

20200615 We Like Rabbits

Viktoro Medrano

I have essentially personally encountered three kinds of Buddhism (Zen Buddhism, Theravāda Buddhism, and Pure Land Buddhism), and five kinds of Christianity (Roman Catholicism, Baptist, Pentecostal, Jehovah's Witness, and Mormonism). But despite my adventures into religions, I still believe in Science Fact and Science Fiction. And I do not dismiss the many forms of Animism, including Shintō and Dào, as well as other Native around this world. (I count 13.)

I can speculate all I want about the nature of the universe and "reality," but such would be just speculation. I can say that our reality is like a computer simulation. I can say that our reality is like a hologram. I can say that our reality is like a dream. There are many more I-can-say's. They are speculations. As humans, we are like rabbits in that even if higher beings were to tell us the truth, we still might not understand.
