Rise of the Ogre

D-Day

So, it was while Stu was working as a Saturday boy at Uncle Norm's Organ Emporium his and Murdoc's world collided, top speed, in a very real way...

MURDOC: Me and my gang of snaggle-toothed hardnuts decided that was enough. What we'd do is nick a car, burn it round town, build up a bit of speed and then launch it right through the music shop window, ramraid stylee!! That way, right, we could smash some stuff up, get all the latest equipment free, and have a laugh doing it. The fact that the car landed on 2D's face was just a bonus.

2D: I remember the day quite clearly actually. I was standing behind the counter, like, staring into space. I'd probably been in that position for three hours or so. Just standing there.

MURDOC: Like some kind of moron.

2D: Suddenly Murdoc came smashing through the wall of the building in his Vauxhall Astra, which lands bumper first on the side of my head.

MURDOC: Happy days!... That's when your eye came out, wasn't it?

2D: Yeah. The first one. It didn't come out, it was pushed inward. Fractured. God, that hurt.

By driving his stolen Vauxhall Astra through the building and directly into Stu-Pot, Murdoc had permanently damaged Stu-Pot's left eye, also putting him into a deep catatonic state.

MURDOC: You were just a vegetable, instantly. If I hadn't a been laughing so much I probably would have heard the cops pulling up outside.

Murdoc was arrested and sentenced to '30,000 hours of Community Service, plus 10 hours every week of caring for the vegetabilised Stu-Pot'.

MURDOC: God bless the British Justice System, eh? Unbelievable! They put ME in charge of YOU. It was a bit of a drag, but we used to have a lot of fun during those sessions. You wouldn't remember that though. You were just a comatosed plank really. It was like looking after a bag of cement.
