's something and i gotta admit i have been looking at a lot of those chicken sandwiches like i gotta try that i've tried the burger king one i tried the popeye's one but that's where optimism lies because that's not enough you know and if there is any emergent if there's anything if there's any juice left in the human race that can be coordinated commoners access it's going to be as something beyond a worker it can't it's not going to be worker that's not going to be the the organizing self-conscious clip principle i think we are literally as i said tracing the parabola past that it was real it was a live ball but now we are in a but it still will emerge specifically from the economically exploited the most pain it has to because if you're on the good side of the coin of uh global wealth distribution if by and large barring exceptions your response to increased misery increased uh alienation uh increased precarity is going to be expressing your alienation through the cultural levers currently existing to do so things like culture war things like politics through the lens of of a culture war you are literally too entranced by this ferrago to do otherwise it can only be the workers who will emerge but what they will call themselves is because something that was supposed to happen as part of that process of of humans coming together to socially determine uh socially determined economic activity through democratic means like as in finding out what people want now democracy does not ***** mean voting it does not uh mean two-party systems and elections which is why all of the critiques of cuba from the united states are so hilarious like oh they don't have a two-party system oh no there's nothing to do with democracy those are in fact anti-democratic structures meant to capture questions of democratic legitimacy for the ruling class to keep all deliberations about what we should do among rulers people who are self-conscious of themselves as rulers i mean you're either part of a political party structure that benefits you or now you're just a rich person they're all just ***** millionaires now nancy pelosi's worth like 200 it's not about parties at all it's about people expressing what they want to do and making a deal hey there's x amount of shitty work that sucks who is going to do it well instead of just having whoever has who is most desperate does it whoever is most compelled does it whoever has the gun of the state or the market the same thing does it or we all decide who does it and then maybe or maybe one person does it but they don't do it for very long they spend much more they have they work way less they work and then a bunch of people do it for a little bit of time how about that what about that what about everybody we don't want to we don't want to do away completely with the efficiencies of lab of uh separation of labor so in terms of like productive non-recreational stuff that like has to be done socially important labor maybe the same people do the worst of it but they do it like and then maybe people who like doing the stuff that's uh traditionally been rewarded with surplus yes hey yeah hey you who get who who's the scribe you get uh some some some you don't get it you don't get uh you got to work as like you know all the time but that's fine or you mix it up one way or another you get to a point where people are willing to make a deal and they feel like they've been ***** consulted and they understand i am doing this for these reasons it's providing me with this you are unalienated from a social order the way that humans were when we were hunter-gatherer societies everybody knew why they were doing what they were doing and they were cooperating if they didn't like it they ***** said something and they had to be accommodated because there were insufficient technologies of coercion at and the the post class dream of cap of uh marxism socialism is that you can recreate that level of social investment that level of faith in a cosmopolitan social milieu that is that create that is a advanced uh cultural context where you are an individual among individuals pursuing individual desires but without the context so you can 1:6:11 really say it's like marx's teleology is correct in that at the end of the conflict between capitalism and socialism you have abolished class the only question is how have you done it socialism sought to abolish class by abolishing exploitation uh it seems like what we have accomplished is abolishing class by abolishing the ability to perceive class which is i guess the liberal nightmare okay hope some of that made sense 1:7:16
