

20170506 World That Is Buddhistic

Viktor Nonong Medrano

Buddhism is a non-theistic religion. Our world is Buddhistic. We have to live with some people we may not like, as a Buddhistic condition. It does not matter if we move to Seattle or Paris. Our new home in Seattle or Paris may have things wrong with it. There is always some dissatisfaction, as Buddhists already accept so as not to get too disappointed with life. We do not yet have sufficient space travel to know if on another world, there is a different psychic environment from ours. In Buddhist cosmology, Buddhists do acknowledge worlds in which there is no suffering, unlike ours in which there is. (Buddhism accepts reality, unlike Christianity.)